"IS Life Worth Living?"—It would be if all pictureswere as good as the SELECT photo-play of that name,—for Eugene O'Brien who takes the lead, is at his best in this production. The posters, like all SELECT post-ers, are RITCHEY posters. They are exquisite in detail,—yet powerful in their color mass-ings. They will attract, they will please, and above all else,—they will sell tickets!

Paramount Has Never Failed You — Paramount Will Not Fail You Now!

AS ALWAYS, a steady supply of the highest-class of money-making pictures will be delivered to you throughout the new season.

In these days of curtailed production, the studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are going full blast.

All the immense organization of directors, stars, artists, authors, technicians, writers and mechanics is engaged in full-capacity work right now, to the end that you may have an undisturbed flow of highest-class, entertaining, money-making pictures—pictures that can be relied on to attract and please your audiences day after day, week after week, throughout all the year.

As long as there's Paramount, why worry?

Read over the list of coming Paramount productions on the following pages. Many of them have been filmed; others are in the making; still others and many more not listed are in the preliminary stages of being made into the big money makers you want them to be.

Just as long as there are theaters in the world, Paramount will continue to produce all the pictures needed to fill them with happy, satisfied audiences, day after day, week after week, year after year.

AN "A. P." SPECIAL

Here is a production totally different from the average motion picture drama. It is a story of love and devotion and one that lends itself to elaborate picturization and exploitation. Incorporated in the production are scenes that afford special notice, including both the artistic and the highly dramatic incidents that round out an entertaining picture. The cast, headed by Hazel Dawn, is a notable one. "Devotion" is an Associated Producers special—one that you cannot afford to pass up.

PROFITS and SATISFACTION

"Devotion" is a big story with a big, vital, theme. Two sisters, one who marries for love—the other for wealth and position—furnish the basis upon which this unusual story is picturized. The episodes leading up to, and following, the marriage of the sisters, are replete with romance, dramatic action, and mystery. Hence, "Devotion" is a production that combines every element that is desired in a satisfying box-office attraction—one that will draw business and please audiences.

Marking time? Hell, no!

WHO said "retrenchment"? Not Universal! At just exactly the time when other producers are crying hard times, Universal is pleased to announce the biggest year's program in its whole wonderful history.

AT just exactly the time when exhibitors are wondering where they'll get enough independent pictures to make up a program, Universal notifies them that they can secure all they need of every type of picture right from this one organization.

Who said "too many goods on the shelf"?

Not Universal!

Although Universal is always producing, yet Universal has no goods on the shelf.

Why?

Because people like 'em!

Why do people like 'em?

Because Universal pictures are good pictures and because they're reasonably priced.

IF you searched the whole trade through you couldn't find better proof of the salability of Universal pictures than the simple fact that while other producers are shutting down Universal is selling everything it makes in greater volume than ever before. And, furthermore, is increasing its output—meanwhile, spending more cash money on a single one of its super-productions than any competitors ever had the nerve to claim as spent, even when they lied about it.

READ every word in the announcements on the opposite page. They'll tell you exactly where to get your pictures—all you want—of every kind—at prices that will net profit you more than any others on the market today.

Who and What

George K. Spoor

is back of

Spoor-Thompson Developing Machines

The laboratory of the film plant today, with but slight exception, stands exactly where it was at the beginning of the industry and where the printing business was before the advent of the big modern cylinder printing presses, the present-day Mergenthaler linotype machines, and the many other modern labor-saving and economic devices.

Most of the finest laboratory machinery in use in the motion picture art today was developed and built at the expense and direction of George K. Spoor, owner of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, and President of the Spoor-Thompson Machine Co.

The cameras, printing machines and perforating machines in major use today are to the credit of him, or through his efforts in making possible their construction.

A reputation for integrity and twenty-five years' actual motion picture experience is back of the developing machines that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company are installing at their Fort Lee Laboratory

No progressive laboratory can be without them and keep apace the times with quality work and price. Guarantees that leave no possible loophole of doubt. Savings pay for their purchase price

AMERICAN 10 POINT PRINTS

FOR more than ten years American Film Company laboratories have been celebrated for the quality of their work. Unnumbered critics have praised the remarkable clarity and brilliance of American Prints. The reputation gained by American Film Company's own productions resulted in others seeking the same service from these laboratories. Today hundreds of customers enjoy that service—demand that all their prints be made under the supervision of American technicians.

"You're absolutely safe in delivering your negative to American"

A film executive of note uttered the above phrase in referring to his reasons for sending his negatives to American—his insistence upon "Ten Point Prints." The owner of a valuable negative naturally entrusts it to others with some hesitation. It represents a tremendous investment—all of which might be lost through a few seconds of carelessness. In referring to American as "safe," the executive meant that here was a company with years of reputation and experience behind it. Its plant is equipped throughout with the most modern apparatus known to science. Its technicians are men who have spent years in perfecting their skill. The company is financially responsible—assures the negative owner against "duping" of his product—or the sale of unauthorized prints. All these are but a few of the reasons why American laboratories are preferred to others. Still further reasons will be found among the ten points enumerated below.

Experience

American laboratories are accustomed to serving customers in the amusement, commercial, educational and professional fields, as well as amateurs, topical weekly and free-lance cameramen. Many exhibitors look to American for all their announcement titles, presentation features, oddities in trick photography, etc. You can rely on your negative receiving the personal attention of our technical experts—be certain prints are delivered when you want them.

The Why of the 10 Points

1. Quality. Prints known for brilliancy and clearness. Expert staff, trained by years of experience, assures highest quality prints obtainable.
2. Reputation. Gained in 10 years of experience.
3. Responsibility. A concern of strong financial standing.
4. Location. In the proper geographical location, assuring quick delivery anywhere.
5. Equipment. All of the most modern obtainable.
6. Cleanliness. Within two blocks of Lake Michigan. Away from dirt and dust.
7. Safety. Plant approved by both city of Chicago and Board of Fire Underwriters.
8. Promptness. Accustomed to serve exacting requirements.
9. Prices. Reasonable and competitive.
10. Guarantees. Write for our unique guarantee of quality work.

Correspondence Invited

We urge you rigidly to investigate our repuation for quality work—our financial responsibility — our standing. Upon request we will gladly supply you with names of customers of ours in your field. Our editorial staff is also at your service in assisting you in working out problems which may confront you. Our staff is trained to follow "dope sheets" and technical instructions — a point worth emphasizing to directors and producers. Decide now to give American laboratories a trial on your next negative. After that you will insist on "10 Point Prints."

By Edward E. Kidder Directed by Clarence Badger

From the Famous Sol Smith Russell Play

THIS FAMOUS Sol Smith Russell play provides one of the most sympathetic and at the same time, most comic of photoplays. Will Rogers as the old inventor and starving genius proves himself one of the most capable actors on the screen.

With Molly Malone and Sylvia Breamer

A REGINALD BARKER PRODUCTION

THE POVERTY OF RICHES

By LEROY SCOTT

A Drama of Money and Marriage

THIS ORIGINAL photoplay by Leroy Scott tells a dramatic story of a woman who suffers tragically through her husband's desire for business and social achievement. An old story, yet a new one, compellingly told, sympathetically acted.

With Richard Dix and Leatrice Joy

A Great Drama of the Melting Pot

HUNGRY HEARTS

By Anzia Yezierska

Directed by E. Mason Hopper

ONE OF THE GREAT stories of the screen. Written by a woman who has lived every moment of her story, this remarkable drama will live forever in the memories of all who see it. "Hanneh" is a new type of screen heroine—a character in which sunlight and shadow are intermingled as in life.

With An All-Star Cast

HALL CAINE'S

THE CHRISTIAN

One of the Greatest Stories Ever Told

THIS WORLD FAMOUS story by Hall Caine depicts the revolt of a Christian soul against the conventions and hypocricies of his day. John Storm, son of a nobleman, finds his greatest reward in the help his strength brings to Gloria Quayle, the sweetheart of his youth, who had come to the verge of despair. A masterpiece of the screen.

With An All-Star Cast

The Story of a Crowd — A Study in Fear

THE SIN FLOOD

By Henning Berger

Directed by Wallace Worsley

THE STORY OF A Mississippi River flood absorbing and thrilling. A crowd is imprisoned in the basement of a building and cannot escape because of the rush of water over head. How the character of each man changes in this crisis makes one of the most original and thrilling dramas in years.

With a Great Goldwyn Cast

TOM MOORE in

THE MAN WITH TWO MOTHERS

By Alice Duer Miller

Directed by Paul Bern..

AN AMAZINGLY clever comedy drama by one of America's extremely popular novelists and playwrights. Mrs. Miller brings to the screen the lightness and deftness of touch, the charm of imagination and richness of characterization which have placed her in the forefront of American writers.

With a Superlative Cast

RUPERT HUGHES' own production

THE WALL FLOWER

Watch For It!

Personally directed by Rupert Hughes

ANOTHER ONE OF Rupert Hughes' wholly human and convincing stories of modern American domestic life, with a big, elemental theme whose appeal no human being can escape. Mr. Hughes has devoted the best part of a year to it. A worthy successor to such consummately worth while productions as "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead."

With A Perfect Cast

A Powerful Drama of Marriage and Disillusion

GRAND LARCENY

By Albert Payson Terhune

Directed by Wallace Worsley

"A WIFE THAT CAN be stolen from one man can be stolen from another." With these words, John Anixter gave up his wife, whom he had found in another man's arms. The consequences of his prediction, wrung from him in the anguish of his loss, are told in this powerful drama of marriage and disillusion.

An All-Star Cast

ALICE DUER MILLER'S

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

Directed by E. Mason Hopper

A DELICIOUSLY humorous story of a woman who was more interested in her own life and affairs than in the life of the nation. It has charm, quality and verve with a flash of humor as keen as a Damascus blade. Mrs. Miller's brilliant conception has been realized on the screen.

A WORD ABOUT THE GOLDWYN FRANCHISE

for 1921-1922

The Most Protection

GOLDWYN will grant a limited number of franchises for the season's output. This decision has been reached in order to provide the fullest measure of protection to the individual exhibitor.

The Fairest Price

THE Goldwyn Franchises have been devised at the request of hundreds of theatre owners and managers who have felt that it would be a most desirable advantage for them to possess a corner on Goldwyn Service. The exhibitor is guaranteed a number of worthwhile productions at a price per picture that he can well afford to pay.

See the Pictures!

IN order that the dramatic fibre of each production shall be the sole factor in the transaction, in each Goldwyn Exchange there will be immediate screenings. These will enable the exhibitor to see and appraise the product that he will receive under the Goldwyn 1921-1922 Franchise.

Gentlemen:

In my opinion, the "Ride on a Runaway Train" is the best short subject I have ever seen. It is the only short subject which we ever brought back for a second presentation and on both occasions it created a sensation. I feel sure it will produce the same kind of furore wherever it is shown.

Educational has Kept Faith

EDUCATIONAL promised to have its own distribution in every key center within one year. That promise was made good in seven months. There are thirty-six Educational Exchanges operating today.

Educational promised Super Specials in terms sounding like the usual superlatives too familiar to exhibitors,—"The Race of the Age" was "an epoch-marking event in the motion picture industry." "Lyman H. Howe's Ride on a Runaway Train" just released is another example of Educational's right to the term "special."

Educational promised comedies of sustained high quality throughout a year's releases!

Right now—exhibitors are selecting from six distinct types of Educational Comedies, each of which is the best of its kind. For their new year, Educational will offer more than twice as many, all equaling their high standard.

Educational didn't have to promise the best scenics and travel pictures—its product in this short subject field has long been without rivals.

Educational now also releases the best News Weekly offered nationally to exhibitors. This news service started January 30th, enabling every exhibitor in America to make complete programs from Educational product—with the sole exception of features.

AND—Educational is a neutral distributing agency, organized for service to producer and exhibitor alike. Educational has always and will always keep faith.

What We Are Doing and What We Intend To Do!

We intend to give to the Independent Market bigger and better productions than they have ever been offered before.

Owning our own studios—thus eliminating high rental costs, enable us to sell pictures at less money. Our studios are one of the finest and best equipped on the western coast.

Our staff contains some of the most expert directors that money can secure—John P. McCarthy, Norbert Myles, Jack Weis and Bernard D. Russell.

The very best stories only are selected. A special man is employed to choose these stories.

The finished product is a story throbbing with action and pep—a story that will hold your patrons' attention from the minute it is put on the screen till the very last foot of film.

New York City, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

It is my pleasure to notify you that for the first time since the Broadway Theatre began its policy of combining B. F. Keith vaudeville with a feature photoplay, a film is to be retained for a second week. The picture thus honored is your production, "The Woman God Changed," and the exceptional favor which it found with our audiences during the entire week of June 6th literally compels us to hold over this stirring drama.

I know it will interest you to learn that in view of the really phenomenal business brought by "The Woman God Changed," we have already decided to give the picture a third week if we can possibly do so. Previous contracts may intervene, but we shall bend every effort to satisfy what is so clearly the public demand for this strikingly original production.

Once again Cosmopolitan Films have demonstrated their extraordinary ability to provide the theatre with a universally popular photoplay. We congratulate ourselves upon having obtained "The Woman God Changed" for the Broadway Theatre, and congratulate your studios upon having made it.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) B. S. MOSS.

My Dear Mr. Moss:

Thank you very much for your letter of June 13th and the congratulations you extend to us on our production "The Woman God Changed."

Mr. Hearst is sparing no time and no expense to make the best in motion picture dramas, and I can assure you that recognition of this picture from you as an authority in the theatre-owning business is deeply appreciated.

Mr. Hearst is not making motion pictures purely for financial returns; he is exemplifying in them the ideals on the screen that he has exemplified in his many newspapers and magazines.

I thank you in the name of Mr. Hearst and this company for this tribute to our efforts.

Yours very truly,
GEO. B. VAN CLEVE.

Box office profits have led Mr. Moss to hold this hit a third week at the Moss' Broadway. And remember the Rivoli and the Rialto banked $39,079.25 from "The Woman God Changed" in a week's run each, before it played at the Moss house.

Burr's Novel REVIEW

CONTENTS

1. Pen and Ink Comics

Cartoon character and human actors working simultaneously.

2. Poetry of Nature

Scenic gems, set for music, the selected best of thousands of feet on the market.

3. Outdoor Novelties

A sport or slow motion subject or a natural color novelty, trick camera stunts and the short novelties heretofore not considered of marketable length but of merit sufficiently to run in the big New York Theatres.

High Class Shorts for long features

How many times have you listened to the directors of the big first run theatres wish for short subjects of such length and quality that they would fit in with the long features now being released?

The Showmen of today need a reel of diversified elements of three to five hundred feet in length that will enhance and grace a two hour show.

For more than six months we have been searching for the proper elements.

We wanted a scenic inspired by poem or song that would lend and blend to the big orchestra or stand alone on the sheer beauty of the location and photography.

We wanted a cartoon with an idea or story animated perfectly with human actors and a cartoon character animated at the same time in the same scene realizing the comedy possibilities of such material.

We wanted to provide a medium for the many meritorious short length subjects that never get beyond the Metropolitan Theatres, because this unit of length is unprofitable for distribution, yet the idea is worthy of circulation.

We have found these elements and can offer twelve wonderful reels each year, at the rate of one each month.

JOHNNY HINES IN "BURN 'EM UP BARNES"

READY AUGUST 1st

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes," probably the greatest automobile race picture ever photographed, featuring Johnny Hines, will be ready August 1st.

The sheer quality of this feature has made it necessary to move it up to the position of the first release of the Affiliated Series.

Every detail of the picture stands out from the selling angle and marketing possibilities.

In the stellar CAST supporting JOHNNY HINES are the following eminent "high lights" of the screen: George Fawcett, Edmund Breese, J. Barney Sherry, Betty Carpenter, Julia Swayne Gordon and others equally well known.

THE PHOTOGRAPHY, is under the direction and supervision of Hal Young, whom Hugh Ford took to London, for Famous-Players, to superintend the photography and lighting equipment for their English productions.

Also engaged in photographing this production is Ned Van Buren, too well known to need further mention.

DIRECTION, is under the supervision of Mr. George Beranger, who worked with Mr. Griffith for five years and whose recent production for William Fox of Louis Tracy's novel "NUMBER 17" has been unusually well received by press, trade and public. It is in our opinion the best mystery story ever produced for the screen, and is a splendid indication of Mr. Beranger's ability.

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes" is one of the best automobile race stories of the type that the Saturday Evening Post and Wallace Reid has made so famous, but requiring a bigger outlay and wider scope of incidents, as the above cast would indicate.

THE CONTINUITY, is by Raymond L. Schrock, whose work for the Triangle Company, Sidney Drew and the Torchy Comedies, is a motion picture record.

We will announce each week one franchise holder who has purchased this picture, which is included in the Affiliated series and take pleasure in mentioning here that the Skirboll Brothers have bought this product for Ohio.

There are a few wise Exchange-men, who remember the earning power of "Mickey" and they will do well to investigate our proposition.

A message to the gentlemen convened at Minneapolis, Minn.

THE MAN BEHIND THE MICROSCOPE

A group of men got together back in 1776. They made up their minds that what was theirs WAS THEIRS. They were willing to fight for it. They won. They made history. We are they.

Descendants of that determined group are now gathered in Minneapolis and let's hope that they will make up their minds to fight for what's theirs. They are better equipped in every way than the patriots of '76 for Law and Order promises square dealing—if they decide to have what's theirs. We are they.

Independent Exhibitors, Distributors and Producers own what they have by the sweat of their brows. No bull or bear from Wall Street produced their money for pleasant smiles or "blocks of common stock." It was earned.

By right of honest toil their theatres and productions are coming into their own—that's proven by the fact that the crowd from Wall Street desires to crush them. Wall Street has never feared a dead one—therefore we must be alive. It's going to be suicide, murder, or a happy prosperous life—which shall it be?

Don't let's sit back to "let George do it" for George has a funny knack of passing the buck around—and it's never done. Let us all do it. Do it now. Do it well.

Let's show Mr. Wall Street that our pictures are wanted by intelligent audiences—that our theatres house discerning patrons. Let's show him how little he really is by making ourselves so much bigger. He is not the bad bad boogey-man he would have us believe—not by a long shot. His theatres are no better than ours nor are his pictures. All he really has is MONEY—and that is dwindling so fast that he has had to practically turn highwayman.

He is only standing behind the microscope of advertising, and if you'll peek behind, you will find that he is not near as big as we—and KNOWS IT! But he doesn't know that we know it, so let's show him!

Let's hold our ground, hold our theatres, hold our producing units and the first thing you know he'll be asking us to let him play in our yard. We have pictures and theatres—thousands and the best. We have the ability and desire to satisfy the public's wish for clean and human photoplays. Let's give it to them and forget all about the MAN BEHIND THE MICROSCOPE.

I sure would like to be with you fellows out there in Minneapolis, but I feel that I am where I can do US the most good. I am opening "THE TWICE BORN WOMAN" at the New York Hippodrome. You will read more about it later in this magazine. Mr. Wall Street could probably tell you how many pictures of his were turned down to let this feature run.

That's my first shot—let's lay down a barrage and pretty soon the MAN BEHIND THE MICROSCOPE will be "irised" to fadeout size.

Signed . . . . . JULIUS SINGER

R-C PICTURES

An Open Letter to Exhibitors

By R. S. COLE
President R-C Pictures Corporation

Those who comprise the motion picture industry will no doubt have noted in the newspapers and trade publications the registration of R-C Pictures Corporation, and I think it propitious at this time to make a plain statement in connection with this step and our business in general. What does this announcement of the registration of R-C Pictures Corporation mean to the exhibitors and to the public?

It means that Robertson-Cole Company after having experimented in the motion picture business as producer and distributor for practically two and one-half years has reached the conclusion that the business justifies the incorporation of all its interests, putting its motion picture business on a permanent, solid foundation, rather than continuing the business as a partnership with other commercial interests.

CHANGES MADE ARE FOR THE BETTER

Any change that may be made under the R-C Pictures Corporation will be only for the better. The R-C Pictures Corporation starts out with the experience it has gained, and with the determination to give to exhibitors the class of productions which will justify the expectation that it will continue to build more firmly than ever its permanent prestige in the industry.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the psychological effect at this time, of the announcement of formation of a corporation of such magnitude. In the first place, a $4,000,000 corporation in the motion picture industry is one of the largest that has ever been announced, when the fact is considered that it represents a real and bona fide investment, not watered by bonus stock, by a cash valuation on good will, nor on any other item than actual investment.

In the second place this announcement is made at a time when the business of the world is suffering serious depression and when such a step would not be taken unless it showed that our confidence in the motion picture business justified it.

It has been our effort to surround ourselves with an organization second to none in the motion picture industry, and it will be our aim to keep that organization at the highest pitch of efficiency in every department; that it may establish a new precedent of service to exhibitors and to the public.

A RECORD OF SPLENDID PRODUCTIONS

When so many rumors of a disconcerting nature are rife, it must certainly be an advantage to the exhibitor to offer to his patrons the product of a corporation with a record behind it such as that of the Robertson-Cole Company—a record of splendid productions—productions that touch the heights of motion picture art; that are clean, wholesome and entertaining. And it will be the purpose of R-C Pictures Corporation to maintain that record and maintain it as a permanent policy.

R-C Pictures Corporation now controls the interests of Robertson-Cole Co. Division of Films, Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, Robertson-Cole Realty Corporation, Robertson-Cole Studios, Inc.

The Robertson-Cole policy of honesty of purpose will be continued, and it will be the effort of every person in the organization to give to exhibitors the best of productions on the fairest of terms, with an assurance of fair dealing in every business transaction.

R-C PICTURE CORPORATION OWNS NO THEATRES

R-C Pictures Corporation is formed to produce and distribute motion picture productions. It does not own, control nor operate any theatre, and does not, therefore come into competition with exhibitors. It is not the purpose of R-C Pictures Corporation to enter the field of exhibition of motion pictures, nor to compete in any manner with its exhibitor patrons.

R-C Pictures Corporation takes this means of publicly thanking those exhibitors who have done so much to sustain Robertson-Cole Company, and to encourage it as a wholly independent producing and distributing organization, and to bespeak a continuance of that good will which is, after all, the most valued asset of the newly-formed organization.

A DECLARATION TO INDEPENDENTS!!

The convention of the M. P. T. O. A. at Minneapolis will mark a new era in the Motion Picture Industry.

There will be, from then on, a decided tendency on the part of 15,000 exhibitors of this country to DO BUSINESS WITH YOU.

They will not, however, come flocking to your exchange begging for dates on your ante-dated, cheap film.

They will encourage you by patronization and favoritism.

But you mustn't wait—Salesmanship will still prevail.

This is a Fighter's Market

These may be dull times, but we've yet to hear of a fighter who isn't doing good business.

That's a fact.

And it is the fighter we want to get in touch with.

We want to help him.

He needs advertising help; all good fighters do.

Our function in the field is not the mere getting of advertising, the mere filling of advertising space.

That's another fact!

We exist—for the advertiser—to help sell his goods. We are a merchandising force.

We are prepared to suggest merchandising ideas, to put the maker of goods in direct touch with the distributor and exhibitor of pictures and with the dealer in equipment. We will write letters and prepare advertising copy.

Motion Picture News circulation will do the rest.

We know market conditions.

We can deliver the goods.

And we might remark, in closing, that the theatres of the country today are on their toes for new and good product. We know it.

Where is the fighter we can help?

Independence

BECAUSE of the excellent organization work done during the past year the Minneapolis convention should go down in exhibitor history as setting the high-water mark of national exhibitor organization.

We hope it will; and everybody in the industry, every other branch of the industry has or should have the same hope.

We want and we need a big exhibitor organization; one that is truly national in scope and activity; one that can speak with weight and authority to law-making bodies and "reform" bureaus; one that can take its rightful place among other big business organizations; one that can act promptly for the country's welfare; one that has power to stabilize our own industrial conditions, by insisting upon such equitable and economic dealings back and forth between the three branches of the business as will make for their common prosperity.

The keynote of the convention is: independence.

It is a good keynote; it is a good business keynote.

But perhaps a warning is not amiss.

A lot of yelling can be done about "independence." It is clarion call, always, to sentimentality, a grand occasion for brass bands, fireworks, warhoops and oratory.

It makes a good curtain-raiser in any event: but the yelling can't keep up and the real show won't follow unless the platform is well supported by solid planks of facts—and gets somewhere.

All is not gold that glitters and all is not independence that is called "independence." Often it is used selfishly by someone to climb aboard a bandwagon, and often it is yelled out by the man who is getting the worst of it in a perfectly fair fight. Often it is downright, selfish propaganda.

"Independence" needs a lot—an awful lot of hard facts—and a powerful searchlight, if it is to be more than a yell, if it is to have a big principle and aim and if it is to arrive somewhere for the common good.

We want independence. Yes! Want it badly.

We want independent exhibitors, independent distributors, independent producers, independent laboratories. We want specialists, utterly independent: we don't want overlapping organizations and tie-ups, especially covert ones.

And we want this business independence because it is economic, because it is good business, because it is the broad, straight, right road ahead, not the easy-money by-path.

It isn't a matter of sentiment: it is a matter of plain business. That's all.

But we need good pictures. Don't forget that. Especially today, when the public is critical, economical, and tired of the old "movie" stuff.

So, it seems to us, the biggest and broadest construction to be put on "independence" is the encouragement of the independent producer.

—So that more good pictures and more kinds of good pictures may be supplied our theatres for their audiences.

That sounds simple: but it's the biggest, if simplest, truth this whole industry faces today.

Any condition that works against independent production—or to put it otherwise—any condition that doesn't constantly spur on many kinds of brains the world over to express their creations in pictures is an intolerable burden to the business; it makes for a loss that can only be measured in hundreds of millions of box-office money; it is a loss that is felt by every individual high and low throughout the industry.

The public is the first consideration of the whole business—high and low.

The public must be pleased.

And that demands product—good and varied.

It doesn't matter who owns the theatre if product isn't used or isn't available wherewith to please the public. A large ownership of theatres, under such circumstances, by anyone, would be about the worst commitment imaginable.

So we submit primarily to the convention the cause of the independent producer, the earnest consideration of every angle that will serve to widen and keep open the whole field of varied production.

Above all else the exhibitor wants—must have—an open production market.

And after that—organization!

Hold to the good work already done; cement the state organizations already strong; and lay the lines for new and better state organizations everywhere.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

M.P.T.O. of A. Convention Program Tentative as Date Draws Near

Opening Set for Monday Morning, June 27: Address by President Probable

THE second annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be called to order in the West Hotel, Minneapolis, at eleven o'clock Monday morning, June 27.

While no detailed and definite program covering the three days of the convention —June 27, 28, 29—has yet been mapped out, it is taken for granted that the first order of business after the usual preliminaries have been disposed of, will be an address by the National President dealing with the events of the year and submitting the newer problems for the consideration of the assembled delegates.

A tentative program, subject always to revision by the convention, will be prepared by the Executive Committee of the M. P. T. O. A., which will meet on Sunday, the 26th, one day before the convention. Only a skeleton program will be prepared by them. This will be done to facilitate business and save time. The program may be amplified, or it may be shortened, according to the volume of business which the convention will have to master.

A number of important reports will be received from various committees which have, since the adjournment of the Cleveland convention, endeavored to carry out the mandates of that convention. The Committee of Nine appointed to take up the question of unfair theatre owning and theatre building with Mr. Zukor, as the head of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., has prepared a full report of its activities. This will be submitted to the convention at the earliest possible moment.

Another important committee which will submit its report at an early date is the Committee on Business Relations. It will be recalled that this committee came to New York last December to confer with the manufacturers and distributors in regard to uniform and equitable contracts and the securing of exhibitors' deposits. A report will also be submitted by the Committee on Legislation.

The convention will likewise hear of the activities of the Committee which had charge of the Music Tax and the Film and Seating taxes. The music tax situation is of very grave interest to every theatre owner in the country, and the committee is in a position to report more than progress. It is expected that measures for affirmative relief will be introduced in Congress before the convention is opened. There will also be reports by the Finance Committee, the Committee on Ways and Means, and the annual report of the Treasurer.

In the meantime, new and profoundly interesting developments have occurred right on the eve of the convention. Independent producers and distributors have entered into conference with officials of the M. P. T. O. A. and various plans of a most interesting nature have been submitted. None of these plans, as yet, matured to any definite point, but they have taken shape sufficiently to engage the earnest attention of the delegates in whose hands, of course, will rest the final decision. Speaking of this phase of the situation, an independent theatre owner closely connected with important events that have occurred in the last three days said: "It would be inadvisable from every viewpoint to go into the full details of this new situation. This much, however, may be predicted with confidence. Minneapolis will give the exhibitor certain relief from high film rentals and from all the abuses which Wall Street domination has brought into the industry. I may add, that the strength of the independent producer is rapidly growing and that through assurances of exhibitor support, the independent producing groups are attracting strong financial support. We are on the eve not of a revolution perhaps, but surely of the most important evolution through which this industry has ever passed. Speaking for the commercial side only, I will say that film rentals will be lower after Minneapolis and the number of producers who want to sell us their films and at the same time compete with us in the exhibiting field, will be reduced to zero.

"The convention of course, is going to take up other matters as well—the question of enhancing the prestige of the motion picture—the upbuilding of quality both of picture and of entertainment will require our attention. "The independent theatre owner who fails to attend this convention is simply guilty of a gross neglect of his own interests. Not only will Minneapolis make history—every convention has done that—sometimes it was good history, sometimes bad, and sometimes indifferent —Minneapolis will secure definite relief and reform, and the history the delegates will make there will endure for a generation and longer, and lay new foundations of prosperity for the industry as well as for the independent picture theatre owner."

Rothacker Sails to Build Laboratory

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Co., is scheduled to sail for Europe on the Olympic June 25th, for the purpose of adding a London link to his chain of film laboratories. With him went Charles E. Pain, Rothacker Company vice-president and legal counsel.

Mr. Rothacker was accompanied by his wife and daughter, Virginia. While in London they will be in their apartment at 7 Park Place, St. James.

Simultaneous to the establishment of a London laboratory, Mr. Rothacker expects to open a service station in Paris. In order that his family might remain in London while he is negotiating in Paris, he made advance reservations for weekly airplane commutation between England and France.

While abroad he will make a survey of motion picture conditions in France, Italy, Germany, Belgium and Switzerland.

Mr. Rothacker carried with him aboard the Olympic complete plans for the London laboratory—plans which combined the best features of the Chicago Rothacker plant and the Los Angeles Rothacker-Aller Laboratory, yet plans elastic enough to permit of the incorporation of any improvements encountered abroad.

Mr. Rothacker expects to return to America late in September.

Michigan Theatre Owners Form Organization

A meeting of Michigan theatre owners and lessees was held in Lansing on June 16th, at which time an organization was formed, with the following objects in view: promotion of the welfare of the owners and lessees in the State of Michigan, organization to better conditions from all standpoints in the theatrical business, and the establishment of greater harmony in all departments, and a simplification of railroading, taxation, and other matters pertinent to theatre welfare.

The following officers were elected, with two other vice-presidents to be selected at the next meeting: Charles H. Seaman, president, Grand Rapids, Mich.; W. S. McLaren, vice-president, Jackson, Mich; Claude E. Cady, treasurer, Lansing, Mich.; W. S. Butterfield, secretary, Battle Creek, Mich.

The organization formed by Mr. Butterfield and his associates in no way conflicts with the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, it is said, and was formed with the idea of creating a closer working arrangement with the various operators of the legitimate and vaudeville interests in the State.

Zukor Defines Position at Chamber of Commerce Luncheon

Takes up the Dodge Case; Points Out Vital Need for Good Pictures; Walker Speaks; Factions Harmonious

ADOLPH ZUKOR, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., appeared on Tuesday, June 21, at a largely attended luncheon of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York to reply to the speech made at a previous luncheon by Senator James J. Walker in which Senator Walker spoke of the "trustification" methods used by the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. in acquiring picture theatres throughout the country.

Chairman William Brandt, in opening the meeting, stated that he and Louis Blumenthal had called as a committee on Mr. Zukor, several days previous, with regard to advance deposits in the interest of this organization. He stated that Mr. Zukor had assured him that this matter would be taken up and adjusted satisfactorily. As he was about to leave Mr. Zukor called him back and referring to the "charges" made against him by Senator Walker, stated that he would like an opportunity to make a reply. Mr. Brandt then wrote him an invitation to be present at the luncheon on Tuesday.

At this point, Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York State League, arose on a point of order to ask if Mr. Zukor would not attend the Minneapolis convention which, in his opinion, was the proper place to make his statement before the exhibitors of the country.

Mr. Brandt referred the question to Mr. Zukor, who replied that he preferred to speak here in New York and before the Chamber of Commerce where the "charges" had been brought.

Mr. Brandt then opened the meeting and Mr. Zukor took the floor. Mr. Zukor related his career in the motion picture business; his ownership of Penny Arcades; his first picture theatre on 14th street near Broadway with 299 seats; the lack of subjects at that time; his successful experience in Newark with Pathe's Passion Play, the first long subject; his experience in vaudeville with Marcus Loew; his decision about this time that pictures had arrived and had a tremendous future—that his future, however, was dependent upon better pictures. From this time on Mr. Zukor devoted himself to this subject and urged this necessity upon the heads of the three big distributing corporations at that time. Failing to receive any encouragement he went out on his own hook and brought to this country "Queen Elizabeth," with Sarah Bernhardt, which picture was shown at the Lyceum theatre, New York and purchased and distributed by state right buyers. Then followed his association with Daniel Frohman and the making of "The Prisoner of Zenda," with James K. Hackett, which picture was distributed by the General Film Co. The following year thirty pictures were offered to the State Right market resulting in the organization of Paramount Pictures Corp. with 104 pictures a year from Famous Players, Jesse L. Lasky and Bosworth as producers. Later on to eliminate production troubles, said Mr. Zukor, these producing companies were merged under one head and following this, Paramount as a distributor was acquired by the Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

Later on, Mr. Zukor stated, a movement was started to consolidate the interests of many of the large first-run houses of the country. About this time Mr. Zukor also noticed the appearance of considerable propaganda against his stars. At a meeting held at the Hotel Astor he warned the exhibitors that any attempt to enter the production business would force him to take retaliatory steps. Later on in Los Angeles when he found that this exhibitor coalition was openly dealing with stars who were then under contract with him, he laid down an ultimatum to the effect that if exhibitors entered the producing business he would be compelled to acquire theatres. Mr. Zukor stated that this step on his part was positively necessary. In order to make good pictures he needed a first-run outlet ,and he could not afford to have this taken from him. He then began to acquire theatres. However, it was never his intention to own theatres except where it was necessary to protect his business as a producer; that the production of pictures had been his guiding motive from the very early days of the business. Mr. Zukor then referred to the "charges" made against him of intimidation, coercion, etc., in the acquisition of theatres and in an impassioned address stated that these charges were untrue. It was utterly unfair to brand him as a criminal. He asked for a thorough investigation of these charges by the New York exhibitors and said he would abide by the verdict of any impartial committee; that he would leave the business if this committee made such a recommendation.

Mr. Zukor referred to the great need of today on the part of the picture theatres for good pictures. "The picture-going public," he stated, "is 'bilious.'". He prophesied a continued and perhaps worse slump in theatre attendance if a high-class and sufficient product was not available. "You need good pictures," he stated, "at a profit making price. That is what I am trying to do but only honorably and straightforwardly." Mr. Zukor, in closing, appealed for a united organization throughout the industry which would be able to offset censorship and other perils of magnitude confronting the business at the present time.

At the conclusion of Mr. Zukor's address, Chairman Brandt asked Senator Walker if he would care to speak. Senator Walker stated that his presence at this meeting was only brought about by considerable inconvenience and personal loss, and the neglect of important duties to the exhibitor organization. He could not understand why this meeting could not have been held in Minneapolis at the national convention of exhibitors. He was also embarrassed and injured by the statement that he had made charges against Mr. Zukor personally. He had made no charges, he stated, and he had referred to Mr. Zukor only as the president of his corporation. Senator Walker asked why the Brandt committee had gone to Mr. Zukor to ask for favorable action in regard to advance deposits when there was already a New York State law governing this matter in the interest of all exhibitors. Why, asked Senator Walker, did Mr. Brandt's organization not devote themselves to securing such laws in States where they did not exist?

Senator Walker produced a copy of "Progress-Advance" dated November 7, 1918, a house organ of the Famous Players Corp., and called attention to an article in it signed by Adolph Zukor. In this article Mr. Zukor stated that any coalition between producers and exhibitors would be a great peril to the entire industry. The various branches of the industry, the article stated, must specialize. But more important still, was the security of knowledge with each of the branches that the other was specializing. The producer, for

Zukor Reimburses Mrs Dodge and Schwartz

Following the promise given Tuesday at the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce luncheon at the Hotel Astor, to reimburse Mrs. Pauline Dodge of Morristown, Vt., and H. Schwartz of Willimantic, Conn., for any losses they may have sustained, it is announced that Adolph Zukor, President of F. P.-Lasky, on Wednesday, June 22, mailed Mrs. Dodge a check for $5,016.53 and Mr. Schwartz a check for $3,500. These checks have been submitted but not accepted.

The matter will be voted on at the meeting of the M. P. T. O. A. at Minneapolis.

Fabian Breaks Ground for New Paterson Theatre

With impressive ceremonies, ground was broken Tuesday in Paterson, N. J., for the new $2,000,000 Alexander Hamilton motion picture theatre and hotel to be constructed by Jacob Fabian, First National Franchise holder for New Jersey. It will be the eighth theatre of the Fabian chain.

Several thousand residents of Paterson and the surrounding country listened to the addresses by local dignitaries and witnessed the turning of the first spade-full of earth by former Mayor Nathan Barnert. Charles L. Dooley, general manager of the Fabian enterprises, was master of ceremonies and introduced the speakers, who included Mr. Fabian, his son, A. M. Fabian, James Wilson, president of the Paterson Chamber of Commerce, John J. Fitzgerald, secretary of that organization, State Senator Albin Smith and Mr. Barnert.

The theatre site is at the corner of Church and Market streets, one of the most desirable in the city. Although the theatre and hotel will be constructed simultaneously, Mr. Fabian will lease the hotel and will have no voice in its management. The theatre will seat 2,800; 1,900 on the ground floor and 900 in the boxes and balcony. It will be 90 feet wide and 178 feet deep, with a full stage of 40 feet, capable of accomodating any kind of amusement.

Film Theft Committee Has Busy Year

The Sherlock Holmes of the film business, as represented in the Film Theft Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, has had a busy year.

Several notorious film pirates were jailed, many miles of stolen film recovered, importation of second hand subjects from Canada was prevented, performances were stopped in theatres where productions had been fraudulently advertised and exchange employes with bad records were spotted and discharged through the activities of the committee. ....

"Since the last annual report of June 8, 1920, the work of the committee has resulted in the arrests of thirteen men, and the indictment of a fourteenth man in Cleveland, although his arrest has not yet been accomplished," says Chairman H. Minot Pitman in his annual report. "All but three of these men have been indicted, the remaining three coming up shortly for indictment before the Cleveland Federal Grand Jury on charges of using the mails to defraud. Four of the above indictments have resulted in jail sentences in New York City, and two in jail sentences in Chicago, Illinois. Four other of the arrests were made in Cleveland, one of the men having been convicted and sent to jail. An indictment of the other three is expected shortly."

Financing Organization Is Proposed on Coast

A MOTION picture financing corporation, backed by private capital, but closely associated with interests affiliated with the First National Bank and with the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, is to be set up in Los Angeles for the purpose of developing the junior financing of motion picture production and to bridge the gap existing between the inception of the picture and the period when bank loans on the production can be made safely, according to reports received from the Coast.

It is said that Thomas H. Ince is one of the backers of the new organization, and will be its first president. It is announced that the underlying reason for the formation of this organization lies in the fact that Southern California must have the necessary machinery for protecting the industry from foreign competition and from unfair methods in finance.

Fewer Incorporations in New York State

Only nine companies, with less than a half million total capitalization, were incorporated in New York State last week to enter the motion picture business. This is a particularly light week. The companies, together with the amount of capitalization and the directors chosen for the first year, are as follows:

Surgical and Medical Film Corp., $500, Paul E. Tuthill, Brooklyn; Wanda Kazanecka, Paterson, N. J.; B. M. Shuegrue, New York; E. and K. Amusement Corp., $10,000, Max Edelhertz, Morris Kraus, Harry Edelhertz, New York; Bennett Pictures Corp., $225,000, M. L. Lesser, L. R. Wakoff, Charles S. Hervey, New York; Regent Operating Co., $1,000, Louis L. Levine, Julius Celler, Brooklyn; S. M. Seley, Newark, N. J.; Finndell Amusement and Building Corp., $150,000, J. P. and J. J. Finnerty and N. J. Delehanty, New York; Town Talk, Incorporated, $500, Ned and N. K. Wayburn, E. Brett, New York; Flying Island, Incorporated, $500, same directors as in Town Talk, Incorporated; Brevities, Inc., $20,000, Jack Wagner, George J. Byrne, H. S. Hechheimer, New York; Tower Theatres Corp., $50,000, Joseph Schulte, Joseph Steinberg, New York; David Joseph, Brooklyn.

C. C. McKibbin Made Pittsburg Select Manager

The announcement is made by Sam Morris, vice-president and general manager of distribution, that he has appointed C. C. McKibbin branch manager for Select Pictures Corporation in the Pittsburg territory. Mr. McKibbin succeeds C. E. Holah, resigned.

The new branch manager is one of the best known film men in the Pittsburg district. He has for a long time been in the employ of Select in the territory he will now supervise.

Loew Invasion of Western Canada, Is Report

Marcus Loew is invading the Canadian West, judging by developments at Winnipeg, Manitoba, during the past week or two. A prominent visitor in the Manitoba capital has been Thos. W. Lamb, the well known New York theatre architect, to make preliminary arrangements for the erection of an immense Loew house in Winnipeg, it is stated. It is promised that work will be started this year on a theatre which will have a seating capacity of 3,400, making it one of the largest theatres in the whole of Canada, being exceeded only by the Toronto Pantages and Loew's Up-Town theatre, Toronto.

Further interest has been aroused by the announcement that a whole circuit of Loew houses is projected for Western Canada. It is intimated that six cities have been selected for this chain, the centers being Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver. This is the apparent stamping ground of Alex Pantages but the latter opened a house in Toronto some time ago in direct opposition to two Loew theatres and now Loew is laying out a circuit in the Canadian West.

Oklahoma Court Puts O.K. on Sunday Movies

The Oklahoma criminal court of appeals recently rendered a decision that the showing of pictures in Oklahoma on Sunday is not illegal. The opinion, which affected nine cases appealed from the lower courts, was handed down by Judge E. E. Bessey and concurred in by the other judges of the criminal court of appeals. Oklahoma's Sunday statute is the same as that in operation in the State of New York.

The appellant court assumed in making its decisions that the operation of moving pictures cannot be considered criminal interference with the repose and religious liberty of a community. If such operation ever reaches the state where it can be considered interference with religious liberty, the Legislature may add to the list of things prohibited.

Crandall Speaks for Capitol

THE District of Columbia Exhibitor's Association comes to the front with a request that the next convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America be held in the Capitol City. Letters to that effect went forward to all State presidents last week and a vigorous campaign will be carried on at Minneapolis to bring the plum to the District.

Through Harry Crandall, president, the District exhibitors make a strong case. "I really believe," declared Mr. Crandall, "that at this time there is so much adverse legislation being brought up in the National Capitol that it is a wonderful opportunity to show the lawmakers here the strength and importance of our organization. Also, the members can meet their Congressmen and Senators personally."

Famous Players Executive Differs with Senator Walker in History of Renting Incident

THE following statement answering charges made against the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., regarding incidents in Mattoon, Ill., and Willimantic, Conn., was issued this week by S. R. Kent, general manager of the Department of Distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

"At a meeting of exhibitors held in Kansas City, a few weeks ago, certain statements were made by officials of the Exhibitors' Association regarding the difficulties between B. Uran, of Mattoon, Ill., and ourselves. These statements were later repeated before the exhibitors of New York City.

"The case above cited has been used in an attack upon Mr. Zukor and the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. as tending to show the trend of their policy with relation to the independent exhibitors of the country.

"The responsibility of this organization in the Mattoon matter rests with the writer, and with no one else. No one else in this organization knows anything of the details.

"The facts of the Mattoon situation have not been printed, neither have the statements made borne any semblance of the real truth. In the issue of June 11th, 'The Exhibitors' Trade Review,' reprinted a letter addressed to Mr. Uran by Mr. Akers, in which Mr. Akers asks if Mr. Uran would be interested in selling the controlling interest in his theatre. I want to repudiate this statement of Mr. Akers. It was made independently by him without the knowledge of the writer or anyone else in this company.

"I shall be glad to show to any interested party, all of the original correspondence between Mr. Uran and Mr. Akers, which will prove conclusively that this organization had nothing to do whatever with this matter.

"Furthermore, 'The Trade Review' stated that this letter was written towards the end of the month of May, or some three months after Mr. Uran's troubles began. As a matter of fact, the date of the letter from Mr. Akers to Mr. Uran was the early part of October, 1920, and long before there was any difficulty between Mr. Uran and this organization.

"At that time Mr. Akers had already tendered his resignation to the writer, and was getting out of the distribution end entirely. Later on I requested Mr. Akers to consider on the promise of a change to New York, which Mr. Akers subsequently did, and which change takes place within the next two weeks.

"I only state this to show that there was no reason at that time for this organization to become in any way interested in any theatre in Mattoon, Ill.

"Mr. Berman and Senator Walker have stated that the prices requested of this exhibitor were entirely out of reason and quote as an example: $550 for 'Forbidden Fruit;' $400 for 'Heliotrope.'

"I have in my possession the original salesman's schedule, all of the correspondence between Mr. Uran and ourselves, and the prices we requested were $300 for 'Forbidden Fruit,' as against $550 stated by Mr. Berman and Senator Walker, and $200 for 'Heliotrope.' These prices represented no increase over past prices from Mattoon, Ill., for pictures of similar value.

"The whole Mattoon situation was laid before the writer, and the responsibility was mine when Mr. Uran's offers were rejected, these offers being entirely ridiculous and not in proportion to what Mattoon should pay even under the conditions Mr. Uran stated existed.

"To show our attitude in the matter, we offered to play all of these pictures on any fair percentage basis without asking him to pay us one dollar in advance for them. We were perfectly willing to gamble whether we got 10 cents or $1,000 for each production, but we were not willing to dispose of them outright at the ridiculous prices offered.

"We offered to put in a number of pictures at his price, providing the results on these pictures would be the basis on which would be sold future pictures, or the balance of the block of pictures. Mr. Uran would not show his books to us, neither would he entertain any sort of percentage arrangement, and the only thing we could do was to take it or leave it on the basis he offered us.

"It was not until I had fully gone over the correspondence between Mr. Uran and the St. Louis office that I approved the advertising, to advise the people of Mattoon why our pictures were not running in that town.

"I do not question Mr. Uran's right to refuse to run Paramount Pictures any more than he can question my right to refuse to sell at the price he offered.

"The advertising campaign we put on was as legitimate to put over our product as the advertising of any other national organization that is trying to find an outlet for its product.

"'The Exhibitors' Trade Review has made the statement that we are trying to sell stock in Mattoon and encourage the building of a competitive house against Mr. Uran. Such a statement is absolutely without foundation.

"The first information that this organization had regarding the building of a new house, was when one of the Mattoon newspapers wrote us a letter stating that a certain party would like to get in touch with us regarding the use of our service, which letter from the newspaper is in our files. Until that moment we had never contemplated the erection of a house nor encouraged anyone else to do so, and had simply made up our minds to remain out.

"My department is handling over 12,000 active accounts using Paramount service, and it is only natural certain disputes should come up regarding prices to be paid for our pictures. Every organization engaged in selling pictures has these same disputes and differences of opinion, but I challenge anyone to prove to me where the Department of Distribution in my control has ever tried to take theatres away from exhibitors or negotiated for any theatres in their possession.

"I shall be glad indeed to lay before any committee of interested exhibitors the full correspondence of the Mattoon situation, including all letters passing between Mr. Urban and ourselves, and abide by any verdict they deliver as to whether our attitude in this matter was justified.

"It is not the purpose of this Department of Distribution to put the exhibitor out of business and take his theatres away from him. On the contrary, I am certain there are many hundreds of exhibitors who can attest that our co-operation with them during this period of depression has proved that we are doing our utmost to help them keep their theatres and to operate them at a profit.

"Here are the facts concerning the case of H. Schwartz, of Willimantic, Conn., who asserts that 'he could not have any more Paramount Pictures and that his theatre (The Loomer Opera House) was taken away from him.

"From September 25, 1918 until the present time, the Loomer Opera House used five Paramount Pictures. The Gem theatre, the regular Paramount exhibitor, used 174 features and all the Arbuckle, Sennett and St. John comedies.

"Mr. Schwartz says Arbuckle was taken away from him. The truth is that the other theatre, The Gem, always showed Arbuckle, and it was therefore impossible to take Arbuckle away from Mr. Schwartz.

"The statement that a Paramount salesman said, 'You can't have any more Paramount Pictures,' is therefore utterly absurd.

"The Gem is a modern theatre, and has bought practically all of our output.

"Cave Girl" Wins Approval of Governor Miller

The first picture since he insisted upon censorship to receive the stamp of approval of Governor Nathan L. Miller, of New York, is "The Cave Girl," the picturization of the comedy-drama by Guy Bolton and George Middleton, which is the first screen offering of Inspiration Pictures, Inc. The picture was shown to the Governor, his family and about forty guests prominent socially and politically in this state and the nation, in the executive mansion at Albany on Saturday night, June 18. This is the first time a picture has been shown in the home that the State of New York provides for its chief executive. It is also the first picture the Governor has viewed since the censorship law went into effect.

It was a notable gathering that witnessed the film, the showing being made in the salon of the mansion. To provide the right atmosphere Charles H. Duell, president of Inspiration Pictures, Inc., had furnished an orchestra and the salon was fitted out so that it resembled a motion picture theatre.

With Mr. Duell were Richard Barthelmess, Charles Mason, of the First National, and Henry King, who is to direct Mr. Barthelmess in his series of productions, and Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy.

"I am glad to help any company that makes clean pictures," said Governor Miller. "My idea of entertainment is one that the whole family can enjoy. This picture meets that requirement. There is not one suggestive thought throughout the story. It is the kind of picture that affords wholesome entertainment and proves that nastiness is not essential to motion pictures. Here we had a story of conflict, passions being aroused, plenty of thrills and swift action, portraying struggles of human emotions, fights and battles, and the ever human element of wanting to succeed in accomplishing an object."

Censor Bill Fails to Pass Before Adjournment

State moving picture censorship is dead in Illinois. The Spence Bill, which had passed the Senate by twenty-six to one votes, and gone to third reading in the house, was omitted from the house calendar on the final tumultuous day of the session and other censorship bills pending before the Senate and the house, were sidetracked before the legislature finally adjourned last week.

While Governor Small plans to call a special session of the legislature to act on certain administration bills, which failed to pass, it is understood that other matters will not be included in the call for the special session and for that reason it is probable that censorship will not again come before the legislature during 1921.

FRONT—

THE series of Selig-Rork two-reel dramas, the first two of which are reviewed in this issue, deserve more than passing notice.

They are a new kind of motion picture. The words "two-reel" classify them only as to length. They are, in reality, five-reel features condensed to two reels. The producers deserve credit for a courageous innovation, and, consequently, for that newness and difference in product for which the public is so eager.

Books by well known authors are used for themes which could have been easily made in the usual feature length. Well known players have been cast and the direction and settings are all that the acceptable modern photoplay requires.

The result is a new vividness of action, a new dramatic sharpness and tensity. We predict for these new dramatic pictures a ready place on many programs and, perhaps, a considerable effect upon future production in this field.—W. A. J.

Barthelmess Meets Trade and Fan Press

At an informal buffet luncheon at the Hotel Vanderbilt on Tuesday, June 21st, Richard Barthelmess was introduced to the representatives of the trade journals and "fan" magazines the hosts of the occasion being Inspiration Pictures, the Company which is making the Barthelmess productions, and Associated First National Pictures, Inc., which will distribute them.

Beside the star himself, the guests at the Barthelmess luncheon were: C. H. Duell, president of Inspiration Pictures; J. D. Williams, manager of Associated First National; H. O. Schwalbe, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Peterson, of the Street & Smith publications; Miss Adele Fletcher, of the Brewster publications; J. Thompson Willing, of the National Gravure Co.; J. Wardner, of the Movie Weekly; Charles Gatchell, editor of Picture Play; Frederick James Smith, editor of Shadowland; E. L. Smith and George Morris, of Inspiration Pictures; R. E. Welsh and F. J. Beecroft, of the Motion Picture News; Alfred Chalmers and Fritz Tidden, Moving Picture World; John W. Alicoate and M. J. Kann, of Wid's Daily; L. W. Boynton, of Exhibitor's Trade Review; R. W. Baremore, of the Morning Telegraph; J. Boyce Smith; C. L. Yearsley, Horace Judge and Lesley Mason, of Associated First National Pictures.

New York's Fildom to Have Baseball League

Eight teams will be represented in the new Film Baseball League as a result of a meeting held at Paramount's home office in New York on June 17th. The officers represented were: Universal, Paul Pere; Goldwyn, Walter J. Cammer; Hodkinson, J. J. Van; Pathe, I. Wormser; Fox, M. J. Starr; First National, Harry Hollander; Vitagraph, Robert Horsley; Famous Players, Wm. S. McIlvain.

Games will be played on Saturday afternoons and a regular schedule drawn up.

New Jersey Exhibitors to Convene July 6 and 7

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey will hold its state convention on July 6 and 7, in Atlantic City, on Garden Pier. The headquarters of the exhibitors' state organization reports that a large attendance is expected with representatives from every county in New Jersey. While a thorough business schedule is being prepared for the gathering, the social phases of the meeting are not being neglected. It is arranged to have a theatre party at the Apollo theatre on the evening of July 6, to be followed by a convention banquet at the Palais Royal. Prominent figures in the motion picture industry are scheduled to speak at the banquet. For the evening of July 7 a monster movie ball is being arranged to be held on Garden Pier. All requests for reservations in Atlantic City and for the various functions planned should be addressed to David R. Hochreich, secretary of the M. P. T. O. of N. J. convention, Hotel Martinique, Atlantic City, N. J.

Among the stars and notables who will be at the banquet and ball in Atlantic City are Wallace Reid, Thomas Meighan, Mae Murray, Dorothy Dalton, Sessue Hayakawa, Tsuro Aoki, Eugene O'Brien, Hope Hampton and Johnny Hines.

Addresses are expected from Governor Edwards, of New Jersey, and Senators Edge and Frelinghuysen, as well as Mayors Archibald of Newark, Frank Hague of Jersey City, Donnelly of Trenton, and Bader of Atlantic City.

Prominent film men who have signified their intention to be present include Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, William Fox, L. J. Selznick, Joseph M. Schenck, Jules Brulatour, Albert E Loew, William A. Johnston, Arthur James, L. W. Boynton, Sydney S. Cohen, Senator James J. Walker, Charles O'Reilly, John S. Evans.

Anti-Carnival Ordinance Benefits Exhibitors

Indianapolis's ordinance regulating carnivals, which practically estops the road shows from stopping there, is atracting wide attention. The ordinance puts a license fee of $100 per day on such attractions and prohibits them from locating upon any site within 500 feet of any residence district unless the written consent of 60 per cent of the property owners is filed with the city comptroller. It was passed by the city council after Indianapolis exhibitors got busy to block an invasion of tent shows which was threatened through the summer. Seven carnival companies were trying to book one plot of ground in the south side of the city. Gustav G. Schmidt, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, who is a member of the council, steered the measure through passage and signature by the mayor.

American Stockholders to Control Pathe Exchanges, Inc.

Present Policy to Huge Film Company to Continue Unchanged

IN one of the most important motion picture transactions in recent years, the present American stockholders and American management of Pathe Exchange, Inc., have just acquired control of the $7,000,000 company from Pathe Cinema, Ltd. of Paris.

Announcement to this effect is made in a cable from Paul Brunet, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., who has been in Paris for several weeks arranging the details of the transaction with the officials of Pathe Cinema, Ltd.

Charles Pathe, founder of the world-wide organization bearing his name, retains a large share of the stock in the American concern.

The transaction means that hereafter the American stockholders of Pathe Exchange, Inc., will direct the policies of the organization. There will be no change in the general policy, but there is indicated a broadening of its activities.

The policy rigidly adhered to since its inception of remaining out of the field of theatre ownership will continue to be implicitly followed by Pathe Exchange, Inc.

At the headquarters of Pathe, 35 West 45th street, it was learned that Mr. Brunet was accompanied abroad by Edmund C. Lynch, of New York, who heads the group of American stockholders taking over the majority interest in the Pathe-American Co., and Paul Fuller, of Coudert Bros., each of whom has been a member of the Board of Directors of Pathe Exchange, Inc., for five years. Mr. Lynch's associate, Charles Merrill, also has been a stockholder for five years. Bernhard Benson, vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is associated with Mr. Lynch and Mr. Merrill.

Complete details are lacking in Mr. Brunet's cable, received at the Pathe executive offices in the Pathe Building. But it is known that Pathe will not deviate from its policy of releasing the product of the foremost independent motion picture producers. Mr. Brunet will leave France probably in a month from now, and on his arrival here is expected to give full particulars of the whole transaction.

It is known that Mr. Brunet will continue as president, a position he has held for more than a year, prior to which he was vice-president and general manager of the Pathe-American Co. In leaving New York for Paris recently he carried with him complete plans which he had formulated for the carrying out of the American control transaction just consummated. In this connection it is understood that the employes of Pathe Exchange, Inc., will enjoy larger participation in the actual direction of its affairs. This is recognized as one of the broad-minded characteristics of the president of Pathe Exchange, and will figure among many considerations entering into the new arrangement.

With thirty-three selling offices located in the most important key centers throughout the United States, Pathe has earned first rank in the field of independent distributors. Many of the foremost producers have released their product through Pathe Exchange. This important asset of the organization has been instrumental in establishing the reputation of Pathe in the film industry as "the house of serials and short subjects," as it has secured wide circulation for this particular branch of entertainment.

The American control of Pathe Exchanges, Inc., comes just as Rudyard Kipling's picture, "Without Benefit of Clergy," is receiving its New York premiere at the Capitol theatre. In addition to this feature Pathe will continue to handle the Ruth Roland serials, the Charles Hutchison serials, the George B. Seitz serial, "The Yellow Arm," as well as the Jack Dempsey serial, "Daredevil Jack."

The Pathe short subjects include the Tom Sanschi series of Western, the wild animal serial known as "The Adventures of Bill and Bob," and the Paul Terry animated cartoon series, "Aesop's Fables Modernized," the Harold Lloyd and Snub Pollard comedies, the Pathe News and Pathe Review.

Worth Talking About

IN a notable list of Goldwyn pictures, scheduled for release beginning in September, two pictures—"In the Old Nest" and "Danger Curve Ahead"—mark a long step forward in picture production.

"In the Old Nest" is a Reginald Barker production from the Saturday Evening Post serial by Rupert Hughes. "Danger Ahead," written for the screen by Rupert Hughes, is called a "Rupert Hughes Picture." It is quite evident, however, that both are equally and makedly Rupert Hughes pictures.

These pictures mark, at last, the advent of the author as a photodramatist and producer. Mr. Hughes will probably, from now on, be ranked as a production unit. We hope so.

Sometime ago we welcomed the socalled "eminent authors" into this field and predicted great things for them. It seemed to us that they would be able to coordinate the various and often unrelated elements of production into a harmonious whole; that the author of the story for instance would also prepare the continuity and write the subtitles; that these authors would go further, and as they learned the new art of expression, would become preeminent as photodramatists, as producers.

Mr. Hughes has done just this—all this. We don't know just why he has made such a signal success. We are inclined to think that it has been earned mostly through intense interest and hard, studious work. Hr. Hughes evidently believed the photoplay was worth this effort—from any author.

At any rate he has arrived. And the result is not only admirable in itself, but also, as we say, it marks a far step forward in a new art.

These pictures talk. They express—through pictures. There's a new deftness throughout, a new skill and general freshness of treatment. Subtitles are few; they are rendered largely unnecessary because of the picture's own fullness of expression.

Those that do appear are welcome; they are as vivid as any scene in the picture. They are, logically and easily, a part of the picture. They do not seem to have been slapped on, unsympathetically or to help out. They arrive, it might be said, from within the picture, not from the outside.

There is a complete absence of "Movie stuff," no reliance upon the spectacular. Simple domestic themes of wide and absorbing interest are told smoothly and appealingly with naturally sustained interest. The characters are real and lovable.

People, all kinds of people, will like these pictures. Authors, we hope, will be moved to take seriously the evident and many opportunities of a new medium of expression. Goldwyn deserves credit for scheduling the picture for direct and early releases to exhibitors. One only, we are told, will be given a Broadway run, but not so as to hold it from the picture theatres.—W. A. J.

State Takes Steps to Wipe Out Carnival Show Evils

The business of the traveling carnivals which, with their side attractions of gambling devices and questionable "girlie" shows, have been proving a serious menace to the legitimate business of the motion picture theatres throughout the country, received a smashing blow in Pennsylvania on June 18, when a squad of nineteen members of the State Constabulary made a raid on a carnival exhibiting in Lykens, Dauphin County, arrested twelve showmen on the charge of operating gambling devices and confiscated a large amount of gambling paraphernalia.

The fact that the State's own police force took such vigorous part in the raid is looked upon by motion picture men as evidence that the State Government has committed itself as firmly opposed to the carnival evil.

instance, could not make good pictures unless he had specialized, nor could he uphold good studios, equipment, etc.

"If that doctrine was good then, Senator Walker asked, "why not now?" Mr. Connick had stated at Albany that Famous Players Company had over 400 theatre holdings and Senator Walker then referred to an official report of the Famous Players Lasky Corporation stating that the company owned the entire $2,000,000 capitalization of the Southern Enterprises, which in turn owned 115 theatres; also a string of 18 theatres in Canada, the 45 A. H. Black theatres in New England, the Rialto and Rivoli in New York, the Seneca Holding Company, etc. Senator Walker then referred to the statement of Dominick and Dominick, Fiscal Agents for the Famous Players Lasky Corporation to the effect that Famous Players supplies 75 per cent of all pictures rented in this country, either all or part time. "If this is true," asked Senator Walker, "why is it necessary for Famous Players to own theatres when other producers do not?" Senator Walker then referred to the Dodge case in Morrisville, Vt., the Swartz case in Willimantic, Conn.—where the Alfred S. Black Enterprise took theatres away from the owners or lease holders, and later on to the case in Mansfield, La., where one of the salemen for Southern Enterprises was made to appear to have used intimidation in securing a theatre.

"It was possibly all right," said Senator Walker, "to acquire large houses in large cities in order to protect a first-run outlet, but why go into the little towns where apparently nothing was to be gained and where some theatre owners were driven out of their livelihood."

Senator Walker went over the Dodge and Swartz cases in detail bringing out the points which have already been covered in previous issues of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

He then referred specifically to the contract drawn up between and signed by Adolph Zukor and the committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association. One of the main points of this contract was that Mr. Zukor pledged his company not to go into any territory to acquire theatres there unless that was necessary because of the lack of fair representation. Senator Walker charged that this pledge had not been lived up to.

At the conclusion of Senator Walker's address Mr. Zukor arose and stated that each one of the cases brought forth by Senator Walker would be thoroughly investigated by his concern and sufficient justice accorded.

Sidney S. Cohen stated that Alfred S. Black had, at one time, approached Marcus Loew to acquire 4,000 theatres on the supposition that little money would be required because the exhibitor could be easily intimidated. Mr. Loew stated that he was not interested in any such scheme.

Marcus Loew, who was present at the meeting, arose and confirmed Mr. Cohen's statement. Mr. Cohen thereupon invited Mr. Zukor to attend the Minneapolis convention, which invitation Mr. Zukor accepted.

The meeting, which lasted from 1:30 until 6 p. m., ended apparently in harmony between all factions involved.

One result of the session is that Mr. Zukor now plans to attend the Minneapolis convention, putting his decision in these words: "Try and keep me away."

Senator Walker's address, besides covering the ground he had previously travelled in his New York address and his speeches before exhibitor organizations on the recent country-wide trip, summed up in these concrete points which he declared could not be answered and which convinced him that he was right in his belief that Famous aimed at the formation of a trust:

(1st) Despite all promises Famous Players continues the acquisition of theatres.

(2nd) The general curtailment of production has had an object as has also the stringency of the money market insofar as it affects independent producers.

(3rd) The coercion of exhibitors to sell their theatres still exists and has been augmented by the use of form ads to injure exhibitors with their own patrons.

Senator Walker also discussed the importation of foreign films and at the conclusion of his remarks was met with a round of applause which indicated that the audience was solidly with him.

Louis Blumenthal, the New Jersey exhibitor, took a prominent part in the meeting. Among the out-of-town showmen present were Linton of Utica, Whitehurst of Baltimore, and Anderson of Paterson.

Both Famous Players and Griffith Pay Dividends

BOTH the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. and D. W. Griffith, Inc., have declared their regular dividends according to word received from those two corporations. The Famous Players dividend is two dollars per share on preferred stock payable August 1st to stockholders on record at the close of business on July 15th.

The Griffith directors have declared a dividend of fifty cents per share on the Class A shares, payable July 22nd to stock of record July 1st.

New York F. I. L. M. Advocates Uniform Contract

The adoption of a uniform contract for film service, the use of which should be generally recognized on and after October 1, 1921, was advocated at a regular meeting of the F. I. L. M. Club of New York City recently, and a resolution passed to that effect. It was stated that a uniform contract would make for more efficient and harmonious relations between exhibitors and distributors.

Fabric Studios Now in New Quarters

The Fabric Studios, Inc., the latest accessory concern to enter the Chicago field, is now established in its commodious he quarters at 177 N. State street and already has a large amount of work on hand.

The new concern is headed by E. B. Marshall, managing director, who is known from coast to coast as an expert in designing and manufacturing artistic stage curtains, settings and decorations in fabrics of all kinds. For several years he was connected with Eastern studios and has supervised the stage decorations of many of the theatres most famous for beauty throughout the country, including all of Ascher's newer houses, such as the Capitol at Cincinnati, the West Englewood, and the Roosevelt, and such theatres as the Missouri and Criterion at St. Louis; the Majestic at Detroit, the new Tivoli, Chattanooga; Dee Robinson's Madison theatre at Peoria; the new Strand, the Butterfield house at Lansing, Mich., and theatres controlled by Tom Moore, Crandall, Balaban & Katz and other widely known showmen.

The best offer we ever could get from Mr. Schwartz was that he could use some of our features on Sunday nights only, at a rental price of $15 to $20, which price is out of the question for a town, the size of Willimantic.

"In regard to the charge that we 'took his theatre,' we wrote on March 24, 1921, to John L. Hall, of Choate, Hall and Stewart, landlord of the theatre as follows:

"'Being the largest motion picture producing company in the country having the future of the industry at heart, we are keenly interested in the welfare of all exhibitors, whether they show Paramount Pictures or not. We would, therefore, appreciate it very much if you would kindly consider seriously the possibility of allowing Mr. Schwartz to continue as tenant in the Loomer Opera House.'

"Mr. Hall replied that Mr. Schwartz had caused him a loss of at least $2,000, and that he did not want Mr. Schwartz as a tenant.

"We have continued to sell Paramount Pictures to the theatre that has regularly used them—The Gem.

"We have attempted to have the owner of the Loomer Opera House rent his theatre to Mr. Schwartz.

"Whatever controversy there is, is entirely between Mr. Schwartz and the owner of the theatre. The booking of Paramount Pictures has nothing to do with the question, since we have no intention of taking Paramount Pictures away from the Gem, which always has shown them, and giving them to Mr. Schwartz who has used only five since September 25, 1918.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

A Wise Fool—
A very good picture. Not much business because of hot weather. (Middle West.)

Idol of the North—
Fair picture that did pretty well considering the picture business slump. (West.)

Sham—
One of the best things Ethel Clayton has done, and she played to capacity business throughout. A thoroughly satisfying picture. (East.)

The Traveling Salesman—
"Fatty" Arbuckle is generally a sure bet here, but this picture is slow and drags in several spots. An average week's run. (Middle West.)

This picture was well received at my house and seemed to please the patrons. (West.)

Went over very big. Very entertaining. (West.)

White and Unmarried—
This picture did a satisfactory business for a week's run and pleased patrons. (Middle West.)

Had great business with this picture. And it sure deserved it. (West.)

Sacred and Profane Love—
Business way off, but very well liked by those who saw it. (West.)

A mediocre picture. Went over fair. (Middle West.)

City of Silent Men—

Declared by patrons to be Thomas Meighan's best picture. Excellent business recorded. (East.)

One a Minute—
Doug MacLean made a personal appearance in connection with this and we played to capacity business. (East.)

Douglas MacLean went over big in this picture and pulled big crowds desnite the extreme warm weather. (Middle West.)

Poor business, with a dull and draggy picture whose climax and denouement was anticipated from the opening scenes. Nothing exciting, and business about equal. (East.)

Fair picture which brought good business. (West.)

What Every Woman Knows—
Strong feature which appeals to both men and women. Played to splendid business. (Middle West.)

The Woman God Changed—
A fairly entertaining subject that attracted only fair business. (East.)

Deception—
One half say it's greatest ever; the other half say it's absolutely awful. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Lessons in Love—
About the usual Constance Talmadge picture, drawing the usual crowds. Not as good as "Mamma's Affair." (Middle West.)

A typical Constance Talmadge picture which went over great in connection with a second anniversary frolic at my house. Good business all week. (Middle West.)

Peck's Bad Boy—
Two weeks run to big business and pleased audience. (West.)

Ran this one two weeks to satisfied crowds. (West.)

Girl in the Taxi—
Picture all right, but it didn't draw. Booked for a week—took it off after three days. Lost money on it. (East.)

45 Minutes From Broadway—
A fine picture but it drew only average business. (West.)

Dangerous Business—
A fairly good picture but business was only fair. (East.)

Gypsy Blood—
A mediocre picture and business was bad. (East.)

Mamma's Affair—
Pleasing picture generally. Receipts average. (East.)

Trust Your Wife—
Katherine MacDonald gaining in popularity with each succeeding picture at this house. This vehicle, however, just an average one. Business good. (East.)

Wedding Bells—
Counted as one of Constance Talmadge's best pictures and seemed to satisfy our audiences entirely. (Middle West.)

Love's Penalty—
Drew good crowds, due in large part to personal appearance of Hope Hampton. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Thru the Back Door—
A typical Pickford production. Tied up with old time Pickford show and the two together went over fairly well altho Pickford seems to be losing her hold on the public. (East.)

Fine box office attraction. Miss Pickford gets over in her customary style. (Middle West.)

Dream Street—
A splendid picture which was very well received. Griffith was not at his best in it but was well above the average. (Middle West.)

Two week's run to big business. (West.)

Went over very big. (West.)

METRO

A Message From Mars—
Fine theme, poor acting and directing. Receipts good. (East.)

A fair picture. Business was bad. (East.)

Puppets of Fate—
A bad picture that brought little very little business. (East.)

The Offshore Pirate—
Fine picture. Well attended. delighted my patrons. (Middle West.)

Polly With a Past—

REALART

The Little Clown—
Mary Miles Minter lives up to her reputation in this one and makes many new friends. A good week's attendance. (Middle West.)

Sheltered Daughters—
Fair business at box office with this average production. (East.)

Two Weeks With Pay—
Fair picture, receipts poor. (East.)

The Land of Hope—

A Private Scandal—
Great little picture—played to excellent business. May McAvoy is certainly a comer. (East.)

GOLDWYN

Wet Gold—
Biggest business in town this week. Great show and fine entertainment. (Middle West.)

A poor picture and a poor box office attraction. Plot badly motivated. Some of the under-water scenes are good. (Middle West.)

Snowblind—
One of the best of the snow pictures. Has interesting plot and beautiful scenic backgrounds. Good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

The Last Door—
Business only fair, nothing to get excited over. O'Brien at one time was my best drawing card, and he is regaining some of his lost popularity. (East.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

Mistress of Shenstone—
Very good picture and one that was well liked by my patrons. More than average business. (West.)

Seven Year's Bad Luck—
An entertaining picture which brought good business. (West.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

I Am Guilty—
This is an excellent Louise Glaum picture and our patrons liked it. Owing to the extreme heat, however, business was only average. (Middle West.)

Home Talent—

UNIVERSAL

The Wallop—
Great picture. Patrons well satisfied. Box office receipts satisfying. (West.)

Reputation—
Holds interest but viewed as not a first-class picture. Receipts below average. (East.)

HODKINSON

The U. P. Trail—
Great stuff. Good atmosphere, fine cast, and good business throughout week. (East.)

EQUITY

Hush—
A familiar theme, but very well developed. This drew fair-sized crowds. (Middle West.)

A fair picture. Business only average. (East.)

STATE RIGHTS

The Mask—
Good picture playing to poor business. (West.)

Christie Coming East to Plan Comedies

Excellent results are said to have been obtained in the early work on a new series of Christie Comedies for Educational. Following completion of "Nothing Like It," a spectacular novelty, and "Oh Buddy," Al Christie is now working on the third play of the new year's program. Christie directed "Nothing Like It." and "Oh Buddy" was made under the direction of William Beaudine.

As soon as the third picture of the series is completed Al Christie will make a trip to New York, where he will discuss with the directors of Educational Film Exchanges plans for further big pictures of the forthcoming series.

Headquarters of Educational Exchanges is declared to be highly pleased with the early subjects of the new year.

"Al Christie has started out in the new year at a great pace," said E. W. Hammons, president of Educational. "His first work has been most pleasing. We are hopeful that his visit to New York in the near future will develop plans for further comedies that will keep right up to the extraordinarily high mark he has set."

California Theatre Uses "Mystery Girl" Idea Successfully

The contention that exploitation stunts do not go over as well in small towns as in larger cities is strongly refuted by an exploitation put over by the management of the Virginia theatre in Vallejo, Cal., for the showing of "Outside the Law."

Vallejo, a city of 20,000, became exceedingly interested in a "mystery" girl, who appeared there wearing a black domino and a Priscilla Dean Tam.

The Virginia theatre made a tie-up with the Vallejo Evening Times and a local department store, and arranged the recurrent appearance in the store window and on the streets of the city of three masked girls wearing tams. While in the window, the girls would wear the masks. Then they would slip out into the streets, minus the masks, and promenade up and down.

One of them was designated as the "Mystery Girl." The other two were foils. It was announced that the first half-dozen Vallejo women who could recognize the "Mystery Girl" on the street, and who would escort her to the Times office, would get a Priscilla Dean Tam. The lucky women also got weekly passes for two to the Virginia theatre.

Clothing Store Helps Arthur Boost "Bunty"

Tom Arthur, manager of the Cecil theatre, Mason City, Ia., believes in window displays for the attractions playing his theatre, even if the town is small.

When "Bunty Pulls the Strings," was booked, Mr. Arthur went to the most prominent men's clothing store in the town and got a display of wearing apparel either made in Scotland or suggesting the land of the thistle.

Included in the display were plaid and tartan, caps, gaiters, a suit of Scotch tweed. A hand lettered card with decorated border, reading, "There's a real Scotch flavor about these goods. They breathe the tang of the Highland and the fan. So does the famous Scotch comedy, 'Bunty Pulls the Strings,' now at the Cecil theatre."

Window Displays Attract Attention for "Heliotrope" Showing

Mrs. Eva Vernon, manager of the Saenger theatre, Texarkana U. S. A., does not neglect the exploitation of any picture that presents possibilities. She has recently achieved splendid results on a campaign for "Heliotrope" with tie-ups with a drug store on a perfume window and florist on flowers of the same name. Cut-outs, stills and attractive banners were used in the windows.

In addition to the window displays, Mrs. Vernon put on a ballyhoo. Impersonators of the sheriff and "Heliotrope Harry" of the picture, the latter in handcuffs and a convict suit borrowed of the chief of police, paraded the streets. A card sign advertising the feature was hung on the "convict's" back.

Auto Club Tie-up on "Too Much Speed"

Orowitz, Philadelphia Paramount Exploiter, Puts Over Great Co-operative Idea

ONE of the biggest tie-ups in the history of motion picture exploitation is the "Too Much Speed" campaign now being conducted in Philadelphia by the Keystone Automobile Club in the interests of better observance of the motor vehicle laws and incidentally the week's run of "Too Much Speed," which opens at the Stanley theatre, June 25.

Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiteer from the Philadelphia exchange, sold the Keystone Automobile Club on the title of the picture and also on the Paramount paper accessories. The club, which has the largest enrolled membership of any similar organization, began the campaign July 1 and will continue it for thirty days.

The slogan of the campaign is "Too Much Speed" and the symbol is the open hand taken from the block one-sheet designed by Walter P. Lindlar, assistant manager of exploitation for Paramount pictures.

The president of the Keystone Automobile Club is J. Borton Weeks, a deputy attorney general of Pennsylvania, and attorney to Governor Sproul. All the Philadelphia papers have been sold on the safety first campaign, and columns of publicity have been printed every day advertising the slogan and the poster.

The hand, which will be a feature of the picture advertising, has now been affixed to the top of the semaphores used by the traffic officers at the street corners.

The trap men who catch speeders use flags with the hand instead of the customary red flag.

More than 20,000 windshield stickers have been distributed. These stickers are a cut-out from the one-sheet.

The hand formed the design for the cover of The Keystone Motorist, the organ of the club, which has a circulation of more than 10,000 and nearly 30,000 readers.

All the garages have been supplied with banners and they affix them to all automobiles they have to haul in.

An old Ford car was rammed and then placed on an open truck. The signs on the Ford consist of the hand and "Too Much Speed." The truck will drive through the streets of Philadelphia throughout the campaign.

Window display for "The Sky Ranger" arranged by the Pathe San Francisco exchange

Orowitz was especially fortunate in the newspaper publicity. The ground was broken by a letter from President Weeks to The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin on May 23, announcing the purpose of the campaign and giving it the official name of "Too Much Speed" as well as a description of the hand used as a symbol.

The Bulletin responded the next day with an editorial saying, "There is urgent call not only for action on the part of the police, but for such movements as that about to be inaugurated by the Keystone Automobile Club in its 'Too Much Speed' Campaign."

The Inquirer fell on May 29 with a half-column story announcing "a vigorous campaign against 'Too Much Speed' will be conducted in this vicinity."

The North American broke in with a half-column story on June 2, The Public Ledger on June 4; The Philadelphia Record, June 4; until now the entire press carries stories daily on the campaign. A feature of this publicity has been the use of the title, "Too Much Speed," in the headlines and the editorial in every paper.

The Stanley theatre is now posting block one-sheets of the picture, the design of the hand, and the entire vicinity is considered submerged.

The theatre advertising will open up a week before the showing.

Stanley Chambers' home talent musical stock company which presented an original prologue for "The Old Swimmin' Hole," recently at the Palace theatre, Wichita, Kansas, of which Mr. Chambers is manager

Impromptu Parade Is Climax of Exploitation Stunt

An impromptu parade and jollification was the finale of an original exploitation stunt devised by the management of the Rialto theatre, at Tucson, Ariz., in connection with the showing of "The Fighting Shepherdess." A bleating lamb, a large picture of Anita Stewart and a Bible text formed the unusual combination.

The management of the Rialto, which has adopted the definite policy of seeking some spectacular method of attracting attention to its productions, seized on the "mutton atmosphere" in the picture and turned it into good account.

The first move was to place a lamb on exhibition in the lobby, flanked on one side by a huge picture of Miss Stewart, and on the other by a large picture executed by one of the members of the high school senior class in poster work and art at the state university, with the inscription, "All we like sheep have gone astray."

This was supplemented by a trip on the part of the manager to the county assessor's office, where he obtained a list of the men in Pima County, who last year paid taxes on 100 head of sheep or more. To each of these he sent the following letter:

"The cowmen don't like the sheepmen. They say sheepmen get like sheep. In 'The Fighting Shepherdess' you will find out that they lie about you. The Rialto would be glad to have every sheepman in this county see the show Sunday night, and we will reserve the first seven rows for you. That will be sheepmen's night in Tucson."

The letter was published also in the newspapers and about 100 of the sheepmen appeared.

They were there for the 7 o'clock show and let the fun get into their blood to such an extent that at the conclusion of the performance they raided the lobby, captured the inoffensive lamb and started a parade down the brilliantly-lighted Congress street cheering and shouting.

Stallings Gets Out Newspaper and House Organ

Kinema Consolidated Theatres, Inc., of Richfield, Utah, is getting out a house organ and weekly newspaper in the interests of the Kinema of Richfield and the seven other houses in other cities controlled by the company.

A. L. Stallings, president and general manager of the circuit advises us that he finds these two mediums especially effective advertising. The house organ has won a place on the public library tables where it gets as much attention as the current picture magazines.

Mr. Stallings also uses a big mailing list extensively, sending out specially written cards.

Chambers Has Musical Stock Co. at Wichita

The home talent show as a business getter has long classed with the circus for being sure-fire and needs no explanation, but it has remained for Stanley Chambers, of the Palace and Regent theatres of Wichita, Kansas, to adapt the idea to the motion picture theatre as a regular part of the bill.

Mr. Chambers' organist, a Mr. Flath, used to be a stage director for musical comedy productions and his wife is a talented professional musical comedy performer. Mr. and Mrs. Flath are the heads of a local stock company that Mr. Chambers has gotten together from the younger set of the best people in the town. The company numbers twenty people with which the stage directors rehearse various original musical numbers to be used on the bill at the Palace. The Palace stock company includes instrumentalists, vocalists, quartettes and dancers, all talented and now able to present a show in genuine professional style, owing to the training they have received under the direction of the Flath's. The home talent shows have been a feature on the Palace bills for about a year and a half and still draw the crowds. Most of the talent used have regular employment in Wichita, and appear mostly for the pleasure of the thing and for the training they get. There are no regular salaries, but of course, Mr. Chambers compensates his players for their time and trouble.

The idea which Mr. Chambers has put over is practicable in any small city and as to its satisfactory results there can be no question.

Mayer Invades Indianapolis

Universal Exploitation Representative Puts Over Thorough Campaign for "Outside the Law"

JOSEPH H. MAYER, Universal's special exploitation representative has been doing things for "Outside the Law" at Indianapolis, where the picture played the Isis theatre. The campaign opened with a series of teaser ads that got the attention.

The teasers were followed by a "clean up your back yard" post card campaign, signed P. D. and which went into every home in Indianapolis. This broadside was followed by a quarter page ad demanding, "Who is P. D.?" followed by other ads announcing that P. D. was the electrifying, etc., Priscilla Dean, and announcing the showing of "Outside the Law" at the Isis theatre.

The campaign included several fruitful window display tie-ups. A personal letter of recommendation was obtained from Miss Dean for Jack Rohr, one of the city's leading haberdashers, which he pasted on his window, and backed up with six lobby display cards and a photograph of the star.

A fruitful tie-up was made with Leo Krauss, a prominent jeweler of Indianapolis. Krauss devoted an entire window to the display of "Outside the Law" lobby cards, pearl necklace around the neck. This tie-up followed the suggestion found in the picture, which features the quest of a valuable pearl necklace.

Krauss also gave away a handsome pearl necklace on the last night of the showing. The gift necklace was featured in all exploitation by the theatre and the selection of the lucky person staged without the odious characteristics of a lottery contest.

The exploitation was topped by an elaborate "prison front" as a lobby display for the Isis theatre during the run of the picture.

Lewis Gives "Deception Fine Campaign

Atmosphere for "Deception," was created by Manager Lewis, of the new Capitol theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., the effect being produced both in lobby display and with a musical program.

Rich tapestries were hung in the lobby, artistically draped at the sides and back. Several ancient candelabras with candles burning were used. Some old suits of armor, spears, swords, etc., helped impress the prospective patron. Dimmed lights added to the effect of age and romance. The only modern touch to the decorations were cut-outs from the lithographs. The orchestra rendered selections from "Robin Hood," Wagner and English ballads. A local singer of ability sang, "Ave Maria," at the scene in the picture showing Anne Boleyn's death.

Tudor Mail Used in Salt Lake Street Stunt

Miss Annette Meyers, a Salt Lake City society girl, donned a suit of mail and delivered an invitation to attend a private showing of "Deception" to the mayor of the city, the Governor of Utah, and the president of the University of Utah. She was prevailed upon to remain in costume and circulate heralds through the main streets of Salt Lake City. The stunt not only attracted attention but was good for news stories. Rick Ricketson, the Paramount exploiter, had charge of the exploitation work with the co-operation of George Carpenter of the Paramount-Empress theatre.

This stunt caused a breakfast table commotion and went a long way to stimulating word-of-mouth advertising.

Brooklyn Mark Strand Presents Musical Novelty

"Songs and Dances of Sunny Italy" is the title of a special number being presented this week by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre.

The scene for this type of amusement was laid, of course, in Italy and in an effort to have everything at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre absolutely authentic Mr. Hyman put in several days searching for material in Italian histories and in antique shops where Italian works of art were available. So when Brooklyn saw this novelty they had as nearly a picture of Venice in actuality as the human mind could contrive.

Only one setting was used, a Venetian exterior with a balustrade, gondola and panorama drop of Venice. A water ripple effect played on the canal waters as depicted on the drop, and a cloud effect gave life to the scenic embellishment. Upon opening a tenor was found perched on a balustrade serenading the girl occupant of the gondola with the amorous words and melody of "Ciriribin." The gondola slides up to the balustrade, is moored, and at the end of the verse the dark-haired signora steps from the craft gallantly aided by the Venetian, and both sing the chorus. Then enters another gallant courting the contralto with "Mari, Mari." At the end of the latter number the girl dancers in correct costume enter and interpret an Italian tambourine dance. The finale was the rendition of "Finiculi, Finicula," which the girl dancers color with fantastic folk-dancing.

Clever Tie-up for Pickford Picture in Philadelphia

As a prologue for "Through the Back Door," Manager Wolf, of the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, arranged an old-time movie show that proved to be as big an attraction as the main feature.

Twenty-four sheet cut-out lobby display for "The Kid" used recently by Manager George Schade of Schade's theatre, Sandusky, O.

The curtains were drawn aside to disclose a bare room. A man came in and swept it out with a broom, then another, who climbed to parts unknown and carried on a conversation with the first as to the heat in the booth, and so on. Chairs were set up. A little boy straggled in and began to eat peanuts. The attendant told him he wasn't allowed to throw the shells on the floor. A fat woman in a large hat came next and on the screen was thrown a slide saying:

"Gentlemen will please remove their hats."

More patrons came in. A girl started to play the "rattly" old piano in the corner, and then one of the very first Mary Pickford films, dating back to 1909, was shown. It was very short and very funny to a present-day audience. Afterwards a girl in evening dress came out before the screen and sang a popular song while colored slides to illustrate were thrown on the screen, just as in the old days. And following this, "Through the Back Door" was shown.

Baby Ballet Featured by Lieber

A spectacular baby ballet, in which more than twenty-five kiddies took part, was presented at the Circle theatre in Indianapolis in conjunction with "Wedding Bells," the week of June 12.

The ballet, which was entitled "Morning," was given as an Entr' Acte, and the clever interpretation of various difficult steps by the youngsters proved exceedingly successful from both an artistic and financial viewpoint. Ralph Lieber, business manager of the Circle, preceded the showing with an extensive advertising campaign and the results were more than satisfactory.

Opening with a dance portraying the passing of the night and other fairy interpretations, during which time a score or more of kiddies costumed as flowers formed a background, appearing to be asleep. As dawn breaks, a "Will O' the Wisp" dance is given, followed by the dance interpretation of "Morning," by Gertrude Hacker, at which time the fairy flowers awaken and join in the pageant.

A solo dance by little Sue Tezzman, a three-year-old toe dancer, who previously had won many friends in Indianapolis, probably was the most successful individual event of the performance.

The costumes for the production were designed by W. Hurley Ashby, head of the Circle art staff, and the musical setting was arranged by Rudolf Kafka, musical director for the Circle.

Riley Poem Basis of Opperman's Prologue

Hal Opperman, manager of the Crescent theatre, of Pontiac, Ill., gave an effective setting to the showing of "The Old Swimmin' Hole." Preceding the showing of the picture the James Whitcomb Riley poem on which the feature is based, was read from the stage with a background showing a creek in Hoosier land.

Big Campaign for Comedy

Manager Helmt's Exploitation of "Now or Never" Gets Attention of Des Moines

E. H. HELMTS, manager of the Strand theatre, Des Moines, Iowa, originated an exploitation campaign for "Now or Never" that brought fine box-office results.

He arranged with the daily papers for a "Harold Lloyd Impersonation Test" inviting the inhabitants of the city to demonstrate their histrionic and imitative talents from the stage of the Strand theatre before judges who were selected from the audiences. Every and each contestant would be allowed three minutes during which he was to present his impersonations from the stage and prizes were provided for the best six impersonations.

In addition to theatre tickets, cash prizes were promised, the best impersonator to receive five Dollars in cash and five tickets while the others ranged down to two tickets.

The idea appealed not only to the public as can well be imagined but to the press as well. The "Des Moines Capital," in addition to the usual publicity given to picture houses, treated the announcement as news item and "boxed" it on the front page, together with a picture of Harold Lloyd.

Day by day, photos of the impersonators appeared on the front page of the paper coupled with a likeness of the comedian and inviting the public to comments.

As it can well be imagined, the interest of the public was aroused to a high degree, especially when Mr. Helmt announced that day on which the performance and presentation of prizes would take place.

Incidentally, a great number of contestants added to the advertising of the picture by promenading the streets, wearing windsor ties—often improvised—and tortoise shell rimmed glasses. Local opticians added to the publicity by placing show cards into their windows advising people to buy tortoise shell rimmed glasses to look like Harold Lloyd.

Mr. Helmt had thus secured tremendous publicity for his house at a comparatively low cost, with the exception of the cuts he spent altogether ten dollars for prices and the excellent box-office returns more than justified the slight expenditure he had incurred.

Oklahoma Showman Stages "Devil" Prologue

A dramatic prologue on "The Devil" was put on by Manager Wm. Jacobs, of the new Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Specially painted scenery, as shown above, made an effective setting, in the center of which were flickering green and red flames made of silks and fanned by a concealed electric fan. Weird music preceded the entrance of a red devil with pitchfork, who recited several stanzas made up by Manager Johnson from the story of the picture, at which point a lovely girl in white as "Purity" entered. "The Devil" cowered backward, and was enveloped in a big puff of smoke, set off at his feet by an electric button.

Portland Theatre Stages Big Musical Act

Paul Noble Breaks All Presentation Records With "The Spirit of the Rose"

A FIFTEEN-minute prologue under the title of "The Spirit of the Rose," that served as an introduction to the screening of "The Sky Pilot," and also as a specialty number in honor of a recently held municipal event, the annual Portland (Ore.) Rose Festival was staged by Paul Noble of the Liberty theatre, Portland.

Mr. Noble writes a full description of the number giving the words of the songs used and explaining the stage business. The accompanying cuts illustrate the text.

"We took our sketch artist and out the highway we went to a place known as Chanticleer Inn, and looking due East from there one sees in the immediate foreground the famous "Crown Point"—the Columbia stretching out for miles and winding in through the gorge with a mountain background glorified by Mount Hood some sixty miles distant. Then back to the studio and we put the carpenters and the painters to work on the set. In the meantime our press agent got busy, and we had a world of publicity including announcements by the Rosarians—The Rose Festival Committee and the Chamber of Commerce.

Then into rehearsals with a dozen local talent performers and in three days we were ready to try it out on the public and here is the way it lined up.

All lights out with spot in center of stage as velvet draperies go up showing two curtain pages in Old Rose velvet costumes trimmed in gold in front of a silk and silver curtain hung in loose folds. Light rose foots gradually come up during their song as follows:

Two little curtain girls are we,
List to us and a sight you'll see,
As we open these curtains and show to you
A wonderful picture and a glorious view;
A place you've all heard of;
A scene that you all know.
Chorus:
It's our own Columbia Highway where the roses brightly bloom,
Where the mountains in their splendor seem to reach up to the moon.
Where the stranger from the East is awed where the native says "it's great,"
We've synchronized this scene for you with music lights and paint.

At this point the girls gradually draw back the curtains disclosing the scene I mentioned at first with the lights around the road railing burning—the lights in the Vista House at Crown Point—the white headlights of machines going over the highway and the red tail lights of others going the opposite direction, and the entire scene diffused with just sufficient blue and rose to give wonderful distance and haziness. Three or four men are noticed leaning over the railing apparently looking at the scenery. At this point the side draperies are taken away and with music very agitate and noisy, on comes a sport model automobile with chauffeur and four young ladies. Just as they about to alight the siren of a motor cop is heard and on he comes driving up to the side of the motor car singing as follows:

I've followed you some time, sir,
And quite a speed you've hit;
You've taken curves with mighty swerves,
And ne'er slowed up a bit.
And now it is my duty to present this card, young man,
Which entitles you to interview Police Court Judge Rossman.

Exit car and chauffeur while speed cop comes down stage to center singing the chorus:

Oh the king of the highway am I,
As protector of lives my business thrives
By catching the speeders who try
To do ninety or more and make Ford owners sore,
And instead of riding they fly,
So up goes my hand and I make them stand,
And I write down therein their record of sin;
'Tis the king of the highway am I.

Speed cop and soprano come down stage singing "Come Into My Garden of Roses," while a flower dancer does an interpretative rose dance. During the chorus the entire company come down stage. The end of this song immediately sequels into a dreamy waltz as follows:

Roses fair, Roses rare;
With fragrance and color combined,
They've won recognition in every nation,
They're known everywhere in this land.
Their beauty's unquestioned and in print is mentioned
The truth of this everyone knows
Roses fair, Roses rare
In Portland the home of the rose.

At the end of the first chorus the girls at the curtain draw it together and as the second chorus is started the lights are gradually dimmed out, and the moving rose scenes from Prizma's "The Message of a Flower," are thrown upon the draperies and last out until the finish. Henri Keates, master of the Liberty's organ, wrote the music and Manager Noble furnished the lyrics thus giving the prologue five local angles. Mr. Noble is immensely pleased with the prologue. He states in his letter as follows:

"The stunt has not only gotten us lots of business, but it has made the public feel that we have sacrificed the usual selfish business motives with which we are usually credited and have boosted for an enterprise that is wonderfully well thought of locally and the dyed in the wool natives will never forget it—CAUSE IT HIT HOME."

Weld's Latest Lobby Display

"Little Clown" Exploitation That More Than Met the Competition of a Carnival

A WILD man, an Egyptian puma, an Irish flying bat, a Grecian groundhog, a Mexican chinchilla and other animals were utilized by Arthur E. Weld, manager of the Strand at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in putting over "The Little Clown" to a new house record for summer business.

A tent 14x22 was rented. With this erected in the spacious lobby and the box-office converted into a "main ticket wagon," Manager Weld set about to get a menagerie. Display ads for rats, cats, dogs, rabbits and a wild man (but no wild women) ran in advance of the exhibition dates and created a lot of wonder as to what the Strand was going to pull off. And the menagerie soon was available.

Gaily bedecked boxes on little express wagons provided the cages in which domestic animals painted in lurid water colors were placed. The Egyptian puma was a neighbor's cat whose nightly concert had disturbed the manager's slumbers; a butcher provided a whole cage of antediluvian cooties (rats), the police pound yielded a Mexican chinchilla, a plate of sausage was the Grecian groundhog, a brick represented the flying Irish bat that had been captured on a housetop while a head carved on a cocoanut mutely told how "Bobo," the Egyptian mummy, had died while trying to swallow his food and could find no place to put it. In addition, there was a wild man and a dozen of the prettiest girls in Cedar Rapids in varicolored satin clown suits.

Weld's colossal aggregation of world's wonders went along very smoothly for about 30 minutes and then excitement started when one of the antediluvian cooties escaped. The Egyptian puma took up the trail, with the Mexican chinchilla in hot pursuit of the puma. During the melee, the wild man took fright and beat it back to the jungles where his relatives were chattering in the trees. At least, that is what the newspapers stated that evening. Then to cap the climax some tender-hearted sister who wasn't onto publicity capers complained to the humane society about mistreatment of animals in the Strand lobby. Their duly accredited representative investigated — and that made more good newspaper copy.

All Decks a Queen Shy After This Exploitation Stunt

Here's a stunt that is reported to have gone into every home in Peotone, Ill.

J. J. Hoffer, proprietor of the Victory theatre in that town, booked "The Diamond Queen," the Universal serial.

As a novel publicity stunt he showed the first two episodes on the opening day and announced that all youngsters, who brought the queen of diamonds from a deck of regular playing cards, would be admitted free.

After the performance Hoffer held a hand containing queens out of almost every deck in Peotone. Not wishing to break up any games, he further took publicity advantage of the situation by announcing that the proper deck owners could come down to the theatre and claim their "Queens," if they so desired.

The stunt not only resulted in a packed house for the serial opening, but gave the community a good laugh—on the "penny ant-eaters."

Grauman Stages Prologue for Keaton Comedy

As a prologue for "The High Sign," playing recently at Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles, Managing Director Sid Grauman staged a novelty number that to all intents and purposes to those who had not seen the picture was a separate act in itself.

An expert shot was engaged for the occasion. With the proper light effects all arranged, the expert with the rifle took his place on the stage and he put on such an astounding exhibition of skill that he made most vaudeville acts of the same nature seem small by comparison. The audience was led to believe that the act was an independent number and had nothing whatever to do with the picture.

Hence, the psychology of surprise and pleasure when Buster Keaton appeared in the role of the crack shot in his comedy. The combination thus worked out by Sid Grauman sent them away from his theatre with a smile and a word of praise, the best advertisement any theatre can have.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

The purchase of four new theatres and starting construction work on two more elaborate motion picture houses during the last three months has brought the number of theatres controlled by Fitzpatrick & McElroy, of Chicago, to thirty-six, scattered through the States of Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois and Indiana.

The two theatres being built will be the most pretentious of all the chain. They are located in Benton Harbor, Michigan, and Harvey, Illinois, and it is planned to open them early in spring.

The Benton Harbor theatre will seat 1,800 persons and the Harvey house 1,200.

The houses purchased in the past ninety days include two at Goshen, the Jefferson, and Lincoln, each 900 seats; the Lincoln-Dixey, at Chicago Heights, a 1,600 seat house, and the Leida, in West Pullman, with 800 seats.

To keep pace with the expansion of their business, Fitzpatrick & McElroy have recently extended their offices in the Century Building and now occupy practically the entire sixth floor.

Besides their large theatre business, this firm is the sole representative of the Ford Motion Picture Laboratories, handling the world rights to the Ford Educational Library, and also distributor of the Zenith Motion Picture Projector.

The south side is to have another large motion picture house, according to plans made by Alexander Flower, president of the Roosevelt State Bank, who will erect a 3,500-seat house on Grand Boulevard just south of the bank, which will cost in the neighborhood of $300,000. Work of clearing the site for the new house will start at once and plans are being drawn by Architects Z. Erol Smith and Albert Anis. The Grand Boulevard, which will be the name of the new theatre, will have its main entrance on the boulevard with 100 feet frontage. It will be an L-shaped building with the south wall 135 feet and the east 205, and a large stage capable of handling big attractions, if necessary, at the north end of the property. There will be one large balcony. It is reported that two prominent firms, now operating chains of theatres, are negotiating for a lease of the proposed new house.

F. W. Kraemer, assistant comptroller of the Rothacker Film Company, returned to Chicago after a month on the coast, where he cooperated with Joseph Aller in installing a comprehensive auditing system at the Rothacker-Aller Laboratory. He states that Mr. Aller is clearing desks in anticipation of a substantial increase in coast production. After a few days at Chicago Mr. Kraemer proceeded to New York to attend a conference at the headquarters of the Rothacker eastern practical picture branch. D. D. Rothacker, manager of the practical picture division, and S. J. Stoughton were present.

Dan Barton, of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, left Oshkosh late in the week in his fast flying Stutz for Minneapolis, where he will open Bartola Musical Instrument headquarters at the West Hotel and keep open house for exhibitors during the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. A party of four more members, all connected with his company, followed Mr. Barton to Minneapolis, also traveling by automobile. It includes K. G. Kurtz, F. O. Patterson, H. H. Havens, and B. C. Comstock.

J. B. Dibelka, recording and corresponding secretary of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance, is scheduled to leave Chicago Friday for Minneapolis with his family, making the trip by automobile. After attending the convention, it is Mr. Dibelka's intention to drive from Minneapolis to Mackinaw and then return to Chicago by way of Michigan, stopping at some of the east coast and Traverse Bay summer resorts en route. He is fully prepared for the trip through the woods from Minneapolis east, carrying a rifle, revolvers and necessary camping equipment. His big husky son will help him do the heavy work.

Manager Bob Lucas, of Robertson-Cole, is proud of the fact that two of his salesmen, H. R. Phillips and E. B. Ishmael, headed the list of contestants from all over the United States for "The Wonder Man" selling prize the early part of this week, and, as the contest closes within a few days, the odds are that Messrs Phillips and Ishmael will be the ones who will attend the Dempsey-Carpentier fight on July 2nd, with all expenses paid by Robertson-Cole. Manager Lucas states these men are making good in the Chicago slogan, "1921 Is Rewarding Fighters."

Jack Graumon has purchased the interest of his partner, D. M. Vandawalker, in the Doll-Van Film Corporation, and is now in sole control of that company. He also has taken over a half interest in the Guhl Film Corporation of Milwaukee, an exchange which is affiliated with the Chicago corporation. Mr. Vandawalker has left Chicago and intends to take a long vacation before tieing up in another business enterprise. Mr. Graumon is one of the most widely known and well thought of exchange managers in this territory. In addition to the pictures already owned by the Doll-Van, the Illinois and Wisconsin rights to Jane Novak's series of six features for Fall release, has recently been taken over by Mr. Graumon. They are out door pictures with the north wood as a background and should prove good box office attractions.

R. C. Seery, of First National, is adding to his reputation as a golf player by his successful 1921 record on the links. His most recent achievement was the winning of a gold fountain pen for low net score of seventy-nine in the Illinois Athletic Club tournament played over the Grand Beach links last week. He also turned in low net score, seventy-three, at the May tournament of that organization, which was played at the Olympia Field, and won a handsome motor robe. Bob-O-Link is Mr. Seery's home club and he is rated as one of the reliable players of that organization.

Among the Illinois exhibitors who are going to New York for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight are Carl Miller of the Spencer Square Theatre, Rock Island, and Joe Erber of the new Erber Theatre, East St. Louis.

E. Rutishauser, who operates the Virginia and the Wonderland, has completed plans for the erection of a new six hundred and fifty seat theatre at 617-19 West Madison street, in the vicinity of the Northwestern Depot. A novel feature of the new house is that Mr. Rutishauser expects to do his biggest business in the morning, having noticed that the district near the Northwestern Depot is thronged early in the day with men looking for jobs and congregated about the employment agencies, and from the crowd he expects to get a large percentage of his patrons.

The Adams, the newest loop motion picture theatre, which is located on Adams street, between State and Wabash, opened its doors Saturday to the public for the first time, "The Silver Car" being the feature attraction, and has done excellent business despite the extremely hot weather. It is one of the handsomest small houses located in Chicago and the owners, The Vista Amusement Enterprises, have done wonders with the limited space at their command. This company is headed by H. M. Ortenstein and operate, in addition to the Adams, the Vista, Twentieth Century, New Park and Garden.

The opening of D. W. Griffith's new production, "Dream Street," at the Ziegfeld Theatre, was one of the important events of the week in Chicago Theatre circuits.

Salesmanager Eichenlaub, of First National, is scheduled to leave next week on his vacation. He will motor to his old home in Chillicothe, Ohio, where his parents reside, and before returning to Chicago will also visit Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Cleveland and other central west cities.

Publicity Director Hill, of Universal's Chicago exchange, has just returned from a trip through the Illinois corn belt, where he made a survey of the business situation in the one, two and three day a week motion picture houses and reports that the small town theatre owners are doing an average Summer business, although a good many exhibitors are complaining. The general feeling among these exhibitors seems to be that with the passing of the farmer's busy season, theatre attendance will increase materially and that by late Summer business should be about back to normal.

Managing Director Cadoret, of the company which operates the Majestic theatre, Kankakee, Illinois, and other houses, was a Chicago visitor this week and stated that his concern was contemplating making still further improvement in the Majestic Theatre, which was recently gone over thoroughly and a fifteen thousand Hope-Jones Pipe Organ installed. The improvements which are now contemplated will make the Majestic one of the real de luxe houses of the state.

Chicago Independent's Ambitious Program

Wm. Russell, of Russell-Coverdale and Russell, newly formed film producing organization announces this week some big production plans. This firm owns and control their own studios in Los Angeles, California.

At present they are working on a series of Western pictures starring Frank Braidwood. Mr. Larsen, their sales manager, reports that nearly all of their territory on this series has been sold.

Their production staff includes some well known directors of the Western coast. They are John P. McCarthy, Norbert Miles, Jack Weiss and Bernard D. Russell.

Executive offices of Russell-Coverdale & Russell are located at 8 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Music Tax: Further Discussion by a qualified Expert, of a Subject of Paramount Importance to Both Exhibitor and Public

Publisher's Note.—On page 3017 of the June 14th issue of the "News" we published an article on the Music Tax. We publish herewith a reply to our article written by a man who has had years of experience in handling music for the motion picture theatre. We will be glad to receive other constructive articles on this subject.

THE question of the Music Tax and what it means to the exhibitor was dealt in, at length in the June 14th issue of Motion Picture News. The imposition of this music tax seems to be a question about which many theatre men are puzzled. Sometime ago the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers determined they should charge a tax wherever any music controlled by them was played provided the playing was a part of an entertainment being operated for profit.

Quite naturally this included motion picture theatres, where music has come to be one of the major features of entertainment.

Motion Picture News in the above mentioned article counseled exhibitors not to pay the tax, if they did not wish to, and Motion Picture News pointed out a way that exhibitors could have music in their theatres and not pay the tax.

Exhibitors throughout the country have complained about paying the tax. But the courts have decided that the tax is just and that it must be paid. That is an established fact. The tax must be paid, complaints, arguments and everything else notwithstanding.

We too are complaining. But, the fact remains that the public will not tolerate any but the very latest music. When an audience enters a motion picture theatre it wants to be entertained. Where it once looked to the screen alone for entertainment it now turns to the orchestra pit as well. The two arts are now closely allied. One is as essential as the other to an evening's entertainment.

In pointing the way for exhibitors who do not wish to pay the tax and who may yet play music, Motion Picture News advised that these exhibitors use the music of certain music publishing houses. Their names were enumerated in the page article mentioned above. It is not my desire to belittle these publishers. The music they publish will live years after that published by those who charge the tax. The fact remains, however, that the music which is taxable is the the music the public wants.

This fact must never be lost sight of. To successfully conduct a motion picture theatre it is necessary to render the very latest music. Classical music has but little vogue in motion picture theatres. There are, of course, exceptions to every rule. There are doubtless some houses in the country whose patronage would be content with a fare of classical music. These houses can take the advice of Motion Picture News and use only the music published by the publishers of non-taxable music. The every-day motion picture theatre, however, the one that serves the masses and not the classes, could never possibly exist unless they offered taxable music.

Synchronized music scores contain the latest Broadway hits and are made for all theatres. The every-day house can use them to the very best advantage. They contain the very latest music, the catchy fox-trots, etc., that the amusement-seeking public demands. They also contain the more staid melodies. True these latter melodies are not taxable—but they would never be accepted unless they were offered along with their lighter musical sisters which are taxable.

Though we join with all exhibitors in decrying the music tax—we nevertheless can see no room for further complaining, now that the highest courts have upheld the decisions that compel the payment of the tax. We pay it—and gladly too—. Our business is the making of music scores. The exhibitors business is the screening of pictures. For that alone does he and do we earn our greatest revenue. Let us turn our attention to the fulfilling of these respective missions and forget the tax. It must be paid or a great loss will result.

Your public demands taxable music. Your living comes from that same public. It is not an exorbitant tax. Any theatre owner can pay it. Let us join our interests—The Synchronized Scenario Music Co., and exhibitors at large. Offer your patrons the very best music obtainable. And because that music is taxable—let that not be a reason for wasting a moment which you should be using to make your presentations bigger, greater and better. Taxable music must be used by every theatre man who desires to satisfy the public demand.

ARTHUR J. ABRAMS, Vice President,
Synchronized Scenario Music Co.

Calls for "Bureau of Information" : : :

IN a statement just issued, Harold B. Franklin, managing-director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., calls for the establishment of a motion picture "Bureau of Information" to serve as the "Official Mouthpiece" of the industry. Such a bureau would in Mr. Franklin's opinion constitute a cogent means of protecting the motion picture against adverse propaganda and "be a tremendous power to help mould the thoughts of our public-spirited organizations." He writes:

"The empire state of our free beloved country—the state where ninety-nine per cent. of the money comes from that supports the motion picture industry has censorship! Five years ago this would have been thought impossible, yet here it is a cold fact staring the Fourth Industry of the Country in the face. There must be something radically wrong with an industry that has the power of the motion picture if such legislation can be passed.

"Some years ago I remember hearing a prominent motion picture man state that the motion picture could elect a president of the United States, yet here at this late stage of the game the motion picture cannot protect its own interests. Either the motion picture industry is not taking advantage of the great power at its disposal or else this power is a myth.

"What the motion picture industry needs most at this time is an 'Official Mouthpiece.' It is astounding when one realizes how poorly organized the motion picture interests are in the eyes of the public. A small organized delegation of "holier than thou's" are able to reach the multitudes and influence our public servants, whereas the motion picture, that speaks a universal language, that our great country depended upon in time of war, must go on their knees and beg that laws will not be passed that are against every principle of free government.

"What the industry needs is a 'Bureau of Information' that would have the support and respect of both producers and exhibitors. This bureau should have as its head the biggest man that could be procured, even if he is to be found outside of the industry. Salary should be no object. This man should be backed by a board of directors representative of the industry. The balance of power of this board should be in the hands of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, because the exhibitors of the country control the screens and without the whole hearted support of the exhibitors the screens of the country cannot be delivered. Such a bureau should have at its immediate disposal the sixteen thousand or more screens of the country. What a tremendous power that alone would give such a bureau. Where is the forum or medium that could compete with it? Censorship! Blue Laws! Daylight Saving! Unjust Taxes! They would be things of the past.

"This bureau should have on its staff permanently ten to twelve of the best speakers that can be procured to continually represent the case of the motion picture before Women Clubs, Ad Clubs, Rotary Clubs and other kindred organizations. What a tremendous power to help mould the thoughts of our public spirited organizations.

Music and The Picture

"Accoustical Advice for Association Members"

By Charles D. Isaacson

GEORGE C. HANNAM is now acoustical adviser to the Association of Motion Picture-Musical Interests, and his services are at the disposal of the members.

Mr. Hannam is acoustical engineer for the Junius H. Stone Corporation, an organization of national prominence, specializing in the installation of sound corrective treatments. His business is to find what's wrong in a theatre and then proceed to make it right. If there's an echo, if certain parts of the house do not receive the full music, if there's a harshness or a dullness in the carrying power of the sound, Mr. Hannam's analysis will probably correct it and change the whole character of the musical entertainment.

Some time ago, in company with the large group of persons who have jointed the association. Mr. Hannam made his application. Shortly thereafter, deeply impressed with the purposes of the new organization, he made this really generous offer, with the result stated above.

If you have an acoustical problem, take advantage of your membership in the Association of Motion Picture-Musical Interests and call upon Mr. Hannam through the temporary headquarters of the organization, 729 Seventh Avenue, fourth floor.

If you are not a member, the time to join is right now. These are the baby days of the association, when the aid and co-operation of all is necessary. To-morrow, next year, the association will be on its feet and working hard for causes affiliated with motion picture-musical progress. It can do big things for picture men and musicians; it can be the means of solving many serious problems and of soothing the way for the affiliated workers.

Send your application in to-day and become one of the splendid membership.

"Introduce me to your friends, and I will tell you who you are," or "show me your music cues and I will tell you where you belong."

I quote the above sentence because a great many musical directors using musical suggestions have condemned my music cues because they are in their estimation nothing but an advertisement for certain publications, in which, as they say, I am financially interested.

I will now attempt to explain my views on the subject, and will also endeavor to answer Mr. Chas. D. Isaacson, editor of this column; Mr. E. H. Charlton, of the Columbia theatre, at Baton Rouge, La., and Mr. E. H. Shakely, of Washington, Pa., and many others who have openly expressed themselves, and have made suggestions in a spirit that clearly indicates that a better music cue should be made.

DAVID W. GRIFFITH ON ASSOCIATION BOAD.

The great director of "The Birth of a Nation," "'Way Down East," "Dream Street," etc., has accepted a place on the executive board. Mr. Griffith has always stood for music in connection with the screen, the first man to send out a complete score with his productions.

One of the paramount issues, in speaking against the practicability of my music cues, is the fact that I have been duplicating on certain compositions, and that my variety is very limited. I do not deny this. I have been using a limited amount of musical numbers.

Years ago, when the music cue sheet was first introduced, we (I say we, meaning myself and other pioneers) encountered a great many difficulties in finding sufficient dramatic and incidental material. Realizing the situation I had Belwin, Inc., publish a series of musical compositions, composed with the purpose in view to musically portray all emotions of the film.

For example, I selected a number like "Elegie" by Massenet for pathetic scenes; "Birds and Butterflies" by Sol P. Levy for light and gay scenes, "Cavatine" by Baron for dramatic scenes, and I had the Belwin Company publish hundreds of incidental numbers such as sinister themes, dramatic tensions, agitatos, hurries, love themes, etc.

Mr. Isaacson's theory of giving a synopsis of the picture interjected with the names of various musical compositions, instead of the present cue is very good; but it does not to my mind simplify matters. Such cue for a five-reel feature would necessitate several pages (in printed form), and, after all, will not exactly indicate when certain compositions should be played. Such an idea would serve where one or two rehearsals are possible and enable the musical director to determine the exact spots where a change of music is necessary.

After all these disputes on music cues are of a constructive calibre, and all parties concerned have in mind to distinctly analyze the picture in musical terms. We all have ideas and are entitled and privileged to express our opinions, and act in accordance with our knowledge and ability.

I have, therefore, selected a method of my own which I thought would suit the situation. In picking my method of compiling cue sheets I realized that music cues cannot be designed for institutions like the Strand of New York, Shay's Hippodrome of Buffalo, the Circle theatre at Indianapolis; in fact, for any institution whose musical destinies are in the hands of men able to do the work themselves, view the picture before the opening performance, and have at their disposal complete libraries and organizations that in every respect aid them to put up a musical program to not only fit the picture, but to parallel with musical intelligence of their audiences.

Eliminating such houses, I realized the music cue must serve the small man in the small town, with a limited library.

I admit that it is impossible to indicate the musical character of a picture exactly, by simply mentioning the musical compositions with their tempos—"moderato" or "allegretto." Knowing this I decided to constantly use certain musical compositions for certain scenes, thereby getting musical directors using such cues, to purchase those numbers, become thoroughly acquainted with them, and be in position to analyze the picture musically and intelligently substitute.

Instead of saying on my cues "so-and-so is dying" or "so-and-so is laughing," I suggest numbers which are known to depict scenes of such a character. In short, when musicians see that I have listed "Bleeding Hearts" by Sol P. Levy for a certain scene, they know that that scene must be of a pathetic character. Under no circumstances do I insist or even suggest that musical directors play the compositions that I mention on my cue sheets. If they are acquainted with the compositions they can substitute what they think is suitable.

Let us for an instance review the consequences if music cues would list different material each time. There is not a doubt that such a cue sheet would be valuless, for the reason that the numbers would be of unknown quantity. Considering that 99 per cent. of the music cues are used by daily changing houses who receive the film and cue sheets only a few hours before the opening performance, my method is the most practical, inasmuch as there has been no better one successfully introduced.

Is there any reason at all why music cues should list such numbers as "Hebrew Song and Dance" by Zimbalist, "Cornelius Overture to Barber of Bagdad," "Phaeton" by Massenet, "Itzeyl" by Pierne, "Manuel Mannendez" and "Francesco Di Rimini" by Tschaiowsky. All these numbers are foreign publications at present not obtainable in the United States. Even if the foreign music market should improve, and these numbers be obtainable, how many combinations will be able to digest them. If a funeral march is needed for a certain scene, why mention an extract from the "Eroica Symphony" by Beethoven when the "Funeral March" by Chopin would clearly indicate what is needed. The musical director with higher aspirations can then use the "Eroica Symphony" if he wants to.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Cosmopolitan Picture Held for Third Week

So great has been the demand by audiences for "The Woman God Changed," the Cosmopolitan Production, that B. S. Moss has decided to run the picture a third week at his Broadway theatre, Broadway and Forty-first street. The holding over of this picture for an additional week last week was the first time in the history of this theatre that a feature picture has been thus held. The Moss office stated that this is the first time that any vaudeville theatre in this country has shown a motion picture for a third week.

The popularity of Cosmopolitan Productions has become so great that the Keith-Moss - Proctor theatres in Greater New York will hold a Cosmopolitan Productions Week beginning Monday, June 20, and ending Sunday, June 26. This is the first time in the history of these houses that a week devoted exclusively to the productions of an independent motion picture producing unit has been arranged.

Hodkinson Has New Releasing Method

Plans are now being perfected, announces the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, whereby the exhibitors of the United States will be enabled to reap the greatest possible profits when "A Certain Rich Man," Benj. B. Hampton's production—the screen version of William Allen White's novel—is generally released.

A new idea will be put in effect in conjunction with the releasing of this picture; one which is radically different from any method thus far employed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in the handling of their product. The release date it is expected will be set for the first week in September. This, however, does not mean that the picture will be nationally released at that time. Instead the entire month will be reserved for big key city showings. "A Certain Rich Man" will be given indefinite runs in such cities as New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, St. Louis, etc. In this way, it is said, a vast amount of public interest will be worked up in the production, so that when finally it reaches the screens of the United States, theatre patrons will be awaiting it with the greatest interest and impatience, which will mean increased revenue for the theatre-owned.

Lloyd Heads Capitol Bill

"Among Those Present" to Be Supported by Short Subjects

IT is announced that Samuel Rothafel, who has been responsible for perhaps more revolutionary steps in the advancement of the art of picture presentation than any other man in the business, has decided to feature Harold Lloyd in "Among Those Present" at the Capitol Theatre, New York City. The three-reel Lloyd comedy will be shown with a superb musical program and a selected list of short subjects, but all the emphasis will be laid on the Associated Exhibitors comedian.

This is the first time a comedy under feature length has been shown in a big first run house in New York City without a feature of five reels or more in length being on the program. The Strand used a feature with "Shoulder Arms" in the first week of its run and in the second week ran a dramatic picture of shorter length. "Shoulder Arms," however, was not run alone as the big featured part of the program.

This action of Mr. Rothafel is regarded by Associated Exhibitors as the culmination of one of the most remarkable demonstrations of the nation-wide popularity of any star ever known. In the series of Associated comedies, Lloyd has attained the greatest number of bookings ever accorded a series of pictures of any kind, according to figures taken from the actual records of the company.

While laying the utmost emphasis on Lloyd, Mr. Rothafel let it be known that the rest of the program would be of a character seldom seen on Broadway. He has merely disregarded footage in determining the feature and he is confident that in forming his program for the usual length with short reel material of exceptional merit he will succeed in accomplishing one of the most striking results in showmanship ever attained.

Metro's Summer Releases

"Fine Feathers" and "The Man Who" Head List of Seven Productions

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION announces seven new photoplays for summer release.

The first will be "Fine Feathers," Eugene Walter's adaptation of his own stage drama, with a cast that includes Claire Whitney, Eugene Pallette, Thomas W. Ross and June Elvidge. The directors were Fred Sittenham and Maxwell Karger. "Fine Feathers" is to be released on June 20.

The Fourth of July will see the release of Bert Lytell's new starring vehicle, "The Man Who," a Maxwell Karger production, adapted by Arthur Zellner from Lloyd Osborne's Saturday Evening Post story. Virginia Valli, Lucy Cotton and Frank Currier are in the cast.

"Over the Wire," a Wesley Ruggles production starring Alice Lake, is due for release on July 18. It is an adaptation by Edward Lowe, Jr., of a story by Arthur Somers Roche.

Viola Dana will be seen on August 1 in "Life's Darn Funny," a Dallas M. Fitzgerald production of "Caretakers Within," a Saturday Evening Post story by Christine Jope Slade, adapted by Molly Parro and Arthur D. Ripley. Miss Dana's leading man in this picture is Gareth Hughes, now preparing his first starring vehicle, "The Hunch," a George D. Baker production made by S-L for Metro distribution from a story by Percival Wilde.

Other summer releases to be made by Metro include the Nazimova production of "Camille," a modernized version of the Dumas drama written by June Mathis, in which Rudolph Valentino will support the Russian star as Armand Duval; "A Trip to Paradise," a Maxwell Karger production of June Mathis's adaptation of Molnar's "Liliom," with Bert Lytell starring as the "roughneck," and with Virginia Valli as the wife, and "The Match Breaker," a Dallas M. Fitzgerald production of a story by Meta White, adapted by Arthur Zellner, with Viola Dana as star.

The dates for release of these last three productions will be announced later.

Elaine Hammerstein Completes Picture

Elaine Hammerstein has just completed another star series picture at the Selznick studios in Fort Lee, the final shots of "Remorseless Love" having been made under the direction of Ralph Ince a few days ago. Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production of the Selznick Corporation, and his staff of editors, cutters and title writers are now busily engaged in finally preparing it for release.

"Scrap Iron" Bookings Aided by Carpentier

THE letter written by Georgies Carpentier, Dempsey's challenger, to Charles Ray, congratulating that star for the fight scene in "Scrap Iron," the First National attraction, has given a great impetus to the bookings on that picture, states First National. Carpentier's opinion of the fight is being transplanted by exhibitors to slides, lobby cards and other media for the advance propaganda on the picture.

Carpentier wrote "the fight in this picture is one of the very best I have ever seen screened. Congratulations on the art with which you staged it."

Finkelstein-Ruben Manage Universal Exchange

One of the most important agreements ever signed between producers and exhibitors has just been consummated by H. M. Berman, General Manager of the Universal Exchanges. By this agreement the Universal exchange of Minneapolis comes under the management for a period of years of the Finkelstein & Ruben interests. This move has been under discussion for several weeks and necessitated several trips of the theatre man to New York and several of Mr. Berman to Minneapolis. The agreement was signed just prior to Mr. Laemmle's departure for Europe, and went into effect on June 19.

By this arrangement Universal, which has been kept out of many of the first-runs in the Minneapolis territory, secures the desired entree into fifty first-run theatres in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

"Four Horsemen" Music in Sheet Form

The original music introduced for Metro's New York showing the Rex Ingram production of Ibanez's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" has been the subject of enthusiastic comment since the first night of its release, early in April.

Four of the most popular melodies have been lifted from the score and are now published as individual compositions by the Photo Play Music Company, with covers illustrated by the Hirschauer poster of the four horsemen.

Lichtman Sales Drive Goes Over the Top

The big Associated Producers, Inc., sales drive organized for the week of June 12 by General Manager Al Lichtman, has gone over the top, announces that company.

The drive set a fast pace from the start, and while the standings of the various exchanges are still being computed at the Home Office, indications point to a most successful sales campaign. Reports and playdates are continuing to come in and it will likely be a week before definite figures as to the records of each exchange are available. That many of the exchanges have set new records for volume of sales and cash collections is a foregone conclusion arrived at by a rough study of the situation.

"Infamous Miss Revell" for Alice Lake

"The Infamous Miss Revell," a story by W. Carey Wonderly, has been selected as Alice Lake's new Metro starring vehicle. Arthur J. Zellner has prepared the screen adaptation, and Dallas Fitzgerald will direct Miss Lake in this new production.

President Harding Sees "Rider of King Log"

"THE RIDER OF THE KING LOG," the Associated Exhibitors production which is the picturization of Holman Day's novel bearing the same name, has aroused the interest of President Harding and his entourage, according to reports received from Washington.

President Harding expressed his desire to view the picture, and in accordance with his request a special showing of "The Rider of the King Log" at the White House was arranged. The President and Mrs. Harding, as well as a considerable number of prominent guests, attended the showing and the President expressed his deep pleasure.

First Nat'l Week in Ind.

200 Theatres Co-Operate to Make Week of June 12 a Big Success

THE first observance of First National Week in Indiana was held the week of June 12th, during which approximately two hundred theatres in the state featured Associated First National Attractions on their programs.

More than a score of theatres in Indianapolis alone played First National attractions, the Circle, being the first run franchise holder in that city, featuring Constance Talmadge in her latest release "Wedding Bells," preceded by a spectacular baby ballet.

Virtually a full page advertisement was used in the Indianapolis Sunday Star and smaller ads were used in the News and the Times, the other two Indianapolis newspapers. Special one sheets and slides were provided all the theatres in the stage running First National pictures and a publicity campaign conducted from the Indianapolis office, resulted in the newspapers throughout the state devoting considerable space to the campaign.

The Indiana Daily Times gave a column of space to a story outlining the formation of this organization and the Star also gave the celebration of First National Week considerable space.

The advertising was laid out with the First National stars, forming a border to the page, including Norma and Constance Talmadge, Charles Chaplin, Charles Ray, Anita Stewart, Dorothy Phillips, Richard Barthelmess, Jackie Coogan, Marguerite Clark, Katherine MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, Allan Holubar, Marshall Neilan, and R. A. Walsh. The First National trade mark was the centre location at the top of the page.

A list of theatres playing First National Attractions was run at the bottom of the page, just below the sales points of the ad.

Current Paramount Issues

George Melford's "A Wise Fool" and "Sham" for Release June 26

SIR GILBERT PARKER'S novel "The Money Master" has been picturized by George Melford for Paramount under the title of "A Wise Fool" and will be released June 26. Paramount also will release "Sham," starring Ethel Clayton on the same date. "A Wise Fool" is the second of the George Melford-Parker pictures.

James Kirkwood was singled out to play the involved role of the money lender-philosopher and the assisting cast includes Ann Forrest, Alice Hollister, Alan Hale, Fred Huntley, Charles Ogle, and Truly Shattuck. George Melford has extended himself to make Sir Gilbert Parker's story as convincing to the screen world as it was to the novel readers of three continents. He has made a careful study of the atmosphere of the little parish of Quebec. The Parisian scenes and the episode on the high seas are counted among the best of the screen year.

The story is set in the still unexplored locales of Canada and the principals are the fascinating race of French-Canadians. The plot deals with the gradual education of a self-righteous philosopher who is taught the proper place for his ego.

"Sham" is a story of decadent Knickerbockerdom. Miss Clayton is assisted by such capable performers as Theodore Roberts, Clyde Fillmore, Walter Hiers, Sylvia Ashton, Helen Dunbar, Arthur Carewe, Thomas Ricketts, Blanche Gray, Eunice Burnham, and Carrie Ward Clark. The picture boasts of Elmer Harris and Geraldine Bonner as authors and Douglas Doty as scenarist. Thomas Heffron, the director, adds another success to his list.

Sunny West Film Will Have Feature Series

B. H. MILLS, of the Sunny West Film, Inc., of New York, announces that his company is preparing to enter the independent field with a big product in the near future. The first release will be a series of eight five-reel Western and Northwestern features, which George Edwardes-Hall will direct.

Negotiations are now under way, states Mr. Mills, which if carried through will bring to Sunny West high-class short subjects as well as features.

Vitagraph Has 40 Acres of Production Space

Activities at Vitagraph's California studio this week expanded over an area of forty acres, the largest space in present use for picture production by any one company in Hollywood, it is claimed. Less than two years ago, Vitagraph was confining its Hollywood operations to ten acres. Now the original ten, with its stages and sets, are dwarfed by the increased construction and facilities that cover the additional thirty acres.

Vitagraph, a year ago, purchased the ten acres adjoining its original lot. Then, some time later, ten more acres were leased to give Larry Semon, the star comedian, plenty of space for his thrilling stunts.

To complete the perfect square lot of forty acres, the ten-acre lot of the other corner, used for the past several years for William S. Hart's Western streets, has been leased for William Duncan's new feature productions.

Clergyman Commends "Wild Goose" Theme

A splendid tribute to the worth of "The Wild Goose," the Cosmopolitan Production that is drawing big crowds all over the country, was paid by the Rev. Charles C. Carver, curate of Christ Church, New Haven, Conn.

After seeing the picture the clergyman said: "Everyone ought to see 'The Wild Goose.' This notable photodrama impressively sets forth the evils following in the wake of divorce. The twentieth century so-called freedom, leaving the plan of life for molding in the hands of each person, to be shaped in his or her way, is a dangerous and selfish procedure.

"Carnival" to Run at Capitol Theatre

The international film, "Carnival," recently acquired by United Artists, will have its first run in New York City at the Capitol theatre, beginning June 26, and after its run is completed at the Capitol, it will be played over the entire Marcus Loew Circuit.

This production was made by Harley Knoles in Venice, and has created a sensation in Europe.

JUNE CAPRICE AND GEORGE B. SEITZ in The SKY RANGER

A Pathe Serial

"I WAS showing the latest episode of 'The Sky Ranger' the other night and as the crowd has been coming good on the serial night I thought I would sit in and hear the comment.

"Well, you know those scenes where Caprice hangs from the speeding airplane by her hands and the wind makes her stream out behind like a flag? Well, it had us all fanning for air. In my excitement I forgot I was in a theatre chair and gave the arms a yank, thinking to move forward and see better. The seat came loose with a noise that made everybody jump and I thought I was too old in the show game to get any sort of a thrill.

New York Critics See "The Journey's End"

"The Journey's End," Hugo Ballin's third independent production for Hodkinson release, which was made under the working title of "Ave Maria," was shown to an invited audience at the Stanley theatre on the morning of Thursday, June 16.

The critics accorded the picture much praise. The Morning Telegraph says of it: "There hasn't been such an unusual production in months"—and they end their critique by saying—"A story has been built that is absorbing; expertly told on the screen and a genuine success from every angle."

The daily press contributed their words of praise. P. F. Reniers, writing in the New York Evening Post, gave a great deal of space to Mr. Ballin and his genius.

Paramount Opens Third Salesmen Class

Under the direction of F. F. Creswell the third Paramount salesmen's class opened this week at the home office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, with thirty-four students present. Talks outlining the aims and policies of the company were given by officials of the corporation.

The sales students in attendance are P. J. McKinley, F. Hunt, J. L. Raper, S. Cooley, R. D. Koser, J. H. McIntyre, E. M. Kempner, J. W. Thurlow, A. A. Grimes, J. H. Grainger, H. Antin, B. F. Burham, J. B. Meley, F. E. Wagoner, L. H. Owens, W. C. Johnson, J. H. Elder, H. I. Herton, W. J. Clark, Louis E. Vogel, A. P. Longdon, H. V. Larkin, H. F. Neill, V. C. Jacob, H. J. Mann, T. Millette, E. P. Moran, W. H. Carmichael, L. F. Edelman, E. E. Geyer, C. A. Roeder, V. R. Moore, W. C. Winship and C. R. Christensen.

Reconstructed Features Going Over Well

According to reports received by the American Film Company from the S and S Film and Supply Company of Pittsburgh, distributors of American's reconstructed features, this series of pictures is doing some unusually fine business for S and S.

Mary Miles Minter, William Russell and Helen Holmes are reported to be proving popular in the sections of Pennsylvania and West Virginia covered by S and S; and "Quick Action," "Sally Shows the Way" and "Man from Medicine Hat" are said to be pleasing audiences everywhere.

British Nobility View "Pollyanna" Opening

"Pollyanna," Mary Pickford's production released by United Artists, opened recently at the Palace Theatre in London. The devotees of the American star were present in full force, and the audience numbered some of the most prominent figures of the British nobility, including H. R. H. Princess Christian, H. R. H. Princess Beatrice, H. H. Princess Marie Louise and H. H. Princess Helena Victoria.

Big Cosmopolitan Fall Release

THE screen character comedy drama that will make millions roar with laughter is the prediction made for "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" by Cosmopolitan Productions which will release the picture next fall. Adapted from the original stage success by George M. Cohan, that played in every city in the United States a few years ago, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" transfers to the screen not only all of the clean, wholesome humor of the internationally famous playwright, but adds many laughs that could not be compassed within the comparatively restricted limits of the spoken drama.

The climax in the adventures of J. Rufus Wallingford and his partner in sharp dealing, "Blackie" Daw, forms the theme. Known throughout the length and breadth of the land. "Col." Wallingford, the silvery-tongued dispenser of wildcat ideas, and "Blackie" Daw, sleek, smooth and suave coadjutor of the world's champion confidence man, are shown in their darkest moments and at the glittering triumphs of their careers.

Cosmopolitan Productions claims for "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" more smiles, chuckles and laughs to the foot than any other motion picture comedy drama has been able to evoke. Furthermore, it is distinctly 100 per cent American—written, directed and acted by Americans, about a typical American small town and actuated by fine American ideals as to uprightness, square dealing, progressiveness and family life.

Cosmopolitan Productions entrusted the direction of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" to Frank Borzage, who directed "Humoresque." The latter picture won instant and hearty approval because of its unusually fine characterizations, its innate understanding of a misunderstood people and its kindly humor.

Sam Hardy and Doris Kenyon appearing in Cosmopolitan's "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," which will be released on the Paramount program

The human heart, the same in Singapore as in Seattle, in Auckland as in Atlanta, was bared in this epic of New York's East Side.

In "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" there is again strikingly evident this vital characterization, this insight into the hearts of a people. This time, however, the motivation and the locale are different. Here we have two skillful crooks, long schooled in the art of dishonesty extracting honest dollars from gullible men and women, operating on a large scale in a small Middle Western town—Battlesburg, rich, somnolent, smugly satisfied with its mediocre traditions and stodgy backwardness. Still, under the contempt of the two sharpers for the unsophisticated and impressionable people of Battlesburg there lies an authentic respect for their sympathy and loyalty. Time after time their consciences painfully advise them that the defrauding of these friendly folk is the meanest work of their checkered lives.

Wallingford and Daw long to be honest, and honest they become by a trick of smiling Fortune and their own wishes. Their transformation is reflected in the great changes that come over Battlesburg which, in the final fade-out, is seen full blown as a progressive city with skyscrapers, beautiful homes and a street car service.

To Luther Reed goes the credit for the scenario for the production. With George M. Cohan's play as a basis and his own experience as a boy in a small Middle Western town to draw on, Mr. Reed created a script that offered every opportunity to Mr. Borzage to direct what should justly become a screen classic. Not a little of the excellence of the production is due to the co-operation of Cosmopolitan Productions' famous Scenic Staff under the direction of Joseph Urban, the settings being masterpieces of their kind.

Obviously inspired by the sheer worth of the story was the cast of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." Sam Hardy, known to lovers of musical comedy, plays the polished, urbane Wallingford to a nicety. Norman Kerry, seen many times on the screen, is Wallingford's artful partner, "Blackie" Daw. Doris Kenyon makes a winsome Fanny Jasper, later to become Mrs. J. Rufus Wallingford. Billie Dove and Diana Allen have important parts and others in the cast are: Edgar Nelson, W. T. Hays, Horace James, Jerry Sinclair, John Woodford, Mrs. Charles Williard, Mac M. Barnes, William Robyns, Patterson Dial, William Carr, Eugene Keith and Benny One.

"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" will be a fall Cosmopolitan Productions release.

90 Paramounts for Next Season

FROM ninety to ninety-five Paramount pictures will be released next season, it was announced this week by S. R. Kent, general manager of the distribution department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"Reports from our district managers, assembled in their annual convention in New York," said Mr. Kent, "show that exhibitors next season will need a continuous supply of big productions for their screens. But these reports also show that these productions, because of general industrial conditions, must be of an unusually strong box-office power.

"The motion picture industry, in common with other big businesses has been going through a most salutary period of readjustment, of change. There has been a general shaking-down, a tightening up all along the line. To every branch of the industry—production, distribution and exhibition—there has come the call for better service, for greater efficiency. In production, general depression has sifted out the weak spots and has decreed that the weak attractions can no longer survive. Waste, incompetency and slipshod methods have gone by the board; the unimaginative, factory-trained directors have gone or are going; the manufactured stars whose weakness at the box-office has been registered, are headed for the discard; the productions turned out with no other aim than to meet a release date have passed their day.

"In distribution, the cry is for greater service, more efficient handling of product, less waste, and greater co-operation between distributor and exhibitor. And in exhibition, the public has registered its command for real entertainment, real showmanship and a closer study of what the public wants.

"All of these changes undoubtedly have worked some hardship on certain people; but they have been necessary for the continued welfare of the motion picture industry, and because of them this industry is now on a finer foundation and is in a better position than ever before for definite progress along sound business lines.

"Mr. Lasky, in charge of production, had laid plans for a strengthening of the Paramount producing organization to bring Paramount Pictures to an even higher standard than they have set in past seasons. Stronger personalities will be seen as Paramount stars in our various star pictures, and our super-productions will be reinforced by the presence in their casts of several well-known stars, thus giving exhibitors not only the selling power of our big directors' names and abilities, but also the attraction of strong personalities in the casts. On the other hand, doubtful units have been eliminated.

"While the production department is raising the standard of its pictures, we in the distribution department are planning an enlargement of our service to exhibitors so that they will receive an even greater return from our pictures.

"We shall schedule our pictures only thirty days in advance. We shall have a representative of the sales department stationed continually at the studios to give us advance information on productions in work and to establish a closer liaison between the producing and distributing branches.

"The sales school, which is now holding its third class, will continue its sessions regularly, feeding the distribution department constantly with men better trained in the Paramount idea of increased service to exhibitors.

The Job of Killing the Octopus

Backer to Give Independents Strong Support

ANOTHER champion to espouse the cause of the Independents, is Franklyn E. Backer, president of Horizon Pictures Inc., who throws his hat in the ring in the fight against trust domination and pledges the theatre owners, producers and state rights distributors, who are operating independently of any combine, his utmost support.

In a statement issued by Mr. Backer, he says: "The day has come for concerted action from every quarter if the independent theatre owners are to withstand the awful onslaught that is being planned by Wall Street to throttle their business and wipe out their investments of millions of dollars, and going back to the old adage, the only way to fight fire is with fire.

"The M. P. T. O. A. in convention at Minneapolis will undoubtedly work out plans to combat the octopus, but these men must have support from without their ranks, if their plans are to carry, which means that every component part of the industry that is working along independent lines must throw their shoulders to the wheel and work hand in hand with the exhibitors. Not only must they lend their moral support but substantial support of another kind.

"To this end I am announcing to the industry at large that my organization is going to put every ounce of its strength and every dollar of its resources into the battle and help win the fight for independent supremacy."

"As the matter stands today the independent producer has not had sufficient encouragement to go ahead with big productions for two reasons, first, for fear of a freeze-out by combines, the other because it has been the tendency of many state rights buyers to gouge him down right to the bone when it comes to the matter of buying territory."

Mr. Backer states that this condition must cease to exist and the game put on a live and let live basis. Despite conditions, Mr. Backer is now in the market for the biggest and best pictures. Several specials are already contracted for and others are wanted. Mr. Backer hopes that responsible producers of big pictures will be thus encouraged to go ahead, knowing that their pictures will not be sacrificed "on the bargain counter of the blood suckers, who are menacing the business even more than the octopus." These Backer productions will be big enough to permit a huge advertising campaign.

"It is imperative that the independent have product able to compete with the big distributors," concludes Mr. Backer, "and to have such product the independent exchangeman must give the independent producer and distributor the break they are entitled to."

New Use for Sun-Light Arc

Madison Sq. Garden Swimming Tank a Solid Block of Daylight

THE possibilities which the new commercial model Sun-Light Arc, with a light volume of 125,000 candle power each, offers to the educational and commercial fields, were demonstrated at the opening of Tex Rickard's swimming pool at Madison Square Garden on the evening of Saturday, June 18.

Under the supervision of J. Justice Harmer, president of Sun-Light Arc Corporation and Carl Nesbitt, the general manager, the great lights were installed which made the interior of the Garden, from the surface of the pool which includes practically all of the old arena to the roof, a solid block of daylight, an effect never before achieved in an interior of anything like the dimensions of the famous show-place.

Representatives of Fox-Pathe, International and all the motion picture news weeklies were enabled to photograph all the swimming and diving events, which formed the principal part of the program, together with general views of the crowds in the audience and the bathers.

Still photographers were present also from the news syndicates and the daily newspapers and they too were enabled to take snapshots of the various events, with as much facility as at Coney Island at high noon.

The occasion marked the first time that such varied photographic work has been possible in any place save in a motion picture studio.

To see the streaming sun-light pouring from the balconies of the Garden down upon the bathers in the pool and the tiers of spectators surrounding the pool was a brilliant and colorful sight.

Owing to the fact that Sun-Light Arc contains the light value of the entire spectrum, all of the riot of color was shown in its true values. From the Madison avenue end of the Garden a big studio model light with a color wheel attachment played upon the water fall at the opposite side changing the water as it cascaded downward into red, blue, green yellow and occasionally a misty rainbow.

Twelve Sun-Light Arcs were used to light the whole Garden. They gave the spectators, when first turned on, much the same sensation as if the roof of the great amphitheatre had been removed and the streaming noonday sun-light allowed to pour in.

J. Justice Harmer, president of Sun-Light Arc Corporation and Carl Nesbitt, his general manager, have been congratulated upon their success in lighting the great amphitheatre, which is now the largest indoor swimming pool in the world, a feat which really marks an epoch in the development of artificial illumination.

Gareth Hughes, who is being starred in "The Hunch," a forthcoming S-L production scheduled for Metro release

Gareth Hughes to Star in Baker Production

FOLLOWING "The Hunch," the forthcoming Metro release in which Gareth Hughes will first be presented as a full fledged screen star, this young actor whose enactment of the title role of "Sentimental Tommy" brought him celebrity, will appear in two more George D. Baker productions. They are to be produced by S-L Pictures at the Metro studios in Hollywood, where "The Hunch" is being made.

First of the two is "Garments of Truth," a photoplay from the story of the same name, written by Freeman Tilden and published originally in the Pictorial Review. The second is a comedy of barnstorming life, "Little Eva Ascends," by Thomas Beers. The Saturday Evening Post printed it as a short story in a recent issue.

Actor-Director Filming "Disraeli"

One of the most interesting figures in connection with "Disraeli," the George Arliss production, to be released through United Artists Corporation, is Henry Kolker, who a few years ago held a prominent position on the stage. For the last three years Mr. Kolker has devoted himself to the art of moving pictures, and has achieved even greater success here, if possible, than he did on the stage—but in a different line of work, for Mr. Kolker has not been connected with the screen as an actor, but has made his mark as a director. He is now directing George Arliss in "Disraeli."

Mr. Kolker's work in the supervision of motion picture productions, to which he has given his time steadily, since he retired from the stage, has been most noteworthy, and he has been directly responsible for the success of many splendid films.

"If Women Only Knew" a College Favorite

Exhibitors in Boston, Syracuse, Buffalo, Rochester, Washington and other cities where colleges are located or are in close proximity are finding "If Women Only Knew" a particularly timely subject for early summer showing, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution for R-C Pictures.

Produced under the direction of C. Gardner Hunting and J. N. Naulty, "If Women Only Knew" is rich in the wholesome atmosphere of the American university. Many of its biggest scenes are "shot" in college environment and one of the most laughable episodes is a strip poker game in which students take part.

Minneapolis Fans Pick "Heart of Maryland"

"The Heart of Maryland," Vitagraph's special production, was the leader of photoplays chosen by Minneapolis film fans and named as the best photoplay of the month. The voting was conducted by the Minneapolis Journal, and the affair was given wide publicity. There were contestants from North and South Dakota, Iowa, and other States as well as from Minnesota.

Cast of Favorites in "Her Own Money"

In "Her Own Money," Ethel Clayton's next Paramount picture, on which she is now at work, Miss Clayton has been provided with a cast of players including Warner Baxter, Mae Busch, Charles French, Clarence Burton, Jean Acker and William Boyd.

The picture is an adaptation by Elmer Rice of an original story by Mark Swan. Joseph Henabery is directing.

"We're Going Ahead!" Laemmle

Universal Chief Sends Parting Message to 4,000 Employees

EVERY Universal employe is now in receipt of a message from Carl Laemmle, issued on the day of his departure for Europe. This message is part of a plan which Mr. Laemmle instituted late last year to meet just such conditions as obtain at the present time. When the slack season hit the producing centers at Los Angeles and financial support was withdrawn at the same time, Mr. Laemmle not only kept Universal City at full blast but added a number of companies to the necessary schedule. The following message is directly in line with Mr. Laemmle's policy to combat so-called depression. He asks the support of every member of the big Universal family throughout the world in spreading this message. He predicts that if every company and every other employe did the same thing there not only would be no depression in the film industry.

"Just before sailing for Europe," reads the message, "I want to say a few things which I hope you will study over and over again.

"First—I have unbounded confidence in your ability to keep the Universal forging ahead even faster than it has during the past year, or I never would go away and leave you to your own resources as an organization at this particular time when all the fear-stricken people in the world are shaking their heads about the business outlook.

"Second—The company's plans for the coming season, now completely mapped out, call for the greatest and most ambitious effort of our career. If every big company in the United States would accordingly and immediately, this so-called depression would melt away as if by magic.

"Third—If you find yourself harboring glomy thoughts, give some thought to the following FACT which has helped me so many times:—Depression, whether financial or otherwise, is nothing but a state of mind. It is nothing you can feel, see nor touch—because it is nothing but a state of mind. The quick and sure cure for it is a better state of mind, which can be summed up in one word, courage."

"Fourth—We are not going to wait for other companies to wake up. We are not going to mark time. We are not going to plunge ourselves into a ridiculous gloom. We are going ahead with all our heart and soul resources! With your untiring, unafraid co-operation in this program, there's nothing in the world we can't accomplish. If you are of the same opinion, I ask you to subscribe to the following slogan and I ask you to spread its message of encouragement as fast as you can.

"Marking time? Hell no! We're going ahead!"

"Good-bye and good luck and—go to it!

Enthusiastically yours,
(Signed "Carl Laemmle
"Pres., Universal Film Mfg. Co."

The season's plans to which Mr. Laemmle alludes as the most ambitious effort the company has ever undertaken, call for a total of 362 pictures. This represents a big increase over last year, particularly in the number of Jewels which will be released. The Jewel stars for the coming year are Erich Von Stroheim, whose picture "Foolish Wives" just completed representing an investment of over $1,000,000 will be the company's premier attraction; Priscilla Dean, who in addition to "Conflict" will make three other pictures, Harry Carey, who will make four productions. There will be three special all-star cast Jewels. Ted Browning is filming Edna Ferber's famous novel, "Fanny Herself," with Mabel Julienne Scott in the title role. Hal Reid's "Human Hearts" and one other production as yet unannounced will complete the Jewel program—with the exception of the twenty two-reel comedies, twelve made by Lee Moran and eight by Joe Martin. The special attraction program will consist of fifty-two pictures, eight of each of the following stars: Gladys Welton, Frank Mayo, Hoot Gibson, Marie Prevost, Herbert Rawlinson and Miss du Pont. There will be four all-star cast attractions on this schedule.

"Dream Street" Is Scoring

Breaks Record in Seattle House; Frisco Critics Laud Production

D. W. GRIFFITH'S latest picture, "Dream Street," released by United Artists, is doing capacity business at the Curran theatre, San Francisco, and at the Winter Garden theatre, Seattle, Wash., where the picture was recently opened. At the Seattle house the picture is reported by United Artists to have broken all house records for attendance. An elaborate exploitation campaign preceded the presentation at the Winter Garden, and the block on which the theatre is located was decorated with Chinese lanterns, pennants and flags. Permission was received from the city authorities to name the block temporarily "Dream Street." The exploitation became "the talk of the town," and the management of the Winter Garden in a telegram to United Artists' home office reported a record-breaking attendance on the opening days.

In San Francisco, the newspaper critics have showered liberal praise on the new Griffith picture. Said the San Francisco Call and Post: "Dream Street" had its first showing at the Curran Theatre yesterday and scored an unqualified success. In its atmosphere of fog which Griffith has again caught with his unerring artistry, there is unfolded a story that in its proper classification should be called a comedy-melodrama. But so wonderfully has the producer done his work, so eloquently is the story told, so artistically are the scenes done, that it seems sort of profane to use the hackneyed term of comedy or melodrama in the piece."

The San Francisco Daily News said: "London fogs and Limehouse district life come into prominence again in D. W. Griffith's 'Dream Street,' which yesterday opened at the Curran Theatre. An interest attaches to the four principal characters, those that carry on the story, that holds attention almost to the point of pain. Scenes of poignant emotion, splendid acting and much beauty of photography."

Screen Snapshots Has Carnival Scenes

Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn, producers of Screen Snapshots, obtained exclusive film rights for the taking of motion pictures of the carnival-benefit held recently in Los Angeles, and as a result obtained some excellent shots which will be incorporated in Screen Snapshots number four for Federated Release.

The roster of stars in this reel, it is announced, contains fifty of the biggest and most important directors, stars, producers and writers in the film world, among them Daniel Frohman, Gloria Swanson, Carter DeHaven, Bert Lytell, Edna Purviance, Hank Mann, Elinor Glyn, Rupert Hughes, Sir Gilbert Parker, Charles Ray, Antonio Moreno, Tom Ince, Pauline Frederick, William Desmond, Rosemary Theby, Bebe Daniels, Lila Lee, Will Rogers, Mabel Normand, Ethel Clayton, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Ruth Roland, Tom Mix, Kathlyn Williams, and others of note too numerous to mention.

Each player did a separate "stunt" at the carnival, and each of these "stunts," it is announced, has been faithfully reproduced.

25 Goldwyn Productions Named for Coming Year

TO start its fifth year Goldwyn offers the exhibitors of the country, an advance list of twenty-five productions among which, it believes, there are a number of motion pictures which will take rank with the greatest contributions to screen art.

Goldwyn is confident that these productions, taken as a group, have never been equalled by any producer at any time. It is an extraordinarily inclusive group, for it contains every class of theatrical entertainment—dramas of simple, human, every-day American life, melodramas of rapid action and thrilling suspense, comedies that strike home with the swiftness and precision of a rapier point.

Goldwyn's fifth year productions will be offered for rental to the exhibitor under a flexible plan which is most simple and most equitable. Individual pictures may be booked or a group of pictures may be contracted for. And also in order to provide the fullest measure of protection to the individual exhibitor, Goldwyn has decided to grant a limited number of franchises for its season's output.

In order that the dramatic fibre of each production shall be the sole factor in the transaction, there will be immediate screenings in all Goldwyn branch exchanges, enabling the exhibitor to see and appraise the products that he will receive under the Goldwyn 1921-1922 Franchise.

The list is announced by Goldwyn as follows:

"'The Old Nest,' Rupert Hughes' story of the home. A stirring and vivid drama that will be talked of for years to come. With Mary Alden, Dwight Crittenden, Helene Chadwick, Cullen Landis and fifteen other principals.

"'The Invisible Power,' Frank Lloyd's production of Charles Kenyon's original photodrama of life's hidden forces. With House Peters, Irene Rich and Sydney Ainsworth. 'Ace of Hearts,' the story of 'the man who lived too long,' by Gouverneur Morris, directed by Wallace Worsley. With Lon Chaney, Leatrice Joy and John Bowers. 'Grand Larceny,' a powerful drama of marriage and disillusion, by Albert Payson Terhune, directed by Wallace Worsley with a great cast. 'Hungry Hearts,' a vivid drama of the melting pot by Anzia Yezierska, directed by E. Mason Hopper with an all-star cast. Betty Compson in 'For Those We Love,' a great star, a stirring story and a wonderful cast, including Lon Chaney and Frank Campeau. 'All's Fair in Love,' Thompson Buchanan's lively comedy of manners, from 'The Bridal Path,' directed by E. Mason Hopper. With Richard Dix, May Collins and Raymond Hatton.

"'The Grim Comedian,' by Rita Weiman, a Frank Lloyd Production, a dramatic tale of the irony of fate. With Jack Holt, Phoebe Hunt and Gloria Hope. 'The Night Rose,' Leroy Scott's story of an underworld passion flower, directed by Wallace Worsley. With Lon Chaney and Leatrice Joy. 'The Glorious Fool,' a Mary Roberts Rinehart picture directed by E. Mason Hopper, with Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix. 'Dangerous Curve Ahead,' a Rupert Hughes picture directed by E. Mason Hopper; the picture that you have all been waiting for. With Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix. 'She Got What She Wanted,' by Alice Duer Miller, directed by E. Mason Hopper, with an all-star cast. 'Doubling for Romeo,' a starring picture for Will Rogers fashioned by Elmer L. Rice, directed by Clarence Badger. 'The Christian,' Hall Caine's most famous novel and one of the greatest stories ever told. With an all-star cast. Betty Compson in 'Even as Eve,' a glamorous romance of the ages written by Perley Poore Sheehan and directed by Arthur Rosson.

"Tom Moore in 'The Man With Two Mothers,' an original screen story written for Moore by Alice Duer Miller, directed by Paul Bern. Tom Moore in 'Beating the Game,' an original Charles Kenyon story written for this brilliant star, directed by Victor Schertzinger. 'The Poverty of Riches,' Reginald Barker's production of Leroy Scott's drama of money and marriage. With Richard Dix and Leatrice Joy. Tom Moore in 'From the Ground Up,' an original story by Rupert Hughes, directed by E. Mason Hopper. 'The Man From Lost River,' a rugged romance of the trails by Katherine Newlin Burt, directed by Frank Lloyd. With House Peters and Fritzi Brunette. Will Rogers in 'A Poor Relation,' from Edward E. Kidder's famous old comedy, directed by Clarence Badger, with Molly Malone and Sylvia Breamer.

"The Wall Flower,' by Rupert Hughes. directed by Rupert Hughes. A wholly human and convincing story of modern American domestic life, with a big elemental theme. 'The Ship,' a spectacular picturization of Gabriella D'Annunzio's novel, 'La Nave,' directed by the poet's son, with Ida Rubenstein in the chief role. 'Theodora,' by Victorien Sardou, the most gigantic spectacle of all times—paganism's attempt to oust Christianity from Constantinople. Rita Jolivet in the role of Theodora. 'The Sin Flood,' Henning Berger's 'Syndafloden,' the story of a crowd in the grip of fear. Directed by Wallace Worsley with a great Goldwyn cast. 'Beatrice,' Herbert Brenon's production of Rider Haggard's story, with Marie Doro."

Goldwyn Will Release Two Big Spectacles

INCLUDED in its fifth year productions now being advertised for fall release, Goldwyn includes two of the greatest spectacular photoplays ever filmed, both Italian productions.

The first one to be released will be "Theodora," based upon Victorien Sardou's drama of the same name in which Sarah Bernhardt won her most brilliant success. It is a tale of Constantinople in the fifth century.

The other Italian spectacle acquired for American distribution is a screen version of Gabrielle D'Annunzio's novel of the founding of Venice, "La Nave," to bear the translated title of "The Ship."

Goldwyn Favorites to Remain with Company

A survey of the players in the cast of Goldwyn's fifth year pictures announced for autumn release, shows that the good work which actors and actresses who have been with Goldwyn for two and three years have done in the past has not been forgotten. A number of newcomers in the Goldwyn fold have been given prominent parts, but only when a special part seemed to call for the player engaged rather than for a Goldwyn actor.

Of the three stars whose names appear on the fifth year Goldwyn productions, one is an independent producing star. The Goldwyn stars are Tom Moore and Will Rogers.

Other Goldwyn favorites to be seen in the fifth year pictures are Helene Chadwick, Richard Dix, Lon Chaney, Leatrice Joy, Mary Alden, John Bowers, House Peters, Sydney Ainsworth, Raymond Hatton, Cullen Landis, Molly Malone, Richard Tucker, Hardee Kirkland, Kate Lester, DeWitt C. Jennings, Nick Cogley, Edythe Chapman, Dwight Crittenden, James Neill, Cordelia Callahan, Virginia Madison, Johnny Jones, Buddy Messenger, Lucille Ricksen, M. B. Flynn and others.

New faces in the Goldwyn ranks will be Sylvia Breamer, May Collins, Phoebe Hunt, Jack Holt, Joseph Dowling, Fritzi Brunette, Wallace MacDonald, Roland Rushton, Louise Lovely, Theodore von Eltz, etc.

Strong Supporting Cast for Gloria Swanson

With "The Great Moment" now in the cutting stage, Gloria Swanson has just begun work upon her second Paramount starring vehicle, under the direction of Sam Wood.

This new photoplay is an adaptation of the novel, "The Shulamite," by Alice and Claud Askew, and which, dramatized by Edward Knoblock and Claud Askew, also proved highly successful on the legitimate stage. J. E. Nash has adapted the photoplay from both the book and the play. Mahlon Hamilton heads the supporting cast, Russell Simpson, well known character actor, Lillian Leighton, noted screen mother, Thena Jasper and Clarence Ford are also in the cast.

Miss Beth Brown Joins Chester Organization

C. L. Chester, president of the Chester Productions, Inc., announces that Miss Beth Brown, well known for her screen, dramatic and magazine work, has joined his organization as editor and titler.

Goldwyn National Advertising

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION will, in the fall, enter upon an unprecedented national advertising campaign designed to push the Goldwyn trademark through the advertising of individual pictures of outstanding merit and box office appeal.

Conceived by the sales and advertising departments in close cooperation, the campaign is more far-reaching in scope than any motion picture advertising campaign that has ever been launched. It differs radically from all other campaigns.

It is designed to aid the individual exhibitor in drawing patrons into his theatre while the picture is being shown—not only in first run theatres, but in second, third and fourth run houses.

Involved in this advertising campaign is a new policy of distribution. The photoplays selected for this national publicity will be shown simultaneously in over 150 first run houses in as many key cities. Full page and double page advertising lay-outs will appear in thirty magazines with nation-wide circulations that will be on sale on the newsstands the week preceding the showing.

Never before has so big a national campaign been put behind one picture. The total number of readers reached by the thirty magazines is 27,000,000, estimating three readers to each copy of every magazine and deducting 45% for the duplication of readers among various periodicals.

The first two Goldwyn quality productions to be advertised nationally will be "The Old Nest," an adaptation of Rupert Hughes' novel, and "Dangerous Curve Ahead," an original screen story by Mr. Hughes.

"The Old Nest" will be released on September 11 and "Dangerous Curve Ahead" on October 2.

Goldwyn's advertising for these two pictures will not alone benefit the exhibitors who show them in first runs, but in the subsequent runs, for the life of a magazine is not one day, as in the case of the newspapers, but from three to six weeks.

The thirty magazines selected to carry this national advertising campaign include: American, Collier's, Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, Ladies' Home Journal, Literary Digest, Red Book, Saturday Evening Post, Woman's Home Companion, Adventure, Ainslee's, Argosy-All Story, Detective Story, People's, Popular, Short Stories, Smith's, Top Notch, Western Story, Everybody's, Hearst's, Life, Munsey's, Physical, Motion Picture Classic, Motion Picture Magazine, Movie Weekly, Photoplay, Picturcplay, Shadowland.

The total circulation of these magazines is 16,225,000. Full page advertisements will be carried in all magazines except a few where a double page spread is to be used.

While the total number of "movie" fans in the country is estimated, after the gathering of many statistics, at 26,000,000, the number of readers Goldwyn will reach through the thirty magazines is 27,000,000, or 1,000,000 more persons than are accustomed to patronize the motion picture theatre.

Branch Managers Return from Goldwyn Studio

THE managers of Goldwyn's twenty-two branch exchanges are all back at their respective headquarters from the Goldwyn sales convention, recently held at the Culver City studios where they came into direct personal contact with Goldwyn directors, players and officials and where they saw private showings of the first of the firm's fifth year product, to be released in the fall, and watched other pictures which they will market, in the actual making.

Several changes were recently made in the personnel of the Goldwyn branch managers. J. A. Koerpel is now in charge of the Boston office, having been succeeded in Seattle by W. E. Banford, formerly of the Salt Lake City branch. Charles Knickerbocker, a Chicago salesman, has been promoted to the management of the Salt Lake exchange.

Popular Goldwyn Authors

Rupert Hughes, Mrs. Rinehart, and Others on Fifth Year's Program

MANY prominent authors will be represented in the fifth year product of that company. Rupert Hughes will have four pictures and perhaps more. Two of these have been completed. "Dangerous Curve Ahead," an original screen story, and "The Old Nest," adapted from his novel of the same title.

Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart will be represented by "The Glorious Fool," with Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix in the lead. Leroy Scott is the author of "The Poverty of Riches," a Reginald Barker production, and "The Night Rose." Gouverneur Morris wrote "Ace of Hearts," in which Leatrice Joy, Lon Chaney and John Bowers play the three leading roles. Alice Duer Miller is represented by a screen adaption of her story, "The Woman Who Hated Politics," called "She Got What She Wanted," and an original, "The Man With Two Mothers." Kathleen Norris has been signed by Goldwyn and her first story will be photographed during the year.

The foreign authors on the Goldwyn list include Gabrielle D'Annunzio, Victorien Sardou, Henning Berger and E. Phillips Oppenheim.

Other authors to be represented are Katherine Newlin Burt, Rita Wieman, Charles Kanyon, Elmer E. Rice, Edward Kidder, John Frederick, Poore Sheehan and Edward Payson Terhune.

Goldwyn Purchases New Magazine Story

Goldwyn announces the purchase of the screen rights to "His Back Against the Wall," a rapid fire farce comedy of a New York East Side tailor who puts up a bluff that he was a man with character and purpose when he went West and who really became such a character. The story was published as a novelette in a recent issue of the Western Story Magazine.

"His Back Against the Wall," it is expected, will go into production in the not distant future.

Clayton Hamilton to Stay with Goldwyn

Clayton Hamilton, formerly a New York dramatic critic and writer on theatrical subjects, has renewed for a period of one year his contract with the Goldwyn editorial department.

July an Important Release Month for Fox

Fox Film Corporation announces a number of important releases for July.

"Maid of the West," starring Eileen Percy, will be released July 3rd. This picture is not, as its name implies, a story of the west. A western ranch merely serves to introduce its lively young heroine. W. E. Spencer provided the story and Philo McCullough the direction.

The same date will see the release of "The Big Town Round-Up," in which Tom Mix will star. The story is by William McLeod Raine, and the direction by Lynn F. Reynolds.

July 10th Clyde Cook will start a fresh line of "cheer-up" in "The Sailor," in which, it is promised, he will make every port he starts for, in a gale of laughter. July 17th will be an important day for Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker. On that date their first effort as co-stars for Fox will go to the exhibitors, in a vehicle known as "Live Wires." Edward Sedgwick directed "Live Wires," and also wrote the story in collaboration with Charles Emerson Cook.

On July 24th will be released "Lovetime," starring Shirley Mason. Howard M. Mitchell directed the production and Hubert LaDue wrote the story.

The July releases will include also three Sunshine Comedies, namely, "Who's Who," "The Singer Midget's Scandal" and "The Book Agent." There will be five Mutt and Jeff Comedy releases in place of the customary four.

R-C Star to be Guest of N. J. Exhibitors

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of New Jersey have invited Sessue Hayakawa and his wife, known to film fans as Tsuru Aoki, to be the guests of honor at their annual convention to take place in Atlantic City on July 6th. As the Robertson-Cole star has fully recovered from his recent serious illness and will be in New York at that time on business and to attend the Dempsey-Carpentier battle he will probably accept.

Pathe Serial Praised by Trade Reviewers

"The Yellow Arm," Pathe serial announced for release on June 19, is reported to be enjoying additional booking impetus owing to the highly favorable reviews printed in the trade papers of the film industry.

"There is a grip in 'The Yellow Arm,'" stated Wid's. "This production marks the last word in melo-dramatic serials. The story, directing, photography and acting are all better than is usually presented in a serial."

"Unusually mystifying and thrilling are the first three episodes of 'The Yellow Arm,'" stated the Moving Picture World.

Johnny Hines in Features

Comedian in "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" for Release to State Righters

STIMULATED by the success achieved in the comedy field, more especially during the season just closing, with the Johnny Hines' "Torchy Comedies," distributed via Educational Films, Master Films, Inc., has heeded the urge to more ambitious photoplay production, and its entire force is busily engaged in the preparation of its first feature length picture with Johnny Hines in the stellar role.

For this, the first of a proposed series of three Specials, Raymond L. Schrock has provided a high-speed story, entitled "Burn 'Em Up, Barnes," which is said to offer a wealth of possibilities for Johnny's talent, and, in addition, a plausible narrative of water tight consistency.

"Burn 'Em Up, Barnes," which has been in production for over three weeks, is now assuming such definite shape as to give its sponsors added confidence in its possibilities, both as to audience appeal and exhibitor profit, and it is freely predicted that it will prove to be one of the best box-office bets of the coming season. Among the outstanding features which indelibly stamp the picture as an unusual one—entirely aside from the absorbing story, is the cast which is of particular strength and excellence.

Playing opposite to Mr. Hines, who has the title-role, is Betty Carpenter, whose beauty and artistry promise much, and such other dependable and distinguished artists as Edmund Breese, J. Barney Sherry, George Fawcett, Dorothy Leeds, Matthew Betts, Julia Swayne Gordon, Harry Fraser, and a host of other stage and screen favorites. The story, which bubbles with good humor and is replete with human interest, happily provides these distinguished players with eagerly accepted opportunities for unusual character portrayals. The production, which is being filmed under the direction of George A. Beranger, is expected to be completed within the next four weeks and following editing and titling, it will be released in the independent market via Affiliated Distributers, Inc., of which Charles C. Burr is the supervising executive.

Williams in Story of Northwest Mounted

"Bring Him In" is the title of Earle Williams' new picture. It is described a rugged story, dealing with the activities of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, and was directed by the star himself with Robert Ensminger acting as co-director. Many of the scenes were filmed at Lake Tahoe, in the beautiful scenic country of Northern California.

Earle Williams has a role somewhat different from the kind that has been expected of him, and the sort that he has portrayed in the past, with the one possible exception of the role he created in the film version of Eugene Walter's play, "The Wolf." The story is by H. W. Van Loan.

Miss Fritzi Ridgeway is the star's leading woman in "Bring Him In," and Bruce Gordon and Paul Wiegal have important parts.

Miller's Theatre Will Show "Down Home

Vogel and Meehan, Western Division managers of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, report that they have closed with Fred Miller for an extended showing of Irvin V. Willat's production, "Down Home," at Miller's theatre, Los Angeles. "Down Home" will follow "The Man of the Forest," the Benj. B. Hampton Production, which is now enjoying an indefinite run at Miller's theatre.

Canadian Distribution for American Subjects

The American Film Company announces that it has disposed of the Canadian rights on four of its feature productions to the Merger Film Company of Montreal, Que.

"Eve in Exile," featuring Charlotte Walker, "The Valley of Tomorrow," featuring William Russell, "The Light Woman," with Helen Jerome Eddy and Claire Du Brey, and "The Hellion," featuring Margarita Fischer, are the four subjects now controlled by Merger.

Mercier Imile, of Lawrance, Mass., president of Merger, and Alfred J. Dusseault, general manager of the company, negotiated the deal and announce that plans are now being made to take over all of the American features which has not already been contracted for Canadian distribution.

American announces that prints of each subject are going forward immediately and that Merger is planning early releases for each production.

Cabanne to Continue as R.-C. Director

With the formation of the R-C Pictures Corporation capitalized at $4,000,000 to take over and expand the motion picture interests of the Robertson-Cole Company, it became known that William Christy Cabanne will continue in the capacity of a producing director for the new organization.

The Cabanne series of special productions including such subjects as "What's a Wife Worth?" "The Stealers" and "Live and Let Live," his most recent release, have for some time been important features of the Robertson-Cole

Bert Lytell to Appear in S. E. P. Story, "Junk"

Kennett Harris's Saturday Evening Post story, "Junk," a dramatic and picturesque romance of California half a century ago, will be translated to the screen for Bert Lytell's next stellar appearance, according to a communication this week from the Metro studios in Hollywood, Calif.

Former Follies Girl in Christie Cast

Dorothy Orth, former Christie Follies girl and the tiniest of the Christie girls, who are noted for being diminutive, plays the leading girl part in a Vanity comedy now being made for Educational at the Christie studios under the direction of Scott Sidney. The picture is called "Chicken Hearted."

Vancouver Newspaper Cartoonist Inspired By Special, "Black Beauty"

When Vitagraph's sensational special, "Black Beauty," played Vancouver, B. C., recently, Cartoonist Davis, of one of Vancouver's leading dailies, the "Sun," was so inspired by Anna Sewell's noted story in film form that he came out of the theatre all "pepped up" with the race-scene climax and, standing under the marquise of the Capitol Theatre, where "Black Beauty" played in Vancouver, drew a picture of the mad throng swarming in to the second performance. The drawing was published on the first page of the "Sun," as a four-column news cartoon the next day.

Evidently Cartoonist Davis had his ears as well as his eyes open, for he drew in such comments emanating from the crowd as: "Well, it's worth waiting for"; "Don't push—shove"; "I had an easy job until this show came here"; (this from a traffic officer) and "Well, why don't they open another box-office?"

The little comedy touch wasn't omitted. "Come on," says a boy, leading a horse, "your father's over here in the moving pictures."

"I'll say they're 'Black Beauties,'" says a sporty-looking male looking at some fast-black hosiery in which is standing a fashionable and short-skirted theatre patron.

The cartoon is reported to have caused considerable comment in Vancouver, which accepted the coming of "Black Beauty" as a real event. The Capitol Theatre played to capacity during the engagement of "Black Beauty."

Praise for "The Heart of Maryland"

"As convincing a war drama as any since 'The Birth of a Nation,'" was one of the many lines of high praise which "The Cleveland Plain Dealer" had for Vitagraph's special, "The Heart of Maryland," when it played the Allen Theatre in the Ohio metropolis recently. "The Plain Dealer" went on to say that the director of the production deserved all credit choosing "cast that is balanced in every detail; he has some tremendous battle scenes; and there is no flagging of interest from the first peaceful scene showing the valley of the Potomac to the final stirring climax—there are many of them—and the closing fade-out.

"Of course every Civil War play has about the same general plot—the division of family ties and the shattering of embryonic romances with the division of North and South. Belasco gained his big effect in the stage production with a dramatization of 'Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight.' The heroine clung to the bell clapper of the country church to still the alarm while her Northern lover escaped through the Confederate lines. This remains, naturally, the big moment; but there are others, with effective battle scenes outstanding in contrast against bits of Southern scenery and some particularly pleasing interiors.

"The play has been followed in detail—the love of Maryland Calvert for Alan Kendrick; the romance of Spitfire Nanny and her Southern swain, Bob; and the tragedy of Maryland's brother, sent into his own home as a member of the Northern secret service; and, of course, the villainous Thorpe, who betrays both North and South, doing double duty as a spy.

"As a matter of fact, 'The Heart of Maryland' proves even a better picture than a drama—though it brought first substantial recognition to Belasco and fame to Mrs. Carter. Lincoln, Lee and Grant are introduced for a moment at various times. Artistic touches are found in legitimate comedy relief; and the effectiveness of the offering is enhanced by the musical setting by Philip Spitalney and his overture, 'The Spirit of '61,' which prepares the audience for it."

Belasco's Civil War Romance Given Splendid Production

Tom Terriss production
"THE HEART OF MARYLAND"
Vitagraph

DIRECTOR ..... Tom Terriss
AUTHOR ..... David Belasco
SCENARIO BY ..... William B. Courtney
CAMERAMAN ..... Tom Malloy
AS A WHOLE.....Thoroughly appreciable adaptation of favorite stage play; delightful Southern atmosphere
STORY.....Provided with a first rate scenario and given realistic and interesting production
DIRECTION.....Keeps his story moving toward the conclusion all the time; wastes no footage on battle scenes
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Very good
LIGHTINGS ..... Some pretty effects
CAMERA WORK ..... Well judged
PLAYERS.....Catherine Calvert splendid type for leading role; Crane Wilbur does good work; cast well suited all through EXTERIORS ..... Always pretty
INTERIORS ..... Good
DETAIL ..... All right
CHARACTER OF STORY.....A romance of Civil War period in which Southern girl chooses between duty to the South and love of her Northern sweetheart
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....About 6,000 feet

David Belasco's play of the Civil War has been a favorite for so long that a picture bearing the title "The Heart of Maryland" of itself is enough to attract attention. But that is not all. Tom Terriss has made a thoroughly fine picture that will bear comparison favorably with several of the so-called specials that are being released, although his production is not claiming such prominence. William Courtney's scenario was well prepared in the first place, but it remained for director Terriss to make it a reality. He has retained Belasco's original story, and presented it with a deftness that makes the picture first class entertainment.

First of all a delightful Southern atmosphere and real Southern backgrounds are to be found, the old colonial mansion, the costumes and general air characteristic of the people, all add to its realism. The general production values are all splendid. The story moves along smoothly and surely, to a definite conclusion. There are no interruptions to break the well sustained interest. There are no long battle sequences to bore, only an acceptable number of short flashes, and then no actual bloody combats are used.

Catherine Calvert typifies excellently the character of Maryland Calvert, and her work throughout is interesting. Crane Wilbur, as her Northern sweetheart, plays with sincerity and good discretion. The minor characters are all suitable and do good work. The player impersonating Lincoln bears littls resemblance to the Emancipator, and one or two other soldier make-ups might have been improved upon.

Alan Kendrick, at the outbreak of the Civil War an officer in the U. S. Army, is forced to choose between serving the North or remaining true to his Southern sweetheart, Maryland Calvert. Alan chooses to serve the North, and the engagement is broken. Alan is captured by the Confederates and held prisoner in a church near Maryland's home. When Maryland learns that Alan's life is endangered she risks her life to save him and when the bell which announces Alan's death does not ring Maryland is found hanging to the clapper to prevent the sound. The girl is arrested and condemned as a traitor. In the meantime she assists Alan to escape.

Major Thorpe, a traitor to both the North and the South, holds Maryland a prisoner until Alan returns with evidence which causes Thorpe's arrest and gives Maryland back to her lover.

Should Make Your Box Office Feel Good

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

If you want to show a really worth while feature, secure "The Heart of Maryland," and you will be sure to satisfy your folks with it. The fact that it is a war romance should not detract from its appeal since the romance is the prominent feature, with the actual war scenes few and not numerous enough to displease even those who balk at war pictures. You have a genuine Box Office title that shouldn't require further exploitation to get them interested.

Tell them they'll be well pleased with Tom Terriss' adaptation of David Belasco's stage play, and you can promise them a fine piece of entertainment. For those who may suspect long battle sequence be sure to tell them there are but few war scenes, and above all, no long shots of actual combat. Advertise the showing well in advance with large posters bearing the title.

Curwood Production July 1

"God's Country and the Law" Is Screened for Author by Arrow

"GOD'S Country and the Law," the first release of Arrow's James Oliver Curwood series which are being produced by Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., of Maine, was shown in its finished form for the first time on last Friday in the Projection Room of the Arrow Film Corporation before a selected audience. James Oliver Curwood, the author, who made a special trip East from his home in Michigan to see the finished picturization of his story, was present together with Honorable Frederick W. Hinckley of Portland, Maine, president of Pine Tree Pictures, Inc. and former Governor Carl E. Milliken, treasurer.

Directed by Sidney Olcott, with Gladys Leslie in the featured role of Marie, supported by an all star cast composed of William H. Tooker, Fred C. Jones, Hope Sutherland and Cesare Gravina, it is reported the picture is an unusually high type of Curwood drama and should start this new Curwood series off in an impressive manner. Mr. Curwood, himself, was highly pleased with the interpretation given the story in film form. He was especially pleased and gratified by the manner in which the rugged and varied Maine scenery lent itself to the locale and backgrounds of the story.

"God's Country and the Law," while cast in the well known Curwood mould, with its primitive and vigorous action and color, is, however, refreshingly new in theme and it is predicted that it will rank with the best of photoplay interpretations given this famous author's stories. Its thrilling and tense story is based almost entirely on the interesting theme of a man fearful of the supernatural and fleeing from the dread of a guilty conscience until a well deserved fate overtakes him.

Arrow announces that this first production of the series is set for July 1st release.

New Chester Studio Active

Production Starts with Filming of "Snooky" Comedy for Federated

"SNOOKY," the "Humanzee," who is being starred in Chester comedies for Federated release, took part in the formal christening of the new studio of the C. L. Chester Productions, Inc., on Gower street, Hollywood, recently. "Snooky" smashed a bottle of milk on the front of the building, raised a flag, presented C. L. Chester with a huge key giving him the freedom of the Zoo as well as playing the star part in other activities, in the presence of C. L. Chester, president of the organization, Ralph Bandini, general manager, John Rounan, Snooky's owner, directors Harry Williams, Mort Peebles, Vin Moore and Harry Hagenah, Beth Brown, who edits the pictures, Raymond S. Harris, in charge of the scenario end, R. F. Taylor, studio manager, W. E. Pinney, assistant manager, A. W. Loomer, art editor, Tom McGowan, film editor, and other department heads.

Production in the new studio started when Director Harry Williams made the first shot on the initial Chester Comedy, featuring "Snooky" for release by Federated Film Exchanges of America. This, the first of the new series of Chester Comedies, will be called "Snooky's Twin Troubles," and it will inaugurate the policy of making Chester Comedies a series of two-reel special productions.

A few days later director Vin Moore shot the second gun with the first Chester Junior Comedy

Arrow Features Well Received on Coast

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger of the Arrow Film Corporation, announces that he received a genuinely optimistic note from E. H. Emmick and W. O. Edmunds of the Progress Features of San Francisco and Los Angeles this week, when they reported that not only had they placed the entire Arrow-Curwood series in all the key points outside of 'Frisco, but that they also had placed the entire Hoxie series and other big Arrow features including "The Golden Trail."

In Sacramento, Emmick reports that they have sold the entire 26 Arrow productions to the Liberty theatre. a first-run house there, the management of the latter paying the highest price ever recorded for a house seating 650 people.

Fox Comedy to Feature Singer Midgets

The Singer troupe of midgets have been commended so highly for their work in the five-act special comedy "Skirts," produced by William Fox, that they are to be seen in another Fox subject, a Sunshine Comedy now in work at Hollywood.

The name of the first offering which will feature them in Sunshine Comedies is "The Singer Midgets Scandal." Care is being exercised in the making of their new two-reel offering to incorporate all the side-splitting antics that have made them such admirable assistants to Clyde Cook in putting over "Skirts."

"Dream Street" Booked for Strand Theatre

Following its recent engagements at the Central theatre, Broadway, New York, and at the Town Hall in Forty-third street, D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street," being released by United Artists, has now been booked for showing at the Strand by Moe Mark. Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand, will give the picture an elaborate presentation. United Artists officials are elated over this third engagement of the picture in the Broadway theatrical district.

Goldwyn Biggest to Run on Broadway

"THE OLD NEST," which is announced as the greatest picture Goldwyn ever made, and a picture that will be talked about for years to come, will open at the Astor threatre, New York, on Tuesday, June 28, for a legitimate run of limited duration.

"The Old Nest" will be offered first to exhibitors throughout the country on September 11. It is not to be roadshowed. The Astor theatre engagement is in the nature of a test run and will show the pulling power of picture at top theatre prices.

"The Old Nest" is Rupert Hughes' drama of home. Reginald Barker directed it. It it an adaptation by Mr. Hughes himself from his novel of the same title. The cast contains the greatest number of principals to appear in any Goldwyn photoplay. Mary Alden has the leading role. Dwight Crittenden plays the part of Dr. Anthan. The children, in their early stages, are acted by Johnny Jones, Buddy Messenger and Lusille Ricksen, the three famous children from the Booth Tarkington two-reel boy comedies in "The Adventures and Emotions of Edgar Pomeroy," Marshall Ricksen, Robert Devilbliss, Marie Moorehouse and Billie Cotton. The same children when grown to manhood and womanhood, are acted by Helene Chadwick, Cullen Landis, Richard Tucker, Louise Lovely and J. Park Jones. Others in the cast are Molly Malone, Nick Cogley, Fanny Stockbridge, Theodore von Eltz, M. B. Flynn and Roland Rushton.

Florence Vidor Signed for "Lucky Damage"

Florence Vidor, Marcia Manon and Joseph Singleton have been announced as the most recent additions to the all-star cast of "Lucky Damage," Thomas H. Ince's new drama for the Associated Producers, Inc., which entered production at the Ince Studios on the West Coast this week under the direction of Lambert Hillyer and the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

Milton Sills, Tully Marshall and Charles Clary have already been cast in leading roles, while several parts of lesser importance are yet to be filled.

Lasky and DeMille Return to Coast

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Cecil B. DeMille, director-general, returned this week to Los Angeles. Mr. DeMille had made a flying trip to New York for conferences with the officials of the company.

"American 10-Point Prints"

Brand Name for Laboratory Product Adopted by American Film

AMERICAN FILM COMPANY laboratories, which serve both American Film Company itself and hundreds of customers in the amusement, commercial and educational fields, have adopted as a brand name for their product "American 10-Point Prints."

In connection with this branding of its product, American Film Company calls attention to ten points of outstanding importance, listing them, as, 1: Quality—prints known for brilliancy and clearness. 2: Reputation—gained in ten years of experience. 3: Responsibility—a concern of strong financial standing. 4: Location—at the geographical center of the country assuring rapidity and economy in delivery. 5: Equipment—all the most modern facilities obtainable. 6: Cleanliness—within two blocks of Lake Michigan away from dust and dirt, thus assuring clean prints. 7: Safety—the American plant being approved both by the City of Chicago and the Board of Fire Underwriters, assuring safety of negatives. 8: Promptness—staff trained to meet exacting requirements of amusement business where speed is at a premium. 9: Prices—reasonable and competitive. 10: Guarantees—positive guarantees of quality work conforming to the standard approved by the customer.

President Samuel S. Hutchinson, of American Film Company, in discussing the laboratories, said: "As the whole trade knows, American Film Company laboratories have been celebrated for the quality of their work for the past ten years—famous for the clarity and brilliancy of the prints made. Created originally to service only the American Film Company itself, in the development, tinting, toning and titling of the motion picture productions of 'Flying A' release, they evoked unstinted praise from critics of note the country over. Particularly have reviewers referred to American productions for their perfect photography and technical work in printing."

"Of late years," continued Mr. Hutchinson, "we have thrown open our laboratories to outsiders, permitting others to enjoy the same facilities that were responsible for American 'Flying A' productions receiving such praise.

"In London we have a hugh laboratory to carry the same American service to producers at work in the British Isles or on the Continent. This affords the producer working abroad an opportunity to secure sample prints of his negative quickly and safely and permits him then to forward his negative to our laboratories in this country for the completion of the necessary prints for distribution here.

"In branding our product 'American 10-Point Prints,' I wish to impress upon the industry that we have set up these ten points as a standard and that we stand back of them with all the resources of our entire organization. With a capacity of one million feet weekly we are in a position to take care of the most exacting needs of anyone in the amusement, commercial or educational fields with the assurance of quality and service that will build for permanent relationships."

Faversham In "Justice"

Selznick to Make Galsworthy's Play with Well Known Favorite

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM will be the star of the Selznick Pictures production of John Galsworthy's drama "Justice." This announcement is made by Myron Selznick, vice president and production manager of the Selznick Pictures Corporation, who previously stated that the coveted role of Falder in the Galsworthy play would be assigned to one of the present Selznick stars.

This will be Mr. Faversham's third Selznick picture, but his first this year. His last appearance on the screen was in the Hobart Henley production of Frank L. Packard's story, "The Sin That Was His." This was rated by the National Board of Review and other authorities, as one of the most important screen achievements of 1920.

While Mr. Faversham's stage engagements prevent him from appearing upon the screen as frequently as his admirers wish, he is under contract with the Selznick Corporation for whatever time he can devote to moving pictures. When Mr. Selznick selected him for the important role in "Justice," therefore, he was carrying out his expressed intention of having the part played by one of his own stars.

"If there ever had been any doubt in my mind as to the value of Mr. Galsworthy's 'Justice' for the screen," says Mr. Selznick, "it would have been dispelled by the number and prominence of the actors who applied for the role of Falder the moment it was announced that we had secured the screen rights. Two of these were men who have created veritable sensations on the New York stage this season."

Mr. Faversham has just completed a short road tour, which followed his long Broadway run in the dramatization of Mark Twain's story, "The Prince and the Pauper," and already has announced plans for the fall. Therefore it is expected that "Justice" will be made during the summer months at the Fort Lee studios of the Selznick Corporation.

Reviews of Short Subjects on page 237

"Great Impersonation" Is Finished

"THE GREAT IMPERSONATION," George Melford's Paramount picture of E. Phillips Oppenheim's book, has been completed. Mr. Melford took his company back to Hollywood from San Francisco this week, after making scenes in Burlingame of exteriors to represent the grounds of Dominey Hall, the ancestral home of the hero.

The leading role—a dual part—was played by the featured actor, James Kirkwood, while Ann Forrest was leading woman. Alan Hale and many others appeared in important characterizations.

In the matter of settings, it is said, the film will surpass almost any of its predecessors made by Mr. Melford. These include: Dominey Hall—a really perfect interior, modeled after a real English estate; the hall of Moloch; German East Africa, the beautiful grounds, etc.

Strong Cast Presented in "Carnival"

An unusually strong array of talent is presented in "Carnival," which is being released by United Artists. When Harley Knoles went to Europe to film this production he took particular care in the selection of the cast.

Matheson Lang is the leading man. Mr. Lang is considered one of the foremost British actors of the day. He is perhaps best known for his interpretations of Shakespearean roles. Hilda Bailey is seen in the same role which she played in the original cast of "Carnival," that of "Simonetta." Miss Bailey is also one of the London stage favorites. Others in the cast include Clifford Gray, Ivor Novello, well known as a musician as well as an actor; "Twinkles" Hunter, the popular child actress of the British stage, and the Duchess of D'Ansola, noted in British society for her great beauty as well as her dramatic talent.

Variety in the Current Pathe News Issues

Variety is the predominant feature of the Pathe News No. 38 issue. Interesting views of the celebration of Rome's 2,674th anniversary are shown. The Kentucky Derby with "Behave Yourself" winning in spectacular style is also presented. A realistic rescue drill by the Coast Guard at Gloucester, Mass.; the New York police parade, and tennis matches at Washington, D. C., with President Harding in attendance, are some of the other subjects shown.

In Pathe News No. 37 are to be seen a demonstration at Shanghai, China, to raise funds for the relief of the stricken districts in the North of China; the departure of Col. George Harvey as ambassador to the Court of St. James, and the annual bath and massage of "Teddy," the elephant, at the New York zoo.

Pathe's Short Subjects for Week of July 3

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC. announces a varied assortment of short subjects and serial features scheduled for release during the week of July 3. "The Strange Disappearance" is the title of episode three of the new Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," produced by George B. Seitz, and starring Juanita Hansen, with Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot, prominent in the cast.

"The Sky Ranger," the new Seitz serial enters into its tenth episode "Trapped," with the releases for the week. "The Rooster and the Eagle" is the third of the series of "Aesop's Fables Modernized" produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Paul Terry, the celebrated cartoonist of animated picture fame.

"You're Next" is the title of the new Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard. Among those assisting Pollard in the offering are Marie Mosquini, "Sunshine Sambo," the little colored actor, the entire staff of Hal Roach comedians, and a real comedy lion. Pathe Review No. 110 introduces several carefully chosen and widely diversified subjects, opening with "Yak Gnu & Co.," showing the antics of these weird animals under the searching eye of the Pathe Slow-Motion Camera at the New York Zoological Park.

Realart's Double Header

"A Private Scandal" and "March Hare" are Set for June Release

TWO pictures have been set for release during the last week in June, one of which is the Realart Birthday Production. Fittingly culminating a most successful second year, Realart offers "The Wonder Girl," May McAvoy as a star in "A Private Scandal."

For this picture, Hector Turnbull, the well-known author, was especially engaged to write an original story, which offers Miss McAvoy every opportunity to utilize her wonderful talent. In "A Private Scandal" she enacts the sympathetic role of "Jeanne Millette," an orphaned French girl who comes to America at the request of a wealthy family.

Miss McAvoy, it is said, adds more laurels to her rapidly growing reputation as an interpreter of emotional roles and justifies Realart in elevating her to stardom.

The part that Kathlyn Williams plays as the neglected wife calls for every spark of her emotional fire. Others in the cast include Ralph Lewis, Bruce Gordon, Lloyd Whitlock and little Gladys Fox, the golden-haired child actress.

Chester M. Franklin, who directed "A Private Scandal," was assisted by Fred J. Robinson and the camera work is that of J. O. Taylor. Mr. Turnbull gave his personal supervision to the direction of the picture.

"The March Hare," the second picture presents "the good little bad girl," Bebe Daniels in the star role and again the speed queen scores a palpable hit. Elmer Harris wrote the story and also supervised its production, the scenario being prepared by Percy Heath. Major Maurice Campbell, who directed "Two Weeks With Pay," Bebe's previous picture, officiated at the megaphone.

A large cast of principals help Miss Daniels in keeping the tempo above normal. It includes Harry Myers, who plays opposite Bebe, Grace Morse, Herbert Sherwood, Mayme Kelso, Melbourne McDowell, Frances Raymond, Sidney Bracey and Helen Jerome Eddy.

Walter McLeod assisted Campbell in the direction of "The March Hare" and H. Kinley Martin photographed it.

Eugene O'Brien Release for June 30th

The June 30th Selznick Pictures release is Eugene O'Brien in "Is Life Worth Living?" The story was written by George Weston and appeared in the Saturday Evening Post as "The Open Door." The star appears as a young chap who has barely escaped going to prison on a false charge of theft and feels that, although he has been acquitted in court, a damning stigma has been left upon his name and that many of the avenues to earning an honest living have been closed to him.

New Series of Turpin Comedies Planned

INCLUDED in the activities mapped out by Mack Sennett for the ensuing twelve months are plans for a Ben Turpin series to be distributed by Associated Producers, Inc. The hero of "A Small Town Idol" will be disclosed in twelve two-reel fantastic comedies in which the genius of Mack Sennett's cross-eyed comedian will be revealed from as many angles as Turpin has direction of vision. The first of the series is well under way and will be ready for release by Associated Producers in the near future. It commands the service of most of the Sennett favorites.

Mal St. Clair is directing the initial "Turpin Special," under the supervision of the Comedy King himself. Included in Turpin's support Phyllis Haver, Harriet Hammond, Billy Bevan and Geo. O'Hara.

Bosworth Starting New Feature Picture

Featuring a spectacular story and an all-star cast, Hobart Bosworth's second independent picture for Associated Producers' distribution temporarily titled "Renunciation," entered production this week at the Thomas H. Ince Studios, Culver City, where the Hobart Bosworth Productions, Inc., are headquartering.

An original story by Emily Johnson, adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklin Poland, "Renunciation" is said to be a colorful and gripping drama of Alaska of the good rush period and America of today. Bosworth will appear in the leading characterization, that of an Alaskan prospector. Heading the all-star support is Madge Bellamy, former Broadway stage favorite. William Conklin, Wade Boetler, Henry J. Herbert, Irene Blackwell, Colette Forbes, Lula Warrenton and others are in the cast.

Goldwyn's High Class Scenario Staff

Goldwyn points with pride to its editorial department, which will continue its splendid work during the company's fifth year. J. J. Hawkes will remain as head of the department. Julian Josephson will be one of Mr. Hawkes chief assistants. Clayton Hamilton, former New York dramatic critic, has renewed his contract, and others on the staff are Charles Kenyon, Paul Bern, Ralph Block, in charge of the Eastern editorial department.

New Irvin Willat Feature

"The Face of the World," Hodkinson Release Reaches N. Y. Office

"THE FACE OF THE WORLD," Irvin V. Willat's third independent production for Hodkinson release, was pre-viewed by the officials of the company on Thursday, June 16, and all were unanimous in declaring it to be one of the greatest productions which this director has thus far brought to the screen, announces Hodkinson. Particularly worthy of comment is the excellent work done by the two featured players, Barbara Bedford and Edward Hearn. Barbara Bedford will be remembered for her performance in Maurice Tourneur's production, "The Last of the Mohicans," while Edward Hearn has appeared recently in many screen successes, prominent among them the Hodkinson release, "Keeping Up With Lizzie," which was made by the Rockett Film Corporation, under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham from Irving Bacheller's comedy. In this production Mr. Hearn played opposite Enid Bennett.

Arrangements are now being completed by the Hodkinson Corporation for an advertising and exploitation campagn on "The Face of the World."

C. A. ("Doc") Willat, president of Willat Productions, Inc., who is in New York at the present time, has just purchased for his company "Fifty Candles," a Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Derr Biggers, which will be their next production for Hodkinson release. Mr. Biggers is well and favorably known as an author of stories, among which may be mentioned the stage play, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." He is also the author of the novel, "Love Insurance," which was adapted to the screen for Bryant Washburn's use.

"Fifty Candles" was written in Honolulu during his stay there, and is a mystery story of rarely engrossing quality.

Eileen Sedgwick Able to Continue Serial

Universal's latest serial, "Terror Trail," will not be postponed on account of Eileen Sedgwick's operation for appendicitis. After the daring star had completed four episodes of the picture it became necessary for her to go to a hospital, and it was feared that her recovery would be so gradual as to necessitate the postponing of the serial on which she was working, which was scheduled for release in most Universal exchanges on July 11. Miss Sedgwick, however, made rapid recovery and is once more able to proceed with her work in the serial. "Terror Trail" will therefore start on schedule time, overlapping by one week the eighteenth episode of "The White Horseman."

"A Question of Honor" Cast is Announced

Adele Farrington and Mary Land have been added to the cast, supporting Anita Stewart in Ruth Cross' "A Question of Honor," a Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, being directed by Edwin Carewe.

The completed cast now reads: Anita Stewart as Anne Wilmot, Arthur Stuart Hull as Loon Morse, Edward Hearne as Scott Glenn, Frank Beal as Robert Douglas, Ed. Brady as John Dretton, Bert Sprotte as Durkhalter, Walt Whitman as Sheb, Adele Farrington as Mrs. Elton, and Mary Land as Mrs. Wilmot. Josephine Quirk prepared the scenario and Robert B. Kurrle is in charge of the photography.

Norma Talmadge Favorite of Northwest

Norma Talmadge was the winner of the film star popularity contest conducted by the Duluth News Tribune of Duluth, Minn., recently. Miss Talmadge won by a large majority and Constance Talmadge ranked fourth. Charles Ray was voted the favorite male star.

Charles Ray is Favorite in College Town

The senior class of Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Conn., on the eve of its graduation voted Charles Ray as the most popular picture actor and Elaine Hammerstein its favorite film actress. Both winners had votes to spare, though the contest was open to the entire field of stars.

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

"Man and Woman" to be Offered in July

"MAN AND WOMAN" which will be the first release offered to State Right buyers by Jans Productions, Inc., will be presented for sale early in July. This is the first of monthly super-features which Mr. Jans announces that he will place in the State Right field, and he states that the picture is of a character which will live up to the general average which his productions have heretofore made. "Man and Woman" is from the pen of Charles A. Logue and directed by him. Mr. Logue will be easily recalled as a story writer of great popularity and also a stage and motion picture director of many successes.

A cast has been selected in Support of Diana Allen, Ziegfeld Follies star, and Joe King with great care, announces Jans.

Mr. Jans will release his specials under the slogan of "A Jans Picture." He will maintain a publicity department which hopes to give valuable aid to the State Right buyers in the line of special stunts.

W. M. Smith Starting on Second Picture

W. M. Smith has completed his first Western production for the state right market at his studios in Tulsa, Okla., and without delay, it is announced, the company of players have started on picture number two, which is the second production of a series of eight master screen plays depicting stories from the pens of fiction's most popular Western authors.

"The White Masks," by E. H. Corr, which ran in the People's Magazine, is the title of the completed picture. This production starring, Franklyn Farnum, and backed by Shorty Hamilton, as the comedian, was made in record-breaking time, because, as Mr. Smith states, the preliminary work was done before the company actually started to "shoot," thereby saving time and confusion in production.

Pacific Film Comedies Sold in Chicago

T. E. Hancock, who is traveling in the interest of the Pacific Film Company, announces the sale of the White Cap Comedies to the Celebrated Film Players Corporation, of Chicago.

Forward Program Is Varied

Sameth Offers Three Features and New Series of Two Reelers

J. JOSEPH SAMETH, president of Forward Film Distributors, Inc., realizing that now is the time to strike for big things in the independent market has regulated his program for the ensuing year so that the first run house can be supplied with the same degree of success as the little theatre.

Anticipating that normal times were near at hand and that the fall would see a far better and brighter motion picture market, Mr. Sameth fortified himself and his company by opening a New York Exchange. Success was attained from the start and Mr. Sameth sent his sales manager to make a personal study in the key cities in the United States preparatory to opening a chain of exchanges.

During the past three months, Mr. Sameth has been on the jump in an effort to secure pictures for the independent market that would bring sure box office results and reflect credit upon the firm giving them to the trade. "The Shadow," starring Muriel Ostriche the first of the Salient product, directed and written by J. Charles Davis, 2nd, is that type of photo drama chosen by Forward.

"Hearts o' the Range," an all star western and "Youths Desire," two pictures that have attained a position in the independent market were released by Forward. To further strengthen his program Mr. Sameth last week contracted with Hal. Benedict for a series of twelve two-reel features starring Claire Whitney and Robert Emmett Keane. These features are built in the most sumptuous manner time and money can produce.

With his three features and his series of two-reel productions, Mr. Sameth states that he is bringing to the independent market the fruits of his boasts of several weeks ago when he said he would restore confidence in the trade world. But to further augment his program, Mr. Sameth announces that he has concluded arrangements for another series of eight pictures that will be in keeping with the class and merit of former Forward releases.

Selig-Rork Starting Third

Begin New Two Reel Drama for Release Through Educational

WORK has just been started by Selig and Rork on the third of the two-reel dramas to be released by Educational. This will follow "The Northern Trail," from James Oliver Curwood's "The Wilderness Mail," and "The Policeman and the Baby," from Cullen's story.

The third play will be based on another story from Curwood's pen, and in the leading parts will be Lewis Stone, Ethel Grey Terry and Wallace Beery.

Following this will come a story by Mrs. Otis Skinner, "The Ne'er to Return Road." This won first prize as a one-act play, and was produced several years ago at the Lamb's Gambol, when the Lambs held their big benefit at the Metropolitan Opera House. It is intensely human.

Colonel Selig's collections of famous stories made it possible to begin work on these dramas with an exceptional list of authors from whose works to choose. This original list has been added to until now a library might be filled with the books of the famous men and women whose names are included.

Curwood, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Randall Parrish, Hallie Erminie Rives, Sir Gilbert Parker, Harold McGrath and several other famous writers were on the list announced at the time plans were begun for the two-reel dramas. The list of authors, all well known and most of them internationally famous, most of whose works are now available, also includes Mary Roberts Rinehart, Anna Katharine Green, Amelia E. Barr, Gen. Charles King, Virginia Terhune Van de Water, Dane Coolidge, Howard L. Terry, Wm. MacLeod Raine, Opie Read, Joan Conquest, Maibelle Heikes Justice, Mary Hartwell Catherwood, Will M. Hough, Arthur Preston Hankins, Roy McCardell, Cornelius Shea, Wm. Anthony McGuire, J. A. Lacy, Clara Louise Burnham, Montague Glass, Earl Derr Biggers, Leo Tolstoi, Merton Ellis, Gilson Willetts, Frank X. Finnegan, Hugh Pendexter, Wallace C. Clifton, Charles Coghlan, Bertrand Sinclair, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Hetty Gray Baker, Richard Harding Davis, George C. Shedd, W. C. Beale, Meredith Nicholson, McKee Rankin, Harris Merton Lyon, Addison Howard Gibson, Anthony Hope, J. Edw. Hungerford, Rida Johnson Young, Louis Tracy and Edw. Locke.

Affiliated Franchise for Skirboll Bros.

CHARLES C. BURR, President of Affiliated Distributers, Inc., this week announced the disposal of its Ohio and Kentucky franchise to Skirboll Bros.

It is understood that the Affiliated franchises include the territorial rights, not only for the three productions already announced, to-wit: "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," Johnny Hines initial feature production with what is equivalent to an All-Star cast; Edgar Selwyn's "Lonely Heart," featuring Kay Laurell, directed by John O'Brien from Anthony Paul Kelly's script; Edward Hemmer's production, "Sunshine Harbor," featuring Margaret Beecher and a series of productions based upon the stories from the pen of the most noted author of "North Woods" romances, but in addition, those distinctive novelties, the McManus-Donahue pen and ink cartoons and the Rollin Lester Dixon scenic poems.

Affiliated Cartoon Is Booked by N.T. Strand

"Skipping the Pen," the initial offering of a series of distinctly novel pen-and-ink cartoons by J. J. McManus and R. E. Donahue, distributed by Affiliated Distributers, Inc., has been selected for pre-release presentation this week at the Strand theatre by Managing Director Jos. Plunkett.

The cartoonist, Mr. McManus, has succeded, it is said, not only in bringing fresh humor to this type of screen entertainment, but also has perfected the animation to a point where the most extraordinary movements of his figures are executed in a wholly natural manner and in association with real persons. These novel productions will be released in split-reel form, each accompanied by a Rollin Lester Dixon scenic poem.

Hallroom Comedy Is "We Should Worry"

In the newest of the Federated Hall Room Boys comedies which has just been received at the offices of Hall Room Boys Photoplays, Inc., for release through Federated Film Exchanges of America, is titled "We Should Worry." Sid Smith comes to the fore as a satirical comedian of the first rank—proving that not only does he excel in the more obvious kind of humor, but that he is master of the finer, more subtle shadings as well, reports the producing company.

"Dollars and Destiny" 50 Per cent. Sold

JOE HORWITZ, president of the Horwitz Productions, which is offering the "Dollars and Destiny." featuring Paul Capellani, on the independent market, announces that up to date more than half of the territory has been sold. "Dollars and Destiny" is described as being filled with thrills and unusual action. One of its strongest points of appeal is a big horse race sequence.

Mr. Horwitz recently opened offices in the new Loew Annex Building in New York, having moved from the Columbia Theatre Building.

Jack Hoxie, Arrow Star, to Attend Convention

At the request of the Greater Features Film Co. of Minneapolis, the Arrow Film Corporation has switched the itinerary of Jack Hoxie, their Western star, who has now started on a ten weeks' tour of the country. The change in Hoxie's traveling schedule was made in order that he may be able to attend the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association Convention at Minneapolis on June 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th.

Joe Fox, manager of the Phoenix Film Corporation of Kansas City, has sent word to Arrow that he has arranged for a big Smoker and entertainment to be given Hoxie during his stay in Kansas City and that he has already booked him to appear in sixteen theatres during his two days there. Among these theatres are numbered the big downtown and the majority of the suburban houses.

Production Finished on "Determination"

The United States Moving Pictures Corporation has completed production of the special feature photoplay "Determination," which is now being cut and titled for release, and on June 20th started production on their second photoplay, "The Threshold."

Russells Productions Reports Sales

Russells Productions, of Chicago, has disposed territory on the Frank Braidwood series of twenty-six two reelers, starring Frank Braidwood, supported by Marcella Pershing, to the following state right exchanges: Arizona, Nevada and Hawaiian Islands to the Peerless Film Company of San Francisco and Los Angeles, California; Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas to the Specialty Film Company of Dallas; Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin to the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago; Ohio, Michigan, West Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia, to the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland, Ohio; Minnesota, North and South Dakota and North Wisconsin to the Elliott Film Company of Minneapolis, and Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and West Missouri to the Federated Film Exchanges of Kansas City, Missouri.

"Under Two Flags" Ready

R. and R. Sales Corp. to Release First Picture to Independents

UNDER the guidance of Max Roth, as general manager, the R and R Sales Corporation of New York has been launched on the independent market.

The first big picture which will be distributed by this new organization, will be "Under Two Flags," the famous book by Ouida. The story, according to the announcements from the R and R offices, has more than five million circulation, and as a play has been offered in every city of importance in the United States. It has been used as a "standby" with the stock companies for many years.

This picture is announced by this organization as the first of six productions for the independent market. The other five have all been decided upon, and will be released at stated intervals according to their plan of operation.

Associated with Mr. Roth in this concern are several other picture men who have been connected with the industry for a number of years. Mr. Roth is widely known in the independent field. For a number of years he was associated with Sol Lesser.

According to the statements of Mr. Roth, the R and R Sales Corporation has a definite policy which will be adhered to in the marketing of their pictures. "Our first objective," stated Mr. Roth, "was to secure the calibre of product that would be profitable not only to the State Right Exchange, but also to his independent exhibitor clientele. While 'Under Two Flags' has been acknowledged a splendid picture as our first release; we have another which we believe is of still greater show value. It is based on a story fully as famous and widely read as 'Under Two Flags.' It will be worthy of the best program offering in the industry, and will undoubtedly find its way in to the best theatres as will 'Under Two Flags.' I speak of these two simply because they stand out so strongly, however, the other four which we will release are of an equally high standard of excellence.

"We know the great need of the independent market, how eagerly it is looking for pictures that will compare favorably with the many subjects with which it must compete, but we believed that it would be necessary to get pictures not alone as good but better, so as to build up confidence not only in our company, but in the independent exchanges who distribute our product and the independent faction generally.

"'Under Two Flags' will be given an immediate release. The other five pictures will be put out at such intervals as our purchasers will consider best. We believe that the exchanges should have a voice in matters of this kind, and we are anxious to co-operate with them."

Miss Young Tours South

Equity Star Receives Ovation in Several Southern Cities

GREETED in each town with the welcome and admiration generally accorded a statesman or person of great public note, Clara Kimball Young made her way last week through the thick crowds that lined her every step in Atlanta, Birmingham and Montgomery, Ala. Days before her arrival in each city, the press already hailed her coming from front pages and when Miss Young finally alighted from the train, the Mayor and a notable reception committee stood in readiness to greet her. As many as fifteen thousand people bombarded the streets in an effort to catch a glimpse of the Equity star. Every time Miss Young left her hotel the mobs blocked her passage and delayed her progress.

The papers tell the story of Clara Kimball Young's ovation more powerfully than any outsider. Similar to her previous visits to the Southwest a half year ago, the sojourn of Miss Young was made a civic function, and all varieties of honors and decorations were bestowed upon her by officials, clubs and business organizations. From the very moment she arrived up to her departure, every minute of her time was pre-arranged and the demands for her presence were far beyond the limits of her schedule. Her personal appearances at the Strand in Birmingham, the Empire in Montgomery and the Howard in Atlanta were occasions for some of the densest gatherings these cities have ever known. As one newspaper put it, not even President Harding was as hugely attended as the Equity star. Advertisers in the press announced their welcome to Miss Young and invited her to visit their shops. Every opinion of the screen star on feminine fashions and affairs of the fair sex, was eagerly sought and published.

To Milton Crandall belongs the glory of Miss Young's successful tour, for it was due to his tireless preparation in each locality that record-breaking turnouts were the order of the day. "Straight From Paris," the latest picture starring Miss Young, was the vehicle exhibited in connection with her personal appearances.

"New Minister" Selling in Southwest

Franklyn E. Backer, president of the Horizon Pictures, Inc., announces that he is meeting with great success in distributing "The New Minister" to many buyers throughout Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas. Horizon is also handling a large number of orders for "A Daughter's Strange Inheritance," featuring Norma Talmadge.

"Heedless Moths" Moves to Broadway House

AFTER establishing itself at the Greenwich Village theatre downtown, "Headless Moths," the new Equity state right offering recently acquired from Perry Plays and starring Audrey Munson, moved to larger quarters at the Frazee theatre on Forty-second street for an indefinite summer run. The six-reel story of life in artists' studios made its debut in the moderate-sized Greenwich Village theatre for lack of a Broadway accommodation. The theatre being new to motion pictures, it was the task of the Robert Leonard production to "make" the theatre besides establishing itself as a successful picture. Despite the fact that the public was unfamiliar with the new house, and that its location is outside the theatrical district, many travel downtown to see the picture.

To Place "Philo Gubb" for Distribution

Webster Cullison, of Clever Comedies, will leave Los Angeles for New York about July 1 to make arrangements for the distribution of his series of two-reel satirical farce-comedy adaptations of the Ellis Parker Butler stories of "Philo Gubb, Correspondence School Deteckative." Mr. Cullison will take East with him the first three pictures, "The Hound of the Tankervilles," "The Stolen Umbrella," and "The Disappearance of Mary Jane." In response to his advertising campaign on the "Philo Gubb" series Mr. Cullison has received queries and propositions from both the big distributing organizations and many independent exchanges in all parts of the country. There has also been lively bidding for the foreign rights.

Jacobs, of Baltimore, Buys "Loyal Hearts"

G. W. Jacobs, of Baltimore, has acquired right for a large Eastern territory for "Royal Hearts" from the Booker Tee Film Company of Los Angeles, California. Mr. Jacobs, who handles productions of the Peerless Film Company, is taking in New York, Pennsylvania, the District of Columbia, the Virginias and Carolinas and Maryland for "Loyal Hearts."

New Hoxie Feature is Finished for Arrow

The Arrow Film Corporation announces that the seventh of the Heck Hoxie series produced by Ben Wilson is ready for release. This latest Hoxie is entitled, "The Broken Spur," and while giving Hoxie full play in the vigorous cowboy role he has made so famous and interesting, the scenes of the picture are laid in the North woods. Marin Sais is once again to be seen in support of Hoxie in this picture together with Wilbur McGough and Evelyn Nelson.

W. E. Green Heads Pyramid

Well Known Executive to Be President of New Producing Company

WALTER E. GREENE, formerly vice president of Paramount, in charge of distribution, and one of the best known men in the motion picture industry, is the president of Pyramid Pictures, Inc. This announcement was made this week by Arthur N. Smallwood, president of Smallwood & Company, Inc., of 150 West 34th street, which concern is in charge of the financing of the new million dollar corporation. Only the finest type of pictures will be given to the independent market by Pyramid Pictures, Inc., it is stated.

The first meeting of the Board of Directors was held on Saturday, and after the policy of the company was outlined, Mr. Greene was tendered the presidency. He accepted and aftr a short business trip will assume the active leadership of this concern. Executive offices have been opened in New York.

After his election to the presidency of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., Mr. Greene and Ray C. Smallwood, who will be in charge of the first producing unit, conferred, and it was decided to go ahead with the first production as fast as possible. A long term lease will be made for a studio in New York City and a staff of competent readers are at work choosing the stories for the first two productions.

"The independent producer will do more to bring about bigger and better conditions in the motion picture world than any other producing unit" declared Mr. Greene. "The independent exhibitor is a fighter and at the present time is organized to handle any number of good pictures. But to cope with the situation, it is absolutely necessary to give the independent exhibitor pictures that class with the best in the market, and with this in view, I have taken the presidency of Pyramid Pictures, Inc.

"The set up of Pyramid is almost an assurance of the best possible product. We will not experiment. Our directors will be sound and commercially safe men who have made good for other companies. Our stories will be the best we can buy and the manner of building our pictures will be done in a very lavish manner, but on a sound financial basis.

"Banking principles will be employed in the making of Pyramid Pictures. Not a penny will be wasted, yet not a penny will be spared in the making of big and better independent products."

Mr. Greene's name means much to the exhibitor for whilst he was vice president of Paramount previous to the great consolidation, he outlined a distributing plan and executed it which has brought Paramount Lasky to the front in the motion picture trade.

Besides his affiliations with Paramount, Mr. Greene has done big things; as the controlling genius of the Wal Green Pictures Corporation, he added additional laurels to his trade name by building pictures that reflected every penny expended on the silver sheet and gave to the exhibitor a product that brought large financial return.

Mr. Greene brings to Pyramid with him many other assets outside of his distributing knowledge. He is a practical producer and as president of the Claremont Laboratories links each and every section of the motion picture industry.

Celebrated Players Buy Equity Picture

Following the lead of Sam Zierler of the Commonwealth Exchange of New York and Phil Selznick of Cleveland, Joe Friedman, head of Celebrated Players of Chicago stepped up this week to buy the distribution rights of "The Black Panther's Cub" from Equity Pictures for the territory of Northern Illinois, Southern Wisconsin and the entire state of Indiana. This makes the third largest territory of the country to be sold on the Florence Reed feature. and marks record time for the disposal of any independent feature in these three districts. The exchanges mentioned are among the biggest in the country and the most prominent and progressive in their respective states. The prestige of the buyers of the Ziegfeld-Equity production constitutes the greatest compliment that can be paid any state-right picture, states Equity.

The Screen the New Historian

A WRITER in the New York Sun on June 18, wrote an exceptionally interesting article on the film library of Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America. This is interesting to exhibitors, because it is from the film library so described that the Kineto Reviews and Movie Chats are fashioned:

The Sun said: "What will become of the descriptive writers now that the film library has arrived, with its potentialities for supplying to future generations an actual reproduction of famous events as they occurred?

"There can be no disputing the records of the film library. There will be no foreword to explain that while the author was not himself present at the historic scenes described in his work, he had made vast and painstaking researches in the neighborhood where the great event occurred, and that therefore his descriptions are admitted to be accurate.

"Instead there will be simply a brief caption stating when and on what occasion the film was made—perhaps a hundred years ago when President Harding was inaugurated or a few years before when a King of England mounted the throne.

"Charles Urban, long known in the motion picture world as a specialist in educational films, is the owner of the film library which he calls the Living Book of Knowledge. He already has more than one million feet of film in his library, which he is rapidly organizing and cataloguing, so that at any time persons seeking films on special subjects will be able to find them in much the same way as they are now able to turn up special material on any given subject at a public library.

"But historic events, when culled from the films library, will re-enact themselves before one's eyes. Noted figures will make their bow to future generations just as they did to the people of their own day.

"All of the films in Mr. Urban's library are of permanent value. He is constantly engaged in editing them and classifying them so that they will be readily available. They are roughly catalogued under the heads of scenic, historic, industrial, art, literature, etc., and are cross catalogued under countries, names of persons, etc."

Ben Wilson, president of the Ben Wilson Productions of Los Angeles, arrived in New York this week, accompanied by Morris R. Schlank. Mr. Wilson is in the East to make arrangements with Arrow for handling his product for the coming year.

On last Monday evening he was host at a special dinner party given at the Claridge. Among those present were Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation; W. Ray Johnston, vice-president of Arrow; Del Henderson, well known director; Eddie Lyons of Lyons & Moran; Morris R. Schlank and several others.

Woman Director Again in Pictures

Lucie K. Villa, who is said to be the first woman director of motion pictures in this country, has returned temporarily to the screen after an absence of four years, to play a leading character role in "The Stolen Umbrella," the second of the series of Ellis Parker Butler's stories of "Philo Gubb, Correspondence School Deteckative," which are under production by Webster Cullison, of Clever Comedies. Miss Villa was at her height as a theatrical star when she joined the Lubin and Eclair companies as a featured player. For a year-and-a-half she directed two and three reel dramas for both of these organizations. Although Miss Villa had resolved to quit the screen for good she accepted her present role at the earnest solicitation of Mr. Cullison.

'Frisco Exchange Buys Arrow Output

Process Feature, a new film service distribution through the Peerless Film Service, San Francisco, is buying the entire product of the Arrow Film Corp. is selling contracts daily and just completed deals for first run houses in Sacramento and Oakland, W. Cissy Fitzgerald's Series Sold in Texas

Tom Parker of Dallas, Texas, announces that he has purchased the series of high class two-reel comedies, featuring Cissy Fitzgerald from the Producers Security. That the pictures are not slap-stick is evidenced by their being shown at the Capitol in New York and that they are being booked by the Stanley circuit in Philadelphia.

To Issue Press Sheets on Hallroom Comedies

Beginning this week a press sheet is to be issued by Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., in each release of the Federated Screen Snapshots and the Federated Hall Room Boys comedies series featuring Sid Smith.

The press sheets, it is announced, will be like those that are issued on long feature subjects, containing readers, publicity stories, sample cuts and mats, advertising suggestions, exploitation hints, and advertising punch lines

No Let-Up for Reelcraft

Comedy Producers to Continue According to Announced Schedule

"DESPITE the intentions of a number of prominent producers and distributors to temporarily curtail their production plans during the summer months, we are happy to announce to the trade in general and to exhibitors in particular that we will continue the production of high-class comedy vehicles with the same energy and enthusiasm which has characterized our production efforts in the past."

Thus does R. C. Cropper, President of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, in a special statement issued to the trade press, set at rest unfounded rumors which have gained currency in film circles, of the reported suspension of production activities of the three Reelcraft units now engaged in the production of "Mirth," "Sun-Lite" and "Aladdin" Comedies.

Continuing, Mr. Cropper says: "We decided upon this policy only after an intensive research campaign among exchangemen and exhibitors had convinced us that this was the only wise policy to pursue. The exhibitor and the exchangemen are, literally speaking, the barometers of trade interest, and we heartily subscribe to their views in matters affecting production and distribution. Always with the exchangeman and exhibitor in mind, we have tried to make consistently good type of comedy since we first ventured into the producing field.

"Our distributing schedule at the present time calls for the release of a single one-reel comedy and a two-reel comedy each week, making for a total of one hundred and four releases a year. In order to be assured of a steady output we are at present more than two months ahead of our releasing schedule. In addition to this, our mammoth studios in Yonkers are operating with three different producing companies; and contrary to the usual summer policy there will be no stoppage in production. Our orders at the studios have already been issued and they read 'Full steam ahead.'"

All Short-Subject Program

Chas. Urban Believes Innovation Will Gain Favor with Exhibitors

THE news that S. L. Rothafel is soon going to have an all-short subject program at the Capitol theatre, brought forth the following statement from Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America:

"This step was bound to come in time, and I am extremely glad that it is Mr. Rothafel is the man who is the first to take it. He will demonstrate not only its practicality, but its beauty. Within a very short time after the Capitol theatre shows its first short subject program you will find theatres all over the country doing it. Then exhibitors will ask themselves why they waited so long to do such a simple and obvious thing.

"Of course, that is always the way. All of us have better hindsight than we have foresight. It seems curious that in the exhibition field of the motion picture, we should have been bound so long by the boundaries of film footage. It is as if publishers would have limited themselves only to novels and extremely long stories; never magazines.

"Yet that same development took place in the magazine field. It is not so long all magazines thought their readers would insist on what was called the 'novelette,' a very long story. Then some pioneers came along and developed the magazine of to-day; lots of variety with no especial regard to length.

"The same thing is happening in the moving pictures now. Exhibitors are placing more and more reliance on merit and quality, less and less on the length of subjects. Audiences want to be entertained, and they care very little how long or how short a subject is if it has entertainment value.

"As a step in this development, the Kineto Company is now preparing unit programs of Kineto Reviews and Movie Chats where an entire program's entertainment of one-reel subjects is made available."

"Snowy" Baker Receives Wide Publicity

An unusually big and far reaching publicity campaign is to be put over on the series of "Snowy" Baker features to be released through Aywon Film Corporation, according to an announcement just received from Melvin Hirsh, general manager of the company.

The Newspaper Enterprise Association has accepted for publication in some four hundred and eighty newspapers a series of six stories dealing with "Snowy" Baker's life in Australia and in America where he is now on the coast making the pictures under the direction of Col. William Selig.

Exchangeman W. H. Bell Dies in Kansas City

William H. (Billy) Bell, one of the leading Kansas City, Mo., exchangemen, died recently in that city. Mr. Bell had been connected with the motion picture industry since 1906 when he was associated with George K. Spoor, of the National Film Rental Co. of Chicago. When the General Film Company took over the National, Mr. Bell left for Australia with J. D. Williams to manage the fourteen offices of that company in Australia and New Zealand.

Mr. Bell was the organizer of the Midwest Photoplay Corporation, and more recently, of the Equitable Film Corporation of Kansas City, which he recently sold to the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation on account of bad health.

Feinman Is Reelcraft Publicity Chief

R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, this week announces the appointment of A. L. Feinman as Advertising and Publicity Director to succeed Victor Nurnberg who has left the organization.

Mr. Feinman will continue his work with Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, whose advertising and publicity he will continue to direct.

Reelcraft Signs Two New Comedians

R. C. Cropper, president of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, announces this week the addition of two players to the cast now making Sun-Lite comedies. The first will be Bobby Burns, the comedian of "Pokes and Jabs" fame and also remembered for his work in "Cuckoo Comedies." Mr. Burns will be assisted by Jobyna Ralston, a screen and musical comedy actress. Billy Quirk will continue to head the cast of Sun-Lite players.

President Harding Sees Holy Land Picture

"The Birthplace of Christianity," a seven-reel motion picture tour of the entire Holy Land was shown for the first time last week in the East Room of the White House to President and Mrs. Harding and their invited guests. Thomas McVeigh, Jr., who directed and titled the picture, was in charge of the presentation.

CANADA

The Famous Players Canadian Corporation of Toronto will shortly open its forty-fourth theatre in Canada, it is announced, this being the Capitol theatre in Victoria, B. C., which is rapidly nearing completion. It is also stated that seven more of these large theatres are being built or are projected to complete the chain of houses across Canada.

N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the corporation, recently arrived in Vancouver, B. C., after meeting his brother, Henry Nathanson, of Calgary, Western manager of Regal films, Limited, and conferred with J. R. Muir of Vancouver, who is in general charge of the Paramount houses in British Columbia.

William Cranston, manager in Canada for United Artists, recently took a business trip through the Canadian West which he toured a few years ago, right up into the Yukon, with "Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

Another Easterner in the West is Charles Stephenson of Toronto who is now picking dates for "County Fair," after having exploited "Mickey," "The Whip," "The Still Alarm" and other features as an independent distributor and otherwise.

Many Toronto exhibitors have been much put out by a strike of job printers in the Ontario capital. A number of local houses have been forced to forego the distribution of special heralds, programme folders and other printed novelties but the screen and the newspapers are still available.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, was rather startled June 18 by the announcement that Helmer N. Jernberg, a veteran theatre man, had resigned as manager of the Allen theatre, Winnipeg, in order to go into a commercial enterprise of his own.

William Rolland, manager of the Casino theatre, Pembroke, Ontario, which is controlled by the Ottawa Valley Amusement Company of Renfrew, was seriously injured in a level crossing accident on June 13 when the automobile which he was driving was struck by a train about two miles from the city. Mr. Rolland sustained a fractured arm and leg and his condition was critical.

Barney Groves and Robert Scott of Vancouver, B. C., have arranged to take over the Royal theatre, Hastings street, Vancouver, on September 1. The house is closed for the summer but will probably be re-opened with a combination policy of pictures and vaudeville.

OKLAHOMA CITY

Announcement has been made of the re-opening of the Pope theatre at McKinney, Texas, on full time. The theatre has been closed for some time, with the exception of opening for two days in each week.

The Temple theatre, at Temple, Texas, was damaged by fire last week, with damages estimated at $5,000.

A new box office has been built in the lobby at Dick's theatre, Haskell, Okla., and the entire lobby repainted, and the theatre generally renovated and practically made over.

The Happy Hour theatre at Dangerfield, Texas, and the picture theatre at Hughes Springs, Texas, have been closed down by Harvey and Simmons, managers. Both theatres will probably be reopened later in the year.

The Ideal theatre and roof-garden opened at Corsicana, Texas, last week, to pleased capacity business. Pathe News, containing views of Corsicana, was used as the opening bill.

Raleigh Dent, former manager of the Palace theatre at Oklahoma City, has taken over the management of the Cozy theatre at Houston, Texas.

The old Majestic theatre at Stephensville, Texas, has been dismantled and the building will be used for commercial purposes.

E. C. Thumm, manager of the Texas theatre at Del Rio, Texas, has taken in Fred Deitert as a partner. The new firm bought the Princess theatre recently and will operate the Princess daily and the Texas on Friday and Saturday nights only.

The Grand theatre at Miami, Okla., was destroyed by fire last week, entailing a loss estimated at $12,000, with only $4,000 insurance.

H. F. Groene is building an addition to his theatre at Merkel, Texas, which will considerably enlarge the seating capacity when the new work is completed.

Approximately 250 people attending a mass meeting at Tyler, Texas, last week, went on record as favoring the Sunday laws, and the closing of theatres on the Sabbath.

Assessing a fine of $200, a jury in the county court at Wichita Falls, Texas, returned a verdict of guilty against L. V. Ford, charged with violation of the Sunday closing laws. This was the first case tried of those arrested on May 8, when three shows in the city opened.

The Queen theatre at McKinney, Texas, has been purchased by K. D. Deaton of Denison, Texas, who will make several improvements in the near future.

INDIANAPOLIS

The Esch Brothers are planning to add 500 seats to the Princess theatre at Newcastle.

Carthage, Ind., a town of 800 has about the neatest little privately operated community center to be found. J. W. Tweedy operates it. The building has two stories and a basement. The basement is fitted up for social activities, the first floor holds a theatre seating 600 and the top story houses a dance and basketball floor.

With the idea of stimulating Saturday receipts Manager Ralph Lieber started changing programs of the Circle on Saturday instead of Sunday on June 25.

E. H. Bingham, Indiana member of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who last week completed a tour of the state reported that the membership drive of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana is meeting with very gratifying success. Figures on the gain in membership have not been completely tabulated.

Three weeks of terrifically hot weather, coupled with the general business depression has been followed in Indiana by a general movement on the part of houses in the smaller towns and the hamlets to cut their weekly programs to the bone. Reports from outlying districts show that in many of the small towns where theatres have been operated five nights a week they are being operated only three while in a number of places where three night programs were the rule operation has been cut to Saturday only.

Houses are being closed through the entire summer in some of the larger cities. W. Clyde Quimby, owner of the Strand and Jefferson in Ft. Wayne, has shut up the Strand until fall while it is reported that C. R. Rodgers of the Crump and the F. J. Rembusch Enterprises operating the American at Columbus, Ind., are about to enter an agreement to run part time through July.

Coincident with the announcement of the purchase by Neal McCullough, controller of the Riviera at Anderson, of the Starland from Frank Heller came a report that the Meridian, which Heller also operated, will be closed soon. Mr. Heller is expected to move to Kokomo where he will manage his company's houses in Kokomo, Richmond, Ind., and Danville, Ill.

Exhibitors of the Thirteenth District, comprising most of the northeastern section of the state, met in South Bend June 9 with George W. Bender, Motion Picture Theatre Owner of Indiana executive committeeman from the district. Bender will be the district's delegate to the national convention at Minneapolis.

KANSAS CITY MO.

The Federated and Crescent film exchanges in Kansas City have moved from the Film building to their new building, at 115 West Seventeenth street, where they occupy an entire floor and basement.

Ben Blotcky, who last week resigned as Kansas City branch manager for Associated Producers, Inc., announces that he has become associated with the F. B. Warren corporation and that he will manage the branch which that company will open in Kansas City. George W. Hinton, sales representative for Associated Producers, Inc., has been given temporary charge of the Kansas City branch following Mr. Blotcky's resignation.

N. J. Flynn of the Richards and Flynn Company, Kansas City, will leave for his second annual trip to Europe next month.

Klepper & Harrington of Lathrop, Mo., purchased a new Powers 6A machine from the Cole Theatre Supply Company, Kansas City, last week, for use in their theatre.

F. F. Nine, associated with Vitagraph for six years and who last week resigned as manager of the Kansas City branch, will open and manage the Kansas City offices of the T. W. Chatburn Enterprises, a newly organized distributing concern which is headed by T. W. Chatburn, formerly assistant general manager for Vitagraph.

Thomas A. Curran, special representative for the Arrow Film Corporation, left Kansas City last week for Dallas, Tex., where he will meet Jack Hoxie, star in western productions, who will accompany Mr. Curran back to Kansas City. Under the auspices of the Phoenix Film Corporation, Mr. Hoxie will make personal appearances in all leading theatres in Kansas City playing his pictures. He also will make appearances in St. Louis.

WESTERN NEW YORK

Frank Martin, manager of the Robbins-Eckel theatre, Syracuse, put on a newsboys and orphans party in conjunction with the Syracuse Herald one day last week. "Black Beauty" was the attraction.

Billie West, former manager of the Circle and Allendale, Buffalo, is now associated with the management of the Cataract theatre, Niagara Falls.

Louis Scalyo reports the sale of his popular Eugenie theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Harry Green, manager of the Temple theatre, William street, Buffalo, announces that the name of the theatre, which is now being redecorated and renovated, will be changed to the Markeen.

The F. I. L. M. club of Buffalo will hold a big outing this summer. Inasmuch as Buffalo is now like unto the Sahara desert, the event will undoubtedly be staged in Canada, where oases are known to exist.

Shea's North Park, a neighborhood theatre, is showing the same program as Shea's Hippodrome, on Sunday only of each week.

The Kosziuszko theatre, Broadway, is now open but one night a week.

The F. I. L. M. club of Buffalo sent Jimmy Kelly a handsome floral piece last week on the occasion of the opening of the new Liberty theatre, in Corning, N. Y.

ST. LOUIS

Announcement was made this week of the leasing of the Webster theatre, Twelfth and Clinton avenues, by Maurice Stahl, formerly sales representative in Missouri, Illinois and Kentucky for the Pathe exchange. Stahl, who was manager of the Lorelie theatre four years ago, has obtained a five-year lease on the Webster, which also occupies airdome space adjoining.

Joseph Desberger, local salesmanager of the Robertson-Cole, has been appointed to succeed C. D. Hill of the Associated Producers office here. Hill will be associated with Fred Warren.

NEW ORLEANS

The motion picture theatres of New Orleans for the past week have been devoting several minutes of the time of each show to collectors for the cause of Irish Relief and Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock they gave a special performance in furtherance of the cause. The film exchanges of New Orleans are supplying the 200 or more picture theatres throughout the state with films free of cost to aid the campaign. Forty speakers have been assigned to harangue the New Orleans audiences out of the $25,000 quota.

Horace W. McCoy, manager of the Palace theatre, a combination vaudeville and picture house, of New Orleans, joined the ranks of the benedicts a few days ago. The nuptials were celebrated at the home of the bride, Miss Gertrude Lassiter, at Vicksburg, Miss.

The Louisiana theatre of New Orleans, La., the only Alexander Pantages playhouse in that section, has just closed down for the summer season. There was a rumor that the Louisiana, after its one season, had closed down permanently. But this Arthur B. Leopold, manager, vigorously denied. He stated that Pantages had a five-year lease on the property situated on Dauphine street just three blocks off Canal street and that he would open it up again on Labor Day. Pantages, about six months or more ago, announced he was going to erect a magnificent skyscraper structure in New Orleans, a portion of which he would use for his combination vaudeville and picture show. Nothing further has been heard from the plan lately, but there is nothing to indicate that the project has been abandoned.

FOR NEWSPAPER USE—FOR THEATER PROGRAMS

Live Notes from the Studios

CONDUCTED BY LILLIAN R. GALE

ABOUT PLAYERS

James Harrison is not satisfied with having been prominent in the cast of two Constance Talmadge pictures, and being seen in "Lessons In Love" and "Wedding Bells," is eagerly awaiting the release of the Realart production, "A Heart to Let," starring Justine Johnstone. Both Harrison Ford and "Jimmie Harrison make a bid for "the heart." James Morrison always runs a race for favor, and wins a lot of it.

Another two-reel comedy company is out on location filming scenes at the Aqueduct race track, and at Rye Beach. In the cast are Ollie Mack, Billy Quirk, Bobby Burns and Jobyna Ralston. Mr. Mack is being featured in the comedy entitled "The Brown Derby," which is an adaptation of one of his original successes, known over the country as "Shooting the Chutes," in which Murray and Mack starred. This will be another promising Reelcraft product.

Helen Ferguson was the "belle" of the Actor's Benefit Festival, which was held at the Beverly Hills Speedway, Los Angeles, the early part of June, when she appeared as "Beauty at Dawn," and created, what is said, a little short of a sensation, even surrounded by many noted beauties ranking among leading screen actresses. Catherine Ferguson, a sister of Helen, is now playing in the same company, and is quoted as rivaling "Beauty at Dawn," for attractiveness.

"Determination" is complete. And one of the finishing touches was the addition of a favorite actress to the cast, in the person of Maud Hill, noted for her splendid work and tasteful apparel. One of the scenes taken at Belmont Park, showing a horse race in action, required the ladies present to be dressed ultra fashion. Miss Hill was able to display a number of beautiful gowns, but especially attractive is the outfit worn at the Belmont Track.

Little Miriam Battista, whose delightful acting in the Cosmo production "Humoresque," established her as one of the foremost child actresses of the screen, has returned to the speaking stage, for a special engagement in "The Whirl of New York," current at the New York Winter Garden.

On the opening night Miriam shared honors and applause with such noted players as Louis Mann,

Elaine Hammerstein as she appears in her latest Selznick feature, "Remorseless Love"

Adelaide and Hughes, John T. Murray, Dorothy Ward, Kitty Kelly and the host of other stars who make up the cast. Her appearance at the end of the first act in a burlesque of the old familiar song "She Is the Belle of New York," evoked gratifying applause.

But to the movie fans who have learned to watch for the appearance of this child artiste, it must be explained that Miriam is not going to forsake the screen for the stage.

"I'm going to remain in both," she declares.

Which should be sufficient for her many admirers to expect her early reappearance in another big screen production.

Contrary to reports recently circulated in film circles, Anita Stewart's contract with Louis B. Mayer does not terminate with her present picture, but has three months more to run after its completion, according to statements made by Rudolph W. Cameron, Miss Stewart's manager and personal representative.

Concerning Miss Stewart's future plans, Mr. Cameron would make no announcement at the present time. Miss Stewart is now working under Edwin Carewe's direction in "A Question of Honor."

ABOUT DIRECTORS

GEORGE D. BAKER productions continue to be among the active, and news from the west coast includes a most interesting account of the work of Winifred Dunn, the young scenario writer who is making adaptations and writing original stories for the George D. Baker productions. The organization is featuring Gareth Hughes, recently the subject of praise for his work in "Sentimental Tommy." But it was Miss Dunn who wrote the first story in which this talented young actor made his debut before the picture world. Miss Dunn went to the coast on a four weeks contract, which, at the request of the director, has been extended to eight, since the success of "Garments of Truth," now in the course of production, and her adaptation of "Little Eva Ascends" recommended to the discerning director to retain Miss Dunn's services.

George Fitzmaurice will join the procession via the ocean route that leads to London and settle the question of many minds, for himself, as to whether there are advantages in making pictures in Europe over those offered in the U. S. A. "In order to be convinced, go and see," it would seem the director of many successes opines.

Paul Scardon, whose birthplace is Australia, will not journey abroad in company with his justly famous wife, Betty Blythe. Mr. Scardon, whose Goldwyn successes "Milestones" and "Partners of the Night" are still of current topic has been in New York several weeks, and, on account of business pending, is unable to go abroad at this time.

In compiling the Motion Picture Studio Directory, many amusing claims are included in the biographies of ambitious climbers. Recently one man, scheduled as a director, admitted that he made "From the Manger to the Cross," which he described as the first Biblical play of prominence, which, so he said, was under his supervision and direction. We wonder what Director Sidney Olcott might have to say to that? A memory of who made and played in the pictures of long ago is most convenient. Mr. Olcott may be assured the biography of the "director" was not used.

"Photoplay" Acquires Gladys Hall

Gladys Hall, beginning with July, will become attached to the editorial staff of "Photoplay," of which James Quirk is editor. It is, without question, among the most popular and widely read "fan" magazines, yet upon the acquisition of Gladys Hall, is to be congratulated. She has won her enthusiastic folowers by her clever ability to describe, in narrative form, an interview with a motion picture or stage celebrity, and has won countless friends among her interviewers. Her articles, signed by Gladys Hall, as well as under the nom de plume of Faith Service, have been appearing for many months in the Brewster publications, including Motion Picture Magazine, Motion Picture Classic and Shadowland. In addition to these she has been the author of many stories published in national magazines, and has earned, also, considerable reputation as a writer of continuity and scenarios. Both Miss Hall and "Photoplay" are in line for congratulations.

"Connecticut Yankee" Opens in London

The William Fox production, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," adapted from Mark Twain's novel, had its British premiere in London recently at the Alhambra Theatre. The opening performance attracted a brilliant audience, which included several members of the royal family.

The film drew forth many favorable criticisms from the British press, the reviewer of the Daily Mail writing that he had spent "two hours of continuous laughter." Equally favorable reviews appeared in the Kinematograph Week, the Referee, the Daily Telegraph and the Pall Mall Gazette.

Coast Tour Rewards Universal Employees

On Monday, June 20th, two representatives of the Universal Laboratory at Fort Lee, Michael Stolzer and Mrs. Charlotte Marcus, started for Universal City, California, on the Twentieth Century. Their trip was in recognition of their faithful service to the Universal and in recognition of a promise made by Mr. Laemmle a year ago to send two representatives of the Laboratory who showed the greatest fidelity and were voted the most useful employes at the Laboratory to Universal City. These two received the unanimous vote of their fellow workers.

Mr. Stolzer and Mrs. Marcus will be away for three weeks, spending one week at Universal City.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"Aesop's Film Fables"
(Fables Pictures—Pathe—One Reel Each)

THERE is no question that the cartoon field of motion pictures is showing the way to the photoplays in point of novelty or originality. The latest to invite attention is a series of one-reelers, giving a modernized version of Aesop's Fables. Certainly they are clever enough, judging from the first three, to find a place on the most artistic program. If the feature picture happens to be a "weak sister," one of these film fables will provide ample compensation. Paul Terry is responsible for the modernization of the ancient wise man's quips and proverbs. He has certainly evolved a highly interesting series of cartoons.

By using the ancient wheezes to bring forth comparison of present day ideas—he shows that there is nothing new under the sun—that what Aesop said over two thousand years ago has its moral to-day.

The first of the series presents "The Mice in Council." This is, perhaps, the funniest of the three since it shows a conclave of mice debating over the mighty task of making the mouse world safe from cats. A trap is set and a mouse is on guard. But the cunning rodents catch the cheese by using the w. k. fish-pole and hook. The delegates arrive from the various states, and the motion is put forward to tie a bell around the cat's neck, thus giving a sign of warning. The gentleman from Missouri arises to remark—"How are you going to tie the bell and who's going to do the tying?" And the modern comparison is cleverly introduced.

The next fable is "The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg." This shows a greedy husband taking the egg and pawning it for riches. Realizing that he has been cheated he cuts the goose open to get all the gold, and finds her like any other goose. The ancient advice follows anent a day for reckoning for those who are too greedy. The third fable tells the story of the rooster who crowed long and loudly that he was master of the world. It is called "The Eagle and the Rooster." The barnyard strutter enters the prize ring to battle a duck. All the members of the animal kingdom are assembled. The duck takes the count. But at the moment the rooster crows, the eagle registering superb sarcasm, swoops down and carries off the boasting fowl. The modern sketch shows the feminine vote as administered by our newest voter in the shape of a club knocking a boasting politician down and out.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Tooth Carpenter"
(Tony Sarg's Almanac—Tony Sarg-Herbert M. Dawley)

HERE is something absolutely new in screen expression. The novelty of these shadowgraphs as conceived by Tony Sarg should cause them to find a welcome place on any exhibitor's program. It is not only the novelty of the idea, but the execution is quaint and original enough to make it appreciated everywhere by discerning patrons. "The Tooth Carpenter" is a crazy quilt in conception—a pattern undeniably clever. The figures are black which move upon amber tinted backgrounds. If there is any fault it may be found in the slow animation. But the idea is so original that most people will doubtless overlook the tempo.

Tony Sarg goes back to the stone age to show how the dentists of that period extracted teeth. A sorrowful figure steps into the chair; the aggravating drill used for filling and filing is a primitive invention, the power of which is furnished by some freakish animal, who moves a wheel starting the vibrations. The anguish of the patient is certainly mirth-provoking and an unpleasant reminder of one's own experience with the dentist who is always advising us that "this will hurt a little." The tooth is extracted by tying a string to the tooth, the other end being attached to a huge rock which is automatically propelled through space.—Two Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Snooky's Wild Oats"
(Chester Comedy—Educational—Two Reels)

MENTION was made in these columns in a previous issue anent the formula which furnishes the idea behind the comedies featuring Snooky, the talented chimpanzee. The rescue—the baby—climax has provided the background for all of them. It begins to look as if Snooky is under contract to have the infant in his stories. One cannot appear without the other. However, the baby could be placed in scenes which have nothing to do with the expected rescue. He is saved here from danger, which does not carry a thrill, because the kidnappers are fooled by a false bottom in the box in which the little tot is placed.

The early scenes present Snooky sowing some wild oats as a hobo. He is discovered traveling de luxe on a train, his hammock being attached to the rods beneath the coach. This incident is followed by shots of Snooky partaking of a stolen lunch. The concluding scenes present the timely rescue, and the final fade-out of the monk winding his way down the road. The offering does not feature any funny gags, and the thrills are also absent.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Gusher"
(Mutt and Jeff Cartoon—One Half Reel—Wm. Fox)

MUTT AND JEFF are in the oil fields in this picture. They strike a "gusher" at a depth no greater than a crowbar's length, and up comes a spout of oil. Every once in a while it stops, and when it starts again either one of the two is standing over the hole and up they go. Two Indians suffer the same fate. They bounce about on top of the gusher. It finally develops that Mutt and Jeff have been tapping a pipe-line underground.

It is a worth while filler.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Watering the Elephants"
(Mutt and Jeff Cartoon—Fox—One Reel)

IT is circus day for the two Bud Fisher freaks in this cartoon. Being broke, they have applied for the job of watering the elephants in order to see the show. A hydrant is nearby and little Mutt is delegated by his elongated pal to carry the pails, while the latter turns on the water and shuts it off when capacity is reached. Jeff takes three pails over to one elephant (there are over twenty in the group) and he swoops it up in three gulps. Knowing that the job will never be completed in time he attaches a hose to the hydrant and places the elephants trunk around the opposite end. Mutt turns the crank, but forgets to shut it off because of a flirtation with a pretty acrobat. The result is the big beast is filled to the bursting point. He takes on the form of a balloon. Jeff takes the hose away and the elephant releases his pent-up flood—a flood which engulfs everything within sight—a flood which swamps the big tent and the patrons. It is an amusing strip.—LAURENCE REID

"How She Lied"
(Vanity Comedy—Educational—One Reel)

THE idea expressed here is founded upon the telling of white lies by a young fiancee in order that her burly brother from the boundless West will not shoot her future husband. As treated here it takes on the form of high school dramatics—amateurish in theme and execution. Even comedies can be analyzed when they are free from slapstick or burlesque. And "How She Lied" falters, because there is no genuine reason for the fiancee to fib at all. The brother totes a gun and uses it in a threatening manner. The lack of incident does not permit the players to score with any comedy points. Irene Dalton is easy to look at as the heroine, and her portrayal is natural and free of gesture. The plot comes to a finish when brother is locked in a room, while the sister marries the man of her choice. The piece can be used for an average program filler.—LAURENCE REID.

"Scrappily Married"
(Christie Comedy—Educational—Two Reels)

HARRY GRIBBON is featured in this comedy based upon the elimination of mother-in-law. While this pattern is very old, it still is able to thrive if dressed up with good gags and incident. In this case the breadwinner is husband Number 2, the first having divorced his wife because of the nagging tactics of her mother. A quarrel ensues during breakfast which results in the pretty bride packing her husband off to the sleeping porch. The scene shifts to a Pullman, with a pretty girl thief appropriating a letter which fell out of mother's lap. It tells of a necklace and gives the address. It is easy for her to palm herself off as the other and intrigue the unsuspecting husband. He takes her to a hotel and becomes involved through a telegram. Wifey follows in pursuit and the affair is straightened out when the nagging woman promises to go home and stay there. The comedy is of average merit. It has been done too often to stir up much laughter. It fits, however, in a high class program.—LAURENCE REID.

"Japan"
(Single Reel Prizma Scenic)

THIS is perhaps one of the most pleasing scenic pictures Prizma has ever released. The vivid color of everything Japanese has lent itself especially well to the Prizma color photography and the result is a picture that is most beautiful and at the same time carries quite a lot of educational value. There are a number of different sequences showing Japanese people in their native environment, with several of their peculiar trades demonstrated. It is worth featuring on any bill. J. S. DICKERSON.

Double the Light for Half the Cost with New Lamp

Startlingly Wonderful Results Demonstrated in Broadway Theatre

By Herbert Griffin, Tech Eng., Nicholas Power Company, N. Y.

The high intensity arc lamp is, undoubtedly, today the foremost development in the motion picture projection field. This lamp, a development of the General Electric Company's Schenectady Research Laboratory, when properly installed and operated at the correct specified voltage and amperage, produces upon the screen over 100 per cent more light per ampere than the ordinary arc lamp which the projectionist is accustomed to using. This, of course, means a considerable saving in money which would be paid out for current consumption but, while this might not in some instances be the most important consideration, it must be remembered that if the same amount of light were desired from the ordinary arc it would be absolutely impossible to secure it regardless of the number of amperes consumed or the expense incurred. Therefore, the benefits derived are twofold—the user of Power's G. E. lamp not only saves money, but, in addition, secures 100 per cent increase in screen illumination.

A reference to the accompanying cut shows the general appearance of the high intensity lamp. The center of the core of the positive carbon is exactly on the optical axis of the projection equipment, while the negative carbon is set at an angle of about 55 degrees to it.

The secret of the intense illumination developed from these carbons is in the chemical construction of the core and the walls of same and the combination of gases emitted from the negative and positive carbons which come together at the crater. Both negative and positive carbons are of the same diameter, both are cored, but each has a different chemical composition in the core which, combined, give the high intensity effect.

It is not possible to secure high intensity projection light by merely setting the carbons in the position in which they appear in this General Electric Lamp. The ordinary carbon set in this way would give possibly 10 to 15 per cent more light than in the present setup. The high intensity carbons used in this lamp are only 11 m. m. in diameter and the arc must carry 75 amperes. 75 amperes carried through any length of this size carbon would immediately cause it to become cherry red but, in this new lamp, this is prevented by an ingenious arrangement. The current is fed into only that part of the carbon just behind the arc itself; in other word the connections are made to the positive and negative heads respectively. It is therefore possible to use practically the entire diameter of this small carbon to form the crater, and this crater so formed is cup-shaped. The positive carbon holder and carrier are continually revolved on the optical axis of the projection so that the crater is at all times a perfect circle inasmuch as it is exceptionally small in comparison with the ordinary arc carrying 75 amperes, practically all of the light emitted from it is collected by the condensing lens and carried on through the optical system to the screen.

The lamp is absolutely automatic in action once the arc is struck. This in itself will be recognized as one of the greatest advances ever made in motion picture arc lamp construction. The automatic feature is brought about by means of a small shunt wound 110 volt motor which is operated across the arc lamp terminals. The speed of the motor is taken as the basis for figuring the ratio of feeds for the negative and positive carbons.

When the machine switch is closed the motor receives 110 volts D. C. and immediately begins to operate the mechanism. When the motor armature rotates the spiral gear attached thereto operates a worm gear which, in turn, operates the shaft carrying the beveled gear, and this rotates the entire positive carbon carrier. At the same time another worm gear operates a shaft, and this also in turn operates the feed of the negative carbon at a constant speed, the speed of this feed having been correctly determined from the consumption speed of the negative carbon.

The positive carbon carrier revolves continuously but does not feed continuously. The positive carbon instead is fed forward a small fraction of an inch at every complete revolution of the positive carrier. This feed is brought about by means of a small star wheel mounted on the end of the positive carbon feed screw. The star wheel engages with a dog at every revolution and in this way the positive carbon is fed forward.

The negative carbon in this lamp is 8¾ inches in length while the positive carbon is 18 inches in length and one setting of the carbons will burn for approximately one and one-quarter hours. After the first setting is consumed the feed nut to which

Editor Visits Theatre with New Arc Projection

Herbert Griffin, technical engineer, of the Nicholas Powers Company, of New York, invited the technical editor of the News to inspect their new high intensity arc which is being used in the Fox Central theatre on Broadway, New York. First, to observe the comparison, several other theatres using the standard Powers machine were visited. Following that Mr. Griffin marched the writer into the Central, now showing "A Yankee at the Court of King Arthur."

The first glance at the picture was startling. In all fairness, it must be stated that the new high intensity arc which was being used, gave the clearest and brightest picture the writer had ever witnessed.

It can be safely predicted that the placing on the market of this new lamp means the start of high intensity arcs for all machines. All manufacturers of projectors are interested in improving their lamp. They will all undoubtedly follow suit by designing high intensity lamps but in the meantime the Powers Company will be kept busy demonstrating the truth of their claims as regards their new product.

Before leaving the Central theatre the manager stated that the new light had increased their admissions. This proves that the people know when an improvement has been made and appreciate it.

the carbon is clamped is run back to its extreme backward position, the negative feed nut to which the negative carbon is clamped is also run to its extreme lower position and the carbons are simply pushed up into their correct relative positions for burning. When inserting the carbons there are no nuts or bolts or screws of any kind to be tightened. The carbon is simply slipped into place between the spring clamps and nothing further is necessary to hold them in place. After the entire 18 inches, or rather that portion of the 18 inches which it is possible to consume, is burnt a new carbon is pushed in from the back of the lamphouse and the old piece pushed out. The same applies to the negative carbon so that it will be seen that re-carboning is a very simple operation indeed.

Once the lamp is properly set in the lamphouse with relation to the aperature plate and the lens there is absolutely no adjustment necessary at any part of the lamp insofar as the height of the arc or its side relation to the optical axis is concerned. This is a feature which will appeal to every projectionist. The fact that the center of the crater forms on the optical axis eliminates the necessity for any of these adjustments which are an absolutely essential part of the present type of arc lamp. The only adjustments on the lamp are the forward and backward movements for the entire lamp, by means of which the size of the spot is controlled. The feed handle for the positive carbon and the feed handle for the negative carbon may be operated independent of the automatic control equipment so that any slight inequality in the burning of either of the carbons may be immediately corrected and by a slight touch of the handle controlling whichever carbon is found to be not consuming at exactly the correct proportion.

For the proper operation of the present model of this lamp it is necessary to procure current and voltage figures within 5 per cent high or low of the current specifications set forth by the manufacturer, and the current current specifications are an arc voltage of 55 with a current of 75 amperes flowing through it. If these specifications are observed the carbon will burn at a uniform rate of speed and practically no adjustments are necessary. If these current specifications are not correctly observed it will be found necessary to make slight adjustments during the operation of the lamp to correct for the variation in voltage or amperage figures. The terminals of the lamp are the same as those which form a part of the Power's Type "E" Lamp, which is by this time too well known to necessitate any further details in this article. However, there is an absolute assurance of a positive connection between the wire and the current carrying part of the lamp and there is no danger whatever of the wires burning loose from the terminals.

Power's G. E. High Intensity Lamps are centered in the Lamp Assembling Department of the Nicholas Power Company before shipment, but, should it be found that the spot is not exactly in the center of the aperature plate, a slight further adjustment may be necessary upon receipt of the equipment.

In the continuation of this article to be published in the next issue of this publication complete operating and adjusting instructions will be given.

Supply Dealer Spends $10,000 to Make Place Up to Date in Every Possible Way

S. E. Schaffer and Co. Claim Their New Projection Room the Best Equipped and Most Comfortable in U. S.

With the opening of the S. E. Schaffer and Co.'s double projection room at 24 East Eighth street, which took place June 13, Chicago has one of the finest, best equipped and most comfortable showrooms in America.

The Schaffer projection room is provided with two fireproof projection booths and two Gold Fibre screens, 110 leather upholstered chairs and is cool and well ventilated. A battery of the latest Powers Cameragraph machines is used—Mr. Schaffer having recently been made exclusive distributor for this popular make of projectors in this territory. Schaffer & Co. also handle the Gold Fibre screens. The projection booths are said to be the most complete and up-to-date in the country and would do credit to any theatre large or small.

Besides maintaining a public projection room where pictures can be shown at any hour, Schaffer & Co. has opened a new theatre supply department and is prepared to supply the film trade with everything in the line of theatre equipment, from chairs to carbons.

A separate department will be maintained, managed by a competent mechanic, to handle the service end of the Powers projectors in this territory.

Mr. Schaffer is a well known figure in Chicago film circles, having had many years experience as an operator both in Pittsburgh and Chicago. He opened the first projection room for Vitagraph in the College Building in 1908 and conducted it up to the time he was forced to move from the downtown district a few months ago, along with the other film concerns.

His new double storeroom on Eighth street was visited by hundreds of exhibitors and exchangemen during the opening week. He has expended $10,000 in remodeling and equipping his new quarters and is now prepared to meet the demands of theatremen to the smallest detail.

Will Demonstrate New Lamp at Convention

A. V. Birkholm, acting salesmanager for the Nicholas Power Company, demonstrated their new high intensity arc lamp for projection during the convention at Minneapolis. It created considerable interest among the exhibitors.

Poughkeepsie House Has Been Renovated

The Vassar theatre, 570-572 Main St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., will reopen July 15 as a high-class neighborhood house. Capacity, 550. It will be entirely renovated and redecorated and new equipment installed. The posts which have heretofore prevented a clear view from every seat will be entirely removed, leaving the house in splendid shape.

The theatre will be operated by Messrs. Stern and Lotz, who are contemplating several other theatres in the east.

Good Fixtures at Moderate Cost Present a Difficult Task

Some Pointers by a Leading Man in Theatre Fixtures Industry

By W. N. Mackey, Mgr. Newman Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, O.

When planning to build or renovate a theatre it is often a difficult matter to select good fixtures obtainable at moderate cost. The owner of a relatively small house, possessing limited capital but wishing to build up a larger and better patronage, is seriously handicapped in this direction.

If you must secure exceptionally good value for every dollar you invest, the few suggestions embodied in this article will aid you materially. The actual purchasing is a matter of common sense plus a well-balanced artistic taste.

Your fixtures must first of all be durable. They must be guaranteed by the manufacturers to stand up under severe punishment, and yet require a minimum of attention so as to reduce upkeep costs. You want strongly built fixtures.

But you also want that indefinable atmosphere of "class," therefore each article must be distinctive in design or make-up if not actually constructed to order. Also there should be perfect harmony in color-schemes and designs throughout.

When asked for an expression of opinion I always maintain that the principal considerations in theatre designing in the order of their importance are:

1. The mechanical equipment.
2. The lobby display fixtures.
3. The interior decorations and fixtures.

Undoubtedly you will agree with me that the mechanical fixtures (projection machine and booth, screen ventilating and heating apparatus, etc.) should receive first consideration.

The second item may well be subdivided under two specific headings:

(a) Lobby display frames.
(b) Ticket booth and railings.

It is not good policy to "plaster" the walls of your lobby with posters. Slipshod lobbies bespeak careless management and inferior attractions. All columns and every available bit of wall space should be ornamented with frames or cabinets in which posters, photographs and announcement cards can be arranged with ease and in an artistic, attention-compelling manner.

Other frames can be suspended from racks and stood on the sidewalk, or placed on brass easels and stood along the walls, or attached to the sides and top of the ticket booth. But remember that overcrowding should be carefully avoided.

Curved frames and unit display cabinets are excellent for corners. The latter are simply combinations of three-sheet, one-sheet and photo frames, and are furnished complete with name-signs and kick plates.

Brass frames are strongly recommended, especially for out-door use. There is nothing quite like the flash of polished brass in connection with displays of advertising matter. However, for those who prefer artistic dull finishes there are numerous electro-plated colors to select from. I list these as being most popular: Statuary Bronze, Brushed Brass, Copper, Nickel Plate, Oxidized Brass, Oxidized Copper, Verdi Green, Gun Metal, Lacquered Brass.

Some of these special finishes may harmonize more closely than the regulation polished brass with the color-scheme of your lobby. A rag and a bit of elbow-grease are all you need to keep them permanently bright.

The superiority of brass frames over all other frames intended for outdoor use lies in their construction. The brass is moulded over a wood core and the corners are especially protected, so that water can not seep in. After a hard storm a dry cloth will remove the moisture and restore the original gloss.

Frames intended primarily for use inside your lobby may be of carved wood, preferably oak or some semi-hard and well-seasoned stock. The cost as compared with brass is about the same or perhaps a trifle less if you are content with natural finishes and lack of elaborate carving.

Brass corner with frame

There are many excellent machine-carved frames on the market today. Built-to-order frames must be carved and ornamented by hand, and of course the prices for such frames will run rather high in comparison with stock or standard types.

By natural wood finishes I mean mahogany, oak and so on with several protective coatings of varnish or dull mission effects. If you wish to match your particular scheme of colors there are duotones, verdi bronzes, copper and gilt tints, etc., to be had.

(I have given special attention in this article to lobby displays because your lobby corresponds to the show-window of a store and must be "dressed" accordingly if you are to attract and hold the attention of passersby.)

Ticket booths should be centers of attraction, therefore illumination is very important. And the materials used in the construction of the booths (whether polished brass, carved wood with plaster ornaments or cast metal) should reflect the lights properly.

It should be remembered that the front of the booth must be amply protected by a brass or bronze wicket of strong but artistic construction. In winter a glass front should be inserted. Just two openings are necessary, one for change and the other for conversation. The latter opening can be closed when not in use by a simple brass speaking tube now on the market.

Particular attention should be paid to the brass railings in your lobby. To prevent congestion at the ticket booth or box office use a guard rail, consisting of two heavy posts and two equally heavy rails. To separate the incoming from the outgoing crowds install a permanent railing extending from the ticket booth to entrance doors, either single or double. An invisible telescoping gate (or slide-bar) can be added for the convenience of employes.

Instead of permanently affixed dividing rails you might use 1½-inch velour ropes, obtainable in almost any color, which are suspended by means of snap-hooks from substantial brass standards. If you decide on portable standards be sure that the cast metal bases are very heavy.

Semi-permanent railings are arranged for inserting in brass sockets sunk flush with the floor. When the rails are not

The Screen Will Ultimately Take the Place of Daily Newspaper

Interesting Discussion on Screen Messages by an Expert on Slides

By Mrs. C. V. Batigne, President Radio-Mat Slide Co., New York

We have heard a great deal about the power of the screen but not so much of how we are to utilize it. We are often reminded that it is a stronger medium than the long powerful press for reaching the public; yet too often it is practically unused, and as long as it is silent is a dead force of no more value to us than an unworked gold mine or an unharnessed water fall. But this power will be felt only when the screen is made the newspaper of the exhibitor and the forum of the public.

It is up to the exhibitor to become the center of his community by the service he can give, by the personality he can put in his theatre via the screen. His opportunity is to make a connection with his own public and not overlook the churches, schools and officials of his town, and thereby make his theatre known to every individual and himself a most useful citizen.

People are interested in a theatre as "their theatre." They like to think that they are not mere passers-by. They are ready to take an interest not only in the picture but in everything pertaining to the show; the exhibitor's policy, his plans and improvements; if they are but given a chance. Why not make your screen their screen and establish confidence by by giving confidence and then you can depend on them to protect this industry which means their amusement and education.

The typewriter slide is inserted in machine and the message written as you would a business letter

Mrs. C. V. Batigne

This point has yet to be reached however, because had it been a fact, censorship could not have been put over in some States where the people did not ask for it, but their lack of confidence or lack of interest in their local theatre made it possible. A quick made, practical slide can be the hyphen between the public and the exhibitor and put the power of the screen at his finger tips.

Good and necessary as they undoubtedly are, the lobby display, newspaper articles form letters, house organ, posters and producers' announcement slides cannot give the necessary personal touch and individual service. In fact they do not entirely fill the bill for the reason that these methods are in some cases too expensive and all lack the daily flexibility and individuality so important in understanding and holding the public and for creating a special interest in a certain theatre.

No one questions the extraordinary possibilities the future holds in this connection. There is money and there is power in the quiet voice of the screen—there is danger too.

There is danger of large interests making efforts to control the screen if its exploitation is possible only by expensive ways. It is generally instinctive with the exhibitor to fight against any encroachment on his ownership of the screen but he has often remained passive in exploiting it for himself. This is not surprising considering the fact that the exhibitor has been limited until recently both in being able to obtain a neat, quick made, inexpensive slide and has not been furnished with text, ideas and suggestions which he could adapt to his own use.

This is now changing: neat typewriter slides cost no more than a letter and the trade papers are furnishing suggestions and copy that can be adapted. The exhibitor has come to realize that to get full benefit of the screen it must be systematically and daily capitalized with live messages.

The typewriter slides now on the market are entirely practical and play the same role as the correspondence of a business house. The exhibitor is usually a very busy man but by dictating or typewriting a few slides every day he devotes no more time than the business man to his correspondence. Yet he reaches every one of his patrons with his typed ads and messages, while the business letters reach but a few.

As to advertising value, the typed slide has the remarkable advantage of 100 per cent efficiency because the public has to look at it or close its eyes. There is no unread waste circulation. One reaches the class of people that the message is for and in the direct way which they will understand. It is sectional advertising in the best sense. The question of cost is of first importance in this matter. The cost of the slide must be practically negligible so that it can become part of the business equipment and be used many times every day without hesitation as one uses the telephone or the mail. As soon as an exhibitor accepts the idea of using his screen to get and keep in touch with his patrons

MAJOR

The Major Pre-selective System of Light Control is a feature of the beautiful new State Theatre, Minneapolis, J. E. O. Pridmore, architect. The stage switchboard shown in this photograph gives some idea of the compact efficiency of Major control.

F.A.

Those Marvelous Light Effects—

that you see in the newer palaces of film and drama, on the stage and gilded domes of the auditorium are, in their highest perfection, the result of Major control installations. For Major Equipment is the choice of far-seeing men to whom the most marvelous illuminating effects have appealed as a reasonable investment and easily worth the first cost.

Although Major Pre-selective Light Control is practically standard equipment for new theatres, many progressive managers of the fine older theatres are installing Major Systems and are thus successfully meeting the demand of the public for the newest in picture and play presentations.

A complete Major installation is the most effective lighting equipment and control, but is not necessarily the most expensive, for the Major's economical maintenance and reduced current cost for light supplied are factors too important to be overlooked.

Major equipment and control boards are built on the unit plan and are thus adaptable and inexpensive for the smallest theatres as well as the largest.

The new Major Book of Interpretative Lighting will be ready soon—write for your copy and give some details of your needs—we shall be glad to answer questions without obligation.

10 Major Advantages

Great flexibility of operation—three distinct pre-selective arrangements can be made in advance.

Occupies less stage space, all heavy equipment placed below stage.

Eliminates fire and panic hazard as no heavy currents are interrupted on stage.

Long life to switches and switching equipment as contacts are all automatic quick make and break.

Heavier and more durable construction—less trouble—lower maintenance expense.

Operation ease. Any number or all switches can be operated simultaneously as easily as one switch.

Possible control of stage and house lights from any of several points in the house by simple push buttons.

Efficient operation does not require special knowledge of electrical equipment.

All stage control apparatus can be locked against use of unauthorized persons. Control is all fool proof all the time.

The Major Pre-selective system has been tried and tested under actual working conditions for years.

Some Facts Regarding Processing of Motion Picture Films

By George K. Spoor, Spoor-Thompson Machine Co. and Essanay Film Mfg. Co.

In the year 1896, moving picture film, after being printed was developed and washed in large earthen crocks or jars, of the thirty gallon type, being transferred through the process from one jar to the other by hand. When fully developed and washed, these film strips, about fifty feet in length, were hung in a tower twenty-five feet in height, to dry. About six hundred feet—twelve fifty-foot lengths—was a good day's output.

A few years later the drum system for developing, washing and drying came into use. This drum system consists of winding the film lengths on a skeleton drum and submerging the drum and film into a tank containing the developing agent, after which, in a like manner, it goes through the process of "fixing" and washing and thence to the drying drum. This is accomplished in a round-about manner, the film being first removed to a transferred drum and again wound from the transfer drum to a drying drum of much larger type, on which the film is revolved until dry. From this drying drum the film, usually in short lengths, is removed to a basket from which it is wound into a small roll. This is sent to the finishing room for assembly into its complete thousand-foot sectional part of a complete subject.

The only other system competing with the drum system is known as the tank, frame or rack system. This method is different from the drum system, in only that it saves a great deal of handling of the film itself. While this is true, this system has many disadvantages that the old drum system has not, and, while most of the present day laboratories have installed the tank, frame or rack system, it is a fact that most of the older manufacturers prefer to maintain their first installed drum system.

In one or two plants in this country there is in use modifications of both systems, i. e., the use of drums for developing and washing, and frames for drying by the hanging method, and frames for developing and washing, and drums for drying. In at least one plant will be found a frame system for developing and washing, after which the frames containing the film are placed in a heated circular enclosure with revolving hangers to receive these film loaded frames.

Irrespective of whether the drum or frame system is in use, the fact remains that there is required a great number of employes and a great number of operations in the processing of film by these methods.

There is also a tremendous waste of film-ends and loss of parts that aggregate an enormous total footage in every plant. The quality of the photographic work is of wide variation—uneven and unbalanced, due to the fact that the human eye determines development without any standard rule consistently applied by the many and various employes, each of whom must use his eyes to determine the evenness of his own work, in an effort to match the work of his many fellow workmen in the developing of scenes that may be annexed to his own in the final assembly of the complete reel.

The loss, in the past fifteen years, from the continued use of the present systems in the processing of motion picture film is, in the United States alone, computed at many millions of dollars, and no one will dispute that it probably exceeds that amount.

It is an acknowledged fact that the processing part of the motion picture business has been grossly neglected. The reason is obvious: the producer of motion pictures has not had the time to devote his attention to both production of plays and new devices or methods for the manufacture of his film for the projection machine. The demand for productions being the heavier by far, he has therefore followed the line of least resistance in condoning the many evils and tremendous losses of his processing system, on the theory that additional production returns would offset his laboratory losses.

As a matter of fact, the producer has always avoided the technicalities of his laboratory department, preferring to throw its burden upon its department head, whom it seems, has been content with himself, insofar as his employer has been satisfied to be content with himself, insofar as his employer has been satisfied to be content with him.

The laboratory of the film plant today, with but slight exception, stands exactly where it was at the beginning of the industry and where the printing business was before the advent of the big modern cylinder printing presses, the present-day Mergenthaler linotype machines, and the many other modern labor-saving and economic devices.

The cameras, printing machines and perforating machines in major use today are the credit to myself, or through my efforts in making possible their construction.

The demand of the laboratory for a machine to process film through its wet and dry state to a finished condition—that would eliminate all waste and acquire high photographic quality of uniformity and excellence at a low cost of operation—was what was needed.

Consequently about eight years ago I engaged Mr. F. B. Thompson, an engineer of high qualifications in mechanics and chemistry, to construct a film processing machine that would gain for the film processing business, an invention parallel to the big modern printing press that today receives a huge roll of paper and delivers its printed papers complete within a few seconds from the opposite end of the huge machine.

Mr. Thompson completed this machine in the fall of 1915 and for the past two years it has undergone a practical and severe test in the plant of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago Illinois, and where it is now daily engaged in processing the entire output of that company.

Editor's Note A great deal of the laboratory machinery in use in the motion picture art today as developed and built at the expense and direction of George K. Spoor, owner of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, Illinois.)

Projection in Isolated Localities Is No Longer Out of Question

Prominent Engineer Discusses Carbon, Arc and Mazda Lamps with Small Plants

By F. L. Duclos, Mgr., Electrical Dept., Cushman Motor Works, Lincoln, Neb.

The motion picture theatre has established itself in a remarkably short time as a world-wide institution, whose permanence is assured by public demand. Its value as a place of educational and instructive amusement justifies its existence.

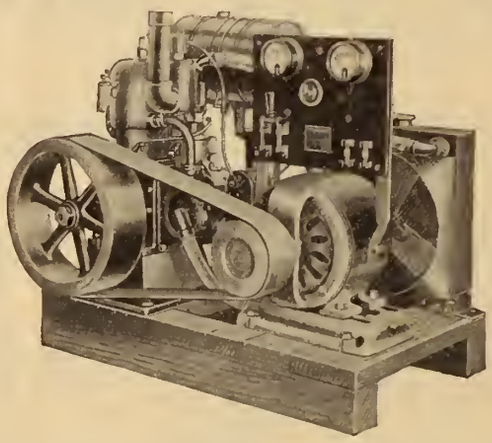
Its early history is one of rapid extension. A lot of attention is now being paid to the refinement of the working equipment, made necessary by the advent of the competition bound to rise in the later developments of any new invention.

Motion picture theatre owners are fast recognizing the value of the private plant, for economy, independence and satisfaction. As manufacturers of engines, our company was naturally among the first to furnish engine generator sets for this service. At first, we experienced some trouble. Realizing the possibilities of this field, and believing that the difficulties could be overcome, we took the trouble to work out equipment suited especially to this service. As a result, we have developed electric plants, fulfilling these exacting requirements, making a private plant an investment the value of which cannot be overlooked by progressive exhibitors.

The location of the present-day picture show depends entirely upon the patronage, and not at all upon the availability of central station current. The phenomenal development of the gasoline engine for power, and the perfection of generators to operate with them, have solved the prob-

The motive power for an electric plant is one of the most important factors. There is no work more exacting in its requirelem.

Isolated electric plants are designed in particular for this exacting work, and



1 kw., 32 volt plant, for projector equipped with Mazda lamp

will furnish very satisfactory service for projection machines, equipped with either the arc or Mazda lamp.

The ample muffling provision of the up-to-date engine eliminates any annoyance from vibration or noise. The switchboard may be placed either with the plant or in any place convenient for the operator. The plant requires no attention beyond starting and stopping, and an occasional cleaning and oiling of the engine and generative parts. The electrical experience of the average motion picture operator is sufficient for the operation and care of the unit, so that little trouble is encountered in this service on account of ignorance of the simple principles necessary to operate the plant.

Since interrupted service cannot be tolerated, these electric plants must represent the acme of quality throughout. The larger plants have dual ignition systems—magneto and battery with an independent set of spark plugs for each system. The switchboard is provided with ground detectors for indicating a grounded circuit.

As a further precaution, some theatres are using a storage battery in conjunction with their electric plant, which will handle the load for a short duration, in the event the electric plant is temporarily out of commission. The storage battery, by "floating on the line," steadies the current and gives increased capacity. It is essential for twenty-four hour service, without operating the plant continuously.

ments than operating a generator to produce a steady flow of current to avoid flickering light. This means that the engine must have an unusually sensitive and automatic throttle governor. The close speed regulation is accomplished by a flyball governor, operating in conjunction with the carburetor, supplying fuel in proportion to the load coming on the engine. This also affords fuel economy.

The 60-volt system is the most practical for furnishing current to handle a projection machine equipped with the arc light, because the arc operates the most efficiently on a voltage ranging from 48 to 52. An arc consumes approximately 1800 watts on a 60-volt D. C. circuit; whereas it uses 3300 watts—or 1500 watts more—on the 110-volt D. C. circuit.

Some theatres require such a large amount of current that the arc requirement is but a fraction of the total current cost. In such cases, the 110-volt plant is practical.

The 32-volt plant is recommended for projection machines equipped with a Maz-

Motion Picture Equipment Dealers

We have already introduced the most modern and complete motion picture projector in the world—
The U. T. E.-PROCTOR AUTOMATIC PROJECTOR.

This Projector has been under development since 1912; manufacturing and deliveries commenced in 1914, but due to war restrictions, it was not possible to go into production on a large scale until January, 1921.

Several U. T. E.-PROCTOR AUTOMATIC PROJECTORS have been in service for upward of five years and a number from the new production have been sold and shipped outside of the 26 states covered by the thirteen U. T. E. Branch Stores.

On and after July 1st, 1921, we are prepared to negotiate, and invite correspondence, with responsible dealers for exclusive territories in the entire United States, as well as in all parts of the world.

Here is a golden opportunity to introduce the only absolutely fireproof and panicproof projector possessing many features not part of any other motion picture projector ever manufactured or offered for sale.

Do not tie yourself up for the purchase or sale of any make projector, until you have seen the U. T. E.-PROCTOR AUTOMATIC PROJECTOR.

plants must be very portable enabling them to be easily moved from place to place.

Whether using a 60- or 110-volt plant, it is necessary to have a variable resistance to reduce the voltage at the arc. This must be the proper equipment, or satisfactory results will not be obtained. A .6 Ohm, 25 to 35 Ampere variable resistance is recommended for the 60-volt system; and a 1.2 Ohm, 25 to 45 Ampere variable resistance for the 110-volt system.

Likewise, a variable resistance is essential for the Mazda lamp, and a 20-Ampere Rheostat should be used for the 600-Watt Mazda lamp, and a 30-Apere Rheostat for the 900-Watt Mazda lamp.

The individual electric plant is very economical in furnishing current for motion picture service, and the cost of manufac-

DIAGRAM FOR CARBON SETTING USING DIRECT CURRENT

The upper carbon should be set on a 25° angle to the rear. The lower carbon should be set parallel with the upper carbon, with the exception that the center of the lower carbon should extend forward 1/16" of the center of the upper carbon. A crater forms on the positive carbon, and the advance displacement of the lower carbon will cause the forward tip of the upper carbon to burn more rapidly than the rear tip. The position of the crater is of prime importance. The crater must be exactly in line with the optical axis (center) of the condensing lens. Inasmuch as all of the light comes from the crater, it therefore follows that the more squarely the crater can be made to face the condensing lens without the carbons interfering with the light ray, the greater percentage of the light will reach the lens and be made available for projection. The small diameter of the lower carbon causes it to burn with a sharp point which keeps the arc steady and eliminates flickering shadows on the screen.

Great Interest Shown in Beautiful Light Effects

One Concern Reports Coast to Coast Installations

From the Granada theatre in San Francisco to The Sheridan Square theatre in New York, practically all of the newer palaces of film entertainment have been equipped to give marvelous light effects. These remarkable color-light presentations have reached their highest development by means of Major Pre-Selective System of Light Control. The control board of the Granada theatre, San Francisco, A. H. Jacobs, architect, is illustrated herewith.

Affording marvelous light effects for patrons is not merely a fad for giving the public something new, but has a real, lasting effect to commend the constant use of this kind of diversion. The variation of color sweeping through the theatre in softly pleasing harmony creates a repose and relaxation equal to that produced by the harmony of music. The true object of prologues is to bring the theatre patrons to a receptive mood to be entertained, give the feature film a setting and to heighten its realism.

It was not easy for the electrical manufacturers to meet the requirements for this part of the entertainment.

First, consider that the volume of electric current used daily in the modern theatre would supply a small town with light, so great are the current needs for modern entertainment. The problem becomes one of volume to begin with. The men interested in building the new theatres have many exacting individual demands that electrical equipment must meet and all of the men connected with the control of theatre lights have requirements of varying nature.

The producer insists that the electrical control be instantaneous, that it be highly flexible and absolutely dependable. The owner wants the cost of installation and equipment to be reasonable and that it give remarkable results. The fire prevention and municipal authorities insist that the safety of the public be first consideration.

The stage manager looks with favor on control boards which leave the greatest amount of space for scenery properties and performers. Even in photoplay houses this latter demand becomes a factor when prologues of the magnitude of those that are performed at the Tivoli theatre, Chicago are staged. These various requirements so conflicting in their nature had to be met in one equipment, so compact and efficient, so safe and foolproof, so flexible as to handle all of the heavy current easily and yet be within the human range of one man's control—the stage electrician. There are, in the larger theatres from 60 to 100 switches and as many dimmers for the main light control and where circuits are subdivided into units for color effects, these smaller switches may number 150 to 200 additional.

While devices for the control and variation of light have been in existence for some years, the perfection of unusual lighting could not come until an extremely flexible, compact, safe and manageable system co-ordinating various devices had been worked out. This perfection of the lighting control board has been attained in the Major Pre-Selective Control Board built by the Frank Adam Electric Co., of St. Louis. It has a great many advantages over the old type of open-knife switchboard and is the most flexible of the dead-front boards. Lights may be controlled to any degree of brilliance and colors can be blended at will. Three distinct set-ups, or light changes, can be made in advance and obtained by the mere touch of a lever.

All theatre owners are proud of their Major installations. It makes possible lighting effects obtained by no other system. In addition they have the absolute safety of having all of the heavy current switching apparatus in a foolproof, locked room under the stage. They have the convenience of a very compact and efficient stage board and the safety against fire and panic hazard, because the house and stage lights may be controlled from any point in the house. Furthermore, the Major Pre-Selective Board is absolutely foolproof and can be locked against operation by unauthorized persons.

The Granada theatre, of San Francisco, is prepared to give the most elaborate photoplays, beautiful prologue and overture presentation by the means of Major Interpretive Lighting. Its performances will be fascinating and the patrons pleased and amazed by the marvelous effects, thus assuring the full measure of success the Granada theatre rightfully expects.

Have New Drip Pan

The Service Products Co., Inc., of Oakland, Cal., have placed a new oil drip pan on the market. This device is for use on Power's projectors and they report that it has been very favorably received on the Pacific Coast.

Examination of a sample pan forwarded to the News Technical Editor, shows that it has been designed for service. Though not heavy it is of rigid construction and will stand a lot of hard wear. It will help keep the projection room floor clean and will eliminate a great deal of motor and speed control trouble, and keep the film free from oil and dirt.

Adds New Front

Henry Houk is building a new front on the Rialto theatre, West Ferry and Grant streets, Buffalo, which will add greatly to the appearance of the house.

Claim Wonderful Improvement in This New Speed Control

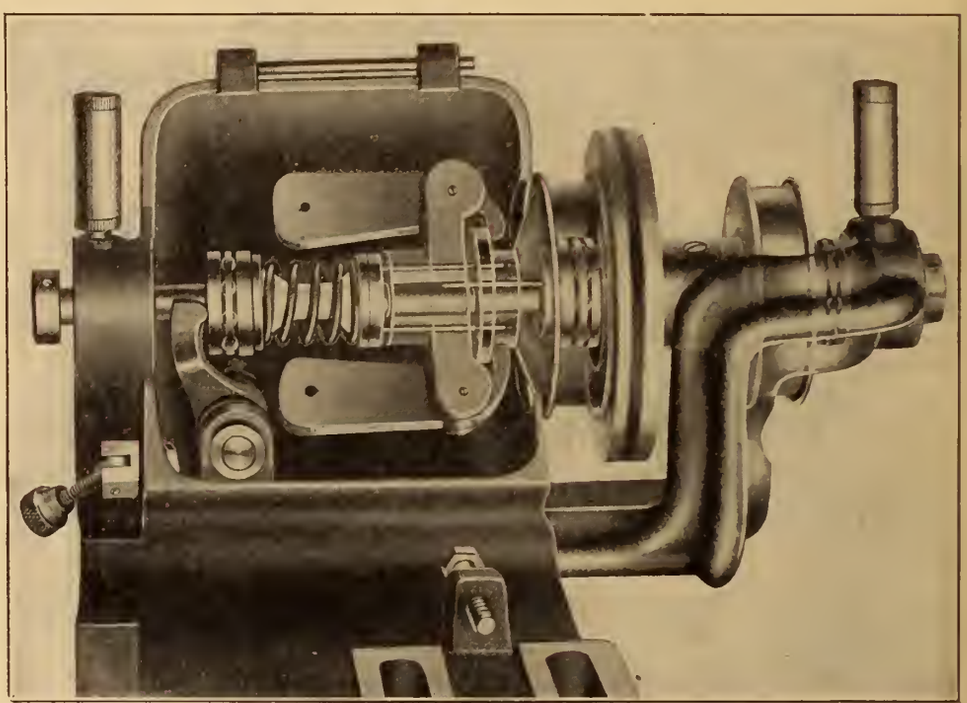
New Device Operates on Principle of a Governor

By Herbert Griffin, Tech. Eng., Nicholas Power Company.

In this day of synchronized music scores and carrying time of program schedules, the Nicholas Power Company has realized the tremendous importance of putting in the hands of the projectionist a piece of controlling apparatus by means of which he may absolutely and accurately control the speed of the projector and also that, by a slight adjustment of the control lever, he may instantly reduce or increase the mechanism speed to any predetermined time within the limits of 40 crank turns to 160 crank turns per minute.

The Nicholas Power Company now offers to the projectionist and theatre manager a device which in the aforementioned respects is excellent. This company has long realized the shortcomings of the many mechanical and electrical speed control devices on the market, and even those previously constructed by this company have fallen far short of the ideal which has been reached in the present type of control.

The governor type speed control is perfect in operation and accurate in adjustment, so much so that it is possible to vary the crank speed any fraction of one revolution per minute within the limits before mentioned, and projectionists and managers will agree that a device of this kind is an absolute necessity where a predetermined schedule must be accurately followed in the projection room. By the use of Power's Speed Indicator in connection with the new mechanical control all difficulty regarding the proper timing of the picture is eliminated inasmuch as by referring to the dial of the indicator and making the necessary adjustments to the regulator of the control the picture may be projected at exactly so many feet per minute and a given number of minutes for thousand feet to be consumed.



Phantom view of new speed control

The new device is simple in construction and all moving parts revolve upon one common shaft. This shaft in turn is free to rotate in its bearings so that the least possible amount of friction is present in any part of the apparatus. The control is operated between three Norma thrust bearings, each having a thrust capacity of 200 pounds per square inch. These bearings were adopted in order to eliminate any possible danger of binding or the breaking of the balls in the race.

The control is operated by a compression spring and governor, the spring acting to bring two discs in a fixed relation with each other, similar to that of an automobile clutch, while the governor balls tend to separate the discs and exert a counter-pressure upon the springs, allowing only that much speed in the control which may be transmitted by the difference between the spring pressure and the governor weights. By the use of this design it is possible to set the control lever at any given point, say 70 or 80 crank turns per minute, and by simply throwing in the motor switch the machine will

Fans Are Positive Necessity in Small or Large Theatre

Cubical Air Space Usually Inadequate to Floor Area Per Person

The recognized necessity for the proper ventilation of theatres, or moving picture houses, where the cubical space for air is usually inadequate as compared to the floor area allowed per person, has steadily increased the demand for motor-driven exhaust fan outfits. Fans are necessary to make such places even habitable during the hot months and are equally valuable to change and freshen the air during the winter. The General Electric Co. has standardized on Davidson fan outfits in sizes of from 18 to 48 in., inclusive, and Ventura outfits in sizes from 10¾ to 48 inches, for both direct and alternating current.

The fans used for ventilation are of the disk and propeller type, and are designed to operate with the air under free circulation, and not in extensive duct systems. They are usually installed in the wall, or ceiling and if, when exhausting into the open air they are exposed to high winds, they should be protected by louvres. They can be used successfully in a short duct where the resistance is low; the duct should be straight, of the same cross sectional area of the fan, and not longer than thirty times the fan diameter. If there are bends in the duct, it is customary to estimate a right angle bend as having a resistance equivalent to a length of straight duct ten times the diameter, and bends of lesser angles in proportion.

The motors used for exhaust fans are compact and light, and have large overload capacity. The latter feature is necessary to prevent the motors burning out in case of obstructions to the flow of air, or counter drafts, which would cause a sudden or heavy overload. The working parts are thoroughly protected so that, if necessary, they can run for long periods without attention. The motors, both A.C. D.C. are totally enclosed to prevent dust from getting into the windings, bearing housings, and on the commutators of direct current, and single phase alternating current motors, where it would seriously handicap the successful operation of the fan.

The three types of motors used are, direct current, single phase, alternating current, and, for polyphase circuits, riveted frame, squirrel cage induction motors. The speed regulation of the D.C. motors is supplied by a speed regulating rheostat that will reduce the speed to 50 per cent of normal. That of the A.C. motors is obtained by speed regulators on the single phase circuits, but where only polyphase circuits are available, and regulation is desired, the best method is to use a single phase motor operating on one phase of the circuit.

As to the size of fan to be used, it depends entirely on the size of the room to be ventilated. It is almost a standard rule that the air in a theatre should be entirely changed every ten minutes. At any rate, at least thirty cubic feet of air per minute should be allowed for every person in the room. Figuring the air content of the room in cubic feet, and dividing by the number of minutes in which the air should be changed is a proper way to determine the size of the fan to be used.

turing current compares very favorably with purchased current from a central station. If the engine is equipped with a throttle governor, it is not uncommon for the plant to generate current on less than a quart of gasoline per kilowatt-hour (1000 watts for one hour). On such basis, if gasoline is purchased at 30 cents a gallon, this would be equivalent to a cost of 7½ cents per K. W. H.

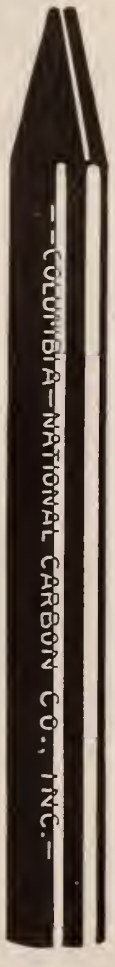
There's Not A Shadow of Doubt About Columbias



WE hate to admit that the Columbia Arc is a substitute for anything.

Still, it's rather difficult to find anything to beat the rays of old Sol for light-power. So we're satisfied with second place, as it is scientifically proved that the Columbia Arc stands next in order to the sun for light intensity.

But that's the outside world. In the Movie World Columbia Projector Carbons lead the way and lighten both the screen and the hearts of the projectionist, exhibitor and audience.

Screen Will Replace Newspaper

he finds it becomes an endless chain of ideas and opportunities that react to advantage for himself and his community. With his quickly typewritten slides the exhibitor can speak of everything from the trivial to the sublime; from making an announcement for a lost pair of gloves, to a referendum amending the constitution. The screen has numerous and unexpected uses. For instance, the Seamens' Church Institute of New York, uses these slides to find lost sailors. The slide can take the place of the three-minute speaker in a campaign for increased taxation for schools. The "topics of the day" which are invaluable for creating interest in communities are within the reach of every attentive exhibitor. The announcement of almost any national or local drive of some importance, such as Liberty bonds, Red Cross, Near East and Far East Relief campaigns, have been made very successful by the use of slides. Why should not slides, made by an exhibitor, having an intimate knowledge of his local public, not be of similar worth in an intensive local campaign?

Some progressive exhibitors have excluded all slides except those made by themselves because they have found better returns from using the short intermission for promotion work than for renting slide privileges. This shows that the typewritten slide makes an editor of each exhibitor. The comparison which has often been made between motion picture theatres and magazines or newspapers, is becoming more and more true with its well balanced contents of news, stories, editorials, comics and ads.

The exhibitor who writes his own slide editorials, remarks and ads is an editor in every sense of the word and to him falls the duties as well as the privileges of the editor. Then his theatre has a prominent position as a news center in the town.

It has often been recommended to the exhibitor that he consult his public and suit the taste of his patrons in selecting the pictures for their entertainments; this can only be done by talking to them from the screen, inviting their suggestions and opinions so that the people have the conviction that it is their theatre. Also, it is sometimes of vital importance that the local clubs, official and religious institutions feel that they can call on the local exhibitor for support and for announcements ad campaigns, thus creating a friendly spirit so necessary for the success of the theatre. It is the answer to censorship and other attacks on the industry. In no other way can the exhibitors' cause be fought as honestly and directly. The frank talks of the individual exhibitor giving facts and figures, stating his personal problems, have more weight than the most elaborate advertisements in influencing the public opinion.

I believe a day will come when the great news agencies of this country and the entire world, realizing the tremendous power of the screen, will advertise themselves by giving to the exhibitor a service of news which will be typewritten on slides as the most rapid and economical way of news distribution, and I believe also that a day will come when the exhibitor himself, conscious of the advertising power of his screen, will really control the industry's destiny by the slides with his personal messages.

practically instantly reach the speed for which the control is set.

Another feature which will prove of value to such communities that are troubled with fluctuating voltage is the fact that a drop in voltage up to 40 volts does not affect the speed of the mechanism even though the motor would under these conditions slow down considerably. These figures are for 110 volt service, but on 230 volt service a considerably larger drop in voltage can be accommodated without changing the speed of the mechanism.

Sidney L. Bernstein to Write for News

Sidney L. Bernstein, managing director of Film Agencies, Ltd., the London motion picture machine company, is now in New York arranging agencies and buying American equipment for marketing in Great Britain.

Mr. Bernstein, who is also director and general manager of fifteen London and provincial cinema theatres, is one of the few English exhibitors who has used stage settings. He was responsible for the presentation of "Earthbound" at The Royal Opera House for Goldwyn.

"Mr. Rothafel, Dr. Riesenfeld and Joe Plunkett are a few of the American exhibitors whose methods I have studied with interest," said Mr. Bernstein. "Their artistic presentation, soulful music and gorgeous lighting effects are much better than we have ever attempted. But we are making good progress and soon, I hope our leading theatres will be friendly rivals in the art of presentation.

"Your suburban cinema theatres," continued Mr. Bernstein, "are not such well built theatres as those in England nor have they such good ventilation. They also lack the bright and clean appearance ours present, but show a more varied program and spend larger sums of money on illuminated advertising."

Mr. Bernstein has also visited some of our New York studios and has carefully inspected most of the new mechanical devices. He is very interested in cameras and studio lights as he thinks a studio and printing equipment firm is urgently required in England and is accordingly opening a department for all studio and printing requirements on his return.

Mr. Bernstein is known in England for his articles on projection and house management and has now agreed to write special articles of English news for the Motion Picture News.

manager of the Nicholas Power Company in 1912, has resigned as general manager of that company, to head his own company. Mr. Smith has just organized the Motion Picture Equipment Corporation, of which he is president and treasurer, and will act as distributor for Power's Projectors in New York, New Jersey, Delaware, part of Connecticut and the southern part of Pennsylvania. The Motion Picture Equipment Corporation will also engage in a general supply business for motion picture equipment.

Mr. Smith has been prominent in many of the important activities of the motion picture industry. He has attended conventions by the dozens and using Power's Projectors has been responsible for the success of scores of premier performances of noted successes. He is Treasurer of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and one of the organizers of the American Projection Society.

Fixture Installations

Messrs. Schott Bros. and Weber have just awarded the contract for brass work for the Macomb theatre (Mt. Clemens, Mich.) to the Newman Manufacturing Co. of Cincinnati.

This contract takes care of the velour-covered ropes for the lobby and all the necessary brass door hardware. The Newman folks are also to install four special poster frames.

The popular statuary bronze finish has been specified for the frames and brass work. This will mean a big saving in labor since polishing will be unnecessary.

Other Newman orders are listed below: Newk's theatre, (J. J. Newcomb) Burlington Kans.—sidewalk canopy collapsible gates and box-office grille work.

Royal theatre, St. Mary's, O.—brass poster frames.

New Frolic theatre, Jacksonville, Fla—brass ticket-office railings.

Empire theatre, Mobile, Ala.—complete installation of brass railings.

Wilkerson-Lyons Enterprises, Vincennes, Ind.—brass one-sheet frames and ticket-office railing.

The Meaning of "Efficiency" in Shutters

Books on photography which deal with shutters or hand cameras generally have a good deal to say on the subject of the efficiency of a shutter.

If one of the ordinary methods of shutter testing is employed to measure the speed of the shutter, it will be seen at once that a definite reading is difficult, if not impossible. They are nearly all based on the photography of some object which is moving at a known rate, such as a falling weight or a rotating bicycle wheel. If we know how fast the object is moving and note how much it has moved during the exposure, we are told that we can ascertain at once the duration of the exposure.

Simple enough it sounds, but when we come to try it we find that the image of the object does not begin and end abruptly (unless we use a focal-plant shutter), but gradually vignettes or softens off, so as to make it extremely difficult to say where it begins and where it ends. What is more puzzling is that if we make two tests of the same shutter at the same speed, one in a very strong light, so that the test plate is very fully exposed, and one in a weak light, so that it is poorly exposed, the object in the former case will appear to have moved further than in the latter, although actually the two exposures may have been the same.

POWERS CAMERAGRAPHS

Good Fixtures At Moderate Cost a Task

in use these sockets are fitted with brass plugs.

At a slight additional cost all railings may be finished in Statuary Bronze or any other plated finish to harmonize with other fixtures. In most cases the extra expense is advisable because a considerable amount can be saved in labor.

Brass railings are cheaper in the long run because they are practically "unwearoutable."

Ticket choppers are either hand or electrically driven. Naturally the former is less expensive. Your destroyer should be selected according to (1) efficiency and (2) ease of operation.

The mechanism should be guaranteed to perforate each and every ticket beyond redemption, and yet permit of checking up returns whenever necessary. Ask the makers to send you samples of mutilated tickets to make assurance doubly sure.

Clogging of tickets in the upper receptable means a serious strain on the arm of the operator. An automatic feeding arrangement will positively eliminate clogging.

Choppers may be secured in genuine mahogany or oak, also in polished brass and nickel plate. The best box, in my opinion, is constructed of cold-rolled steel, heavily reinforced and enameled to represent mahogany or some other wood. It will stand severe punishment and retain its finish indefinitely.

Do not overlook the matter of door hardware, especially if you wish to protect highly varnished doors. Brass kick plates should be used, also push and pull plates to match. Brass bars will protect the glass and afford an easy means of opening the doors.

In the foyer you might place floor lamps of plaster composition and a drinking fountain of the same material. Fixtures of this kind can be tinted to harmonize with side-walls and hangings. For the purpose they are even better than the more expensive cast metal or terra cotta.

Combination one-sheet and photograph frame

Brass frame with adjustable easel and name sign

Steel clad ticket choppe

Plaster wall ornaments, side-wall lighting fixtures and overhead electroliers or domes are reasonably priced. Wall brackets with candles fitted with tiny shades are the latest thing in side-wall fixtures, and semi-direct bowls for ceilings are very good, especially for small houses.

It is always important that enough brass railings be installed to insure the comfort and safety of your patrons.

If you have a wide stairway leading to a balcony it should be fitted with a heavy railing down its center to prevent crowding. Side-wall handrails to match may be had. Line-up railings in the foyer should be more ornamental and massive than sturdy.

Do not overlook brass curtain railings for the rear of the house, or box, balcony and similar railings. A small railing to partially protect your footlights tends to make the installation more complete.

For the orchestra pit you might use the removable railing mentioned above, or the velour-covered ropes. A permanently affixed railing is customary, however.

While exit lights are usually provided for in the architect's plan, it is often advisable for owners to purchase fixtures of this description. A simply constructed art-glass light with brass finished box and all necessary wiring is now being marketed.

The buying of fixtures and equipment is largely a matter of personal taste and must be governed by the lump sum set aside for the purpose. No laid-down rules can be given, but I hope that the experiences of others will benefit readers of The Motion Picture News who are planning to build or renovate; that is why I have combined the opinions of thousands of owners in this article. It is in effect a Consensus of Opinion.

In conclusion, permit me to point out that cheapness is usually a mask for inferior workmanship and second-grade materials. Theatre fixtures must be constructed to withstand hard usage, and yet make a pleasing impression on patrons, therefore the prices charged are comparatively high. But if you have positive assurance that the best materials obtainable have been used, and that the workmanship is honest, do not look too closely at the price-tag. Remember that the best is cheapest in the end.

Activities in the Golden Gate City

The first house on Market street, San Francisco, to cut prices was the College, which has reduced from a 30 to a 25-cent evening general admission. This house is doing well under the new management of Miss Sylvia Grogg.

"Everything is quiet now," declares C. C. Griffin, vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of A. He states that a large delegation of Californians is going East to attend the national convention at Minneapolis.

Charles M. Pincus, manager of the California theatre, under the direction of Roth and Partington, went to Los Angeles by airplane on a two weeks' honeymoon, after marrying Viola Jacoby, non-professional.

Juanita Miller, eccentric daughter of the noted poet Joaquin Miller, has been engaged by the Tivoli theatre for a personal appearance in her own one-act play as a special attraction, week of June 19.

A special Power's installation has been made at the Curran theatre (legitimate house) for the five weeks' showing of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, beginning week of June 20. The Theatre Equipment Supply Co. put in new Power's 6 B machines equipped with Peerless Arc controls and Kollmorgan lenses, also a Hill Diamond Crystal screen. The cost was between two and three thousand dollars for the five weeks' installation.

After being closed for repairs Lewis and Byrd have reopened their Hanford house and eliminating the horseshoe balcony and redecorating. The latest roller pin intermittent movement Power's machines were installed. The Lodi theatre has reopened after a complete change in operating equipment.

Will Rebuild Old Majestic Theatre

The Majestic theatre of Streator, Ill., closed Sunday, June 12th, for extensive building operations. The Majestic has been in operation for 12 years, initially being a vaudeville and stock house, but running pictures the last five years.

It will be entirely gutted, an entirely new fireproof, modern theatre erected, seating 1200. A pipe organ will be installed, also new seats, projection machines, booth equipment, etc.

When finished, it will be one of the most up-to-date and largest theatres in Illinois.

Marr & Colton, organ manufacturers of Warsaw, N. Y., are very proud of a new folder they have compiled. It contains letters from a few of their exhibitor-customers. After reading the letters there is little wonder that this firm feels proud. Judging from the tone of the exhibitors using Marr & Colton organs, they must be giving exceptionally good service. Satisfied customers are the best advertisement a firm can have and Marr & Colton evidently have plenty such customers.

Clinton and Meyers New Lyceum Theatre Opens Doors

Places Duluth in Front Rank of Modern Amusement Centers

Ranking with America's most beautiful playhouses and tending to place Duluth in the front rank of metropolitan amusement centers in this country, the New Lyceum theatre opened its doors to the public last May 21, with a completely equipped Simplex Projection Room.

The theatre had been entirely remodelled and made over from the old Duluth Lyceum, which in itself represented the pioneer theatre in the city of Duluth.

Nothing has been spared in making the Lyceum a veritable palace of art, so that this pioneer structure has become one of the most beautiful of modern playhouses, with its estimated valuation approaching nearly the million dollar mark.

"The completion of this structure marks a dream of ten years," said J. B. Clinton, president of the Clinton-Meyers Co., "for the last fifteen years I have seen this building and about ten years ago I began to wonder who would modernize it and during these ten years my thoughts often were of the pioneer structure that had outlived its usefulness in recent years. I have been planning in my mind, just how this change should be.

There are those who said that it could not be done, but we did not listen to them. Of course, it could have been done much less lavishly and much less expensively, but our constant thoughts, were not how ornate, but how beautiful, we could make this theatre."

Nearly two years ago, J. B. Clinton and Chas. P. Meyers bought the old Lyceum Building and promptly formed the Clinton-Meyers Co. for the purpose of remodelling the playhouse into a modern motion picture palace, in order that Duluth might claim her just share of laurels for beautiful and representative theatres.

At an enormous expense the reconstruction of the Lyceum theatre was completed in approximately fifteen months.

The projection room of the Lyceum is truly built in keeping with the other features of the theatre. It contains two of the latest type "S" motor driven Simplex Projectors and two G. E. Motor Generators are also part of the equipment. The entire equipping of the projection room was handled by the Teco Products Manufacturing Co., 245 Loeb Arcade, Minneapolis, Minn., one of the Simplex distributing units.

The entire front of the old building has been torn down and replaced with a new front, so designed that the old stairway entrance on Superior Street, is removed. This change alone has cost thousands of dollars, but it eliminates the climbing of a flight of stairs upon entering the theatre.

Two new entrances have been built into the front of the building, while stores on the sidewalk level have been constructed in place of a stairway. Both entrances are on the street level. The east doors leading into the theatre lobby, while the west doors open into the Lyceum Building proper and the elevator corridor.

Two beautiful marquees have been erected over the new entrances, thus making the entrance of the theatre decidedly attractive and possessing a very distinctive appearance.

An immense stage that will offer exceptional opportunities of prolonging pictures is another feature of the Lyceum, and Manager Jas. H. Carroll, former manager of the Pitt theatre in Philadelphia and the Republic theatre in New York, states that it is the intention of the management of the Lyceum to book any available legitimate productions from time to time, that is possible to get hold of.

At present the policy of the Lyceum is solely that of pictures, running from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M.

The theatre now has three floors, the old gallery having been torn down and an entirely new floor added to the building proper.

The Lyceum can truly be said to be a credit to the Northwest and may well take its place in the ranks of leading theatres throughout the country.

Texas Doings

The American theatre at Vernon, Texas, has re-opened, after having been shut down for several weeks for repairs.

The local opera house at Vernon, Texas, has been opened for the summer period. New equipment has been added, including a new screen and a pipe organ.

George E. Shilket of Newata, has purchased the St. Dennis theatre at Sapulpa, Okla., and will add many new improvements, with complete renovation both inside and out.

Singer & Hendricks, operating the Princess and Majestic theatres at Memphis, Texas, are installing Motiograph De Luxe projectors, which they purchased from R. D. Thrask of Dallas. Other improvements are also being made to both houses.

A. Mewlett's theatre was almost completely destroyed by fire at Moran, Texas, last week, loss about $10,000.—Noble.

Geitner Is Building

Andy Geitner is building a new theatre in Silver Creek, N. Y. The house will cost $75,000, having a seating capacity of 800 and features an orchestra and organ.—Taylor.

Many music cues list works like "Egyptian Ballet" by Luigini, for Oriental scenes—incidental music of "Lakme" and "Martha"—extracts from "Pearl Fishers," "Suite Algerienne," "Midnight at Sedan," and "Scenes Alsaciennes" by Massenet, for scenes of one, two, or even three minutes length. The prices of every one of these compositions for orchestra range from $3.00 to $10, and are obtainable in arrangements which are absolutely unsuitable for an orchestral combination below 12 men.

I again say that I have always made it a point to repeat on my music cues, and make them read as follows: "Dramatic Tension" by Andin, "Agitato" by Minot, etc. If a musician thinks that "Ride of Valkuere," extracts from Massenet's "Herodias," or the Storm Scene from "Peer Gynt" are more suitable for hurries or agitatos, let him use them. But, however, my cue sheet may be, through my consant duplication I have at least accomplished one thing, and that is a musician can determine the musical character of the picture by just glancing through the cue sheet.

Most musical directors who suggest how to compile a music cue sheet overlook one item, to my mind of vital importance. They form their ideas within the boundaries of their libraries and musical knowledge, where as I have to contend with thousands of varieties of musical education, and last but not least, the ability of the performing musician.

A music cue sheet distributed by film companies should suggest numbers notably published for every conceivable instrument, but also numbers that can be bought at prices not beyond the means of the "every day musician."

If musicians with more extensive libraries, greater musical knowledge and ideas of their own do not wish to use the numbers I suggest, they are liberty to substitute. At any rate, from the majority of comments I receive I am able to say that the musical composition I mention are known. I do not profess that my music cue sheets are perfect or the best, and I respectfully invite constructive criticism like that of Mr. Isaacson's, Mr. Charlton's, and Mr. Shakeley's, but I would appreciate and believe it would be advantageous to the cause if my worthy critics would take into consideration the various obstacles under which I have to labor, and the fact that I have to please a million different musical temperaments.

I AM AT YOUR SERVICE AND "ALL EARS."

M. WINKLER.

Your letter of the 14th received together with a copy of the Constitution of the association.

Knowing as I do that this movement is of great momentum to the industry, I can surely find no objection to placing my name on the list as a candidate for the Board of Directors and will hold myself ready at all times to do what is within my power for the organization.

With best wishes for the continued success of this movement, I am, very truly,

ERNST LUZ,
General Musical Director,
Loew's, Inc.,
N. Y. C.

A. M. P. M. I.:

With great pleasure I noticed that my name was submitted to the committee, for candidacy of the Board of Directors.

The benefit which I derived from our convention at the Hotel Astor last January was certainly tremendous. It has been a most wonderful inspiration for further efforts of raising the standard of music especially here in the South. I therefore will not only accept your kind invitation to serve on the board with greatest pleasure, but will consider it an honor to be able to serve, if elected.

I shall continue my work with heart and soul, just as I have done since I left New York. Our prospects for the future now look good. Not only our own company, but many others are building new houses. We are marching straight ahead and hope in short time to equal the high standard that has been set, especially in the East.

Assuring you of my heartiest cooperation, I am,
Sincerely,
FRED STARK,
Musical Director,
Superba Theatre,
Raleigh, N. C.

Mr. I:

Many thanks for putting me on to the various publishers of light music.

It is with great pleasure that I read your article on Picture Music in the Motion Picture News, and I herein enclose $2.00 for membership in the Association.

Faithfully,

British Columbia Theatres

Optimistic theatre building news comes this week from British Columbia, where a number of houses are under construction or are about to be built. The Capital theatre in Victoria, B. C., is practically ready and the Fraser theatre in South Vancouver is well under way under the direction of Mr. J. Young. Thomas Shields, of Grandview, has arranged to start the erection of a new moving picture theatre in that place at once, plans having been drawn for the building. The Powell River Company has decided to build a second large theatre at Powell River, B. C., for their employes and other residents of the district.

Kamloops, B. C., only has one theatre at present and a large theatre company has examined the field with a view to building a second house. Marcus Loew has decided to invade Vancouver as well.

A new theatre will be built at Brownsville, Texas, in the near future.

Open Negro House

Guy M. Shriner, owner of the Gem theatre, Kansas City, and J. M. Kopulos have opened the Princes theatre at Third and Parallel streets, Kansas City, Kan., which is a modern fireproof structure catering to negro patronage.—TRUE.

The Blackmore has purchased and is rebuilding the old Harrison Opera House, at Harrison, Ark., and will reopen for business in the near future. The new Liberty Theatre, on East Main Street, Oklahoma City, was opened for business last Saturday. The new theatre seats about 300, and is strictly modern and up-to-date in every particular.

R. T. McGibben has started rebuilding the Capital theatre, at Newport, Ark., which was destroyed by fire recently, and will reopen at an early date.

"THE GOLEM"
(Paramount)

A Distinct Credit to the Screen

THE latest picture to come from Germany is certain of leaving its impressions as a work decidedly artistic and novel. Indeed it would not be a misstatement to declare it one of the few distinctive subjects of the screen, particularly in respect to its production and the manner in which it grips the spectator. Paul Wegener, the director, has taken the most famous Jewish legend and has fashioned it into a weirdly fascinating work of art. The mediaeval atmosphere of his settings is remarkably impressive and certainly provides an eerie touch to the uncanny tale, thereby giving it an unearthly aspect quite in harmony with the idea.

"The Golem" is as expressionistic as "Dr. Caligari" in regard to its fantastic design. A legitimate modern handling of its backgrounds would not have been appropriate. Instead, space is vivified and the uncanny plot is marvelously emphasized. The twisted streets, the topsy-turvy steeples and towers, the wierd passage-ways of the Ghetto—these are completely fascinating and bring a mystic touch to the fantastic story. It does not matter much if there are scenes which show a lack of direction. A weird pattern would be out of harmony if perfectly produced. Certainly the picture, seemingly, takes one through a fairy, Old World atmosphere and leaves an ineradicable impression.

Wegener deserves double credit for he also plays the title role and makes it an unforgettable figure. He is the stone image brought to life, yet he never for an instant makes you believe that he is human. Like a huge automaton, his step is measured and his manner of locomotion indicates that he is subservient to the will of a superior mind. It is a Frankenstein-like creation. Wegener is the only figure featured in the production, but his assistants in the interpretation deserve mention for making their roles realistic.

The story goes back to the seventeenth century when Rudolph of Hapsburg persecuted the Jews in the city of Prague. The introductory chapters are given up to this persecution which shows the king banishing the oppressed people to the Ghetto. Desperate over the dark outlook for his race, a rabbi-astrologer seeks an opportunity to deliver them from persecution. The stars advise him to make a stone image of the king which, with the mystic word placed in a receptacle in its chest, will come to life and become his obedient servant. The clay monster, like the Frankenstein creation, develops a contrary streak and raises havoc with the Ghetto, although he is instrumental in delivering the Jewish people through inspiring fear and superstition among the oppressors. One follows his perigrinations with the greatest suspense. He forces the gates of the Ghetto, picks up a Christian child who takes the star from its receptacle and turns to clay as a result. However, he has served his mission. The picture should merit the utmost appreciation.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

The Golem.....Paul Wegener
Other characters..Rudolph of Hapsburg, Rabbi Loew, the Rabbi's Daughter, and hundreds of lesser figures.

Directed by Paul Wegener.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

One of the most distinctive photoplays which ever graced the screen is announced as the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The picture was made in Germany, produced by Paul Wegener, who is identified with the Max Reinhardt school, and is in the same meritorious class as "Deception." "The Golem" is based upon a famous Jewish legend of the seventeenth century and has for its background the city of Prague. The Jews of that ancient Bohemian city were victims of persecution and were banished to the Ghetto under threat of being expelled from the land.

Proving that necessity is the mother of invention, Rabbi Loew, a famous astrologer, communicated with the stars in order to find relief for his sorely oppressed people. He found in the heavens a sign which advised him to fashion a clay image of the king which given the mystic word would come to life and avenge the Jews. The figure was known as the Golem. It is a picture which grips through its novel action and the weirdly fascinating composition of its sets. It is also wonderfully acted.

PROGRAM READER

Manager ———— takes great pleasure in announcing that "The Golem" will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— for a limited engagement. This picture is certain to arouse great interest because of its novel theme and impressive settings. It is a picture which carries suspense and tense action and is far above the ordinary play in its original idea and characterization. The patrons of the ———— theatre are certain to find it vastly entertaining. They are assured of a goodly number of thrills as well as dramatic scenes. "The Golem" is portrayed by a European cast. See it. It is the most talked of picture of the screen.

SUGGESTIONS

This is the latest German picture to reach the American screen. If you are sure of your audience you can feature its source. Otherwise play it up as a distinctive and most impressive European novelty. Play up its novel theme and settings. Tell them that the picture is certainly something DIFFERENT. Play up that the spectator is in for a big surprise. If you have a Jewish population you are assured of a good attendance from that quarter. Use a prologue of old world atmosphere. Have a quartet sing the famous "Eli, Eli," the popular Jewish hymn. Get hold of a print of the city of Prague if possible. You can stage a scene similar to one of the introductory scenes in the picture.

CATCH LINES

See "The Golem," the most distinctive picture of the screen.

An unforgettable picture is "The Golem." Don't miss it.

"WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY"
(Associated Exhibitors-Pathe)

Famous Kipling Story Presented in Fine Atmosphere

THE third of Rudyard Kipling's stories to come to the screen is "Without Benefit of Clergy," a most vivid and colorful character sketch of life in India, "Naulahka" and "The Light That Failed" having been done some years ago. The story concerns a young Englishman who takes unto himself, without benefit of clergy, a Hindu maiden, with whom he lives over a period of some years. A son is born, but dies at the age of six or so years. The girl also succumbs to cholera. The man lives to mourn his double loss.

Into the tale were woven a multitude of little details concerning India, its people, customs, superstitions and traditions. It was told as only Kipling can describe India, with plot as it is ordinarily accepted for dramatic purposes, almost nil.

Thus it was that the determination to make a picture from the story presented definite difficulties. To succeed it must be Kipling depicted in celluloid, and to this end Randolph Lewis journeyed to England to write the scenario in collaboration with the author. This task completed Mr. Lewis jumped to California, the Brunton studios, Los Angeles, to represent Mr. Kipling in the filming.

The finished picture shows the wisdom of the plan. "Without Benefit of Clergy" in pictures is "Without Benefit of Clergy" as it was written, with the exception of a Hindu marrige ceremony added in the film version. All the little detail, the atmosphere of the East, the manners and customs of the people, which only a Kipling could relate, is to be found in the production. It violates a good many principles of constructing a screen story but sticks to the original as few pictures adapted from published works have done. It is Kipling transferred to the screen.

In acting honors Virginia Brown Faire is presented with and accepts the greatest opportunities. She is a fine type for the role and makes a pretty and appealing heroine. Thomas Holding is the Englisbman and his performance is adequate for the role. Others in the cast who give splendid characterziations are Evelyn Selbie and Boris Karloff.

Three children are used to portray the role of the son at different ages. They appear in sequences that are very entertaining. As the son at about five, Phillipe De Lacey performs with the skill of a veteran.

The picture is extremely well lighted, the settings are in keeping with the story and the general atmosphere of the production above reproach.—Length, 5.200 feet.—J. S. Dickerson.

Directed by James Young. Adapted from Rudyard Kipling's short story of the same name by Mr. Kipling and Randolph Lewis. Filmed under the supervision of Mr. Lewis for Mr. Kipling.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Without Benefit of Clergy," perhaps the most famous of Rudyard Kipling's many short stories, has been adapted to pictures and will be the feature offering at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The picture has been produced with the greatest of care in order that the things that Kipling knows of India may be brought to the screen. Randolph Lewis journeyed to England and spent weeks in collaboration with the author in preparing the scenario and then acted as the personal representative of Mr. Kipling during the filming of the picture. The result is "Without Benefit of Clergy" as it was in fiction, Kipling at his best with all the detail, little touches and atmosphere of the East, that have placed this writer in a class by himself. The production was directed by James Young and is filmed in six reels. In the cast are such well known players as Thomas Holding, Herbert Prior, Virginia Brown Faire and Nigel De Brulier. Magnificent sets that reproduce the actual streets and buildings of the locale of the picture have been provided. "Without Benefit of Clergy" is one of the big pictures of the year. It will be a delight to those who love Kipling's writings and prove a satisfactory film attraction to the fan who cares not who the author of a picture is so long as it is good entertainment.

PROGRAM READER

Rudyard Kipling and his famous short story, "Without Benefit of Clergy," have come to the screen with all beauty and atmosphere of the original. The picture, adapted from Mr. Kipling's most popular character sketch has been booked for showing at the ———— theatre for a ———— day engagement beginning ————, where it promises to be hailed as one of the really great attractions of the season.

In its production, a new plan of procedure has been tried out and proven a success. Mr. Kipling himself prepared the scenario assisted by Randolph Lewis, noted continuity expert who journeyed to England to collaborate with the author. Not a scene which was used in the filming but that had the okay of the man who knows India as no other writer. The most minute details were discussed and planned before ever a bit of the picture was enacted. The result has been a production that is Kipling's own work, as correct and true to life, as was the original.

The all star cast, selected from many players in order to obtain the correct types, is headed by Virginia Brown Faire and Thomas Holding. Such other well known players as Herbert Prior, Nigel de Brulier and Ruth Sinclair, who have prominent parts.

The feature is in six reels and was directed by James Yourg, who has many great successes to his credit.

"APPEARANCES"
(Paramount)

Tedious Drama Lacks Vitality

THE third Paramount picture made in England will hardly come up to the scratch as a subject likely to stimulate interest. In the first place it is founded upon an exceedingly obvious formula, and in the second place it lacks action and incident. With nothing substantial to work with the players are up against it to create any moving scenes. The title gives away the plot, with the result that the spectator has nothing to do hut wait for the anticipated climax. During the unfolding of the story the action is punctuated with captions of a preachy character—which of course is another fault of the picture.

The author has not flashed any originality in his showing up the consequences of living heyond one's income. The idea has spelled some interest when it has been used as the framework of a triangle. But "Appearances" is not even fortified with dramatic conflict. A good many pictures have been shown last year based upon a similar idea, hut the majority have proved entertaining because the authors have not invited attention to the main argument. By concentrating upon it here to the exclusion of moving incident the sponsor has revealed its shortcomings as a suhject calculated to entertain over five reels. The director certainly had opportunities to display some English exteriors—exteriors which are in a class by themselves in providing atmosphere. But be remained pretty close to the studio. He must have realized the lack of substance because the players are allowed to stress facial pantomime as if to make up for the lack of situation and climax.

David Powell, heretofore an actor with a gift of poise and repression, seems a different person entirely. He gesticulates and uses facial expressions constantly. It must be said that he is nearly overwhelmed with an impossihle role—a role written around a caddish husband who becomes a common scold before the second reel is finished. He plays the stock market and loses, while his wife entertains lavishly. The breakfast scene and others which show the husband and wife together present a continual battle of words. She is ever pushing unpaid hills in front of his plate. There is a faint dramatic note caught in the friendship offered her by a former employer—a man who steps into the breach and saves the house from falling to pieces. He is rewarded up to the final scene with reprimands from the husband, who in a most despicable manner is accusing the wife of compromising herself. He does not extract any sympathy and does not deserve any. There is a great deal of standing about which is balanced with entrance and exit scenes. The sets are in good taste, and the players do as well as possible with their limited opportunities.—Length, 5 reels. —Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Herbert Seaton, an architect.....David Powell
Kitty Mitchell, a secretary.....Mary Glynne
Sir William Rutherford.....Langhorne Burton
Lady Rutherford.....Mary Dibley
Agnes, Kitty's sister.....Marjorie Hume
Dawkins, a promoter.....Percy Standing

By Edward Knoblock.
Scenario by Margaret Turnbull.
Directed by Donald Crisp.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The third Paramount picture made in England, "Appearances," is from the pen of Edward Knoblock, one of the most talented writers for screen and stage, and it has been directed by Donald Crisp. A splendid cast of players headed by David Powell and including several London favorites, among whom are Mary Glynne, Langhorne Burton and Percy Standing, interpret this dramatic picture which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————.

The story deals with the struggles of a reckless young architect to keep up appearances beyond his income. His attempts to advertise his growing success by means of increasing extravagance, is intended to typify the present day struggle for existence of the "middle" and professional classes. While entertaining spectators the story conveys a sound wholesome moral that cannot fail to prove beneficial. The players acquit themselves creditably in their respective roles.

PROGRAM READER

If you are an admirer of England, its scenery, its architecture, its literature and its actors, you will be interested in "Appearances," which will be on view at the ———— theatre next ————. The picture was adapted from a story by Edward Knoblock, a famous playwright, and was made in England. The cast is composed of many British players among them being the pretty and talented Mary Glynne. David Powell has the principal role—that of a young architect who tries to keep up appearances, though living beyond his income. The picture is punctuated with many dramatic moments and it offers capital entertainment. Furthermore it teaches a moral. Remember next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

There is enough argument behind this idea to make something of in your copy. Most everyone who belongs to the great "middle" class has lived up to appearances. Which is to say that they live beyond their income to put up a good front. This can be exploited to invite patronage. You can also state that this is the third picture made in England by Paramount. Tell them that Paramount sent one of its best directors, Donald Crisp, and one of the favorite players, David Powell, over there to make the picture. Play up the author, who is recognized as one of the best writers for the screen. Play up the atmosphere and state that the picture offers something new in a scenic way. A Benda mask dance can be used for a prologue.

CATCH LINES

See "Appearances," a picture of present day struggle to present a good front.
Did you ever live beyond you income? Have you ever tried to keep up appearances? See "Appearances" with a celebrated English cast.

"FOOLISH MATRONS"
(Tourneur-Associated Producers)

Three Character Studies Compose Interesting Picture

THE author of Maurice Tourneur's latest picture, "Foolish Matrons," has succeeded in fashioning a story based upon three distinct character studies, the theme of which revolves around the pursuit of love and happiness. It is a story with a decided feminine angle, since the three studies represent a successful actress desirous of finding the right man and marrying him for love, a silly young matron in love with the pursuit of pleasure, and an equally young business woman who marries a poet when he permits her to continue a literary career. Her love is a selfish, mercenary one.

The moral is obvious that love and happiness can only he found through giving up foolish pleasures and selfish ambitions. And when the picture is finished it is the first who is blessed with supreme contentment, the others finding tragedy. Mr. Tourneur has kept his scenes compact and moving, which speaks well for his direction considering the three plots. He never allows the picture to become preachy. It is a tale of New York life—of how the big city conquers the foolish, while those possessing moral stamina are left untouched. The director has punctuated his scenes with flashes of the metropolis, though his cheap hoarding house sequence is overdrawn in types and action.

The silly matron is stage-struck while living in a southern city. She urges her stupid husband to move to New York and its bizarre side conquers her. Entirely unsophisticated, she accepts the advances of the other man in her mad pursuit of pleasure and pays the penalty for playing with fire. Her husband casts her out. It is this story which carries most of the dramatic substance, since it involves a triangle. The plot concerning the actress is exceedingly mild in comparison and does not permit Hobart Bosworth and Kathleen Kirkham much opportunity in the way of emotional expression. The second story does give Doris May her biggest part and she displays exceptional talent in the portrayal of the foolish wife. Charles Meredith in the opposite role is compelled to execute scenes which show up the stupid character of the husband. This man and the third husband are sympathetic drawings.

The author condemns Broadway, but he also condemns women who lack sufficient moral fibre. The third husband becomes a drunken sot and dies in his mother's arms, the wife realizing too late the error of her life. This story is the sentimental flourish in a picture which carries about every element. Mr. Byrne's idea is not new to the screen, but the director has treated it in a way to win attention. Sustained interest is missing through the very character of the picture, since it carries the complications of three separate plots. It possesses considerable local color and good sets and is acted by a well-known and thoroughly competent cast—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

By Donn Byrne.
Scenario by Wyndham Gittens.
Directed by Maurice Tourneur and Clarence G. Brown.
Photographed by Charles Van Enger and K. G. MacLean.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture with a healthy moral—a picture showing three feminine figures, one of whom has the idea that love and happiness may be found in finding the right man and being satisfied, while the other two are guided by a mad search for pleasure and a selfish desire to pursue a business career. That is "Foolish Matrons," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as a Maurice Tourneur production, with a cast, including Hobart Bosworth, Doris May, Mildred Manning, Wallace MacDonald, Kathleen Kirkham and Charles Meredith.

Donn Byrne, the author, has shown that love and happiness cannot be found until one has given up selfish instincts. One couple find it by leaving the big city; another encounters tragedy because the wife is conquered by the bright lights and forgets her marital vows, while still another meets with a tragic end, the wife realizing too late that mercenary impulses will not mix with sentiment and romance. The picture builds dramatically and offers the utmost in interesting climaxes.

PROGRAM READER

Patrons of the ———— theatre will see in Maurice Tourneur's production, "Foolish Matrons," a picture which shows the folly of trying to link up selfish and vain pursuits with love and happiness. Like oil and water, they cannot mix. It is a dramatic picture which has for its leading figures, three women, one of whom finds love and happiness because she has enough moral stamina to realize that woman's reward is found in the home and children, while the others encounter tragedy because they are unable to give up their selfish desires. The picture is remarkably well acted by a large and competent cast and is interesting throughout its action. At this theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a dramatic picture showing the tragedy that stalks in the lives of young married couples who are unable to live in harmony because of the selfish desires of the wives. One couple alone finds love and happiness—because these virtues are held above selfish pursuits. You can state that the picture teaches a great lesson.

"STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER"

(Fox)

Average Western, with Jones in a Character Study

THE title of this picture is appealing enough to attract the passer-by and once in his seat he is certain to be interested in the quaint character study interpreted by Buck Jones. If he has been a steady patron of Westerns he will notice that the action develops in a rather slow manner and that the incident cannot be called novel until the thrilling climax. And when he leaves the theatre he is apt to be well satisfied with a picture which carries sure-fire elements.

Jones has an opportunity to flash an interesting portrayal which invites sympathy and appeal. The hero is represented as a peace-loving cowboy who by some queer twist of circumstances is ever fighting. He believes in preparedness in order to bring about peace.. Naturally a good right arm and a quick trigger finger leave their impressions. The forepart of the action discloses Jones knocking Kid McCoy for a goal when the latter becomes unduly pugnacious. The Kid takes to his bed from the injury and the subsequent scene shows his promise to go straight. The sequence is held too long to get over well.

The story is quite episodic here, for the hero jumps from the camp to a settlement called Peaceful Valley—having been attracted by the name. He is surprised to find that the camp is called such, but accepts its contrary character for the same reason that a tall man is usually called "Shorty." The picture swings into its stride at this point and certainly lives up to its title. Jones encounters a group of vicious villains, one of whom is the crooked superintendent of the mine. He knocks him out and is promoted to the job by the eastern capitalist. The action that follows discloses the fight between the good element and the striking miners, with Jones as their leader. The magnate's daughter is kidnaped, and Peaceful has a difficult time restoring order. He accepts the job in his easy, nonchalant manner.

A scene which shows him trying to effect a reconciliation between the Kid and the latter's wife, the cook at the camp, is also held too long. But there is ample compensation in the thrilling climax which presents Jones in a daring rescue act. He is riding in pursuit of a stage-coach. Catching up with it, he leaves the saddle and climbs hand over hand along the axle-tree until he reaches the driver's seat and stops the frightened horses. The stunt is similar to one formerly used in Buffalo Bill's show. The romance does not have much of a chance, but this element is not missed. The picture is punctuated with flashes of humor, especially in regard to the church scene. The atmosphere is good and the acting is up to requirements.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Buck Jones, the popular cowboy star, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in "Straight From the Shoulder," a picture which permits him to show a quaint character study and to flash a generous sample of his dexterous ability in the saddle. It is a western melodrama with the leading figure a peace-loving miner. His friends call him Peaceful, though he seems to have a knack of engaging in fights. He is slow to anger but finishes a fight quickly. His idea is to fight for peace by being always prepared with a good right arm and a quick trigger.

He succeeds through one of his fistic encounters in reforming a miner and leaves for Peaceful Valley—the name having attracted him. He finds the camp anything but living up to its name. The star gets into his element by rescuing the heroine and saving a chest of gold. This he does by some very exceptional riding and sensational work aboard the stage-coach. The picture carries a fast line of action and presents good incident and first class atmosphere and acting. A well balanced cast supports the star.

PROGRAM READER

The western plains, the people and their straightforward ways of doing things are woven into a splendid motion picture of the West entitled "Straight From the Shoulder," featuring the cowboy star, Buck Jones. It is a picture which carries a fine character study, a plot composed of fast moving scenes, some rattling good incident, and a number of thrills calculated to furnish the utmost in suspense. The offering presents Buck Jones as a peacemaker, though a battling one. He uses his fists and his guns to accomplish his pacific purpose. There are several vivid fights revealed, as well as some daring rescue work and hard riding. At the ———— next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

The picture of a two-fisted peacemaker. See Buck Jones in the lively and thrilling play, "Straight From the Shoulder."

He was a man of peace, but to bring this pacific state about he was forced to fight—at times. See Buck Jones in "Straight From the Shoulder."

"THE GREATER PROFIT"

(Robertson-Cole)

No Outstanding Quality to Redeem Out-of-Date Theme

WHATEVER are the entertainment possibilities of this picture, they would have been much greater, had the feature been offered a year or two ago. This is simply because it is a profiteer story, which, while it still remains as an appealing theme, has not the timeliness or the force it had some time past. This story is not presented in any novel fashion and the work of the cast is not exceptional. Therefore it has no outstanding quality of great merit to redeem it, and falls in the class of fair entertainment which will get by with an audience expecting nothing more than an ordinary movie.

Edith Storey, the star, is a capable actress, but there are none of the elements of piquancy, vivacity, or daintiness in her personality. The story is along familiar lines. Maury, a girl of the underworld, is arrested during one of her shoplifting exploits. She is saved from punishment by a wealthy social reformer, who takes the girl into her home and gives her a position in "The Fair-Price Bureau," which is investigating profiteering conditions in the city. The hero is a young captain of the A. E. F. who has just returned from overseas. They have a trivial misunderstanding, and the girl, disconsolate and in despair, goes back to her old habits and robs the safe of her protectress. The papers that she steals prove the husband of the social worker to be a profiteer. He has cornered the egg market by buying in a chain of cold storage plants.

A little physical action is worked in at the end, when an underworld thug pursues the girl. The profiteer is forced to give up his eggs, and the prices drop fifty per cent in no time.

It can be easily seen from the above synopsis that "The Greater Profit" is behind the times. Its entire theme has been deprived of its force by the gradual fall in the cost of living. Neither are handsome young captains of aviation any longer the ideal movie hero. It is also possible that the feminine patrons will notice that the modes and styles are not the very latest. The cast in support of the star is average, with Pell Trenton somewhat moviesque in his bearing and acting. Others are Lloyd Bacon, Willis Marsk and Dorothy Wood. Director William Worthington had kept the story moving and the production is quite up-to-date from a technical standpoint. The exteriors and interiors are not of unusual worth.— Length, 4,200 feet.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An Edith Storey picture, "The Greater Profit," is announced by the ———— theatre as the attraction for ————. It will be run in connection with ———— and ————, making an ideal program for photoplay lovers.

"The Greater Profit" is a drama of today. It takes up and presents some of the most stressing problems of America and offers them in a thoroughly entertaining fashion. Miss Storey, an experienced and accomplished actress with a distinct and winning personality, is cast as a girl of the underworld who is adopted by a wealthy social reformer. In a sincere effort to change her life, the girl finds that it is the food gamblers of the upper strata of society who are the greater thieves. An entertaining romance is woven in with this dramatic story, and it should be the type of picture best suited to the average American lover of the silent drama.

Others in the cast of "The Greater Profit" include Pell Trenton, Willis Marks, Lloyd Bacon, Bobbie Roberts, Ogden Crane, Lillian Rambeau and Dorothy Wood. The picture was directed by William Worthington, who has already won many laurels as a motion picture producer.

PROGRAM READER

Is it environment that makes the man? Or the woman? Maura was a poor girl of the underworld, and there seemed little choice but to follow in the footsteps of her people. So a wealthy society lady decided to adopt her—to raise her, and to cure her of the habits that placed her outside the law. But Maura soon discovered that there were various kinds of crooks. There was the sneak thief, such as she; and there was the bold, hypocritical thief, respected by society, who was stealing in millions by cornering the food market.

"The Greater Profit," which we will show on ———— as the ———— feature picture, is a drama of today which is bound to hold your interest. Edith Storey, a most accomplished screen actress, is the star of this photodrama, and she is assisted by an entirely capable cast, including the well known Pell Trenton, as her leading man. The picture was directed by William Worthington, who has a number of screen successes to his credit.

We will show "The Greater Profit" for ———— days beginning ————. We consider it a worth while photodrama well worth your consideration.

CATCH LINES

The story of two thieves—one a relentless profiteer and the other a girl of the underworld. A gripping drama of today starring Edith Storey.

A story of America today, for Americans of today. Romance, thrills and intense action, making an ideal evening's entertainment.

A story built upon the problems of today. Meant to gain your attention and to hold it throughout. Edith Storey in the leading role.

"SOWING THE WIND"
(Louis B. Mayer-First National)

Moments of Interest in Theatric Story

ONE cannot say that this picture approaches life, so overdrawn is its theme and characterization. While the principal figure and some lesser ones invite sympathy because of the shadows that cross their paths up to the final climax, still one does not feel acutely for them for the simple reason that the development of the plot is not in harmony with the humanities. It is a daring picture, this adaptation from Sydney Grundy's story. It is not new to the screen and a certain producer has even been more courageous in representing a youth falling in love with his own sister. Here the boy is only an adopted son of the family.

"Sowing the Wind" is a photoplay of sharp contrasts—with the line drawn very accurately between the virtuous and vicious characters. The figures identified with virtue suffer all the melodramatic miseries possible before the clouds are chased from their lives. The sinful mother repents and dies and her allotment before her demise is hitter tragedy. While Anita Stewart is the star, Myrtle Stedman and Ralph Lewis carry most of the heavy burden of the plot.

Miss Stewart has had a similar story before. "Paying the Piper" was cut from almost the identical cloth. Here she returns an innocent graduate of a convent to greet a woman who has hidden her identity as mother. The latter has simply represented herself as a guardian. The girl enters her gambling den and is so shocked from appearances that she goes out of her mother's life. At the disposition of the scenario writer or the director, the girl bobs up at the end of a year as a successful actress. The spectator is forced to jump at conclusions over several scenes. The hero is the adopted son of her own father—a man who is painted in despicable colors. No kind of apology at the end can compensate for his hypocritical, intolerant conduct in abusing the girl for stealing the boy's love. The character is drawn as quite stupid, since he appears to have no information regarding his relatives. When the heroine upbraids him for calling her mother by her vicious nickname, he learns her identity. It is a very simple matter for the author to put kind words into his mouth and make him beg forgiveness.

The action jumps about considerably and the scenes, as mentioned above, are always sharply contrasted. All the principal figures sow the wind and reap the whirlwind—and many of the sequences are not pleasant to watch. The title writer has decorated many of the captions with stereotyped sob-sister captions. When these appear they discount much of the plot and make it unduly theatric. It is a picture of big sets and many players, though the extras seem too obedient to the will of the director. "Sowing the Wind" carries moments of interest despite its crudities.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A vital, dramatic picture is "Sowing the Wind," adapted from Sydney Grundy's story and starring Anita Stewart. The picture will be at the ———— theatre next ————. The star, who has always flashed remarkably clever ability in emotional roles has in the part of Rosamond Athelstane, a study which permits her to eclipse her many fine performances in previous pictures. Miss Stewart plays a convent girl whose mother has carefully hidden her identity—a mother satisfied to be known as a guardian, for the simple reason that her life has been steeped in sin.

The girl is shocked at the manner in which the woman ekes out a livelihood and leaves her. At the end of the year she emerges a successful actress. Paying court at her shrine is the adopted son of her own father, though his identity has also been hidden. It is in a tense dramatic scene that his relationship is disclosed. The lesson he learns is to be more tolerant. The picture is punctuated with good detail and an array of interesting sequences. It has been staged handsomely and acted by a cast that includes Myrtle Stedman, William V. Mong and Ralph Lewis.

PROGRAM READER

She believed her mother dead, and never gave her father a thought. She had been brought up by her mother who represented herself as a guardian because of her sinful life. The girl had been reared in total ignorance of the ways of the world. Her first contact with the life in which her mother lived so shocked her that she decided to make her way alone. How she found solace and contentment—how she met with discouragement, but possessed enough moral stamina to withstand temptation—how she brought a feeling of tolerance and forbearance to others—how she found love and happiness is told in six reels of dramatic action. The picture is "Sowing the Wind" and Anita Stewart is the star. At the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

One of the best angles in the exploitation of this feature is to concentrate upon the title. It can be played up prominently in attractive copy or in teasers. You can take advantage of the old proverb, "Sowing the Wind, Reaping the Whirlwind." Tell that it is an exceptional picture—a powerfully dramatic picture which entertains and teaches a lesson without once becoming a preachment. Play up that Anita Stewart has her biggest acting opportunities here and takes advantage of them. The picture has drawn well throughout the country—has been credited with good attendances—so there is no reason why you can't play it and make money. Bill it as a dramatic play of the cross currents of life—of shadows and sunshine. Play up the cast.

"DON'T CALL ME LITTLE GIRL"
(Realart)

Pleasing Little Picture Furnishes Ideal Role for Star

THIS picture takes Mary Miles Minter back to the type of story which made her a star. Which is to say that it is light in plot and perfectly obvious in action. And its characters belong to the sure-fire school of screen expression. "Don't Call Me Little Girl" is adapted from Catherine Chisholm Cushing's play, "Jerry," and the figure might be called a first cousin of Pollyanna. The offering may be characterized as mild, though thoroughly pleasing entertainment. The note of wholesomeness is dominant from inception to conclusion. It is not Miss Minter's task to radiate happiness but to stir up mischief after the style of the irrepressible flapper. Thus it gets away from the saccharine and sentimental treatment.

The star makes her appearance in a hoydenish scene which shows her running away from mother at the station and stealing the hero's motor car. It is perfectly obvious that after the mild complications are swept aside she will capitulate to his advances, though for the sake of providing her with pep and personality, the author compels her to display modern feminine whims by leading him to the altar. The plot concerns stealing him away from an old-fashioned maiden aunt whose wedding has been postponed ten years. The heroine became petulant everytime she is called "little girl" and defies her mother and aunt on every occasion. Her style of dress and deportment is ultra-modern and the manner in which Miss Minter interprets the character will certainly delight the sub-debs.

There is not any substance to the story. Which of course reflects great credit upon Joseph Henebery in making it interesting throughout its five reels. A scene in the dining room is followed by one in the reception room or one in the heroine's boudoir. And there is enough incident to keep it moving. There is quite a flash of humor punctuating the action and the captions are breezy enough to help it along. For contrast a meek and colorless individual is exploited so that the heroine may get the man of her choice, leaving the other to be intrigued into matrimony with the old-fashioned aunt. Thus by acting as a matrimonial agent the girl brings happiness to those who are too meek to search for it themselves, as well as to herself. Miss Minter plays her scenes with graceful ease and Jerome Patrick portrays the youth with acceptable careless abandon. The picture has been adequately staged and spells an entertainment which is sure-fire with seven persons out of ten.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A story of an ultra-modern girl, who defied her mother and her various relatives and who detested being called "little girl" because it brought her humiliation, is "Don't Call Me Little Girl," adapted from Catherine Chisholm Cushing's successful play, "Jerry." The picture is the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— with Mary Miles Minter, the charming and talented Realart star.

Jerry was due at the station from school. Her mother went down to meet her and was shocked at her modern style of dress. To provoke her Jerry stole a certain young man's auto and went for a spin. When the youth recovered the car he found himself falling in love. Jerry discovered that he was engaged to her old-fashioned aunt, and she was determined to win him for a husband. How she does it is told in five reels of charming scenes and pleasing incident. The maiden aunt renews a love affair with a meek admirer, and Jerry is instrumental in bringing them to the altar as well. The picture is well adapted and directed.

PROGRAM READER

She detested being called "little girl." She was grown up and dressed in the latest modes, and to prove that she had matured she deliberately set a matrimonial trap for the man of her choice—a man hopelessly engaged to her maiden aunt. The girl was thoroughly alive and delighted in cutting up capers. How she outwitted her aunt and made amends by intriguing a meek admirer into matrimony—how she proved that she was a young woman equipped with good common sense is told in five reels of delightful comedy-romance. "Don't Call Me Little Girl" is adapted from the play "Jerry," and will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— with Mary Miles Minter as the star.

SUGGESTIONS

You can feature the fact that this is an adaptation of the successful Broadway play "Jerry," by Catherine Chisholm Cushing. If this prominent playwright's name means anything to your crowd by all means play her up. Also concentrate upon the fact that Mary Miles Minter returns to her first love—the type of story which made her a popular star. Play up that it is an excellent hot weather attraction—that it is charmingly told and acted. Play up Jerome Patrick's name. He is very popular with the feminine sex. Get after the flapper patronage. Play up the title too. Feature some light dancing number or a soprano number for a prologue.

CATCH LINES

She detested being called "little girl." How could she ever hope to win a husband if they persisted in calling attention to her age? See Mary Miles Minter in "Don't Call Me Little Girl."

"GOD'S COUNTRY

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE LAW" is a vigorous story of primitive men and stout hearted, beautiful women---of red blooded adventure, surprise and suspense, mystery and thrills, staged in that great outdoor play ground of the gods--the North woods.

It is a gem of the genius of JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD. A born thriller, it travels breathlessly along. It is studded with smashing incident that keeps the suspense and anticipation on edge until the unexpected climax smites you. Made in the heart of the Maine woods, the greatest outdoor spot on the American continent, it has a background in deep rich colors and splendid hues that breathes the breath of life into it.

Men!

In motion pictures men are as important as the pictures they sell to the nation's theatre-owners. We have placed out in the twenty odd exchange centres of the industry the kind of men you encounter in banks and the greater industrial organizations of the country. We haven't an average or common garden variety of "film man" in our entire organization and we don't expect to have any.

It is worth a thousand times the money we spend to advertise the character of the men selected by us as our face-to-face representatives with the exhibitors of the country. We have sent our men, without introduction or explanation, in to meet the bankers with whom we do business in our exchange centres and in every instance careful and observing bankers have written: "Your manager is a fine type of man."

Eugene Roth telegraphs from San Francisco, saying: "Your manager is very popular in this territory and a hundred per cent. square shooter." Hundreds of exhibitors writing or telegraphing "Good luck" have wound up by saying: "you'll have it here because of the man you have chosen in this territory."

Pictures are important and we will have good ones and big ones. But, even ahead of everything else, this organization is built and founded on men—strong, honest, powerful men who are proud and not ashamed of the business they are in; proud of the firm they work for; proud of the directors and producers whose pictures they sell; proud of the customers to whom they sell and proud of their own standing, as men, in the various territories.

"WOMEN WHO WAIT"

It is One of the Big Human Stories

There are strong men of the fishing smacks and rugged characters of the Life Saving Service.

There are women who wait for the breaking of the storm and there is THE WOMAN who waited for the man she loved.

There are the clashing elements of Love, Jealousy, and Hate. There is the soft beauty of the character of good men and good women.

That is why this picture of the folk who live by the sea is an outstanding story that will impress any audience.

Some took the butterfly girl seriously, and she even became serious herself.

Big eyes and a baby stare, and a feeling that was almost too serious for a BUTTERFLY.

Some she caught smiling. The come-hither glance was her specialty. Her smile was for present company but her eyes were on the other girl's fellow.

Sometimes she liked to show how much she knew about business. It was thrilling to see how a man responded when he saw that you knew all about his affairs—even the telephone numbers on his desk.

But once in a while something happens to the BUTTERFLY. This one was touched by the poverty, and the quaint soul beauty of poor children. So the butterfly stuff proved only the froth—she was really a wonderful girl.

Screen Opinions

For your splendid reviews on my latest production

"The Journey's End"

For months I searched for a story or a plot which was in itself different and I found it in "Ave Maria" written by a Dominican Nun who, herself, had been a witness to part of the great drama which she had unfolded.

The story was so clear and so logical that I conceived the idea of telling it on the screen by action rather than by words—making the first serious drama without a single sub-title that was ever produced.

Why We Should Have Exhibitors Support

THE R-C Pictures Corporation (Robertson-Cole) are foremost of the independent motion picture producers and distributors. The organization neither owns nor controls any theatre. It is not an exhibitor and has no financial interest in any exhibiting unit or organization. Although only two years old as a producing company, there are now available to Exhibitors 102 photoplays, including dramas, comedy dramas, comedies and such notable successes and productions as Otis Skinner's "Kismet;" series of pictures with Pauline Frederick; series of pictures with Sessue Hayakawa; Georges Carpentier in "The Wonder Man;" George Beban in "One Man in a Million;" Max Linder in "7 Years Bad Luck;" William Christy Cabanne and L. J. Gasnier specials including a score or more of equally notable screen successes.

AT LEAST 26 NEW PICTURES THIS YEAR

OUR Hollywood studios, considered the most complete and up-to-date in existence, will produce at least a minimum of twenty-six pictures for distribution during the next 12 months. These will include unusual motion picture features, a series with Pauline Frederick, a series with Sessue Hayakawa, and a directors' series by William Christy Cabanne, L. J. Gasnier and other equally known directors. Negotiations are pending for new stars and directors. All departments have been strengthened and we will give exhibitors the best product obtainable in photoplays.

EXHIBITORS CAN MAKE POSSIBLE MORE, BIGGER AND BETTER PICTURES

WE are concentrating on the most advanced and serviceable methods of service to exhibitors, to provide methods by which they can attract larger patronage to their theatres when they show R-C Pictures; and to aid them in building larger permanent patronage.

It is only by booking the output of such independent producers and distributors as R-C Pictures Corporation that increased production, bigger and better pictures for your patrons can be made possible —productions that can be booked at reasonable rental, backed by advertising, publicity and exploitation, insuring adequate box-office receipts.

R-C Pictures, adequately advertised and exploited and properly presented will make your theatre the most popular place of entertainment and amusement in your community.

Read England's Greatest Motion Picture Weekly on

"The Inside of the Cup"

No motion picture has ever received such a review in the Kinematograph Weekly, Great Britain's leading motion picture trade paper, as "The Inside of the Cup."

This ultra-conservative publication heaps unprecedented praise on this screen classic. The review is too long to publish in full here. Read these extracts from it:

"It is exceedingly difficult to write about this Cosmopolitan Production without indulging in what may appear to those who have not seen it as indiscriminate praise.

"It is of sufficient heart interest to hold one enthralled throughout.

"The story itself is a brilliant analysis of certain aspects of human nature, and is a scathing indictment of the hypocrisy of much professed religion, as well as an excellent study of the brotherhood of humanity. Indignation and pathos are the two emotions that are stirred by the exquisite artistry of the players.

Points of Appeal:

"Dramatic moments (which are well balanced with pathos) are cleverly developed. The vivid light that the screen throws on the self-righteousness of pious humbugs strikes quite a new line in the photoplay art.

"The strength of the story plus the excellent work of the cast are the predominating virtues.

Acting:

"This is truly an all-star cast. Every member has been carefully chosen and provides a performance without blemish. The 'pillars' are ideal types, while Garvin and Eldon Parr evidence histrionic ability of the highest order.

Production:

"All the technical properties are at a high level, and the producer reveals himself as an artist of no mean order. The interior scenes in the church are among the best that the screen has yet held, while the producer has manifested an artistic ability to hold out the 'vox humana' stop to the psychological moment; the heart strings are gripped, but the tension is never maintained a second too long.

Photography:

"The admirable quality of this is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that so many of the scenes were interiors of a church. This test has been negotiated with marked success and is but an index to the general excellence of the cameraman's work.

Suitability:

"Every kinema will be the richer (in all senses) for showing this. In view of its intrinsic worth we feel compelled to say that our country cannot afford to wait a year for this to be released."

Play up the divorce problem in this picture. It will bring them in.

Think of it—on its pre-release showing, this timely divorce-problem picture drew $24,961.20 in one week in one theatre, the Rialto, New York.

Last week the management of the Keith-Proctor-Moss New York chain of nine high-priced reserved-seat vaudeville and picture houses staged a Cosmopolitan Production Week, playing "The Wild Goose."

And now that it has been advertised and talked about from ocean to ocean, "The Wild Goose" is a better bet than ever.

Play A Picture Now That Will Bring Them In

"The Woman God Changed" is a genuine money-getting hit. Here is its New York City record up to now.

1st week—Opened at the Rivoli, New York, and ran throughout a straight week of hot summer weather—a week that closed the doors of a dozen theatres—the worst week on Broadway in many years. Drew $19,349.85 and columns of unadulterated praise from the reviewers.

2nd week—Played by Hugo Riesenfeld the second week at his Rialto. Every day this week was clear and hot also. Drew $19,729.40.

3rd week—Moved to Keith-Proctor-Moss kingpin reserved-seat picture and vaudeville house, the Broadway. Drew capacity.

4th week—Held over a second week—the first picture ever played more than one week at Moss' Broadway—a house that has spent thousands of dollars advertising an entire change of program every Monday.

5th week—Held over still another week at the Broadway, amazing everyone in the motion picture industry. The Keith-Proctor-Moss office states it drew rings around every picture on Broadway. It's phenomenal earnings led the Keith-Proctor-Moss management to put on a Cosmopolitan Production Week, using this hit. Played nine big New York theatres and got the money three shows a day.

Played to tremendous business in the Mark Strand, Brooklyn's wonderful 3000-seat theatre—a First National house.

Now playing at Grauman's Rialto, Los Angeles, to sensational profits. Starts fourth week, July 3d, the longest run in that house since "The Inside of the Cup" played there. Running in other first-run houses throughout the country, getting the big money everywhere.

Why toss money away playing "dead ones" when you can play this sure-fire certain live one.

VOL. XXIV JULY 9, 1921 No. III

Fight Versus Fat

¶ "1921 Is a Fighting Year!"

The above sign, in large black type, appeared suddenly one morning early in the year on the walls of every department in the plant of a big newspaper in this country.

It caught the eye of every individual member of the large force—editors, reporters, artists, department heads, compositors, pressmen, engravers, advertising men, promotion men, bookkeepers, clerks, office boys.

It caught the eye only at first, and after a while it got at least a few people thinking.

It was a message chock-full of meaning. It came from the head of the institution.

Bluntly, it was an appeal to American spirit and manhood.

Subtly, it said something like this: you are workers but you are not working. You have been through a great world upheaval. A scarcity of men has made the job seek you. The job has held you instead of you holding the job. You have got high wages and indulged yourself. Fat has got into your liver, your muscles, your brain——

And, briefly, no institution in the world can stand on fat, can progress with sluggishness. No game can be won with dullness. The slacker is not wanted by his country, his firm, his home, himself.

The old and regular war of human endeavor is on again. Wake up!

It's time to fight!

Perhaps only a few brains got the message at first: but competition is the spur of work; and a few sharp elbows and enlivened wits here and there poked up into the mass; and pretty soon there was a new hum throughout the plant.

In a month's time a new placard replaced the old one.

And it read:

"1921 Will Reward the Fighter!"

That message got home. It was an appeal to individual ambition. It promised a reward for industry. And it was the truth—as every man with an ounce of brains knows right well.

And the hum of industry grew; or rather the spots of industry increased throughout the force—until, recently, the words "will reward" were crossed out with red ink and the sign now reads:

"1921 Is Rewarding the Fighter!"

And again it tells the truth. And every one in the plant now knows it. The slacker, the growler, the salary-grafter, the fathead, are gone and the man on the job, the man who is using the brains and muscle that God gave him, the man who isn't afraid or too lazy to fight, is winning 1921's reward.

These slogans apply to every single individual and business in the country today. The man or the firm that is fighting is winning out—everywhere and in every instance and often against the toughest odds. That's a fact! There is no question about it. The man or the firm too lazy to work as they formerly worked, is simply using and talking "hard times" as an alibi for "laying down."

This is a fighter's market!

There isn't a truer thing to be said about the film business today.

The exhibitor on the job is winning out. He's got sense enough to know what the war did for him and what he must now do for himself. He has fried the fat out of his business. The public is buying his goods—not recklessly as they did, but steady, nevertheless, because he is selecting for the public in the same spirit and with the care with which the public itself now selects.

The theatres of the country need pictures—good pictures and plenty of them—as never before in the history of the business. They've got to have them.

And they will be supplied—by the fighting firms.

Money is hard to get; huge investments are required; overhead has got to be cut; useless or wasteful equipment has got to be mercilessly scrapped: and above all there's a need for men, employees, who are not mere check-grabbers. But pictures will be supplied——

Because this is a fighter's market, and because it is worth fighting for.

1921 Is Rewarding the Fighter!

Sydney Cohen Again Chosen to Lead National Exhibition Body

Convention that Breaks Records for Attendance and Serious Work Votes President Annual Salary of $25,000

THE possibility of an Exhibitor-Distributing Corporation being formed to buck the so-called "Trust," stands forth as the most important move made at the second annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, adjourned June 29, in Minneapolis.

The final decision of the body left this proposition in the hands of a committeee of five, which will report to the executive committee of the M. P. T. O.

As had been expected, Sydney S. Cohen, leader of the exhibitor body in the battles of the past year, was re-elected President, at a salary of $25,000 a year.

Washington, D. C., was chosen as the site for the next convention.

While Adolph Zukor, "the Trust" and "Wall Street Interests" occupied the center of the stage much of the three-day convention period, the attacks launched on the big producers and distributors, and the plans to counter with one or another of the suggested plans for exhibitor production and distribution presented, did not receive the undivided support and sanction of the delegates.

"A tempest in a tea-pot" was the characterization given by some in the convention of the continuation of the attack on Zukor in connection with the case of Mrs. Dodge of Vermont.

The apparent inability of the delegates to reconcile themselves to any definite platform of action, brought forth some expressions of pessimism from theatre owners. An instance was the remarks of Timothy L. Kearse, of Charlestown, W. Va., large theatre owner in the mountain state, who said: "Exhibitors are today freer to choose whom they shall select their schedule of programs from than they ever were before. Any attempt to harass and hamper the larger producers in the making of better and bigger pictures only tends to set the industry back."

Re-Elected

Sydney S. Cohen, whose efforts for exhibitor organization were rewarded by re-election as president of the M. P. T. O. at a salary of $25,000 a year

On the other hand the suggestions of Benjamin B. Hampton and Lewis J. Selznick, and their outline of the advantages of a co-operative affiliation whereby the exhibitors would also become distributors and producers, made a strong appeal to the delegates.

Frank Rembusch, National Chairman of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, made demand by wire on the M. P. T. O. for payment of a bill for legal services rendered by Myron Sultzberger for the Committee of Seventeen. He not only wired to attorneys, but also to W. H. Linton and Charles O'Reilly.

The convention opening Monday, with the talk of a $5,000,000 fund to be raised to finance production and possibly distribution by the present exhibitor organization, indicated how seriously those in attendance regarded the immediate problems before them.

Sydney S. Cohen in rendering his report on the activities of the M. P. T. O. for the past year, took up practically the entire first session. He, too, arrived with a well crystalized plan in mind to assure the exhibitor protection through adequate independent production. It was his suggestion that a propaganda campaign be instituted through the medium of a new screen weekly to be made and distributed by a Distributors League, whereby the public would be educated to the merits of the independent production.

The $5,000,000 fund suggested would be floated by the exhibitors through their taking up $100 bonds. While this project received considerable attention, it did not lack for opponents, the principal point raised by thoughtful exhibitors, being that by the time the system of production and distribution could be put into effect—possibly two years—many exhibitors would be forced out of business through being cut off from the output of the so-called "trust." Also, it was pointed out, the organization would be back-pedaling on its stand in the Chicago and Cleveland conventions by entering into the distribution and producing field, whereas the body's protest would bar the producer from the exhibition field.

Adolph Zukor spent three hours under fire on Tuesday, before the executive committee of the M. P. T. O. The policy of Famous Players-Lasky was gone over thoroughly, and despite that he again promised that such incidents as the case of Mrs. Pauline Dodge of Morrisville, would not occur again, the attitude of the executive committee was plainly that of men who felt previous pledges had been broken, and that it would be futile to accept reiterations. The entire matter was placed before the convention for decision.

Exhibitors to Consider Gigantic Tie-Up with Independents

Two Million Dollar Distributing Organization Considered After Hampton and Selznick Speak—Zukor Present

Benjamin B. Hampton addressed the convention Tuesday, and urged a League of Independent Distributors and Producers, with a fund of $2,000,000 a year to be raised to encourage such production and distribution.

Considered the most meritorious suggestion made, was that of Lewis J. Selznick, who, addressing the gathering Tuesday, urged centralized distribution of pictures. The President of Selznick Pictures Corp. exhibited his entire willingness to step aside as an exhibitor and to join any organization such as proposed, stating it would mean a saving to the industry of $30,000,000 a year.

"If you tell me," said Selznick, "that 24 or 18 or 10 pictures are all you want from me, that is all I will give you. Such a barometer will help me to control the salaries that are now being paid to actors and actresses and authors. The vexatious problems confronting the exhibitors today must be solved, either by the exhibitor himself, the producer or Wall Street. Wall Street has proven itself unfit. I believe that centralized distribution is the only solution, at least it is the starting point. I would like to see exchanges started in 30 zones which would tell the producer what his output is to be. In this way, and in this way only, the producer and exhibitor would get a square deal. And there would be no waste such as there is now."

Selznick, prior to his Tuesday address, had appeared before the executive committee on Sunday night and outlined his plan, which met with approval.

When the convention was called to order Monday, it was estimated there were over 600 exhibitor delegates present. In addition several hundred other showmen were evident.

Made Plea for Centralized Distribution

Lewis J. Selznick

Competitor of Mrs. Dodge of Vermont in Protest

L. G. EMMONS, owner of the Bijou theatre, Morrisville, Vt., in a letter to the News, requests that it be pointed out to the trade that the theatre of which he is the owner "is owned and conducted as a strictly private and personal enterprise with no outside affiliations whatever." Mr. Emmons's letter continues as follows:

"I am making this statement because of the fact that my competitor, Mrs. Pauline K. Dodge, who recently was the center of a controversy with the Black Syndicate, is still receiving the moral and financial backing of one of the big exhibitors' organizations, and is being practically guaranteed against any loss whatever. In addition, some of the Boston exchanges are supplying this theatre with service entirely gratis.

"This is absolutely unfair competition, and it is my belief that the individual exhibitors when they are aware of the true conditions, will not sanction extending assistance to any one exhibitor to the detriment of the other in a community where there are two privately owned theatrical enterprises."

Hodkinson's Convention Message to Exhibitors

May your councils bring forth a solution of the problems confronting the individual who would be independent in the conduct of his theatre today.

Wisdom must prevail and logic must finally have an inning in this business. It should be self-evident to all that the present duplicating systems of distribution fed with factory-made films are not conducive to quality of product but represent a waste of millions of dollars each year and a drain that no industry can possibly stand.

The partial shutdown in production and the shortage of product which has already made itself felt is ample proof that the old factory system has failed.

The question is, "What will take its place?"

To resolve in a general way to support independent producers simply means switching your support from a large factory to a smaller one. The small factories with their limited output and heavy distribution expense are today in such a weak position that the larger concerns against whom you are now rebelling will make short work of them, breaking them like individual sticks unless they can combine their strength and get on to a sound and economic working basis.

To go from one factory which is powerful and efficient to one that is weak and less efficient is not the solution. The weaker member will get strong by practicing the same abuses as his bigger brother or by making the exhibitor finance his further excesses and mistakes under the guise of franchises or other schemes.

THE ONE AND ONLY ANSWER IS NEUTRAL DISTRIBUTION.

A neutral distributor who has no entangling business alliances and who has no commitments compelling him to discriminate against either faction can command the respect of Exhibitor and Producer alike. Just as you now rebel at putting yourself at the mercy of groups of producers so would the worthy producers hesitate before turning their pictures over to any group of exhibitors for distribution. The neutral distributor's sole function is to select the best product from any source just as you would do it for your own theatre, and the producers feel safe in giving him their best product to distribute because they know they will be equitably dealt with.

Educational Branch Managers to Meet

E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of Educational Films Corporation

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., announces that the first annual convention of branch managers will be held in Chicago on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 18, 19 and 20.

Educational's first fiscal year as a big international distributing organization closes June 30, and the gathering in July will be the first opportunity for many members of this big and rapidly growing institution to become acquainted with their co-workers. The Congress Hotel, on Michigan Boulevard, has been chosen as the meeting place.

Mr. Hammons expects to reach Chicago with the heads of departments and other members of his own office staff on Sunday, July 17,. The managers of the branch exchanges all over the country and a representative from Canada, will be present, and it is possible that the European office in London will send a representative.

One unique feature of the convention will be "Producers' Afternoon." Wednesday afternoon, the last day of the convention, has been set aside for the introduction to the educational department heads and branch managers of producers and their representatives. It is expected that many, if not all, of the producers whose products are released through Educational exchanges, will take advantage of this opportunity to meet personally the branch managers, in order to bring about a closer friendship between the makers of the pictures and the sales organization.

Al Christie, all of whose products are released through by Educational, will be among those present. Mr. Christie is now in New York on the first vacation he has taken since he went into motion picture work thirteen years ago, and will stop off in Chicago on his way back to the Coast to attend the convention.

Among the branch managers who will be in Chicago for this get-together meeting and the cities whose branches they will represent are: J. H. Morgan, Albany, N. Y.; A. C. Bromberg, Atlanta, Ga.; John J. Scully, Boston; W. H. Wagner, Buffalo, N. Y.; I. M. Schwartz, Chicago; Oscar E. Watson, Cincinnati; H. R. Skirboll, Cleveland; Nat Wolf, Dallas, Tex.; E. J. Drucker, Denver; A. F. Winstrom, Des Moines, Ia.; M. H. Starr, Detroit; Carl T. Lieber, Indianapolis; E. C. Rhoden, Kansas City, Mo.; John Noehrn, Kansas City, Mo.; Jules Wolf, Los Angeles; Russel McLean, Louisville, Ky.; H. J. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee, Wis.; Harry Hollander, Minneapolis; B. A. Simon, New Haven, Conn.; G. T. Ames, New York; C. L. Peavey, Omaha, Neb.; C. S. Goodman, Philadelphia; C. A. Lynch, Pittsburgh; George P. Skouras, St. Louis; G. C. Blumenthal, San Francisco; Leon D. Netter, Seattle, Washington and Howard Beaver, Washington, D. C. The Canadian branches will be represented by Louis Rosenfeld.

International Projection Ass'n Elects Officers

The following officers were recently elected by the International Projection Association: Alex Polin, president; Richard E. Weis, vice-president; Albert F. Ross, recording-secretary; William Guth, treasurer and financial secretary; Alesio Romeo, sergt.-at-arms; Robert Curry, Ben A. Friedman, and David Knupp, trustees; and Peter Finelli, member of the board of directors. The I. P. A. headquarters is located at 437 East 145th Street, New York City.

Richmond Exhibitors Back Candidate for Assembly

According to word from Richmond, Va., the exhibitors of that city are openly supporting Miss Mary Bell Perkins as a candidate for the General Assembly because of her courageous stand on the "blue law" movement in the state. It is understood that a motion to support Miss Perkins will be placed before the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association at the next meeting of that body, scheduled for noon of Tuesday, July 6.

Florida Governor Appoints Three to Review Board

The Legislature of Florida passed a censorship bill, which provided that all films shown in the State of Florida should be approved by the National Board of Review, and that three members of the Board should be appointed by the Governor.

Governor Hardee has made the following appointments: C. E. Daffin, who operates the Daffins theatre at Tallahassee, the Capital of Florida; Mrs. L. M. Johnson, of Leesburg, Fla.; and Miss Ruth Rick, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Postal and Customs Conference on in Washington

Several officials of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry left New York on Tuesday, June 28, for Washington, to confer with Postmaster General Will H. Hays and Geo. W. Ashworth, Chief, Division of Customs. In the party were Paul R. Cromelin, Chairman of the Exporters' Division; P. H. Stilson, Chairman of the Transportation Committee and Frederick H. Elliott, Executive Secretary.

The purpose of the conference with Postmaster General Hays is to request certain changes in the Parcel Post Regulations affecting the shipping of film. They will endeavor to have lithographs and printed matter incorporated in the classification of parcel post material in order to secure the advantages of the parcel post rates. They will also seek for permission to ship ordinary motion picture film by International parcel post to foreign countries; to increase parcel post weight limits to 100 pounds in all zones in this country; and to increase postal liability to a maximum of $500.

The National Association representatives will place before the Postmaster General the suggestion of film exchanges of Butte, Mont., that the post office establish a quick-service for parcel post shipments similar to the express shipments.

The conference with the Customs officials relates to the handling and sales of important moving picture films which are not cleared within 48 hours after their arrival in the port of New York.

Arthur Lucas on Governor's Personal Staff

Governor Thos. W. Hardwick, who has been again inaugurated as Governor of Georgia, indicated his cordial regard for the motion picture industry when he appointed Arthur Lucas, Southern manager of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, a member of his personal staff with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. Governor Hardwick is the second Governor of Georgia to so honor Mr. Lucas.

In the selection of the General Inaugural Committee, Democratic State Chairman, W. J. Vereen, named Mr. Lucas a member of the original limited General Committee.

Mr. Lucas is a wheel-horse in Georgia politics, having last year been elected along with Governor Hardwick a delegate at large to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco, and he was also one of Georgia's presidential electors.

World M. P. Co. Creditors Meet This Week

A meeting of the creditors and the stockholders of the World Motion Pictures Corp. was scheduled to have been held at the office of Otterbourg, Steindler and Houston, New York City, on Tuesday of this week, June 28.

Minnesota Exhibitor Wins Anti-Blue Law Victory

Minnesota exhibitors are jubilant with the results achieved thus far in the Blue Law fight being conducted between the village of North Branch and F. E. Powers, proprietor of the new Powers theatre of that place.

A Blue Sunday league was organized by the women of the village, and they have been very active in their efforts to enlist public opinion in their favor.

A year ago the village passed an ordinance prohibiting motion picture shows from operating on Sunday. The ordinance was passed after petitions had been hurriedly circulated one Saturday. Late the same day the authorities notified Mr. Powers he could not run his theatre on the following Sunday or any other Sunday to come. Powers secured an injunction, however, and carried his case to the courts, where the injunction was declared invalid. According to the decision the village had overstepped its powers as they were specified by its state charter.

This decision has been hailed as a victory by exhibitors. Now, however, it has been learned the village will carry the case to the Supreme Court, which gives a new significance to the case for if the former verdict is upheld it will virtually mean the death blow to the Blue laws of the entire state.

The United Theatrical Protective Leagues and the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade have promised their support in fighting the effort to have the decision set aside in the Supreme Court.

Harrisburg Pictures to Be Made "Still Cleaner"

While agreeing the motion pictures shown in Pennsylvania are as clean as anywhere in the nation, as stated recently by Henry Starr Richardson, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, a Harrisburg, Pa. committee has found they should be made still cleaner and that they have "little potentiality for intellectual and spiritual development."

This committee was selected by the local Church Federation at the time when Harrisburg was chosen among twenty-five cities in the United States by the Russell Sage Foundation for a survey of motion picture conditions. The Foundation took up the question of the study of censorship at the request of the Federal Council of Churches.

Data collected by the local committee, according to a report just made indicate that some movie features shown in Harrisburg "incite to dare-deviltry and crime," that some have an influence towards "the making of drunkards" and and that fully one-half of the pictures viewed by the committee were unfavorable to family life.

On the local committee are Mrs. Chester Buck, chairman; A. Ramsey S. Black, Mrs. W. H. Bricker, Mrs. H. Buch, the Rev. A. E. Hangen, J. F. Kob, Mrs. J. F. Kob, and Mrs. P. F. Zimmerman.

Buffalo F.I.L.M. Club Has a Party

The F.I.L.M. Club of Buffalo at their Get-Together Dinner held on June 18th

THE F. I. L. M. Club of Buffalo held a big get-together dinner Saturday, 18, in the Hotel Iroquois, Buffalo. The meeting was attended by over fifty exchange managers and their guests, the salesmen and bookers of the various offices. The meeting was held to outline to the salesmen and bookers the aims, workings and accomplishments of the F. I. L. M. Club, so that they inturn could carry out the message to the exhibitors throughout the territory.

M. A. Chase, president of the club and manager of the Universal office, presided. He opened the meeting by welcoming the guests and outlining briefly what the club is doing and hopes to do in the future. Archie Moses, vice-president and manager of the Select Exchange, followed Mr. Chase with a brief talk on the grievance committee and how it operated. He also gave facts to counteract the impression that the Hoy Reporting Service of New York, which represents the club, is always ready to take a slam at the exhibitor. He showed that out of a large number of recent complaints, over 70 per cent were settled in favor of the exhibitor.

Bob Murphy, secretary and manager of Pioneer; Fred M. Zimmerman, of Nu-Art; Henry W. Kahn, of Metro; W. A. V. Mack, of Pathe, and others also gave short talks. Frank S. Hopkins, special representative for Universal, was present after a year's absence from the city for over a year on account of his health.

It was decided to hold similar conferences every three months. Among the exchange managers present were; M. A. Chase, Universal; A. W. Moses, Select; Henry W. Kahn, Metro; Bob Murphy, Pioneer; W. A. V. Mack, Pathe; Allen Moritz, Famous Players; Fred Zimmerman, Nu-Art; J. G. Fater, Hodkinson; Howard F. Brink, R. C. Pictures Corp.; Clayton Sheehan, Fox; Walter Price, Associated Producers; W. A. Brady, Warren Productions; W. C. Fickeisen, Merit and others. Other famous film men in the photo are: Emmy Dickmon, Nu-Art; Charlie Johnson, Fox; W. Barnett, Fox; "Andy" Sharick, Select; "Hub" Taylor, Associated Producers; Ray Powers, R. C. Pictures Corp.; Basil Brady, Pathe; Al Teschmacher, Pathe; Bill Wittenben, Pathe; Art Young, Nu-Art; Ferguson, Nu-Art; E. E. Weekly, Shea and Markens, Metro.

Fox Film Men to See Fight as Guests of Company

The district managers, branch managers and department heads of the Fox Film Corporation in attendance at the company's annual convention at the Hotel Commodore, New York, threatened last Monday to raise the roof off that stalwart structure following an announcement by President William Fox that all the Fox out-of-town men would see the Dempsey-Carpentier fight on Saturday as guests of the organization. In a subsequent announcement, General Manager Winfield R. Sheehan stated that a steamer had been chartered to convey the Fox delegates from a pier near the Fox plant in West 55th Street, New York, to Jersey City.

New Jersey Exhibitors Convene Next Week

Officials Look for Record-Breaking Convention at Atlantic City, July 6th and 7th

THE attention of the independent theatre owners will be focused next week in Atlantic City, N. J., where the second annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, July 6 and 7.

Representative leaders in all branches of the motion picture industry will be on hand and the first official comment on the business transacted at the National Minneapolis Convention will be heard in Atlantic City, for among those who have been invited are Sidney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Adolph Zukor, of Famous Players; John D. Williams, of First National; Joseph Schenck, of Norma Talmadge Productions, Inc.; Marcus Loew, Senator James J. Walker, Sam Berman and others. Invitations to address the delegates have also been sent to the leading members of the New Jersey Legislature and Congress.

The sessions of the New Jersey exhibitors this year will be strictly business in character, it is declared. New Jersey theatre owners have many important matters to devote their efforts to, and no time will be wasted in taking them up, assert officials of the New Jersey organization. Perhaps most important of these matters is that concerning the consolidation of the Southern and Northern New Jersey organizations. The southern branch has in the past been affiliated with theatre owners of Eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware, but inasmuch as Delaware now has its own organization and the exhibitors in the Philadelphia district have consolidated with the Western Pennsylvania exhibitors into one big State organization, the way is now paved for one organization in New Jersey.

In addition, censorship and the Sunday opening question will have to be taken care of. There are other issues of mutual interest to all the New Jersey exhibitors, and for that reason every theatre owner in that State is urged by exhibitor officials to be on hand. A large number of Eastern delegates to the Minneapolis convention will also attend, it is declared, and it is the hope of the convention officials that these will be welcomed by a record-breaking attendance at the New Jersey sessions.

The convention committee has been exceedingly busy during the past few weeks completing arrangements for the affair. This week the convention secretary, David R. Hochreich, announced that all arrangements had been definitely completed and all is in readiness for the big doings. The first session will be held on Wednesday morning, July 6, when the New Jersey delegates to the Minneapolis convention will submit their report.

All the business sessions will be held on the Garden Pier, one of the show places on the Boardwalk. Headquarters will be established at Hotel Martinique. A special committee to look after the entertainment of the ladies while the men are working has been selected. This committee has arranged a pretentious social program including sight-seeing trips, teas and other features. Following the morning session at which officials of the national organization will speak, a luncheon will be held, followed by another session. Other entertainment features will be the annual banquet and cabaret entertainment at the Palais Royal, a theatre party and the grand ball on the Garden Pier.

Sidney Samuelson, secretary of the M. P. T. O. A. of N. J., declares:

"We are anxious to have a record-breaking turnout for this affair. The convention is one that no independent exhibitor in New Jersey can afford to miss. There are many important problems that must be solved. We must get together as exhibitors in other States have got together. Organization is necessary in New Jersey and we urge every exhibitor in our State to be on hand."

Plan for Establishing Fund Is Proposed

"Motion Picture Day" Would Net Revenue for Industry's Problems and Charity

AT the suggestion of several prominent exhibitors and producers, C. C. Pettijohn has drawn up in concrete form a definite plan for a Motion Picture Day, to be submitted to the industry. Twelve large companies, states Mr. Pettijohn, have already agreed to the proposals. The plan submitted is as follows:

"In order to further the co-operative handling of the industry's problems and do away with the frequent solicitations of relief organizations in motion picture theatres, it is proposed to designate one day each year, to be known as MOTION PICTURE DAY.

"On this day it is proposed to secure funds for the above purposes in the following manner: first, all producers and distributors of motion pictures to furnish gratis their film service to theatres which participate in the plan; second, all exhibitors who receive such free film service to donate fifty per cent of their gross receipts on Motion Picture Day.

"The specific purposes for which such funds will be used are: first, to finance the necessary co-operative work for the protection of the motion picture industry; second, to contribute to worthy charities and humanitarian relief funds, thus avoiding, so far as possible, the solicitations for such purposes in motion picture theatres.

"For the present year, Thursday, August 25th has been designated as Motion Picture Day.

"The organization plan provides for the appointment in each state of a Motion Picture Protective Committee to be composed of twelve members, nine of whom are to be exhibitors and three of whom are to be exchange men, representing participating producing and distributing companies in such state. If it is found desirable in certain states to increase or decrease the size of such state committee, the ratio of exhibitor and exchange representation to remain the same.

"For the purpose of contact and communication, each State Motion Picture Protective Committee to designate a chairman, who will represent the committee in all matters pertaining to Motion Picture Day in that state."

The plan further proposes that the exhibitors make their checks payable to the Motion Picture Protective Committee chairman of their state and send them through the exchange furnishing the picture.

One-third of the funds raised is to be sent to the chairman of Motion Picture Protective Committee in New York and two-thirds are to remain with the Motion Picture Protective Committee of the individual state. All requests for "drives" are to be referred to the Motion Picture Protective Committee.

"News" Chicago Office Moves

The Chicago office of Motion Picture News, L. H. Mason, representative, has been moved to 910 South Michigan avenue, instead of to 845 South Wabash avenue, as was announced in our issue of June 11.

Conklin Resigns

Word was received this week that Frank Conklin has resigned as manager of the Rothacker New York office.

Paramount to Force Production Costs Down 25 Percent

No Time for Unbusinesslike Methods or Abnormal Salaries, States Lasky

"THE day for a complete 'showdown' in the motion picture industry has arrived," declared Jesse L. Lasky, first Vice-President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, on his return to Hollywood from New York City. "Abnormal and exorbitant salaries, needless and wasteful extravagance, so-called 'bankers' hours' and all the various illogical and unbusinesslike methods that have prevailed to a greater, or lesser, degree, in the motion picture business, and for which it has been more or less justly criticised from time to time, must come to an abrupt end. We must regard the present moment as the most critical that the film industry has faced during its existence.

"So far as Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is concerned, and I am satisfied that the same will apply to other leading producing companies. There will be no more extravagances in production, no more abnormal salaries, and employees of the company will be expected to give value received in every department.

"This means longer hours and greater application wherever there has been a tendency to waste time and energy. The present condition is the inevitable outcome of the mistaken assumption on the part of many engaged in the making of pictures that the bonanza period would last indefinitely.

"It is no longer a matter for future discussion and problematical action,—whatever is done must be done now and a concerted effort which promises to save the situation and restore production to a normal basis is now under way. Its success will depend upon the earnest support of every individual and organization concerned in or dependent upon the film industry.

"I mean by this," continued Mr. Lasky, "not mere words, but action, not half-hearted promises but thorough co-operation from those who are associated in organizations such as the directors' and the producers' associations, Screen Writers' Guild, Actors Equity Association and the organizations of cameramen, assistant directors and others.

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is not alone in seeing the necessity and acting upon it. Before I left New York City I had conferences with Richard A. Rowland and Marcus Loew of Metro, Samuel Goldwyn of Goldwyn Pictures, and others. Metro, I am given to understand, is putting into effect a policy of saving in production costs and this will be followed by Goldwyn and others who are making pictures on a large scale.

"While the exhibitors of America face a condition which renders it absolutely imperative that rentals be reduced, it is obvious that this reduction can come only as the result of a complete readjustment in the producing and which will insure a saving of at least 25 per cent., for nothing less, it is conceded, will save the industry at this critical period.

"I feel that this situation concerns Los Angeles more vitally than any other district in the United States, and when I speak of the necessity of support, I include in this the tradesmen and all business and social bodies which have it in their power to help us to effect the necessary saving.

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has closed its Long Island studio, a two million dollar plant, for a period of time, in order to concentrate the productional activity in Hollywood. Bear in mind that this Eastern studio is fully capable of caring for all Paramount pictures and it is obvious that unless our plan for the development of the industry in Los Angeles meets with success, it will be natural to return to the Eastern seaboard.

"First, however, we are going to try out the plan here and I cannot too strongly emphasize what this means to Los Angeles and its environs. Perhaps the best way to make this apparent would be to ask the people of Southern California to consider what it would mean to them, and to business generally, if they were to lose the motion picture industry. However, I have absolute confidence that we will be given the necessary support and upon that confidence is based the action that is to be immediately taken by our company in bringing all its production units in this country to Hollywood.

"Needless to say, this will bring more people than ever before into the motion picture industry here. We will naturally encourage Eastern actors and directors to come here to build up the colony. There will be much work and undoubtedly, the Lasky and Realart studios will be the busiest in the world.

"An important series of improvements at the Lasky and Realart studios are authorized which will embody the expenditure of approximately $200,000 to accommodate the extra units.

"At this particular point," said Mr. Lasky emphatically, "let me impress this fact—that, despite the plan of economy, there will be positively no lessening in the standard of quality for our product.

"I think that I have said enough to prove that it is now largely up to the people of Southern California as well as to the members of the industry, which includes every branch, to give that loyal and efficient support which will enable us to carry out our plans as I have briefly outlined them."

Conforming to the policy outlined above by Mr. Lasky, it is stated that daily meetings are to be held at the Lasky studio by the executives, including Mr. Lasky, Charles Eyton, General Manager Victor H. Clarke, Special Representative of the Production department, and Fred Kley, Studio Manager, at which ways and means will be discussed and plans formulated for carrying out the necessary changes. At these meetings, plans for the development and increased efficiency of each department will be discussed as well as the best means of effecting necessary saving.

Business Depression Weeds Out the Weak
By S. R. Kent, of Famous Players-Lasky

WITH general business depression searching out the weak spots in our national industrial life, the motion picture business is now undergoing a test which has been coming to it for a long time. It is an examination from without; and the examination, while bringing to the fore those personalities who deserve success, is ruthlessly and swiftly weeding out the weaker sisters. It is a shaking down, a settling of the whole picture industry, to the end that it shall rest on a firmer foundation.

This state of affairs, which was driven home to me most forcibly by numerous instances in a recent trip I made around the country, is particularly true in the reaction of the public toward the theatre manager. In the last few years, when this country was basking in a blaze of unprecedented prosperity, exhibitors found that pretty nearly any kind of a picture would bring a profit, when their box offices were being stormed by people flush with money.

Today such is not the case. With the growth of the motion picture's popularity, the public has become more discriminating, and has a much greater knowledge of motion pictures and the picture people than many of us imagine. So much publicity has been given pictures and the personalities in the industry that the public is familiar with many features of the business which we have believed were known only to the trade. In other words, the public has entered the motion picture.

Al Lichtman Announces Plans for the Fall

Says Production Schedule of Ass'd Producers Will Be at Its Height by September

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS, INC. have formulated ambitious plans for the fall season, according to General Manager Al Lichtman, who returned early last week from a three weeks' visit at the Coast studios of his company. Production will be at its height by September, declares Mr. Lichtman, who continues as follows:

"Within a period of three or four months—in any event not later than September or October—we will release Mack Sennett's super comedy-drama, "Molly 'O," starring Mabel Normand, supported by an all-star cast including such well known screen personalities as George Nichols, Anna Hernandez, Albert Hackett, Edward Gribbon, Jack Mulhall, Jacqueline Logan, Lowell Sherman, Ben Deely, Gloria Davenport, Carl Stockdale and Eugenie Besserer. This production is the logical successor to "Mickey," which probably made more money for exhibitors than any other picture in the history of the motion picture business.

"Another production that will undoubtedly record a huge success," continued Mr. Lichtman, "is 'Hail the Woman,' a Thomas H. Ince creation with the greatest aggregation of dramatic artists ever assembled including Florence Vidor, Theodore Roberts, Tully Marshall, Madge Bellamy and others. In this production Ince reveals his great genius at its utmost. Then there is Maurice Tourneur whose every production has dealt with some big, vital subject. In the fall, Mr. Tourneur will have ready for release his stupendous special, "Lorna Doone," a faithful adaptation of the widely-read classic. Mr. Tourneur has spent considerable time and money on this production, but it has been justified by the wonderful results he has already obtained. Following "Molly 'O," Mack Sennett will release "Heartbalm," which was made at a cost of over three hundred thousand dollars, and which is one of the most stupendous productions this producer has ever attempted.

"J. Parker Read, Jr. and Allan Dwan, although not as yet ready to announce their plans for the forthcoming season, can be depended upon to deliver us some big specials for fall and winter release. Mr. Read is at the present time in Mexico working on a spectacular production which will be distributed by us in October. Mr. Dwan is now in the East preparing for the crowning achievement of his career, the title and release date of which will be announced later.

"With such a promising line-up of big, box office attractions, I ask the support of the exhibitors of America, because it is only through their support that we can continue producing such unusual and desirable specials. I feel that we are justly entitled to their unqualified and wholehearted backing, because we have, and are producing, the kind of pictures they desire—productions that mean something both commercially as well as artistically.

"If present indications count for aught, and judging by my observations made in the cities I have just visited, it will be productions, such as those I have mentioned above, that will bring the motion picture business back to normalcy."

Shortly after his arrival from the Coast, General Manager Lichtman departed for Minneapolis to attend the convention. Upon his return to New York early next week, he will make further announcements of Associated's plans for the future.

'What's Wrong with Press-Book?' Answered

Realart Furnishes Evidence to Show Its Press-Books Measures Up to Requirements

FOLLOWING the publication of the article entitled, "What's Wrong with the Average Press-Book?" in the June 18th issue of Motion Picture News, Realart rose in protest, fearing lest they be included in the category of those to whom the article might apply.

It is only fair to credit them with the forethought evidenced in their press-books, copies of which accompanied a letter from the Realart offices. Perhaps the best way to do this would be to quote from their letter:

"We suppose that the word 'average' really lets Realart out of the discussion in view of the fact that laudable comments from a number of exhibitors place our press-books in the above-the-average category.

"Nevertheless, we are constrained to call your attention to the fact that Realart press-books are modeled almost exactly along the lines as delineated in the article headed as above and which appeared in the News of last week, and to substantiate our claim, we are sending you copies of our latest. Comparison of these with the article in question is convincing. For instance, paragraph 1. Real Advance Stories on the Picture; paragraph 2, Additional Press Material; and paragraph 3, Reviews of the Picture, might just as well stand as headings for material contained in our pressbooks.

"So also with paragraph 4 covering 'cuts' and 'synopsis' and paragraph 5 on 'ad layouts.'

"A particular criticism of press-books in general calls attention to the fact that they are designed more with the idea of selling the picture to the exhibitor than to the public. That is one angle which has the particular consideration of those responsible for the make-up of our press-book material. This is easily understood when it is pointed out that Realart press-books come into the exhibitor's hands only after he has booked the pictures for which they are designed.

"Additional material to that mentioned above and contained in Realart's press-books include a special page of exploitation suggestions which are designed principally for the smaller exhibitors who cannot afford to maintain a staff for that purpose. But even some of the larger exhibitors take advantage of the publicity material which we offer. Special attention is given the practicability of any 'stunts' as well as the expense of putting them into effect.

"That the newspapers actually do use the press-matter which is clipped from Realart press-books is proven by the amount of this material which comes back to our publicity department through the clipping bureaus.

"We also call your attention to 'catch lines' and other material to be used in programs and advertising, ballyhoos, handy lists of accessories and suggestions for tie-up advertising with local merchants.

"It is a matter of considerable satisfaction to us to know that we are working so close to the exhibitor's needs. The publication of such articles as 'What's Wrong With The Average Press-Book?' performs a two-fold service; they put the erring ones on the right track and give impetus to those on the right track to extend themselves even further in serving the needs of their customers, the exhibitors."

Reference to the Realart press-books substantiates what has been declared in the letter, and the Motion Picture News is quick to give credit where credit is due.

Independents Organize A Protective Ass'n

Biggest Independents Line Up as New Body Is Formed To Be National in Scope

UNEXPECTEDLY and without warning, comes the news this week that the independent producers and distributors have organized into a protective body, which shows, at the very time of its formation, promise of becoming a powerful factor in the furthering and fostering of their interests.

The organization is known as The Independent Producers and Distributors Protective Association and, after the first preliminary meeting includes among its members many of the most active and most formidable independent producers and distributors. The association has more than passed through the formation period. Its by-laws have been drawn up, and these are expected to be adopted and the officers elected at the meeting scheduled for Thursday evening, June 30th.

The objects of the association are constructive. Firstly, it will aim to encourage the independent market to the utmost. It will endeavor to stabilize and popularize independent productions. It will seek to concentrate and consolidate national advertising for the encouragment of independent productions. Co-operation with members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America again with an eye to benefiting the independents, will be sought after. The Association will also act as a credit and clearing association, and will standardize forms of contracts, percentages, and territorial limitations. Lastly, the organization will oppose destructive legislation such as censorship, independently of any other association with the exception of exhibitor bodies. The independents feel that up to date no organization has been capable of efficiently caring for the interests of the non-program producer.

The membership of the Protective Association will be divided into two classes —the independent producer and the national independent distributor. The control of the association will be in the hands of a board of directors of eight, four of whom will be producers and four distributors. Offices will be established in New York and a secretary employed.

The first meeting was held after a letter had been sent out by Jesse Goldberg, general manager of Imperial Productions, Inc. to various producers and state right companies. The companies represented at the meeting were: Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corp.; Asher Productions; Associated Photo-Plays; Candler Pictures, Inc.; Canyon Pictures; Clark Cornelius Corp.; C. B. C. Film Sales Corp.; Adolph DuMahut and E. L. Klein; Equity Pictures Corp.; Fidelity Pictures Corp.; The Film Market, Inc.; Forward Film Distributors and Salient Pictures; Graphic Film Corp.; Hemmer Productions, Inc.; Kineto Company of America; Marion Kohn; Harry Levey; Plymouth Pictures; Hugh Dierker Productions of California; F. C. Quimby, Inc.; Screenplays Productions, Inc.; Sunrise Pictures, Inc.; Imperial Productions; Rialto Pictures Corp.; Jans Pictures Corp.; R. and R. Sales Corp. W. E. Shallenberger, of Arrow Film, is also reported to be in sympathy with the aims of the organization.

At the meeting a by-laws committee consisting of J. I. Schnitzer, of Equity Pictures, Louis Weiss, Sydney Asher and Jesse Goldberg, was appointed. These by-laws, now fully drawn up, were to be acted upon at the meeting last Thursday.

It will not be the principle of the Protective Association to revolutionize the existing order over night. It intends gradually to extend its scope and its activities. It is reported that a second association, organized solely for the purpose of financing independent producers and distributors, is already in existence. This association, which is headed by an ex-cabinet member, has a cash reserve of $2,000,000, it is reported. While organized to finance picture enterprises, this association itself is not in the film industry.

Further news of the Association's activities and plans are expected in a short time.

North Carolina Exhibitors Plan Exposition

Convention Plans for Mammoth Exposition to Be Held in Charlotte; Officers Elected

HAVING transacted much important business during their two day session at the Oceanic Hotel, the annual convention of the North Carolina Motion Picture Theatre Owners adjourned Friday afternoon, June 24, leaving the naming of the mid-winter convention place to the executive committee. As the closing business before the convention, Percy W. Wells and Henry B. Varner were re-elected for another term as president and secretary, respectively. E. F. Dardine, of Charlotte, was made first vice-president and S. S. Stevenson, of Henderson, second vice-president. The executive committee consists of H. R. Mason, Goldsboro; H. F. Stallings, Kinston; Sam T. White, Greenville; C. L. Welch, Salisbury; T. G. Leitch, Greensboro; H. E. Joyner, Raleigh; D. M. Bain, Wilmington; W. G. Atkinson, Rockingham; J. A. Estridge, Gastonia, and C. A. House, Marion.

Plans for the holding of a mammoth motion picture exposition in Charlotte during the week of December 5, 1921, were discussed. A committee composed of Charlotte members were named to go into the preliminary details. It is planned to have four or five days, each day to be characterized by the appearance of the leading stars of a certain producing organization, with a Grand Ball each night and many other entertainment features. The exposition will be given under the direct auspices of the North Carolina Theatre Owners.

It was voted to send a delegation to represent the State at the National Convention in Minneapolis this week. This delegation was instructed to cast a solid vote in favor of Washington as the place for the 1922 National Convention. Henry B. Varner heads the delegation to Minneapolis, and he was given full authority to act in behalf of the association in all matters, the strength of the organization being pledged to support any action taken by him in behalf of the organization.

Resolutions condemning the continued aggressions of certain producer interests in the exhibitor field were adopted, the same resolution pledging the unwavering confidence of the organization in the national exhibitor organization, and pledging to Sidney S. Cohen, personally, their whole support in his work in behalf of the independent exhibitor.

Another resolution of interest called upon the various film distributors to meet manfully the business depression which is seriously threatening the destruction of many exhibitors. The lowering of film rentals and the maintenance of gross business through increased volume of business was suggested to the distributors as the only method by which the industry can survive and be "preserved for better days to come." Another resolution protested against the continued high prices charged for accessories, particularly lithograph paper, claiming the manufacturing costs had decreased largely and that the pre-war price of ten cents per sheet was entirely adequate to defray the cost of manufacture and selling "of an item which it is thought should be furnished to the exhibitors at net cost."

Another resolution protested against the exhibition in the State of any salacious film of any kind whatsoever.

Fourteen Companies Incorporate in New York

With fourteen companies incorporating, a total of $631,000 is represented in the capitalization of concerns filing papers with the Secretary of State during the past week, to enter the motion picture business in New York State. These corporations, with the amount of capitalization and directors are:

Yonkers Strand Theatre Co., Yonkers, $50,000, M. J. Walsh, G. C. Walsh and W. B. J. Mitchell, Yonkers; Rudolph Ballet Co., New York, $5,000, C. F. Strohmenger, George J. Eysautier, A. A. McGivney, New York; Cardinal Pictures Corp., $1,000, A. A. Deutsch, Rudolph Trier, Nancy Katz, New York; Ercole Film Co., $100,000, Ercole Montagna, G. B. Michelot, Cesare Gravina, New York; Glengyle Corp., $50,000, Winthrop A. Mandell, A. F. Koehler, New York; Henry Duchardt, Brooklyn; Jans Productions, $5,000; Sylvia Taubenhaus, Benjamin Abraham, Isaac Schmal, New York; Fred C. Quimby, Inc., $1,000, F. C. and B. Beatrice Quimby, H. L. Knappen, New York; Scientific Pictures Corp., $1,000, A. N. Mirzaoff, F. H. Shaw, Karekin Aleon, New York; Goat Alley Producing Co., $5,000, J. J. Podell, Far Rockaway, Frederick Robinson, New York; I. C. Mondshain, Brooklyn; Motion Picture Equipment Corp., $200,000, W. C. Smith, Philip Weisbrot, C. C. Smith, New York; Community Motion Pictures Service, $500, David O. Decker, Ridgewood, N. J.; David Levy, Brooklyn; Mary Fry, New York; B. and J. Amusement Co., $10,000, Benjamin and Rose Joelson, Julius Joelson, New York; Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corp., Nyack, $2,500, Adolph and Louis Qeiss, Joseph M. Sheen, New York; Kremer Coaster Corp., $200,000, George W. Kremer, George W., Jr. and E. G. Kremer, New York.

The Metropolitan Museum at Producers' Service

In a letter addressed to the Motion Picture News this week, Richard F. Bach, of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City, points out the advantages that await motion picture producers in this institution. Mr. Bach writes:

"Occasionally producers have used the Metropolitan Museum in working up settings and properties. The occasions have been all too few. Our museum is a storehouse, crowded with a myriad suggestions for every imaginable kind of a setting. Every facility is offered for studying these things; special privileges are granted to designers and other technical men. We want the museum to work in behalf of the motion picture industry as it does in behalf of forty or fifty others that now use the galleries as larger laboratories added to their own.

"The institution is public; its service is gratis; the possibilities unlimited."

Charge Against Ruben and Finkelstein Dismissed

CHARGES of illegal conspiracy in restraint of trade made against I. H. Ruben and M. L. Finkelstein of the Twin City Amusement Trust Estate were dismissed by Judge Bardwell in district court, when Joseph W. Cohen, plaintiff in the action, failed to appear and testimony on the part of the deefnse was taken upon its merits.

Mr. Cohen, formerly owner of the Lagoon theatre, began his action more than a year ago. In the action he charged the defendants with maintaining an amusement trust and forcing him to lease his place to them by illegal methods. He was one of the principal witnesses before a legislative committee investigating the alleged amusement trust at the last legislative session. The investigation committee returned a report favorable to Mr. Ruben and Mr. Finkelstein.

Since then Mr. Cohen, through his attorney, has several times obtained continuances in the district court. When the case was finally called for trial the defendant made no appearance and the defense was allowed to introduce testimony to obtain a dismissal of the action on its merits.

Asks Educational Films Be Exempted from Duty

In a statement addressed to the Ways and Means Committee, Tariff Division, Washington, D. C., Willard B. Cook, president of the Pathescope Co. of America, urges the exemption of "strictly educational, religious and scientific films" from any duty under the anticipated revised schedule of customs duty on foreign-made motion pictures. The reasons given by Mr. Cook for this request are that the imposition of duty on such films will restrict the educational, religious, and sociological benefit derivable from such pictures, and will work hardship on many of America's religious and educational institutions which have only limited means at their disposal to procure such films.

The committee is also asked to exempt from import duty the "slow burning and so-called Safety Standard raw film stock" as it is desirable and conducive to the reduction of fire hazards to extend the use of this stock in non-theatrical fields. This kind of raw film is manufactured principally in France at the present time, Mr. Willard states.

Adolph Zukor's Sister-in-Law Becomes Bride

The wedding of Miss Frances Kaufman and Dr. Emanuel Stern took place at the Plaza Hotel on June 22. The bride is a sister-in-law of Adolph Zukor and sister of Al Kaufman, European production manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Dr. Stern for the past six months has been the physician and surgeon at Paramount's Long Island studio and is connected with Bellevue Hospital, from the medical college of which he received his degree.

Explains Court's Decision in "Broken Doll" Action

Arthur Butler Graham, counselor-at-law and attorney for Associated Producers, in their legal action against International Film Service Co., Inc., which arose, over the release of the Allan Dwan production, "A Broken Doll," has issued a statement in answer to the article which appeared in the Motion Picture News of June 25th. International sought to restrain Associated Producers from releasing the picture under that title, claiming that it was the title of a magazine story published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine several years ago.

According to Mr. Graham, the order as signed by Justice Learned Hand denies the plaintiff's motion for an injunction and permits Associated Producers to distribute "A Broken Doll," merely requiring the company to keep an account of its profits to await the outcome of the litigation.

Mr. Graham quotes the court as follows: "It seems to me an ingenuous assumption to suppose that there are any substantial number of people who today attribute any secondary meaning to the title at all . . .

"The defendant is quite innocent of plagiarism, and finds itself unwittingly in peril of losing much of its investment to protect the plaintiff against an extremely doubtful and probably insubstantial loss . . ."

Tradepapers Protect Selves Against Copyright Suits

At a meeting of the Motion Picture Tradepapers Credit Association, Inc., of which the Moving Picture World, Exhibitors Trade Review, Motion Picture News, Inc., and Exhibitors Herald are members, held on Friday, June 24, the question of the publication of copyrighted photographs in advertising or reading matter furnished to the tradepapers for publication, was considered, and the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Association:

"Whereas, several actions have been commenced against the members of this Association and other trade papers by one Lumiere, photographer, to recover damages for alleged infringements of copyrights of photographs made by him; and

"Whereas, these photographs are furnished to the trade papers by producers, distributors or individuals for publication in advertisements or reading matter without having appended or attached thereto the copyright notice required by the Copyright Law of the United States; and

"Whereas, the various trade papers, members of this Association, desire to protect themselves against such proceedings and the consequent penalties and costs of defending such actions;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, that all members of this Association refuse to accept for publication any advertising or reading matter containing photographs copyrighted by any photographer, unless the trade paper which is requested to publish the advertisement or reading matter, is furnished at the same time by the advertiser with a release in writing from the owner of the copyright against any suit, proceeding or damages for the publication thereof;

"Further resolved, that where any member of this Association is requested to publish any advertisement or other matter containing a photograph which has been so cut or trimmed that the evidences of copyright are not apparent, and by reason of such publication, said trade paper is or may be subjected to loss or damage, or incur expense in the defense of an action of any kind, the advertiser supplying such photograph will be held liable for the amount of such loss, damage or expense;

"Further resolved, that Mr. Harry G. Kosch, attorney for the Association, be directed to send a copy of this preamble and resolution to all producers and advertisers in the various trade papers;

"Further Resolved, that a copy of this preamble and resolution be published in each of the trade papers, members of this Association."

Producer and Distributor Functions Being Divided

That Is "Trend of the Times," Says A. S. Kane in Endorsing Editorial of Wm. A. Johnston

IN a letter recently addressed to William A. Johnston, editor of Motion Picture News, by Arthur S. Kane, chairman of the board of directors of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., a hearty endorsement is accorded by the Associated Exhibitors executive to Mr. Johnston's editorial, "Who Threatens Independence?" which appeared in the June 11th issue of the News. Mr. Kane declares that "the unmistakable trend of the times is for sharp division between the operations of producing and distributing." When the independent producer stands squarely on his own feet in the manufacture of pictures and the distributor is able to devote himself entirely to the matter of merchandising the picture, then the "very last danger to independence will be removed," declares Mr. Kane. Mr. Kane's letter follows in full:

"My dear Mr. Johnston:

"Your editorial, 'Who Threatens Independence?' is another important contribution to the welfare of the motion picture industry. You have in this case, as in many other instances in the past, frankly met a situation that is not often discussed with as much freedom as it should be. I am glad that your sentiments are in some respects very much the same as my own.

"In a review of conditions, given out upon my return from California recently, I said:

"'The unmistakable trend of the times is for sharp division between the operations of producing and distribution. I expect to see this become more and more pronounced. The producer will perform and finance the operation of manufacturing and the distributor will be a distributor solely and finance his own cost of distribution.

"'Heretofore, the distributor had been called upon not only to bear the cost of distribution, but to find the money to advance to the producer to make attractions or to reimburse him for negative costs upon delivery—which is the same thing. This has become too much of a burden for the distributor, with a smaller margin of profit, to bear.'

"When the independent producer leans too heavily upon the distributor for help, he is the one who threatens independence, because he is making it increasingly difficult for the motion picture industry to support independent distributing organizations. When the independent distributor's financial and exploitation power is devoted exclusively to the merchandising of pictures, he can then achieve results that will mean profit for himself and for the producer. When he is compelled to devote his resources to production, he is certain to suffer in the performance of his true function—the merchandising of film.

"You very correctly state that if the independent producer gets a fair deal and forceful merchandising, he can turn elsewhere for financial help—to keep on making pictures.

"As I pointed out upon my return from Los Angeles, many of the bankers and financial interests in Southern California are fast coming to the realization that they must help legitimate producers of independent attractions or the wheels of progress of the industry, as related to Los Angeles, will be at a standstill. The largest banking institutions are now doing everything to encourage business in the motion picture industry. Their attitude toward this business is undergoing a radical change.

"When the independent producer stands squarely upon his own feet in the manufacture of motion pictures, and when he places his product through organizations that are devoted exclusively to the exploitation and sale of pictures, the very last danger to independence will be removed. As long as there are capable producers, financing themselves and specializing altogether in their own line of endeavor; as long as there are independent exchanges devoted exclusively to the rental of pictures, there will be a tremendous market for independent pictures.

"The Associated Exhibitors is today a marketing organization, with the door wide open to independently made productions of genuine merit. You are quite right in stating that he will get first runs—if his picture is good enough. The tremendous success enjoyed by every genuinely good, independently made picture shows that the picture is the thing and not the source from which it comes. Real good pictures cannot be kept from success today.

"Back of all this must be the support of exhibitors. I do not believe they have failed to date to adequately support independent productions, and I do not believe they will fail of such support in the future. Their success as exhibitors in this industry is the finest evidence of common sense. The best business brains of the country, plus the pioneering spirit, have resulted in the magnificent theatres erected throughout this country. The men capable of such an achievement can be depended upon to regard with a cool eye every development in the industry.

"Independence and the competitive instinct to do something bigger than the other man caused the erection of the big theatres we see today. That spirit still exists and new houses are being put up in all parts of the country. The same spirit brought forth independent productions and these two elements of the industry, the independent producer and the independent exhibitor can be depended upon to maintain an overwhelming balance of power.

"The exhibitor is taking excellent care of his independence and I believe that the adjustment now going on between producers and distributors to the end that a sharp division between the activities of the two shall be maintained is a complete and final guarantee of the enduring spirit of independence in this business."

Brady Demands Apology for Stigma on Industry

The following letter has been sent by William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to the editors and publishers of the Daily News of New York. The editorial entitled, "Capitalizing Indecency" to which Mr. Brady's letter is a reply, was published in the News June 22:

"Dear Sirs:

"In your issue today you have editorially libeled a great industry.

"Under the heading 'Capitalizing Indecency,' you draw a lurid word picture of motion picture producers vigorously bidding for the services of certain women who have recently figured in sensational scandals. You say that the producers of both the spoken and silent drama must purge themselves of capitalizing indecency before they can obtain a fair hearing upon the question of censorship.

"You assert that every one of the women who have figured in disgraceful scandals within the last six months will shortly be featured as screen stars, 'not because they are talented, but because they are vicious.'

"This is a gross misstatement of the facts and as such is justly resented by the men identified with this, the fifth greatest industry in the United States.

"The motion picture industry has no place for such women as you describe. Our exchanges are closed against them. They are barred from the screens of motion picture theatres throughout the country.

"The producers and distributors of motion pictures are earnestly and effectively endeavoring to preserve a clean and wholesome screen.

"When certain persons outside the industry announced recently that they intended exploiting in pictures a woman who had figured prominently in a notorious murder case in Oklahoma, the organized motion picture interests immediately took steps to prevent any such film from reaching the screens of America. The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry went on record in the matter. So did the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"Thus the motion picture industry repulsed the efforts of unscrupulous outsiders to foist such a picture upon the public.

"Still more recently the newspapers reported that a motion picture company had offered a large sum of money to a New York woman whose domestic affairs have furnished the newspapers with sensational news for many months. This reported offer, however, was denied. It had been apparently faked to bolster up a lagging news story.

"What are the other cases you refer to? We know of none. Who are the 'every one of these women' you say have been offered big salaries to act for the screen and who in a few months will be featured as screen stars?'

"I am not attempting to defend the 'millionaire's chorus' referred to in your editorial, nor indiscretions that occasionally, in the past, have crept into the films, but I do most vigorously object to your assertion that the producers of motion pictures are seeking to capitalize indecency and in fairness to the reputable men who are engaged in the picture industry, I respectively demand an apology for the stigma your editorial has placed upon them."

Closes on Sunday, Churches Pay Usual Earnings

A THEATRE owner has been found who is willing to abide by the blue laws. He is Walter E. Talley, owner of the Empire photoplay house at Lawrenceburg, Ind., who has been paid $250 by the church people of the town on consideration that he remain closed on Sundays between June 19, 1921 and Jan. 1, 1922. The sum represents what the Sunday earnings of the Empire would have been during this period. Charges of operating on Sunday pending against Talley are to be dismissed with the costs paid by the church workers.

Michigan Circuit to Remodel Theatres

The Butterfield interests in Michigan are now concentrating their efforts on remodelling and improving the theatres during the closed time of the Summer season, and many improvements will be made in their several theatres. They control 25 theatres in the state of Michigan, and have a compact circuit of ten towns.

The Bijou Theatre in Lansing will be remodelled with entire new equipment and will open the latter part of August and will be known as The Regent Theatre, playing pictures and incidental attractions. First National pictures will form the nucleus of the picture program. The Orpheum Theatre in Jackson is to be remodelled and re-decorated, and opened September 1st.

The Bijou Theatre in Battle Creek will also be remodelled and overhauled, and is expected to open its season on September 1st. The Majestic and Family Theatres at Port Huron, recently acquired, will be completely rejuvenated and newly equipped, playing a policy of pictures, one night stand attractions and vaudeville from time to time.

F.I.L.M. Club to Hold Outing July 27th

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York City will hold its annual outing at Karatsonyi's Inn, Glenwood-on-the-Sound, L. I., on Wednesday, July 27.

The steamer Nassau has been chartered and will leave East 37th Street dock at 12 o'clock noon for a sail around the Sound to Glenwood. Karatsonyi will serve one of his famous shore dinners at the pavilion.

A baseball game between the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and the Film Club members will be played for the championship. Other athletic games will be held with valuable awards for the winners.

The steamer Nassau will leave Glenwood about eight o'clock for a moonlight sail on the return trip. A moonlight dancing competition will be held on the steamer. A jazz band will accompany the Club for the entire trip.

The arrangement committee consists of John Iris, chairman; George Uffner, George Balston, Louis Rosenbluh, H. H. Buxbaum, and W. E. Raynor.

Neither Faction Pleased by Censor Appointment

Exhibitors and reformers all were passed by when Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland reappointed Charles F. Macklin a member of the State Board of Motion Picture Censors last week.

The exhibitors appear not to be greatly worried by the Governor's alleged second failure to give them representation on the board and have no comment to make on the situation. The reformers, however, led by the League for Better Motion Pictures, have formally notified the Governor of their dissatisfaction.

Late Wire Briefs from the Coast

REGINALD BARKER announces that he will not renew his Goldwyn contract, but will produce independently. His representative in New York is now arranging for the release of his pictures.

The Nova Film Syndicate has been organized by R. A. Glascow and Martin L. Anderson of St. Louis. They will produce features starring Gladys Brockwell. Phil Rosen will direct and the company will work at Universal. Stories by Adele Buffington, Wycliffe Hill and Jack Atkins have been purchased.

Rubaiyat, Inc., has been organized by Ferdinand Earle, and is beginning the production of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. The cast includes Frederick Warde, Edwin Stevens, Marriska Aldrich and Hedwiga Reigher and Edmund Carew.

Richard Walton Tully is here to produce his play, "Omar, the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post as star. James Young will direct. Work will be started at the Brunton studios and First National will release the feature.

President Robert Lieber, of First National, his wife and two daughters, are here for a two weeks' stay.

The Anita Stewart company has finished "A Question of Honor."

Alan Holubar has completed the script for his next production.

Marshall Neilan will play in his next picture, "Bits of Life." In the cast also are Lon Chaney, Teddy Sampson, Anna May Wong, Rockliffe Fellows, Fred Burton and James Bradbury. The company is producing at the Goldwyn studios.

John Raoul Walsh is editing "The Serenade" and has script ready for his next production.

"The Sky is the Limit," is the title of the next Harold Lloyd comedy.

The David Butler company will this week finish their second production, "Bing, Bang, Boom," under the direction of Fred Butler. The cast includes Doris Dawn, William Walling, J. N. Carlisle, Bert Hadley and William Duvall.

Harold Lloyd Comedy to Be Featured at Capitol

"AMONG Those Present," the latest of Harold Lloyd's three-reel comedy series for Associated Exhibitors, has been booked by the management of the Capitol theatre, New York, and will be featured on the program of this Broadway house during the week of July 3rd.

Four of Charles Urban's short subjects will also be run in the all short subject program being arranged by S. L. Rothafel for the coming week.

No Ghost to Walk for Doc. Ellis P. Oberholtzer

The name of Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer, of Philadelphia, around which for months there has been waged a bitter battle in an effort to have him restored to his erstwhile voting post in the State Board of Motion Picture Censors, has been removed from the payroll of the State of Pennsylvania.

Since his removal last fall, by Governor Sproul, from actual voting membership in the board, Dr. Oberholtzer had been drawing $3,000 a year as a director of censorship without voting power.

On last Friday, June 24, the new Auditor General of the State, Samuel J. Lewis, declared that he had found that under the 1921 amendment, to the censorship law there is no legal authority for the position of director and no fund from which to pay the $3,000. Hence the fiscal watchdog of the State has declined to approve the pay voucher for Oberholtzer, submitted to him for the first half June.

"The Birth of a Nation" Is Allowed in Providence

"The Birth of a Nation," which was refused a showing in Boston, will be presented at the Rialto theatre, Providence, R. I., the week of June 20. The picture is not being shown, however, without considerable opposition, and many hearings before the Board of Police Commissioners. Rt. Rev. William A. Hickey, bishop of Providence, has expressed himself in conjunction with the opposition made by the negro population, as entirely against the showing of the picture. The Board of Police Commissioners, however, after a month's hearing of complaints, on June 17 put their stamp of approval on the picture. When "The Birth of a Nation" was shown at the Providence Opera House five years ago, the Board comprised of the same members permitted it to be shown.

The picture was run off seven separate times in the Board's private projection rooms and several of the scenes most strenuously objected to were ordered cut out. To offset this a reel never shown in Providence was added.

Into Larger Quarters

Imperial Pictures, owing to increase in business, is moving into larger quarters in the Gotham National Bank, 59th and Columbus Circle, on July 1.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

White and Unmarried—

Pleased patrons although not type of picture usually shown at this theatre. Meighan admirably suited to part. (Middle West.)

A good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Good picture which brought fine business. (West.)

Fairly entertaining feature with average business. (West.)

Too Much Speed—

Best Wallace Reid picture. Extraordinary business. Held over for second week. (East.)

Went big with Wally Reid fans and we are holding it over for second week's run. (Middle West.)

Weather considered, this went over very well. A good picture. (East.)

Deception—

Did not hold up well at all. Unusually warm weather affected attendance. Did not please all patrons. Patrons did not think it compared with "Passion" or "Gypsy Blood."

Big picture. Pulled with the better trade but did not satisfy the average fan. (West.)

Fell off considerably. (East.)

The Lost Romance—

An average production which played to average houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Splendid picture, receipts fair. (East.)

Went over in big shape. Highly entertaining. (West.)

Beau Revel—

A first class picture, but only an average attraction during the extremely hot weather here. Lewis Stone's acting deserves special mention. (Middle West.)

Poor picture. Business dull. (Middle West.)

Dollar a Year Man—

Fair picture, fair business. (Middle West.)

A rather tiresome affair which does not hold interest. Just a fair box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Woman God Changed—

Very fine picture. Business better than was expected with hot weather. (Middle West.)

Quite a good picture which brought good business. (West.)

The Mask—

Played with Charlie Chaplin in "The Cure" and did a good business, the credit going to the latter production. (Middle West.)

Sham—

Fascinating picture, receipts nice. (East.)

Wild Goose—

This is an exceptionally fine picture with well sustained interest but it failed to draw good business owing to the very warm weather. (Middle West.)

City of Silent Men—

A feature with a powerful appeal which was well liked by our patrons and made many new friends for Meighan. Played to good business despite the heat. (Middle West.)

The Faith Healer—

A poor picture bringing poor business. (West.)

Straight Is the Way—

Good story. Matt Moore is drawing card. (Middle West.)

What Every Woman Knows—

Fine picture. Story especially attractive to women. Good business. (Middle West.)

Sacred and Profane Love—

Average business not very good. Attendance picked up after Shrine convention. (Middle West.)

This is the way the Colonial theatre, Indianapolis, billed "A Divorce of Convenience"

The Home Stretch—

Idol of the North—

A mediocre production without much drawing power. (East.)

The Wise Fool—

A very good picture. Business fair. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Scrap Iron—

Probably the best picture Charles Ray has made, and played to such good business we are holding it over for second week. (Middle West.)

Good picture, well received. In spite of Shrine Convention, no unusual business. (Middle West.)

Peck's Bad Boy—

Big drawing card for juveniles; picture only fair; receipts not very good. (East.)

Went over big and brought great business. (West.)

Man—Woman—Marriage—

Capacity business at each performance. Title a drawing card. (West.)

Great business on second week of run. Pleasing picture. (West.)

Wedding Bells—

Fine business during run. Very entertaining, and was well liked. (West.)

Old Swimmin' Hole—

Artistically a very beautiful production; comercially, not up to standard. (East.)

Courage—

An ordinary picture which was helped along wonderfully by Larry Semon in "The Rent Collector." Good business all week. (Middle West.)

Trust Your Wife—

An average program picture. Not particularly liked or disliked. (Middle West.)

The Great Adventure—

Good picture which brought fine business during run. (West.)

Passion—

A really remarkable production with a story of historical interest. Has a strong feminine appeal, and better class patrons liked it. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

Reputation—

Sorry we did not keep it back until September—as it is, it made good. (East.)

Priscilla Dean an unusual drawing card. Picture good. Business same. (Middle West.)

The Blazing Trail—

Divresified Program as Hot Weather Cure

According to Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America, believes that variety is the one thing on a program which will prevent a summer slump. Audiences are fidgety and nervous in the summer, states Mr. Urban, and to keep their attention, the program has to be highly diversified.

"It seems to me to be just as illogical," Mr. Urban says, "not to make the summer motion picture program conform to the season as it would be not to change our menus. Interesting variety is the answer to the problem. The exhibitor has not far to seek to find it. A host of interesting topics are covered in the many short subjects. In our own Kineto Reviews and Movie Chats the exhibitor is able to find material of every sort except fiction.

Swift Gets Entire Building for Paper Purposes

Harry Swift, Paramount exploiteer for the Albany exchange, landed an entire five-story building for window tie-ups for "Deception," playing at the Barcli theatre, Schenectady, N. Y. At the same time, the State Traveling Men's Convention was taking place and Carnick Bros., bakers, had several thousand paper kites made for the delegates. The kites didn't arrive until the convention was over and the bakery gave them away to the kids instead. Swift pasted "Deception" stickers on each one of the kites and pretty soon a couple of thousand boys were walking advertisements for the theatre. The stunt cost the Barcli $2 for the stickers.

Summer Front for Victoria Theatre

A seasonal dress for the lobby of the Victoria Theatre, Tamagua, Pa., was designed by Eli M. Orowitz, the Paramount exploiteer when "Something To Think About" opened for a week's run. The display consists of lattice work, flowers, a suggestion of a fence, and cut-outs from the posters depicting rural scenes.

Rothafel Originates Colorful Presentation Numbers

Samuel Rothafel gave "Without Benefit of Clergy" a most impressive presentation during its world's premiere at the Capitol Theatre the week of June 19th.

Both a prologue and epilogue were used. The prologue stage setting showed the roof of the "house of love" with the Hindu temples and homes of Lahore in the distance.

Only two characters were used in the prologue, one representing "Holden," and the other "Ameera," Kipling's hero and heroine.

The tom-tom motif of the story, which might mean all or nothing, as the story goes, was used throughout the musical setting, giving an exotic flavor to the music.

With the death of Ameera, and Holden's final visit to "The house of love," now crumpling under the "cleansing rains," Mr. Rothafel faded the picture back into the original setting of the prologue, with the character representing "Holden," forlorn, and lonely, his head bowed in grief, holding the stage alone.

Picture Chatauqua Held at Richfield, Utah

The Motion Picture Chatauqua has been put over for the third time at Richfield, Utah, where Manager Stallings of the Kinema theatre holds forth.

Manager Stallings advertised the event heavily especially in the newspapers. In the June 16th issue of the Richfield Reaper, Mr. Stallings carried two full pages outlining the Chatauqua Week idea and extolling the merits of the bills prepared.

Manager Stallings is extremely pleased with the results of his stunt and is already planning for his fourth annual event.

Girls Dressed as Mary Gives Out Heralds

A little stunt devised by G. R. Stewart, resident manager of the Casper Wyoming Theatres Co. in exploiting "Through The Back Door" proved a winner.

Several girls dressed to represent Mary Pickford in the picture carried market baskets containing heralds which they distributed to everyone on the streets.

The stage setting for the second part of the "The Golem" prologue now being presented at the New York Criterion theatre and described by the accompanying article

"Golem" Prologue Virtually a One Act Play

Presentation Number at the New York Criterion Is Unusually Pretentious

ONE of the best known men in the presentation and musical fields of motion picture industry is Hugo Riesenfeld. Plenty of credit for the development of the picture program accrues to him. But Mr. Riesenfeld has not been content to give the public what he alone can do but has gathered able assistants. Among these is Josiah Zuro, formerly chorus master of the Manhattan Opera Company, who, with Mr. Riesenfeld, is responsible for the prologue to "The Golem," now current at the Criterion theatre, and billed as "Eli, Eli."

Mr. Zuro arranged what amounts to a one-act play. The curtain rises and reveals an old man who is telling to his little grandson the story of his family. He relates in less than a hundred words how the family was living in comfort in a European city when suddenly—

The lights dim out on the front part of the stage and the old man and his grandson vanish. In the rear, on a second stage, the lights come on, revealing a Jewish family at the Passover feast. The whole family is singing an ancient chant. There is a knock at the door and a King's herald enters. He announces that the Jews must wear the circle of shame on their gabardines, the fool's cap, and must live within the walls of the Ghetto. As he leaves the whole family breaks into a song of lamentation, a Hebrew song written especially for this presentation by Lazar Saminsky, one of the greatest of modern Jewish composers, who is visiting New York. Fred Jagel, in costume as the son of the family, sings in the dirge. As the strains of the chorus die out the lights on that part of the stage disappear and the old man and his little son come back to view, taking up the story where the cutback left it off.

"In spite of these restrictions," says the grandfather in substance, "our people managed to live, until one day there came a plague over the land. Vicious enemies of our people told the king that we had poisoned the wells and we were all exiled from the kingdom."

Again the lights die out on the old man and the child, and voices are heard in the distance. A group of the exiled people, still wearing their gabardine, yellow circles and fool's cap—the costume of the Jew of the middle ages in the Ghettos—appear and settle down to rest in the foreground. Behind them, in the dim light, appears a vision of the city from which they were driven, a superb piece of stage setting by Foshko.

Emanuel List, a basso profundo dressed as the leader of this hegira, sings "Eli, Eli." It is the lament of the Jewish race, the story of its sufferings in the Old World. Jean Booth, contralto, as the mother, takes up the refrain and the large chorus, all trained soloists, closes. List again sings the same number, this time softly, as the lights die out and "The Golem" comes on.

It is an exceptional number, a tribute to Mr. Riesenfeld and to Mr. Zuro who worked it out and staged it.

More Goldman Exploitation

Del Monte Theatre, St. Louis, Campaign for "The County Fair" Goes Over in Fine Shape

MANAGING DIRECTOR WILLIAM GOLDMAN of the Del Monte theatre, St. Louis, recently executed an exploitation stunt which literally resulted in the people being led into the lobby of the theatre, only to be further enticed into "buying their way in," due to the elaborate lobby display.

The campaign began as do all of Goldman's exploitations with the utilization of an extensive mailing list. More than 4,000 postcards were delivered through the mails to the residents in the Del Monte district which happens to be the most densely populated section of the city.

In the "County Fair" exploitation the newspapers were also given primary attention. Teasers were run for a period of seven days prior to the opening. They were in two, three and four column spaces of from thirty to fifty lines in depth.

In the lobby of the Del Monte are a number of oddly shaped windows, some are above the box office, some above the entrance doors, and others in the lobby walls. These spaces were decorated with properly sized art posters prepared in the art studios of the Del Monte by a special poster artist. The general scheme of the designs were not taken directly from the film production but were made to exude the atmosphere of carnival and circus times. The display on the whole actually compelled the persons who witnessed it to desire seeing the picture. And it brought the proper results.

Then to bring the people in was another matter. Goldman advertised for five performers who could attire themselves to appear as real backwoodsmen — farmers of the old variety. These men obtained, they were covered with a back canvas reading: "I just arrived and am looking for the Del Monte theatre. Whereinell is it?"

The men accosted all strangers on the street and inquired of the direction to the Del Monte. Large crowds gathered and followed the ballyhooers to the lobby of the theatre.

Results? Nothing else but!

Sudekum Has Artistic Prologue Number

Tony Sudekum, who runs the Knickerbocker theatre in Nashville, Tenn., among many other theatres, pulled a new exploitation stunt in connection with "The Last of the Mohicans," the week of May 22.

For two weeks prior to the opening of this picture, Sudekum had on the stage of the theatre a facsimile of the cave scene which plays such an important part in the picture itself. At the entrance of the cave he had two dummy Indians standing sentinel. This setting was so built that it was transparent, and during the overture the lights were worked on dimmers and gradually brought out the words: "The Last of the Mohicans, Knickerbocker Theatre, Week of May 22." At the finish of the overture the lights gradually faded away and in the center appeared the screen so that at all times the outline of this setting was apparent to the audience. This caused a great deal of comment in Nashville and was very effective. It succeeded better than anything else that Sudekum had ever tried in the way of announcing a coming picture. The method is so simple and so worthwhile that any exhibitor can put it over with little expense. It doesn't detract from the audiences' interest in the current show and delivers its message to every patron in the house.

This Exhibitor Doesn't Need a Printing Press

Fayette, Ala., has an exhibitor who does not need printing presses, artists or cuts to produce illustrated advertisements.

A mimeograph and a stylus comprise his equipment, but with these he gets out handbills and heralds which are attractive to the eye and such a novelty that they invite reading.

The progressive exhibitor is W. D. Putnam, owner of the Putnam theatre, of Fayette, and his success attests the effectiveness of his home-made printing press. Mr. Putnam's modus operandi follows:

Selecting the best of the advertisements among the paper supplied for a forthcoming film, Mr. Putnam carefully traces the outlines of the illustration upon a stencil, reproducing it with a startling realism. In similar fashion he outlines the title in display type and then fills in a short, snappy caption, the date, a catch line and the name of the next day's film. Then the stencil is placed on the mimeograph, the cylinder revolves, and out comes a constant stream of advertisements, in green ink, on paper of letter head size, whose pulling power has been demonstrated.

Despite the crudity of his tools, Mr. Putnam is able to transfer the pictures to stencils with life-like fidelity.

One of Mr. Putnam's recent advertisements heralded the coming exhibition of "The Branded Woman."

The accompanying cut is a reproduction of one of Mr. Putnam's heralds for "The Branded Woman."

Scenes from the prologue and epilogue for "Not Guilty" presented by the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre. Left—Showing the stage setting for the prologue. Right—The setting for the epilogue

"Not Guilty" Given Elaborate Presentation

"Not Guilty," playing last week at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, was given an elaborate presentation by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman. A prologue and epilogue were originated for the showing. In the prologue the audiences were provided with a stage picture of the picture's first scene and in the epilogue the film's finale was heightened by a colorful scenic and musical novelty accentuated with Indian dances. Georges Du Franne, French tenor, in riding habit, in a countryside scene, sang D'Hardelot's "Because." The prologue was severely simple, tasteful and inexpensive.

As the last film scene faded the curtains parted showed an East Indian street scene with mosqued houses and bazaars painted on the back drop. Several windows in the minarets and the towers were illumined by means of a 500 watt lamp placed behind the drop. Hyman arranged to have the sky area of the drop perforated for obtaining the effect of blinking stars.

In this epilogue setting Edgar Kiefer, baritone, in sahib Indian costume, sang Finden's "Far Across the Desert Sands," while a veiled epitome of grace danced "The Dance of the Tamnourine," and gave her version of "The East Indian Dancing Girl."

Admits All "Kentuckians" Free on Picture of Same Name

A good stunt on "The Kentuckians" was used by Manager J. C. Hartman, of the new Rialto, Oklahoma City, Okla. Being himself a Kentuckian, he wondered how many more there were in town, so in his newspaper ads on the film, he invited everyone in the city who hailed from old Kentucky to come on the first day and be snapped by a cameraman from the daily paper. A good crowd showed up and they held a friendly reunion.

Doolittle Hitches Title of Picture to Circus Concert

The Cairns Brothers Shows were in Estherville, Iowa, recently and used a street band to play on all the important street intersections. Max Doolittle, Paramount exploiter, saw the chance to hook the show up with "Humoresque," then playing in town. He took white paint and painted the name of the picture and the first few bars of the melody on all the corners in the itinerary of the band. The band proceeded according to schedule and played Davorak's famous melody. The crowds pondered all morning on the meaning of the melody. Later in the day everybody found it. Five window tieups helped the exploitation along.

Ottawa Theatres Pull Exploitation Stunts

Manager Elmes, of Loew's Ottawa theatre, tied up with nearly every drug store in the Canadian capital during the week's presentation of "Heliotrope." The theatre supplied handsome signs for the stores which announced special sales of Heliotrope perfumes for the week that the picture was being shown. Other places of business offered "Heliotrope Sundaes" and some even sold candies of this flavor.

For "Blind Wives," Manager Elmes tied up with one of the local newspapers for a special combination page in which Ottawa merchants offered dress goods, toilet articles and novelties for those who were "not blind."

"Limousine Girl" Used by Manager Drake

An excellent bit of exploitation in connection with the showing of "The Girl with a Million," was devised by Manager Drake, of the Strand theatre, Newark, N. J.

A pretty girl was secured and driven about the town in a closed automobile, the shades drawn and a sign on each window reading, "Look who's here ,the girl with a million." The car stopped at several busy corners, and when a crowd had gathered the girl with a small mask over her eyes, stepped out and passed stage money bearing the inscription, "It Is Worth a Hundred To See Susan Grande In The Girl With A Million At the Strand This Week," among the assemblage.

Here is the "The Kid" ballyhoo used by H. A. Schuermann and Son, managing the Plaza theatre, East Stroudsburg, Pa.

Vogel's Latest a Real Hit

Seattle Exploitation Stunt Ties Up With Old Fight for Naming Mt. Ranier

A "Deception League" and "Anti-Deception League," conceived as exploitation for the picture, "Deception," by Paramount Exploiter A. M. Vogel, playing recently at the Strand Theatre, Seattle, had the city "all het up."

"The Deception League" is none other than a revival of the old fight between Tacoma and Seattle on what shall be the name of Mt. Ranier. Seattle calls it Mt. Ranier, while Tacoma calls it Mt. Tacoma. Vogel placed ads from the newly-conceived Deception League which urged changing the name of Mt. Ranier to Mt. Deception, reading.

"Why not call it Mt. Deception.

Its beauty is deceiving until you are on it.

Its nearness is deceiving.

It seems hard to climb until you try it.

Write to your Senator."

Vogel engaged rooms at a hotel for the secretary and staff of the society. With everything in readiness but the league, he called on the leading citizens of the town and asked them to meet T. N. Williams, the secretary. Vogel also outlined the aims of the Deception League. The populace was all stirred up. The staff of the Paramount home office all wrote letters to the papers wanting to know who the busybody was that was trying to change the name of their fine mountain. Some letters were printed praising the scheme, others panning it. The newspapers gave plenty of space and also editorialized. Some citizens banded together in favor of the retention of Mt. Ranier, but nearly everybody in town talked about "Deception."

Vogel's next step was the "Anti-Deception League." The Strand printed some window cards, and Vogel went around to the leading stores, selling the idea that there was too much deception in business dealings, and a league was formed to break down the hostility between buyer and seller.

Mr. Wright, manager of the Strand, printed notice cards reading:

"Headquarters Anti-Deception League, Strand Theatre."

The campaign enlisted seventy of the biggest shops, right off the bat. With that momentum the other shops couldn't stay out without risking the odium of being called a profiteering store. The Credit Men's Association wanted to know what it was all about, so Vogel went around and sold them the idea.

Publicity Stunts Get National Attention

Benjamin H. Serkowich, director of publicity for the Robinson theatres, Peoria, Ill., in putting over "Proxies," pulling an exploitation stunt that got the front pages and crowded its way into the news dispatches.

When "Proxies" was booked by Dee Robinson, Mr. Serkowich went over to the Peoria Art League and invited 'em to hold their annual exhibit at the Madison theatre, on the mezzanine floor.

"Last year you didn't get over 200 people to come to the public library to see the exhibit," he told them. "Now if the mountain won't come to Mahomet, bring Mahomet to the Mountain."

So the exhibit came, and Mr. Serkowich was elected press agent for it.

The following, which is one of several front-page clippings from the Chicago Tribune, tells what he did. Every paper in the country carried the story. The Associated Press, The United Press and all the rest tumbled. And the local papers ate it alive, with picture layouts on the front page. All the Chicago papers sent reporters and photographers down to "do" Serkowich's stunt.

Here's a story out of the Tribune, which never falls for press agent stuff. Also a photo of Mrs. William Hawley Smith posed before her "dream picture."

Everybody came to see the dream picture, and the local newspapers also explained that "Proxies" was another sensational picture on display at the exhibit.

Lobby display for "The Man Tamer" used by the Standard theatre, Cleveland, O.

Special Lobby for "The Love Special"

Organist Howell, Palace Theatre, Muskogee, Okla., exploited the "Love Special" in a novel way by the use of a lobby display the outstanding features of which were two bells hung on regulation crossing posts and Beaverboard painted to resemble the boards of a country station; a big bell (not showing in the accompanying picture) placed behind the ticket office was rung every few minutes by a doorboy.

Anderson Theatre Stunt for "Mother O' Mine" Is Unique

A stunt which packed the Strand Theatre at Anderson, S. C., was conceived and put into execution in connection with the showing of "Mother O' Mine." A large canvas was stretched across the street in front of the theatre and a projecting machine threw excerpts of the picture onto the canvas. Thousands of persons watched this canvas, and actual count showed that a large percentage of these passersby went immediately into the theatre.

Australian Theatre Builds Lobby Display

Managing Director William Howe, of the New South Wales Olympic theatre, Bondi Junction, Sydney, Australia, put over an unusually effective lobby display for "The River's End," recently.

The lobby was dressed attractively with large colored scenes of the production, and in the place of the usual banner, carried a chain, made of twigs of trees and leaves, with Vshaped banners each containing a letter. In this manner he spelled the words, "Marshall Neilan's 'The River's End.'"

Ballyhoo for the first episode of "The Avenging Arrow" used by Manager Fred Fout of Syracuse at his Plaza theatre

This is the way that David Schaefer, manager of the Manor theatre, Brooklyn, decorated his lobby for the showing of "The Heart of Maryland"

Miniature Train Used as Lobby Exploitation Stunt

The Strand theatre, Atlanta, is a second-run house located where it gets a great deal of masculine patronage, and it caters to this patronage by some of the best "action-dramas" on the market—all of them properly exploited.

A recent lobby which attracted a good bit of attention was used on "The Love Special" recently, when it played a three-day engagement at this theatre.

On a long table in the lobby was built a miniature railroad, with a small station, lettered "Lion City." A train composed of three coaches, the baggage car and an engine stood on the track, making the complete circuit every now and then, with a bell that rang and a whistle that blew.

Pasted on the window of the little engine were cut-outs of Wallace Reid and Agnes Ayres—cut-outs from the press book, small enough to fit into the window, and look as if the two leading players were riding in the engine cab, looking out of the window. A tiny red light hidden in the interior of the engine threw a red glow, as though the fire box were open—it was all very vivid and realistic.

Hung about the walls of the lobby were railroad lanterns, red, white and green flags, and other railroad paraphernalia. The ticket window masked itself as a railroad ticket office, and the entrances had signs across the top, reading "Gate No. 1. The Love Special Leaves from This Gate:" "Gate No. 2—Exit from Trains."

Outside the lobby was a signal post, such as stand at railroad crossings. This bore the familiar crossed boards, reading "Stop, Look and Listen—Wallace Reid drives The Love Special. Don't Miss It."

The door-keeper wore a blue coat and cap, like a railway employe, and punched tickets, with a very blase air.

The whole effect made one feel for a traveling bag and hurry, for fear the train would be on time, and one would miss it.

Soriero Pulls Stunts for "The Devil"

General Manager Thomas Soriero of the Strand Theatre, Lowell, Mass., and his associate Sam Torgan exploited "The Devil," in a novel manner.

A few days before the opening a man costumed as an emissary of Satan drove a motorcar through the town and surprised the citizens by advising them "Go to the Devil." Policemen who argued with him received the same advice but when people looked after the disappearing car they noticed on its back a huge poster proclaiming that "The Devil" would be shown at the Strand.

The next day a few "devils" in an aeroplane flew over the town and dropped heralds again advising the public "to go to the devil." Thousands of people attracted by the aerial antics performed by the pilot of the plane scrambled for the heralds.

To supply the correct atmosphere Mr. Soriero made arrangements with local talent including a talented toe dancer.

Silhouette Stage Settings for "Princess Pat" Selections

The silhouette effect in stage settings was employed throughout the singing of a complete scene from "The Princess Pat" at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre recently, the principals appearing as if etched in black against a blue sky with the yellow moon the only light. The silhouette was produced by concentrating the light from behind the scenery instead of directing it against the drops from front.

The house and garden set of the play was duplicated with the trellised terrace and sharply defined poplar trees. A set hedge projected from right and left stage. Everything was in silhouette creating a veritable Coles Phillip pen and ink drawing with highly tinted background.

The operatic stars were garbed as of the original play. A tango and foxtrot by George Kiddon and Jean Chappell was particularly adaptable to the silhouette light and gave the effect of a couple dancing on a lawn in a moonlit summer night with the shimmering blue of the sky for a background.

In this quaint summer novelty Georges Du Franne, tenor, sang "All For You," while Lillian Poli, soprano, and Kathryn James, contralto, were heard in a duet, "For Better or For Worse." Jackson Kinsey, baritone, sang, "Neapolitan Love Song," with a finale by Miss Poli and the Mark Strand Mixed Quartette who gave as a concluding number, "Love is Best of All."

These song numbers from "The Princess Pat" were all of romantic theme.

Hyman Gets Prologue Idea from Picture

A light trap beneath which revolved a highly tinted color wheel and upon which swirled a dancer, was the novelty basis for the prologue furnished for "The Woman God Changed," when that picture played the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre.

This scene was taken from the film itself and reproduced with minute attention to detail. With the danseuse upon this color wheel and the only light coming from this trap in the stage floor the illumination produced was that of a billowy, shadowy color effect.

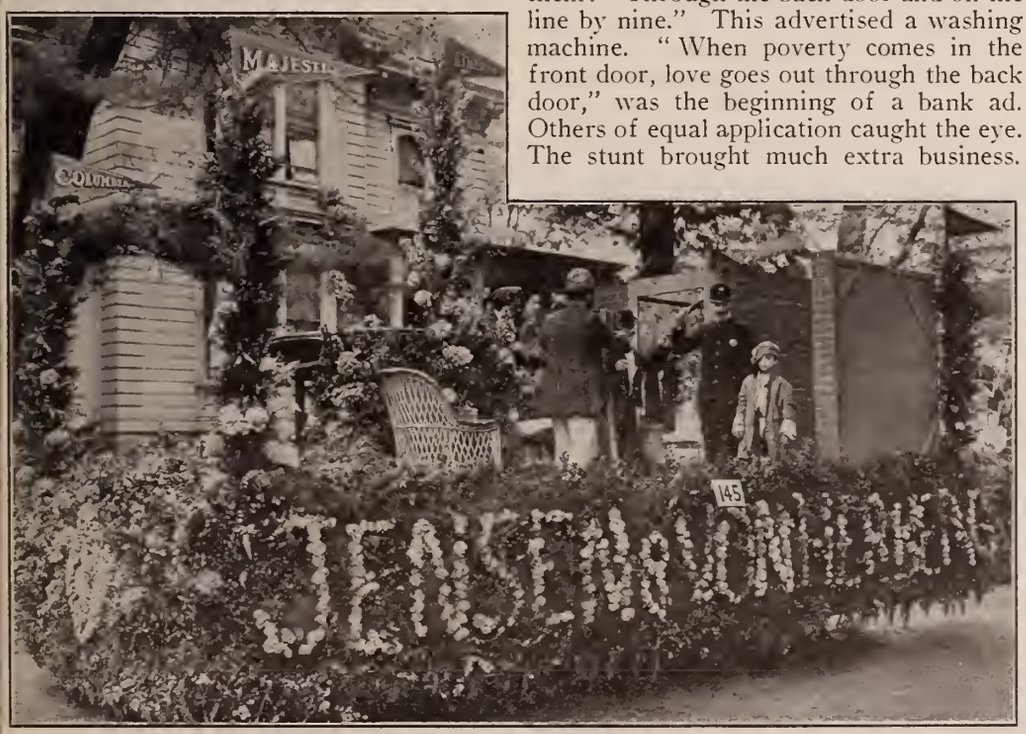
The scene in the play was that where a woman appears in an Oriental dance. Mr. Hyman used a black drop to bring the shadowy effects. With the dancer upon the wheel she was sharply defined w the musicians and spectators as if suggested rather than there in actuality. This prologue was called "Orientale Fantasie," and the music by the Mark Strand orchestra was Hadley's "Queen of Sheba."

Merchants Aid Frost Put Over Mary's Latest

The fact that "the butcher, the baker, the electric light maker" all come into the average home through the back door gave Assistant Manager Frost, of the Con dated Amusement Co., of Tampa, operating among other houses, the Victory, an idea for a tie-up advertising page in connection with the showing at the Victory of "Through the Back Door."

Mr. Frost got local bakeries, hardware people, electric light stores, etc., to come in on a co-operative page in the Tampa Morning Tribune. Each ad tied up in its reading matter with "Through the Back Door."

Several of the catch lines were especially clever. Following are some of them: "Through the back door and on the line by nine." This advertised a washing machine. "When poverty comes in the front door, love goes out through the back door," was the beginning of a bank ad. Others of equal application caught the eye. The stunt brought much extra business.



Float that served as exploitation for "The Kid" which Jensen and Von Herberg used in a recent floral parade staged annually in Portland, Ore.

Hokum Stuff Goes Great at the Jefferson

The old-time hokum stage stuff that never fails to get business if not worked too often is being pulled by John J. Breslin, manager of the Jefferson theatre, Auburn, N. Y. One of Breslin's latest was a "barefoot boy" stunt in connection with the showing of "The. Old Swimmin' Hole."

In his ads in the daily papers, he announced that on Friday night of the week of his showing of "The Old Swimmin' Hole," he would run what he called a "Charles Ray test." The idea was for boys to fit themselves up as the barefoot boys in James Whitcomb Riley's poem of the same name. They were to wear old shirts open at the throat, very ragged trousers, old straw hats, and no shoes or stockings. And each boy was to do some special stunt—whistle, sing, recite, dance—anything that might be done naturally by a "barefoot boy with cheeks of tan," etc.

On the evening of the test, 28 boys appeared on the stage, all rigged up as Ray appeared in the picture. Each of the 28 did his little bit of singing, dancing, whistling, reciting, etc.

It is by such means, simple enough in themselves, that the exhibitor can best meet the problem of keeping 'em coming during the summer months, Mr. Breslin believes.

Novel Float Used in Portland Annual Event

The accompanying cut shows the combination exploitation stunt for "The Kid," and contribution to the annual Rose Festival held recently at Portland, Ore., put over by Jensen and Von Herberg, owners of the five picture houses indicated by the flags on the floats.

The float was one of the most admired of any entering the Rose Festival parade.

Prologue number staged by Managing Director I. P. Wilkerson of the California theatre, Los Angeles, for the Chester comedy, "Dear Old New York," under the title of "A Block Party on Hester Street"

"Scrambled Wives" Prologue

Effective Number Presented by Joseph Plunkett of New York Mark Strand

A VERY novel and highly effective yet economical idea in prologues was presented last week at the New York Mark Strand theatre in the number which Managing Director Joseph L. Plunkett, of the Mark Strand theatre, originated for "Scrambled Wives."

To go into the stage craft details of the elaborate stage setting illustrated by the accompanying cut is to advise that it consists of nothing more than a neutral-blue back-drop and a flat with a house painted on it. The rest is completed by proper lighting effects and a duet, preferably soprano and tenor. Now, to delve still deeper, the analysis would be this: the back-drop remains as it is, requiring little or no lighting; the house which is painted on the flat has a gable-roof effect; a door painted in the center; a round window on each side of the door; an attic window which opens directly above the door; a weather-cock at the very top of the house, and two blossoming trees in flower-pots which ornament each side of the house.

The scene opens in red and blue light, with a green spot on the tenor, who is attired in clown-masquerade costume. He serenades under the center window, singing the tenor part from "You Are Free" (Jacobi). Slowly the window opens and the soprano, also in masquerade costume, chimes in. A white spot is thrown on her. Toward the close, the red border lights are eliminated and the blue becomes dim. At the finish the soprano retires, shutting the window as she does so, and the white spot is removed. The tenor closes as she sinks on the doorstep, and the green spot which had remained on him throughout is darkened completely.

This reduction of presentation costs without altering the standard quality of entertainment in the least, is what good, thorough showmanship consists of. To better the quality of entertainment under such conditions, as is the case of Mr. Plunkett, is still a greater achievement.

Utopia Theatre After "Passion" in Big Way

"Passion" played recently at the Utopia theatre, Painesville, O., to record-breaking business, due not only to the fact that the picture has had national advertising, but also to the fact that it was given unique exploitation locally. The most striking thing in connection with the exploitation on "Passion" was the shadow box display right out in the middle of the entrance to the theatre. A cut-out of a six-sheet was pasted on beaver board. The beaver board was painted a vivid blue. Then this display was flanked by two other beaver boards, also painted blue, and placed in a recessed manner so as to give the appearance of a shadow box. At night, when the lights of the marquee were blazing, the shadow box picture was also lighted. Red lights, arranged so as to produce an indirect lighting effect, directed attention to the picture. Effective, artistic, and at the same time expressive of the photoplay, was this simple exploitation.

In addition to this outside display that acted like a magnet on the people of Painesville and all the surrounding territory, the Utopia theatre offered an elaborate prologue, something altogether new for a town the size of Painesville. The prologue was in the nature of an historical revue. Miss Vida Katabish, prominent locally as a dancer of note, assisted by four of her pupils, opened with a barefoot dance, introducing Famous Vamps, among them being Eve, Cleopatra and Dubarry. Dubarry, portrayed by Miss Marguerite Durst, appeared all in white. She was seated on a throne in the middle of the stage. Costumed in the age of Louis XVI, four men and four women danced the stately minuet. Miss Katabish, in black satin, was the King. Near the close of the minuet, the King approached Mme. Dubarry. With a bright spotlight aimed at them, they started the steps of the minuet together, but as they started the lights began to dim, the music began to grow faint, and the dance faded into the picture, "Passion," just as if the characters of the play had taken up the story at the conclusion of the minuet.

Greene Brings Out Foreign Population

When "Deception" played at the Crescent Theatre, Perth Amboy, N. J., Fred V. Greene, Jr., the Paramount exploiteer who has been transferred from the Denver to the New York Exchange, undertook to capture the foreign population of the New Jersey factory town. He printed several hundred door knob punch cards advertising the picture in Hungarian, stressing the fact that Ernest Lutbitsch, the director, is a Magyar.

Mysterious Stranger for "Witching Hour" Showing

A mysterious stranger walking the streets of Detroit, refusing to talk to people but pulling a lot of eccentric stunts, proved to be exploitation for "The Witching Hour," playing recently at the La Salle Gardens theatre.

The window of a vacant store was completely enclosed except for a small peephole. The mysterious stranger attracted attention by making the figure "2" on every other cement block in the sidewalk. When the crowd reached suitable proportions, he looked into the peephole. The crowd usually lined up for a peek and the aperture showed a 3-sheet advertising "The Witching Hour." Jack Lacy, the new Paramount exploiter, arranged the stunt.

"Buried Treasure" Idea Worked Once More

The buried treasure hunt, which John L. Johnston, the Paramount exploiteer, arranged for the showing of "Buried Treasure" at Grauman's Rialto Theatre, was repeated for the Raymond Hotel Theatre, Pasadena, Cal., at the request of D. J. Schulman, the manager. The stunt was practically a duplicate of the first.

Johnston tied up a Pasadena costumer for free use of buccaneer garbs. The opera company which Johnston picked up in Los Angeles was also used in Pasadena. The singers formed the basis of the prologue and also paraded the streets. The treasure hunt was announced in the news columns of the newspapers. A box of valuables including money was buried and the site diagramed and printed in the papers. A great crowd of youngsters, many of them summer resorters brought their picks and shovels and hunted for the strong-box. The newspaper reporters were on the job.

Deardourff Builds Another Fine Lobby Display

Creating atmosphere is one of the easiest things accomplished by Manager C. C. Deardourff, of the Sigma theatre, Lima, O. He uses the roof of his marquee most effectively for this purpose. For 'Uncharted Seas" he built a big frigate, masts, sails and all, and surrounded it with mountains of ice. All around the marquee paper icicles hung down, and made a fitting frame for this simple but effective exploitation. In addition to the exploitation of the feature attraction, Mr. Deardourff gave his comedy a prominent place by placing a life-sized cut-out of Larry Semon in front of the box office.

Mr. Deardourff reports that this direct advertising has done much to keep the Sigma theatre always in the public mind.

Atlanta Manager Tenders Resignation

Gorge Schmidt, manager of the Alamo No. 2 theatre of Atlanta, Ga., has tendered his resignation to take effect immediately. Mr. Schmidt came to the Alamo No. 2 some five years ago, and has made an enviable record for himself as a live wire showman and business man. Under Mr. Schmidt's management the house has become the principal second-run theatre of the city.

Mr. Schmidt's exploitation stunts have occupied much space in these columns, and his ability in this line has brought him considerable repute.

He is leaving the Alamo to accept a much better proposition and one which will give him many more opportunities to exercise his own special talents.

Alarm Clocks Advertise "Alarm Clock Andy"

As exploitation for the engagement of "Alarm Clock Andy," playing recently at the Capitol theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., Manager E. J. Lewis had the front of the theatre hung with a large number of alarm clocks, the alarm bells of which would ring every few minutes.

The stunt attracted large crowds.

Ramsey Has a "Dinty" Parade Too

A number of stunts were utilized by Manager Elmer Ramsey in his exploitation of "Dinty" at the Central theatre, Fairbury, Ill.

Two freckle-faced urchins and a small colored boy constituted a parade which marched through the main section of the town carrying signs reading, "See Dinty at the Central." The trio also distributed handbills in the residential districts.

Sladdin's Dance Cards Used at Binghamton

An example of the influence of trade paper reports of exploitation stunts was shown in Binghamton, N. Y., where the Strand Theatre, D. Cohen, manager, called on the Paramount exploiteer, S. G. Sladdin, to duplicate Sladdin's tieup with a dance card. Sladdin first used this stunt in Canandaigua, N. Y.

The theatre printed the dance orders for a party.

Elaborate Prologue and Musical Setting at the Stanley

An elaborate surrounding bill providing an abundance of atmosphere for the picture helped set off "Deception," for Manager Wolf, of the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia. First of all, the eye of the visitor to the theatre was struck at once by a changed lobby. Various beautiful pieces of old English furniture, chairs and chests, big pieces and small, all obtained from one of the leading dealers in rare antiques in the city, stood about. On each was a dignified attractive card bearing the name of the furniture dealer and above each hung an old-fashioned parchment scroll, proclaiming some historical fact used in connection with the story, in picturesque old English. The effect was primarily one of dignity, massiveness, and old-timeness.

The prologue for the production was borrowed from New York and was arranged originally by Hugo Riesenfeld. The curtain rose on an old Inn scene. There was an opening chorus, a solo number, and a finale. There were fifteen members of the cast, including two principals, Carl Rollins as the minstrel, and Ludwig Burystaller as the jester, and a chorus of male singers. All were appropriately costumed as courtiers and hunters, and the inspiration is derived from an old song written "by one Gray" for Henry VIII.

During the performance of the feature, a special musical arrangement included music of the old masters.

De Bruler's "Old Time Movie" Makes Hit

Atlanta Exhibitor Stages Now Famous Exploitation Stunt With Usual S. R. O. Results

THE famous "old time movie show" stunt keeps going the rounds and mopping up at that too. The latest manager to use the idea is Ralph De Bruler of the Howard theatre, Atlanta.

The first intimation Atlanta had of Mr. De Bruler's intention was given in a typewritten communication addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Atlanta, on letter-head from the Howard theatre, which told them that a program of the "old and new," featuring somebody who was an old favorite, yet ever new, would be on the bill—and that it was well worth seeing.

The program was divided into two parts—first the old, and then the new. The old was preceded by two or three slides—distinctly the old-fashioned kind, printed in the theatre. The first announced that the audience was invited to step back about ten or twelve years, to their first movie theatre—to remember the stuffy atmosphere of the "store-show," with its banana peels and peanuts—its tinpanny "orchestra," its "ulcerated songs," et al. Another slide informed the audience that the operators had joined in the fun and were going to give an idea of the sort of things that used to happen years ago, when they were first learning to run a picture machine.

The slides being over with, the "real show" started.

First, there was a Keystone comedy, with Charlie Chaplin, Mabel Normand, Chester Conklin, etc. The picture flickered and wavered over the screen somewhat uncertainly, and was almost constantly out of frame. The way in which the audience entered into the spirit of the game was sufficient proof of their enjoyment of the novel stunt.

A squeaking, wheezy electric piano ground out rag-time, and grand opera with equal aplomb through it all.

While the reels were being changed, a slide was thrown on the screen, which read "While the operator is changing reels, the latest illustrated song will be sung, by Mr. Edison's marvelous invention, the phonograph." And then, with the antiquated slides revealing the girl and her lover in all sorts of loving poses—and now and then, when a slide went in upside down, everybody laughed and thought it great fun—and the phonograph squeaked out "Last Night Was the End of the World" with the requisite sob-tones and quivers.

The star piece of this program was a picture called "Friends" made in 1908, with Mary Pickford, Henry Walthall, Harry Carey, Lionel Barrymore, Walter Miller, Charles Mailes, and a number of other (in those days) embryonic stars.

As this picture faded out, the purple velvet curtains softly closed over the screen, and the Howards forty-piece concert orchestra filed into their places. With the first crash of "The Bohemian Girl" overture, the new program began, and followed, with the latest screen news from the whole world, with, as the feature picture, Mary Pickford's "Through the Back-Door."

This program was an oddity—a distinct novelty—and it aroused more talk than anything in the way of exploitation that has been done in Atlanta in many moons. And as a result Mr. De Bruler is now looking for some more "old timers" to use with like effect.

Miller Pulls Novelty Stunt

"Made in Heaven" Gets Most Unique Exploitation Campaign at Los Angeles

ARE marriages made in Heaven? Roy Miller, publicity manager for the California theatre, Los Angeles, and John W. Rankin, Goldwyn exploitation representative proved that at least one could be made 3,000 feet in the air as an exploitation stunt for "Made in Heaven," Stella Raub and Joseph Ramsey, professional balloonists, who worked as extras during the production of the picture, Tom Moore's real marriage and the title "Made in Heaven" suggested the idea, which was agreed to by the balloon people.

The exploitation men secured a tract of land adjacent to one of the popular parks in Los Angeles, on which there was a hill.

A huge sign measuring 12x20 feet announced a free balloon ascension, marriage by wireless telephony at a heighth of 3000 ft., the date of the event and the engagement of "Made in Heaven" at the California. The sign was swung on the frame-work of a scenic railway where it attracted the attention of thousands of automobilists on their way to the beaches.

A studio set representing a minister's study was erected at the foot of the hill and a complete wireless telephone outfit installed. A marriage license was taken out, a minister engaged and the first part of the ceremony staged with best man, bridesmaids and witnesses, in regulation form, following which an expert gave instructions in regard to the use of the wireless outfit. A sign reading "Marriages 'MADE IN HEAVEN' by wireless phone HERE" was prominently displayed.

The prospective bride and groom then prepared for their flight and marriage in the clouds from the balloon situated at the top of the hill. As the big bag, 126 feet in circumference and 70 feet in height began to fill, immense banners reading "MADE IN HEAVEN" and CALIFORNIA THEATRE ALL WEEK were disclosed on each side of the balloon. As the balloon left the ground the minister in his study began reading the marriage ceremony into the receiver of the wireless 'phone and response was made by means of an instrument carried by the balloonists to which headpieces were attached. When the balloon was some thousand feet in air, bunches of heralds reading on one side "Guess if Tom Moore's marriage was made in Heaven in his latest Goldwyn picture "Made in Heaven" at the California theatre this week and on the other a straight announcement of the engagement at the California theatre, were cut loose and the bride's bouquet to which a number of tickets to the theatre were attached was thrown to the crowd below.

The stunt was the most original ever staged in Los Angeles and attracted between 8,000 and 10,000 people who divided their interest between the set and balloon.

Doubles for Mary Compete for Prize

R. M. Howe, manager of Griffin's theatre in Thorold, Ontario, used a novel exploitation stunt to draw the crowds during the run of "The Love Light." He conducted a "Resemblance Test" for girls who thought they looked like Miss Pickford. There was a first and a second prize offered, the first prize being a letter from Miss Pickford and a two months' pass to the theatre, and the second prize being a one-month pass. On Wednesday night the names of the contestants were flashed on the screen, and two nights later the names of the winners were shown. In this way he drew crowds for two nights.

Rogers Tries Hokum Stunts for Coogan Feature

Manager E. R. Rogers, of the Signal Amusement Co.'s Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., effectively exploited "Peck's Bad Boy," by having a fake policeman, and a youth costumed after the fashion affected by Jackie Coogan in the picture.

The boy hung cards on the fronts of automobiles reading, "Peck's Bad Boy Did This—Catch Him," and the policeman would catch him in the act.

This stunt attracted large crowds, which afforded them (the policeman and boy) an opportunity to distribute cards announcing the showing of the above mentioned film.

Gary's Cartoons Still Find Favor

Cartoons drawn around Paramount pictures have been furnished by R. C. Gary, Paramount exploiter for the Omaha exchange, for the newspapers of that district. Gary, himself, is the cartoonist. While the cartoons advertise the pictures, they have enough generalities to please the readers. Since the service is free, there are fifteen newspapers, dailies and weeklies, in the Omaha territory that have been glad to use them.

Max R. Doolittle, Paramount exploiter for the Des Moines exchange, has found fourteen newspapers in his district to use cartoons which he has drawn.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer are planning a new policy for their two big vaudeville houses, McVicker's and the Rialto, and hereafter, in addition to giving the regular vaudeville program, will show a feature picture. This was decided upon after the hit made by Jackie Coogan's "Peck's Bad Boy" at McVicker's last week.

Senate bill number 501, which revised the music tax on Illinois motion picture theatres, introduced by Senator Martin R. Carlson, was put through the senate with the aid of Senator Marks, was slaughtered in the house in the final hours of the legislature after the onslaught of the measure by Representative Sidney Lyon.

B. Herbert Milligan, president of Creation Films, left Chicago this week for New York with his family traveling by auto. He expects to remain in New York some weeks getting the Kalem Studio, of which he is owner, ready for production, which he is planning to start the middle of Summer.

Ad Powell, who for seven years operated the Rex Theatre, and widely known in Chicago film circles as a high-class showman, is now connected with the Schoenstadt circuit handling all the publicity, advertising and other details for the circuit.

O. F. Spahr, vice-president and manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, manufacturers of the Motiograph De Luxe, makes a trip twice every year to Minneapolis, Minnesota, to call on Sid Louis, of the Rialto Theatre Supply Company, Motiograph distributors in that territory.

Mr. Louis who is known as one of the expert fisherman in those parts, took Mr. Spahr on a casting expedition. Mr. Spahr, it is reported, spent the afternoon entangling his line after one attempt to cast, while Mr. Louis was hauling in big and little bass.

Mr. Spahr came back to Chicago confident that he was a better Motiograph man than fisherman.

There was a big celebration around Pathe's Chicago office when Manager Aschmann announced that "Chic" Keppler was the winner of the central west division prize in Pathe's big Dempsey selling contest and would travel to the fight, sit in a ring side seat and give Broadway the O O all at the expense of Pathe as a reward for his splendid work. "Chic" before departing purchased a nifty check suit and a cane to wear when perambulating around the corner of Forty-second street and Broadway and cheering the winner in the big fight.

The Master Advertisers are now preparing an extensive advertising campaign for Russell-Coverdale and Russell on their productions. At present they are making an elaborate and practical press book for them on the series of twenty-six two-reel semi-western features, featuring Frank Braidwood. One of their recent accomplishments was the completion of a press sheet on "The Circular Staircase" known on the speaking stage as "The Bat" for Klimax Pictures. Mr. Kline and Mr. Levy of the Klimax Pictures both thought the press sheet was very practical and that it would be a great aid to them in putting over their features.

R. S. Shroder, the district manager of Pathe, was in Chicago this week conferring with Manager Aschmann on sales plans and outlining the Pathe campaign.

Maurice Choynski and a party of Chicago theatre men are scheduled to attend the Dempsey-Carpentier fight Saturday and he announces he is going to put some money on the French battler. After spending a few days in the east Mr. Choynski will take a six weeks' holiday in the Michigan woods.

John Balaban has returned from Pike Lake, Wisconsin, where he has been spending a ten days' vacation fishing. It is understood that the muskies, pike and bass declined to bite during his stay and was unable to make good on his promises to furnish his numerous Chicago friends with fish dinners. He blames the hot weather.

Bert Lytell, whose new picture for Metro release will be "A Trip to Paradise"

Salesmanager A. V. Birkholm, of the Nicholas Power Company, plans to stop over in Chicago for several days on his return from the Minneapolis convention and while here will demonstrate the new light being used in the Powers cameragraph which is declared to double the efficiency of the screen illumination. Mr. Birkholm while in Chicago will make his headquarters at S. E. Schaffer & Company, distributors of Powers cameragraphs, 24 E. Eighth street. S. E. Schaffer will make a trip to Cincinnati and St. Louis next week, in which cities he intends shortly to open branches of his supply business.

Lee Herz is back in Chicago after a trip to New York where he purchased the northern Illinois and northern Indiana rights to four Triangle features, "Dombey and Son," "Lady Windermere's Fan," "The Greatest Performance," and "The Lyons Mail." He also took over the series of Zip one-reel comedies for release in the same territory.

G. C. Braum, widely known in Chicago picture circles as a film salesman, is now manager and personal representative of Smiling Billy Mason and has arranged an appearance for the film star at McVickers opening July 9th. It is understood that Mr. Braum is negotiating with a well-known production company to use Smiling Billy in some of the pictures to be made this Fall after his personal appearance engagements are fulfilled. Mr. Braum is making his Chicago headquarters at 808 S. Wabash avenue.

Billy West, the popular and Pioneer comedian of the state right field, came on from the west coast to attend the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Convention in Minneapolis, stopping over in Chicago for a day, then journeying to the convention city with Clyde Elliott of Pioneer. Mr. West will return to Chicago the latter part of the week and will spend a few days in the Windy City before heading for the coast where he is scheduled to resume production at an early date.

The Monarch Theatre Supply Company, Inc., have moved from 537 S. Dearborn street, where it has been located for the past eight years, to 724 S. Wabash avenue. Monarch is expanding its business and now have branches established in St. Louis and Memphis, Tennessee. The company will continue to handle a complete line of theatre equipment, chairs and everything from booth to screen.

Pinkleman and Cory, of Quincy, Illinois, will build a fifteen hundred seat theatre in that city. This will bring the string of houses operated by them to five as they already are running four houses there.

It is reported that "The Queen of Sheba" will be the opening feature at the Woods, which William Fox has leased for thirty-two weeks, taking possession about the middle of August.

Kineto Review Presents Darwinian Theory

Bernard Shaw's newest book, "Back to Methusaleh" and Charles Urban's Kineto Review, "Was Darwin Right?" travel along very similar lines, although the latter is open-minded in its treatment.

Mr. Urban's product is a motion picture, a study in anthropoids. Many able photographers co-operated in producing it and the thirty-seven different types pictured have been photographed in many parts of the world, some in their native homes and others in many of the famous zoos of the world.

First National Week in Laramie, Wyoming

June 18th to 25th was "First National Week" at the Empress theatre, Laramie, Wyoming, and the whole week was filled with pictures from that company. "Jackie" Coogan in "Peck's Bad Boy" played to capacity at every performance. Sunday night Anita Stewart opened a two nights' engagement in "Sowing the Wind." "Man-Woman-Marriage," for three days was another knockout.

Ed. Dillon to Direct for Cosmopolitan

George B. Van Cleve, vice-president and general manager of William Randolph Hearst's film interests, announces that Edward Dillon will direct, under the supervision of Cosmopolitan Production, "The Beauty Shop," featuring Raymond Hitchcock. "The Beauty Shop" was a musical comedy success by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf.

Chester M. Franklin to Return to the Coast

Chester M. Franklin, who was brought from the West Coast studios to direct Constance Binney in her latest Realart picture, will return as soon as it is completed. Mr. Franklin is under contract with Realart and recently directed May McAvoy in "A Private Scandal."

Music and the Picture

Important Music Facts

By E. K. Gillett

IN a talk with Mr. E. C. Mills of the American Society of Composers and Authors certain facts were brought out which should be stated as supplementary to our article on the Music Tax which appeared in our issue of June 18.

To begin with, Mr. Mills stated that it is possible for any theatre to accompany their pictures without the use of taxable music.

The question, however, is one of degree and the desire to please the public, who, as we all know, are anxious to hear the latest selections and popular tunes.

Another point which was made was that publishers who at the present time are not members of the Society may join at any time and their music immediately becomes taxable. The only safe method of avoiding the tax, Mr. Mills stated, was to use music which has been stamped or labelled definitely on the cover releasing it from any performance tax.

It may be interesting to note that while with Mr. Mills certain publishers made application for a conference in which to talk over and consider the question of their joining the Society. It therefore behooves every theatre man when choosing non-taxable music to use the utmost care and be sure that the selections are tax free, as there is a legal question as to whether, when a new member joins the Society, his music is not retroactively taxable back to 1909.

The Courts say that any author, composer or publisher, no matter what their affiliations, may charge a tax similar to that charged by the Society of Authors and Composers. The question is how they are to collect it.

The Society does not worry about this. They have an organization through which they can collect the tax and are collecting it.

What happens if a theatre does not pay the tax but yet is caught playing taxable music?

Mr. Owner is, or may be, summoned to court and there allowed to tell why he has played the music without paying the tax, it already having been decided by the Supreme Court that the tax is constitutional and must be paid. What happens?

First—assessed damages—a minimum fine of $250 and a maximum of $5,000.

Second—he pays a lawyer's fee for advice and defense.

Third—he loses his time away from his business.

Fourth—he loses his own personal expenses.

In all he might expect to spend perhaps, $500, perhaps somewhat less or a great deal more, and in the end be forced to pay the tax as well.

Now let's see what the tax would amount to:

The average theatre in this country seats 670 people. The music tax amounts to 10 cents per seat per annum—$67.00. This tax is low when we consider that music is conceded to be 40 per cent of any performance. Figure it yourself with your own house—10 cents per seat per annum. Then consider that there is no limit to the tax which could be charged and also that in the signing at the 10-cent rate, a long term contract can be obtained, thus avoiding the possibility of a raise.

There are other pitfalls:

A theatre man may use the greatest possible care in selecting the sheet music used in his house and give the most implicit instructions to his musicians which they follow with the greatest care, yet in order to fill in during the afternoon—supper hour or at some other time—a roll is slipped into the organ or piano or a score is played and taxable music is used without the theatre man knowing it. Immediately the theatre owner is liable to be pulled into court and fined, for the Society means business and is going to enforce its rights as the courts have ruled they exist.

The following bill was introduced into the Illinois Legislature and defeated because, as Mr. Mills said, it was against the Constitution of the United States and no State wants bills of this kind on their Statute books:

> Senate Bill No. 501, Introduced May 24, 1921—"Any persons who exact or attempt to exact money from a purchaser of Music in addition to the purchase price on account of public use of such Music shall be fined not exceeding $200, or imprisoned in the County jail for not exceeding one year."

The defeating of this bill is of the greatest importance.

In conclusion it is interesting to note from Mr. Mills' records the number of theatre men who have paid the tax to date:

Up to May 1, 1921	2587
Since May 1, 1921, approximately	475
Total	3062

Famous Organist Seeks Picture Post

Dorso d'Autalffy, the Hungarian composer and organist, is desirous of locating an American picture post.

I mention this because Mr. d'Autalffy is one of the greatest musicians in the world. He is one of the professors of the Budapest Academy. His colleagues in the faculty were Hubay in violin, Dohnanyi in piano. He has won innumerable prizes for his compositions for orchestra and organ, and his works have been performed by Europe's leading organizations.

This coming Fall he has been engaged to appear with Bodansky's orchestra in his own concerto for organ and orchestra.

MUSIC FORUM

Under this heading the new ideas, queries, suggestions are gathered. This is where the motion-picture gets together on music.

Mr. I.:

Your notes sent us from Motion Picture News are fine. The work you have done in promoting music, has always been very interesting in every way.

I have found one or two extracts which we could use pertaining to the orchestra in Motion Pictures. More in this line we will be glad to have and credit you and Motion Picture News with the same.

Sincerely,
A. E. TAYLOR, Editor
"The Violinist."

Mr. I.:

Dear Mr. I.:

I came up here from New York one year ago as violinist and director of the leading motion picture theatre of this city. I found conditions here in the theatres impossible from a musical standpoint. No attempt was made to properly set the picture and only the most frothy music was being used. Since I came the management has put in an adequate orchestra and we endeavor to fit the picture program with a musical setting of the proper atmosphere.

I am waiting the opportunity to locate in the States again preferably somewhere in the South or Southwest and would deem it a great favor if you would put me in touch with any openings which might arise in that section.

Sincerely,
BAILEY H. ALART,

Rothacker-Aller Tribute

Pages Three Hundred Fifty-One to Three Hundred Sixty-Six

Foreword

Mortar and Cement—Plus!

There are some factories from which a visitor walks out with the feeling that he has come in contact with a living, breathing personality, expressed in brick, mortar and steel.

They are plants with a personality.

Such a one is the Rothacker-Aller Laboratory of Los Angeles.

It expresses Joseph Aller, well known as the leading laboratory expert in this country.

You can, on the one hand, imagine Joe Aller doing a job of printing and developing entirely with his own hands—selecting his chemicals, mixing them, insuring cleanliness, temperature, precision, doing every operation with an eye made keen and hands and brain made skillful by eighteen years of conscientious specialization.

The Master Hand Multiplied

And again you can imagine a multiplication of this individual operation, an expansion of a one man output into a factory capacity of five million feet of film per week—but without an iota of loss in the skill, precision and conscientious labor of the master hand of the expert.

The Rothacker-Aller laboratory is simply a greater Aller.

In every single detail it is so planned and built that every hand of every operator has got to do just what Aller's hands would do.

It is built to eliminate the human alibi.

It is fool-proof, dirt-proof, mistake-proof, carelessness-proof, waste-proof.

From stem to stern, from the reception of the chemicals to the exit of the finished film, there's an automatic safeguard to every operation whether human or machine.

This factory expresses and guarantees high grade quality, just as Aller himself would guarantee a quality job. Economy, too, and speed, and service.

" Guarantee " is a strong word to use; but we mean just that. The mechanism of this laboratory guarantees a quality product.

Speed, economy, service—these are highly important to the producer and distributor of pictures. But above all quality! No man is content to spend a fortune upon a negative and trust its copies to cheap and haphazard printing and developing.

The Rothacker-Aller Laboratory is a credit to the industry and to the American motion picture.

The Cent Versus Insurance

As it is the embodiment of the spirit and genius of Joseph Aller, so, too, is it a forward step in the realization of the dreams of Watterson R. Rothacker.

First Chicago, then Los Angeles, and soon New York and London—an epic of steady progress and consistent growth. Built, as the industry knows only too well for further recounting here, on a sturdy, steadfast clinging to the gospel of quality and efficient service.

Laboratory men in general, and the industry itself, can well reckon the debt owed Watterson R. Rothacker for the sincere and consistent preaching that has brought home to all a realization that the fraction of a cent a foot in developing cost can in nowise balance the scales against quality and service.

So that now, on the occasion of the forging of another link in the world-wide chain, we may well offer the following pages of Motion Picture News not as a " Section," not as a " Supplement,"—but as a ROTHACKER-ALLER TRIBUTE.

FILM MFG. CO. CHICAGO, U.S.A.

There are reasons— Come and see them.

Founded 1910 by Watterson R. Rothacker

The new modern and improved machinery, the specially designed equipment, and the numerous facilities of every description included in the new half million dollar Rothacker-Aller Film Laboratory make possible the most prompt and desirable service.

The high quality of work delivered patrons of the Aller Laboratory will be improved upon by greater facilities of this new institution. The benefit of my seventeen years motion picture laboratory experience costing hundreds of thousands of dollars for experimental work is offered our patrons as a part of our service for I will give my personal attention to supervision of all work and solving the photographic problems of the laboratory's patrons.

¶ Says Watterson R. Rothacker: "The higher the brow the less it sweats"—and then he proves it.—"Watch his smoke," say those who know.

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER

WHEN Watterson R. Rothacker and Joseph Aller decided to join forces they were determined that the Rothacker-Aller laboratories should be the finest plant that money and human ingenuity could produce. They had their minds set on a plant which mechanically would make possible the giving of both superlative quality and utmost service to clients. Cinema technical experts who have visited the Coast's newest laboratory say that their ambition has been realized.

Construction was held up until everybody was satisfied that nothing more could be added to the paper plans which would in any respect add to the completed plant. A. P. Miller, technical secretary of the Chicago Rothacker laboratory, spent considerable time with Mr. Aller in Los Angeles during the planning period. Thus all the lessons learned in the past at the Chicago Rothacker plant and at the former Aller Laboratories were capitalized in the new laboratory.

The planners went far outside the film field for ideas. The methods of the most successful manufacturers in other lines of industry were studied. The result is a working place where the maximum of efficiency is attained not only by mechanical completeness but also by convenience, labor saving features, and every consideration for the comfort of workers. The latter is an element, it is needless to state, which will be materially reflected in the laboratory's finished product.

The Rothacker-Aller plant is located in the heart of the West Coast film industry, occupying two acres of ground on Melrose Avenue, the dividing line between Los Angeles and Hollywood. On one side are the great Robert Brunton Studios, and on the other the Robertson-Cole Studios. Across the street stand the Douglas Fairbanks Studios. It is only a five minute or less ride to any of the other big plants of Hollywood.

The laboratory stands in a setting of velvety lawns, verdant shrubs and blooming flowers. The building, which is of mission architecture, looks more like a fashionable club or a country gentleman's mansion than an industrial structure. The plant is 60 x 130 ft. and has two floors and a basement. The roof is being finished for the pleasure of workers.

A World-Wide Chain

MR. ROTHACKER'S goal is a world-wide chain of standardized laboratories. The Coast and Chicago plants are the first two links in the chain. Before Mr. Rothacker sailed for Europe in June for the purpose of building a London laboratory he had his technical staff in New York paving the way for an East Coast plant.

The two plants are now synchronized and the four will later be. This is expected to mean much to producers, distributors and exhibitors with respect to release prints. For one thing it will mean the saving of a week in the matter of timing a feature negative. For example, a Coast negative may be timed in the Rothacker-Aller plant as produced and when the final scenes are edited the Coast laboratory will be in position to begin release printing immediately. If the printing is to be done in Chicago, New York, or London, the time cards made on the Coast will be shipped with the negative and printing can begin immediately upon the negative's arrival. This is possible only among standardized laboratories operating under identical conditions and using the same equipment, processes and formulas.

In the Rothacker-Aller plant Service is spelled with a capital "S." The photographic departments of producer clients will have the benefit of expert advice from a laboratory viewpoint and the laboratory machine shop will be at the disposal of producers, for the repair of cameras and attachments. A battery of Bell & Howell cameras are held in reserve at the plant for the use of producers in an emergency such as injury to their own equipment. Theatres, cutting rooms and camera changing rooms are at all times open to customers. An extra rush job can be delivered in an incredibly short time and the ordinary routine "rushes" will go to the producer in six to eight hours after the negative is left for developing, setting new standards in service.

Plant Perfect"

¶ Confidant and Counselor of Artistes—That's Joseph Aller's Unique Distinction.—From Biograph's traditions to the realization of to-day at Los Angeles.

Safeguards for Clients

THE disadvantage, both to laboratory and producers, of having other than employees in the laboratory proper has been proven in every plant. In the designing of this building, under the supervision of Mr. Aller, a plan was carried out which makes it impossible for other than employees to enter the laboratory workrooms except through the main lobby and the private office of Mr. Aller, the resident head of the business. The only part of the plant accessible to other than employees is that containing the changing rooms for cameramen, negative examining room, film editing rooms, theatres for the screening of rushes, the big theatre seating 100 and the film vault in which individuals may deposit their film in private lockers.

The main office and lobby on the second floor is tastefully decorated in mission. Upon entrance a visitor's eyes are delighted by a massive fireplace. At the right of the lobby are the private offices of Mr. Rothacker and Mr. Aller. At the left is the bookkeeping department. Immediately in front is the film receiving and delivery window. The camera man receives his raw stock at this window and is admitted to the changing rooms. Upon returning the exposed negative he delivers it at this window, and by dumbwaiters it goes downstairs to the developing rooms. At this same window the positive is later delivered to the producer's representative.

The manager of the receiving and delivering department admits cameramen, directors and others to the hallway which connects the film changing rooms, negative inspection rooms, cutting rooms, the theatre for rushes and the film vaults. This hallway also connects with the mechanical department equipped with drill presses, lathes and milling machines for the repair of cameras. After film is edited it is returned to the receiving and delivery department and from there goes to the printing rooms or to the negative assembling department.

Aller Genius Apparent

THE inventive genius of Mr. Aller is reflected in every department of the laboratory in labor saving devices perfected by him. Mr. Aller is the inventor of the negative numbering device used by the Eastman Kodak Company and a number of improvements on cameras, printing machines, finishing machines and other laboratory equipment.

The plant's raw film stock depository is in vaults opening onto a rear balcony running the full width of the building. As needed the stock is removed to an anteroom of the perforating department, where the stock is taken from cans and vacuum cleaned. Passing from the perforating machines it is advanced to the printing room by conveniently located carriers. The capacity of the perforating department is limited only by the volume of work received at the laboratory. Bell & Howell perforators are used exclusively.

In the printing room the Bell & Howell printers are placed in four rows. They are operated from driving shafts placed in the air exhaust vaults below the floor, and consequently insure a perfect synchronized movement of all printers.

The printed stock is sent to the developing room by a continuous carrier, where it is wound by machinery onto a new design of rack having a capacity of 250 ft. To expedite handling eight racks of film are bound together for the several subsequent processes.

When the film is developed the racks are automatically advanced to the fixing tanks. Placed in the washing tanks, the racks advance, again automatically, to the anteroom of the drying department. The advancement of the film through the washing tanks is so timed that the prints are thoroughly washed by the time they reach the anteroom. The racks themselves have a special device which takes up all slack as the film stretches from moisture.

The drying rooms are on both sides of the plant and extend the full length of the building. The nine drying drums in each room are operated independently by driv-

"WHO'S WHO" AND WHY

Watterson R. Rothacker

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER became of potential interest to the census department in Chicago May 6, 1885.

He was being educated with a view to entrance at West Point when, at the mature age of 16, he forsook his studies at Lewis Tech (Chicago), and threw his hat into the world's ring—joining the Thunder Mountain gold rush of 1901.

He got himself a gold mine and for several exciting months engaged in the business of putting gold back into the ground. After the gold mine had digested all of young Rothacker's gold capital, he left the mine to shift for itself and went to work as business manager-editor-porter of the Weiser (Idaho) Signal. There not being sufficient revenue from the Signal, the boy business manager-editor-porter got a job trucking freight afternoons at the railroad depot. But even a man of Rothacker's energy could not hustle freight fast enough to continue a journalistic career under the existing conditions, so after a time he heartlessly orphaned the sheet and began punching cattle on a Colorado ranch in order to earn a railroad ticket back to Chicago.

In 1910 Mr. Rothacker resigned as Western manager of The Billboard to engage in the film business.

He entered a brand new field in the new motion picture industry, becoming the pioneer producer of practical pictures—educational, advertising or industrial films, as they are variously called.

He was the author of the first book on motion picture advertising.

In 1916 the big Rothacker studio-laboratory was erected on Diversity Parkway, Chicago.

Mr. Rothacker was vice-president of the first motion picture board of trade. He formerly was chairman of the studio committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and for several years was chairman of the membership committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

He is the son of Ottomar Rothacker, poet and journalist, who edited newspapers in Denver, Omaha, and Salt Lake City, and the grandson of S. P. Rounds, government printer under Garfield and Arthur, and the godson of Col. "Marse" Henry Watterson, editor emeritus of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Shortly after entering the practical picture field, Mr. Rothacker wrote the following which has been widely quoted: "The best advertisement in the world will never be written because motion pictures are the superlative advertising medium and excel the limitations of any pen."

He Knows the "Why"

¶ Watterson R. Rothacker knows the problems of the producer and distributor. Many who have been close to him will tell you that is one of the largest factors in his success. Sympathetic cooperation from the laboratory, both in routine detail and in emergency situations, can well be a vital matter to the distributor of a picture.

J. Wesley Smith

J. WESLEY SMITH became one of us in 1886. The event occurred in Denver. He began showing evidence of speed at very early age.

He was educated at Lawrenceville College, the Colorado School of Mines, and behind an automobile steering wheel.

His penchant for swiftness attained its most acute stage when he was in his early twenties. As an amateur auto racing driver he won considerable space on the sport pages and a broken bone or two. He holds the world's record for a spin between Denver and Colorado Springs. He has probably made more auto trips across Death Valley than any other mortal. Persons who have ridden with him on Los Angeles boulevards are inclined to be of the opinion that he is still afflicted with speed mania in a malignant form.

Mr. Smith became a Rothacker worker in 1916. He started at the bottom of the ladder in the Rothacker Chicago laboratory. Then he became a cameraman for the Rothacker Industrial Division. His next promotion was to assistant laboratory superintendent.

Then Watterson R. Rothacker sent him to the Coast to act as his special representative, to keep in touch with clients of the Chicago laboratory.

Upon organization of Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Inc., he became secretary of the corporation.

Economy Too

¶ While quality is the keynote, it naturally follows that in a plant where the last word in inventive genius and automatic machinery plays so large a part, economy will make its appearance. The producer has been constantly in mind and he will be saved expense and trouble at every step.

Joseph Aller

JOSEPH ALLER was born in Russia. He was educated in that country and in a New York City technical school.

In 1898 he entered the photographic business. The year 1904 found him with the American Biograph Company as laboratory superintendent. He left that company in 1913.

He then went to Los Angeles to join the D. W. Griffith organization. From that time until Griffith returned to New York in 1920 he had full charge of the famous director's laboratory work. On January 1, 1920, he went into business for himself. When Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Inc., was organized he became vice president and general manager of the corporation, and resident head of the plant.

Mr. Aller has laboratoried many of America's most famous screen classics, such as "The Birth of a Nation," "The Miracle Man," "Suds," "The Mark of Zora," "Broken Blossoms."

To run through the list of best known Griffith subjects is to uncover more and more examples of the Aller laboratory genius. And it will be remembered that on Griffith productions the photography and laboratory work are always among the outstanding points for discussion and praise by the critics. In addition to Griffith, Fairbanks and Miss Pickford, other picture luminaries who have valued the Aller cooperation include Nazimova, Clara Kimball Young, William S. Hart and Mack Sennet.

Mr. Aller has received many tokens of esteem from film royalty in appreciation of the artistry he put into the developing of their negatives and the printing of their release prints. One of his most prized possessions is a gold watch presented him by Mary Pickford.

In the film field Mr. Aller is known not only as a master of the art of developing and printing but also as an inventor. He invented the Eastman Kodak Company's system of numbering negatives and has to his credit many improvements on laboratory equipment.

That remarkable institution—the new Rothacker-Aller plant—is in essence a realization of the skill and life work of the man who designed it—Joseph Aller. It may well be said that Joseph Aller has justly earned and rightly holds the title of master craftsman of film developing and printing.

The Invitation

What do most people look at on receiving a wedding invitation or announcement? Why, the engraving first, then by whom the work is done.

Hand cut engraving is different from the work done by the machine and gives a clear cut letter that shows at a glance that it is engraved, not printed.

The Louis the 14th, both in the Roman and French text, are popular this season, also the Shaded Alexander and Modified English.

The small size sheet of Crane's Kid Finish Paper is the correct thing in paper.

Both stores give the same service. The 723-725 Hill Street Store, just off 7th Street, is the nearest to the shopping district.

The Last Word in Equipment

EQUIPMENT perfected to watch-like perfection, and as near automatic as possible was a natural requirement of such a plant as Watterson R. Rothacker and Joseph Aller would consider worthy to bear their names. They wanted Speed—but in this case Quality must travel arm in arm with Speed. There could be no sacrifice of either.

In the selection of equipment for Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Inc., there lies a mighty good insurance policy covering the future success of the plant.

If the machine desired could not be secured on the market, Mr. Aller designed one and had it made to order.

It is impossible for anyone to go to any part of the building when trade marks of the Bell & Howell Co. are not found. Bell & Howell cameras are in the cameraroom waiting the call of a client producer whose equipment has been impaired. In the title making room are two Bell & Howell cameras while in other parts of the building will be found printers' perforating machines and other equipment from this firm of motion photography specialists.

In the laboratory eleven Power's projecting machines are on the job—in the inspection rooms, in the theatre for rushes, and in the big theatre seating 100. When it is considered that the inspection machines will at times be operated continuously 24 hours a day, one appreciates the vital necessity of machines whose quality insures endurance and good screen illumination.

All the projection machines are equipped with G. E. Mazda lamp equipment furnished by the Los Angeles branch of the Argus Enterprises, Inc., of Cleveland. This company also furnished the Duplex Laboratory and Studio Accessories and G. E. Motor Generator Compensarc sets.

The projection booth equipment was furnished by the Pacific Amusement Supply Co., of 800 South Olive street, Los Angeles.

The developing, fixing, washing and chemical departments are equipped with tanks made specially for this laboratory by the Pacific Tank & Pipe Co. This firm was established in Los Angeles before the beginning of the Coast Film Industry.

Hurray! No Alibis!

¶ Thomas A. Edison once said, "The hardest task of any inventor is to make his device fool-proof." It has been said of the new Rothacker-Aller plant that it is "alibi-proof." Say those who have seen it: "The human equation has been eliminated. No alibis are possible. High quality is practically automatic."

Shortly after the first laboratories were established in Los Angeles the company foresaw the need of laboratory tanks and today this feature of their business is one of the largest in the country.

Rapid and convenient progress of the film from one department to another, from the time it is received until delivered, is insured by the carriers, or conveyors, specially designed to meet the peculiar needs of the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories by Meese-Gottfried Co., of 400 East Third street. In all, there are six different conveying systems which automatically move the film from one department to another.

They Never Laughed

¶ Advance announcements of film men are often the occasion for loud hahas. So many glowing promises materialize no further than the glow created by heated atmosphere. But when Watterson Rothacker announced less than twelve months ago his plans for new links of service in Los Angeles, London and New York there were no cackles. Rothacker has a habit of delivering. Already the description reads "Chicago and Los Angeles." Rothacker is now on his way to London. And it won't be many moons before the chain is completed, "Chicago, Los Angeles, London and New York."

These conveyors can be counted on to give continuous service for the 24 hours of each working day. They operate horizontally or perpendicularly as their tasks require. They are notable examples of the mechanical completeness found in this laboratory.

In the Rothacker-Aller plant are found new devices, recently perfected but which have by test proven their efficiency.

The assembly room is equipped with the new Slipper film splicing machines. J. Slipper & Co. recently established a factory for the manufacture of these machines in Los Angeles and in the near future their splicers will be introduced on the eastern market. The cleaning and polishing department is equipped with several new Cinex polishing machines manufactured in Los Angeles by the Cinema Machine Co. One operator can keep several of these machines at work.

One of the most important features of the plant is the air conditioning, heating, and ventilating system. The building is so constructed that the temperature cannot be changed except by the automatically operating thermostat. The windows cannot be opened. All air entering the laboratory proper, as well as other sections of the plant, comes through the ventilating system which cleans the air by washing it through water and gives it the proper degree of humidity and temperature, according to the department for which it is intended. Thus the air for the drying rooms is de-humidified in order that it will take up the moisture thrown off by the wet film, while the air for the perforating and printing rooms is humidified in order to reduce the danger of producing static in these two departments.

Practically all departments of the laboratory will be kept at a temperature of 68 degrees the year round. The laboratory has equipment which insures the plant water of even temperature month in and month out. A huge ice machine keeps the water in the large storage tank a little short of the freezing point. This eliminates the danger of a sudden rush of warm water from the city water mains into the tanks of the washing department.

The heating, ventilating, and water temperature regulating equipment is located in one corner of the basement with the cold water storage tank just outside and three filtering devices immediately alongside. Nearby is the cooling tower equipped with ammonia pipes. The entire system was designed and installed by C. M. Gat & Son, 2560 Santa Fe Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

In any emergency the Rothacker-Aller plant would not be without electric power for more than a few minutes, as an emergency electric generating system has been installed for the operation in the event of a breakdown of the city light plant.

Behind the Celluloid

¶ The public doesn't know Joseph Aller. But how many masters of screen production and histronic luminaries have viewed their work upon the screen and muttered a word of gratitude and tribute to the laboratory craftsmanship of Joseph Aller!

Synchronization

¶ The timing of negatives at the moment of production in the Rothacker-Aller Los Angeles laboratory will also mean that everything is set for perfect work from the start at the Rothacker Chicago plant. What this will mean in the saving of time on prints for release and the improvement of quality can well be imagined. Naturally, facilities in this respect will be still further augmented when the Rothacker New York and London laboratories are opened.

¶ We present this Rothacker-Aller Laboratory section with a feeling of peculiar satisfaction.

¶ Satisfaction in that the Laboratory which we have become so used to seeing adorn our back cover, has recorded such a steady record of achievement and successful growth.

¶ Satisfaction in the thought that this foremost organization has consistently recognized Motion Picture News, and chosen it as the trade medium to carry its announcements.

¶ Lastly, just a bit of self-satisfaction in the thought that such announcements, appearing in the Motion Picture News, have done their mite in bringing the Rothacker enterprises to the world-wide recognition which their high class service entitles them to.

The Architect's Conception of "The Perfect Plant"

Built by Specialists

IN the selection of architects and erecting engineers Watterson R. Rothacker and Joseph Aller sought those most familiar with the peculiar needs of a film laboratory. The firm selected was Mayer & Holler (Milwaukee Building Co.), which has erected a number of the finest studios on the Coast.

After listening to the suggestions of Mr. Rothacker and Mr. Aller these specialists built a laboratory where there is no lost motion.

Mayer & Holler sub-let contracts to other specialists. J. C. Bannister, an engineer and contractor of 903 West Mariposa, specializing in the erection of buildings of reinforced concrete, handled the concrete work on the plant. The contract for the supplies necessary to the concrete part of the work was let to George Eastman Co., 1111 Highland Avenue, Hollywood. The plastering was done by A. E. Miller, 1643 Middleton Place. The plumbing contract was let to F. C. Schilling & Son and the electrical installation contract to Woodill-Patterson Co.

The Location Ideal

"The Plant Perfect"

ing shafts hanging in the air exhaust vaults below the floor. The intakes for these vaults serve as the openings for belts operating the drying drums and also a specially designed power shaft which is operated by one movement of a pedal extending the full length of each drum.

From the drying rooms continuous carriers deliver the film to the assembling department. After assembling, carriers advance the film to the splicing machines and then on to the polishing rooms, where four Cinex machines give the prints their final cleaning before proceeding to the inspection department.

The six booths in the inspection department are each equipped with a latest model Powers projector. Each inspector operates his own machine, which projects on a 3 x 4 ft. screen in a room adjoining. To positively insure that no print leaves the plant unless it comes up to Rothacker Quality, three supervising inspectors sit in this testing theatre at all times to see that no inspector overlooks defects in the film he is projecting.

If a reel has to be corrected it is returned to the assembling department. It is reinspected before being sent to the shipping room.

In case the film is to be called for at the laboratory, conveyors carry it to the receiving and delivery window. If local delivery is to be made it is hurried to the producer by a messenger on a Harley-Davidson motorcycle. If the film is to be sent to a distant point it is conveyed to the shipping department.

Linked With Title Experts

ONE of the firms closely associated with the Rothacker-Aller laboratory is the H. C. Jacobsmeyer Co., specializing in the making of all types of art and printed titles. This company was organized by H. C. Jacobsmeyer under the name of Motion Picture Title Co. shortly after the film industry first came to Los Angeles. The name of the firm was changed about two years ago.

To enumerate a list of productions for which this company has made titles would mean naming practically all of the big photoplays that have been produced on the Coast in the past seven or eight years.

At the present time the Jacobsmeyer Co. is doing title work for the Rothacker-Aller laboratory and nearly all of the leading producers on the Coast. In fact, the business of the company has grown to such an extent that they recently moved to their new and specially constructed quarters at 5517 Santa Monica Blvd., where their large equipment and staff of experts are at the service of clients.

All for One

¶ "A Rothacker plant is a community plant"—that is the word of a visitor to the Chicago laboratory and the New York offices. The spirit of the executive travels through all the personnel and plays its part in maintaining a quality level.

We cordially invite every progressive member of the Motion Picture Industry to make his headquarters at our Hollywood plant while visiting the West Coast.

Producers, directors, camera artists and all technical men are offered every facility for scientific experimenting and efficient working under ideal conditions.

Distributors and exhibitors are offered an interesting and edifying visit through a magnificent institution dedicated and devoted to the art of making the screen beautiful.

Everyone will find a hearty welcome and sufficient reasons for insisting that their Coast-produced negatives be laboratoried here where safety and quality are secured with exact certainty.

Seeing is Believing.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Fight Training Shown in Kinograms

MOTION pictures showing the activities of Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier last week—the last week of the training for the battle that will settle the heavyweight boxing championship of the world—have been obtained for Educational's Kinograms.

Educational has, at great expense, obtained the exclusive rights to the pictures of the most intensive training done by the champion, Dempsey, and his challenger. The pictures were rushed to completion, so that they could go to the theatres before the regular release dates for Kinograms, but they went to all exhibitors subscribing to this news reel service. Every Kinograms customer showed this 400-foot motion picture story of both contestants on this screen by Sunday, June 26.

All during last week Kinograms photographers are engaged at Jack Dempsey's camp at Atlantic City and at the farm at Manhasset, L. I., where the French champion is preparing for the fight.

Preliminary training is now over. For weeks Dempsey and Carpentier have been going through general training work. All through the day, every day of the week, their movements were recorded by the camera. But it will be the camera of the Kinograms photographer, and only Kinograms will show what are the most interesting pictures of athletic training that have ever been taken anywhere.

Under the Federal law, any motion pictures that may be taken of the actual fight on July 2 can be shown only in the State in which the fight takes place. They cannot be shipped across the New Jersey line for display elsewhere. This means that the pictures now being made by Educational will be absolutely the last authorized, authentic film story of the work of these two great fighters.

"A. P." Distribution in Panama Arranged

Associated Producers, Inc., consummated a contract last week with the Robert Wilcox Company, which concern operates its own theatres throughout Panama and the Canal Zone covering the distribution of all features and Mack Sennett Comedies released by Associated Producers. This product will be distributed by the Wilcox Co. throughout the territory of Panama.

Plans for Paramount Week

F. P.-Lasky Forces Preparing for Sales Drive Week of Sept. 4 to 10

THE fourth National Paramount Week, the annual sales drive which each year is the big event with the Famous Players-Lasky sales organization is announceed by Paramount for the week of September 4th-10th.

Formal announcement of the date and the general plan for the big drive was made this week to the field force in the form of a large two-color folder, "Paramount Week Flier," edited by Paul L. Morgan, editor of "Paramount Pep." This folder will be issued weekly until the campaign is completed, and will contain reports of its progress from all the exchanges, together with all other data pertaining to the drive, the executives and department heads at the home office acting in the capacity of contributing editors.

In the opinion of S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution, and other Paramount officials, there is every indication that National Paramount Week this year is certain to exceed in volume of sales all similar previous efforts. Aside from the fact that each of the annual Paramount Weeks has been a bigger success than its predecessor, it is cited by the home office officials that the comparatively impromptu "Kent Week," held a few months ago, almost reached the average figures for the annual September event, while the as yet incomplete reports on "The Best Show in Town Week," just closed, indicate a similarly successful achievement.

With the added experience gained by the sales organization in these comparatively minor drives, the months of preparation for the big week in September undoubtedly will result in a new record of sales and exhibitors participation, it is declared.

The publicity and advertising department's plans call for the use of more advertising space in local newspapers than ever before, it is announced. Supplementing this advertising, an entirely new and unique line of accessories is reported to have been prepared for distribution among the company's twenty-nine exchanges.

Pathe's Big Fall Program

To Strengthen Short Subject Releases During Summer Months

SUMMER months mean no let down in the plans of Pathe, announces that company, for already the organization is laying lines to strengthen its short subject and serial releases for the Fall and Winter season.

Contracts have already been made with Cyrups J. Williams, Elmer Pearson, director of exchanges, states, for another series of Tom Santschi Western features. There will also be another series of Holman Day two reelers. work on which is now going ahead in the woods of Maine.

Bill and Bob Bradbury, the eleven year old California twins who have been prominently successful in their series of animal features, "The Adventures of Bill and Bob" are also working on a second series for Pathe, through arrangements made with Cyrus J. Williams.

Hal Roach is enlarging his comedy unit, and his productions are assured to Pathe. "Snub" Pollard will continue to be featured in a series of one reel comedies.

Timely Films, Inc., will continue to contribute "Topics of the Day" to the Pathe schedule, while Fable Films, Inc., is so far advanced in its production of the very appealing "Aesop's Film Fables" series as to guarantee a release once a week, throughout the entire Fall and Winter.

The Pathe Review editor has laid plans that will enhance the reputation of the screen magazine. These include many novel features in the world of science, art, invention, and other fields that adapt themselves to the best interests of a screen magazine. Pathe News will reach its eleventh anniversary this Fall. There are now more that 400 cameraman who at some time or other contribute to this world wide news gathering reel.

Two serials are now in course of preparation. Charles Hutchison is working on "Hurricane Hutch," and Ruth Roland is working on her ninth serial for Pathe, "White Eagle" at the Hal Roach studios in Culver City.

"Woman God Changed" Released July 3

"THE WOMAN GOD CHANGED," the Cosmopolitan production which scored such a pronounced hit during its New York pre-release engagement at the Rivoli theatre that it was transferred to the Rialto for a second week, is the Paramount release scheduled for July 3.

The picture was adapted from the story, "Redemption Cove," by Bona Bryne, novelist and contributor of short stories to Harper's Bazaar, Scribner's and other prominent magazines. Doty Hobart wrote the scenario and Robert G. Vignola, who produced "The World and His Wife" and "Straight is the Way" for Cosmopolitan, was the director.

The leading roles are played by Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln. Lillian Walker returns to the films after a long absence, in an important role and others who are prominent in the cast are Templer Saxe, Joseph Smiley and H. Cooper Cliffe.

Carey Starting First Universal-Jewel

Harry Carey, Universal's leading western star, has started production on his first super-picture. It is called "Partners" and is Carey's own story. Robert Thornby is directing the production. The use of several troops of U. S. Cavalry obtained for use in certain sequences of the picture.

"Partners" is not Carey's first venture into the field of authorship. He long has been known as a playwright and short-story writer. His first public appearance was in "Montana," a melodrama from his own pen, and in which he played a leading role for several seasons.

Betty Ross Clark has been selected to play opposite Carey. Others in the cast are "Breezy" Eason, Gertrude Olmsted, George Nichols, Johnny Harron, Gertrude Claire, Alan Hale, George Cooper, Charles LeMoyne, C. E. Anderson and Harley Chambers.

Century Comedy Seen at New York Rivoli

The latest Century Comedy to reach Broadway is Brownie's "Society Dogs." "Society Dogs" made its debut on Broadway, New York, Sunday afternoon, June 19th, for a week's run in the Rivoli theatre. The ease with which Brownie performed his many stunts drew favorable comment from the audience.

First National Schedule Named

BETWEEN forty and forty-five productions, representing the efforts of leading independent stars and producers, have been scheduled by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., for release during the season of 1921-1922. Some additions will undoubtedly be made to this list during the autumn and winter, but, in the main, the assemblage of attractions is now complete and forms the most carefully selected and diversified group of independent productions that First National has ever offered its franchise and sub-franchise holders and the exhibitors at large.

Especial interest is attached to the news that two productions which have made history on the legitimate stage will be transferred to the screen. They are "Omar the Tentmaker" and "The Masquerader," both of which were written and staged by Richard Walton Tully, one of the most important figures in the theatrical profession. Guy Bates Post, who starred in these plays on the boards, has been engaged for the screen versions, which will be directed by James Young. Work has already started on "Omar the Tentmaker" under Mr. Tully's supervision.

Fannie Hurst's first novel, "Star Dust," which is classified as a "best seller," has been transformed into a photoplay under the direction of Hobart Henley. Norma and Constance Talmadge will each provide First National franchise holders with four productions next season. The first of Norma Talmadge's vehicles will be "The Wonderful Thing," which was written by Lillian Bradley and Forest Halsey, and was directed by Herbert Brenon. The entire Ziegfeld Follies chorus will be used in one Constance Talmadge picture. The first Charles Ray production for fall release will be "A Midnight Bell," one of the Charles Hoyt stories which gained such extensive poularity. This will be followed by "Two Minutes to Go," a football story which will prove timely and in which the star plays the part of a member of a college eleven. The story is by Richard Andre.

The third of the series will be "The Barnstormers." Mr. Ray has formulated the policy of portraying a decidedly different type in every production.

Because the high standard and box office records established by "The Kid," Charles Chaplin's next picture, "Vanity Fair," is being anticipated eagerly by showmen. It is not a picturization of the Thackeray novel of the same title, but is a travesty on the weaknesses of the wealthy. In it he will have the support of Edna Purviance, Loyal Underwood, Harry Bergman, Rex Storey, John Rand, Lelita Parker and Al Garcia. This will be followed by two other comedies to complete the eight productions called for by the comedian's contract.

Marshall Neilan, who produced "Bob Hampton of Placer," is in the midst of work on a novelty which he believes will eclipse his former accomplishments. It is entitled "Bits of Life."

John M. Stahl is now at work on another feature. There will be at least three Anita Stewart pictures produced by Louis B. Mayer. The first will be "The Invisible Fear," to be followed by "A Question of Honor" and "The Price of Happiness."

"Serenade" will be the first offering of R. A. Walsh. The next production of this director will be "Kindred of the Dust," which was written by Peter B. Kyne.

Unusual stories are being acquired for Katherine MacDonald, who will be represented by four productions during the season, three of which are "Peachie," "Sticks and Stones" and "Her Social Value."

Two big specials starring Dorothy Phillips and directed by Allen Holubar are also on the program, and promise to be worthy successors to "Man-Woman-Marriage." Buster Keaton is now at work on the first of six comedies to be released by First National.

Richard Barthelmess is a new First National star, whose first vehicle will be "Tol'ble David."

"My Lady Friends" is the Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven picture scheduled for fall release. The Whitman Bennett production is to be released by First National following "Salvation Nell" will be "Suspicion" which will be personally directed by Mr. Bennett.

"Carnival" at Capitol During This Week

"CARNIVAL," which was recently acquired by United Artists, was opened at the Capitol Theatre, New York, on last Sunday, June 26th, for a week's engagement at the big house. After its run is completed at the Capitol it will be played over the entire Marcus Loew circuit.

This production, made by Harley Knoles in Venice, is reported to have created a sensation in Europe. The production is an adaptation from the stage play of the same name which enjoyed a long run at the New Theatre in London, and features Matheson Lang and Hilda Bayley in their original parts. The story teems with unusual dramatic situations and is a highly spectacular and picturesque production.

Ince to Direct Faversham in "Justice"

Ralph Ince has been assigned to direct William Faversham in the forthcoming Selznick Pictures production of John Galsworthy's "Justice." This assignment was finally made by Myron Selznick, Vice President in charge of production of the Selznick Corporation, recently.

Before joining the Selznick forces almost two years ago Mr. Ince successfully directed pictures for Vitagraph, Jewel, Metro, Petrova Pictures and other producers.

Lloyd Hamilton Begins Series

Associated With Jack White in Making of New Series

LLOYD "HAM" HAMILTON, popular star of "Dynamite," "Moonshine" and other Educational-Mermaid comedies, and Jack White, his director, have organized as Hamilton-White, Inc., and begun work on a new series of Mermaid comedies for release through Educational Exchanges.

Educational's contract for Mermaid comedies during the last year called for twelve pictures, which were made by the Astra Company. Hamilton and Jimmie Adams shared honors, each playing the leading part in six of the comedies.

Hamilton's work in these pictures has been so consistently excellent that during the year he has added immeasurably to the popularity that had been built up during his long career as a film comedian, beginning in the "Ham and Bud" pictures and including work in about 300 comedies.

Shortly before the completion of work on the last year's output of Mermaids, Hamilton came to New York for his first visit to this city. After a conference with E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., Hamilton returned to the coast under contract for a term of several years to produce comedies for Educational.

During the making of his six Mermaid comedies, the best work of "Ham's" career was brought out by Jack White, one of the youngest but yet one of the most versatile comedy directors in the country. His brilliant imagination and clever execution have constituted one of the chief causes for the success of the last year's Mermaids.

Organizing as Hamilton-White, Inc., "Ham" and White have gone into a new home on Sunset boulevard in Hollywood, Cal., and are at work on the new year's Mermaid comedies. There will be twelve of them, in all of which "Ham" will play the leading part. The first of the new pictures has been completed, with Irene Dalton, who in the last year has done good work in Educational's releases from the Christie studio, playing opposite Hamilton.

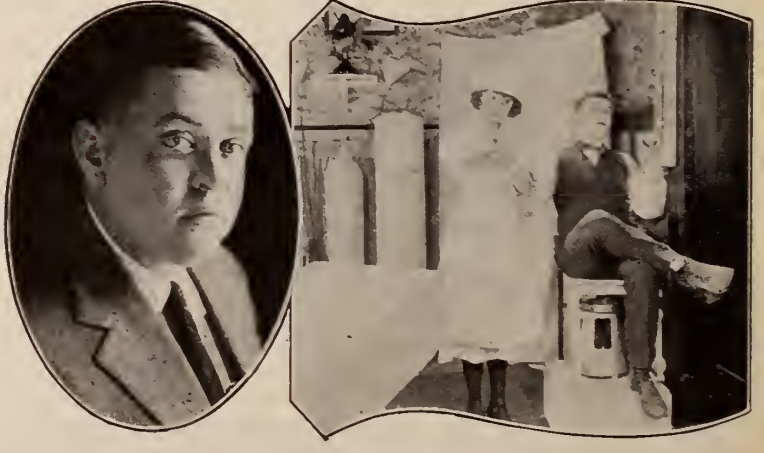
A realistic shipwreck, and the burning of a whole cannibal village are among the features of this new comedy called "Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.," which is as full of funny situations as anything in which "Ham" has ever appeared.

Although no effort is made to save Hamilton or any of his supporting casts from bumps at the expense of good humor, he has not, either in "Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.," or in any of his previous Mermaid comedies, had to resort to "slapstick stuff" in the commonly accepted sense of the word. His plays are replete with humorous situations, many of them calling for fast action, but the custard pie has been conspicuously absent.

It has already been announced that Adams, who was featured in half of last year's Mermaid comedies, would play the leading part in a greater number of comedies for Educational this year. He has just about completed the first of eight Adams comedies, to be made by the Astra Company. It is called "A Good Scout."

Seena Owen to Play in "Find the Woman"

Seena Owen, who has won the enthusiastic approval of reviewers and public alike in the leading role of "The Woman God Changed," a Cosmopolitan Production, has been engaged by Cosmopolitan Productions to play a leading role in "Find the Woman," from the Arthur Somers Roche story that appeared in Cosmopolitan Magazine. Miss Owen is recovering from an attack of Kleeg eyes. Others in the cast of "Find the Woman" are Eileen Huban, Ethel Duray, Norman Kerry and George MacQuarrie.



Lloyd Hamilton and a scene from his latest Mermaid comedy, "The Greenhorn," released by Educational

Here's an attraction that will appeal to all classes of picture-goers. It's a rapid-fire, breath-catching, mirthful comedy and everybody knows Mr. Lytell is as much at home in this style of entertainment as he is in strong dramatic roles.

Governor of Georgia to Open Atlanta House

Sig Samuels, Associated First National Franchise holder for Atlanta, Georgia, has definitely announced the opening of his new Metropolitan theatre in that city for July 4th. Incidentally that date marks the fifth anniversary of the opening of his Criterion, so the occasion will be doubly significant. Experts in every line of theatre construction have been at work for more that a year on the Metropolitan.

The newly inaugurated Governor Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia, will dedicate the Metropolitan at the formal opening at a quarter after nine Monday evening, July 4th. The initial offering of the new theatre has not been named, but it will be a First National Attraction. Willard C. Patterson who has for five years been identified with Sig Samuels as manager of the Criterion, will have charge of the Metropolitan in the same capacity.

Aubrey Is Filming "The Riot" for Vitagraph

Co-directed by Charles Avery, Jimmy Aubrey is busy at Hollywood with his new comedy, "The Riot," which is on Vitagraph's recently announced September-October release list.

In this picture—the first Jimmy Aubrey comedy under the star's new contract with Vitagraph—Helen Kesler lends her talents as leading woman, while Fred Bretherton does the heavy.

"In for Life" Title of New Christie Comic

"In for Life" is the last two-reel comedy to be finished for Educational in the Christie studio. It is the third in the new series, which began with "Nothing Like It," followed by "Oh Buddy."

The story of "In for Life," which presents Viora Daniel with Jay Belasco, is that of a young couple trying to get married but encountering all sorts of difficulties after the bridegroom commits the faux pas of bringing his pet collie to the bride's home when all is set for the wedding.

Jean Paige in New Special

Will Star in "The Prodigal Judge" Under Direction of Edward Jose

JEAN Paige will be starred in a picturization of "The Prodigal Judge," a novel written by Vaughn Kester. The picture will be released as a special production by Vitagraph. The continuity is now in preparation, and as soon as it is completed actual filming will begin under the direction of Edward Jose. The interiors are to be taken in Vitagraph's Brooklyn, N. Y., studio, and the greater part of the exteriors will be taken in Tennessee especially along the Mississippi River, which plays an important part in the story. It is expected that production work on "The Prodigal Judge" will be well under way within a few weeks.

A statement from the Vitagraph home-office has the following to say about the story of "The Prodigal Judge:"

"The Prodigal Judge" is a story of ante-bellum days with the locale mostly in what was then known as West Tennessee. While the novel takes its name from the Judge—Colonel Slocum Price Tuberville, the lovable hero, eloquent at every bar and Falstaffian in capacity of appetite and intellect, the interest centers mainly around the loves and fortunes of the pretty heroine, Betty Malroy, and it is this character that Miss Paige will portray.

"'The Prodigal Judge' is a romance rich in incident, hearty in humor, full-flowing in a broad current of life and events. Love and hate and private feud, true friendship and evil ambition, all have their place in this splendid American story. The surroundings are colorful; the characters are of clear-cut types and the men and women are of the sort who do rather than talk. It is a strenuous story, of strenuous times, and it is doubtful if another American novel could be found which so perfectly lends itself to adaptation to the screen."

Goldwyn Production News

Tom Moore Completing the Rupert Hughes Story "From the Ground Up"

TOM Moore will finish at the Goldwyn studios this week Rupert Hughes' story written especially for him, "From the Ground Up," directed by E. Mason Hopper, and on next Monday will begin work on Alice Duer Miller's comedy, "The Man With Two Mothers." Paul Bern, one of the directors of "The North Wind's Malice," by Rex Beach, has been selected to direct Mrs. Miller's first Goldwyn scenario.

Sylvia Breamer, who played opposite Will Rogers in "Doubling for Romeo" and in "A Poor Relation," has the leading feminine role with Tom Moore in "The Man With Two Mothers." Laura Lavarine is the only other member of the cast so far announced.

Director Frank Lloyd and the company photographing Katherine Newlin Burt's story, "The Man from Lost River," have returned from Huntington Lake where the beautiful timber country was photographed.

Rita Weiman will return to New York next week, having completed all of her work in connection with the filming of "The Grim Comedian," in which Phoebe Hunt and Jack Holt have the leading roles. Frank Lloyd directed it. Miss Weiman is most enthusiastic about the photoplay.

Richard Dix, Goldwyn's popular young leading man, who has recently appeared in "Dangerous Curve Ahead," "All Fair in Love," "The Glorious Fool," and is just finishing "The Poverty of Riches," underwent an operation in a local hospital to have a piece of steel removed from his left eye. The operation was successful and his sight will in no way be impaired.

End Scenario Competition

Winners of J. Parker Read-Louise Glaum Competition Are Announced

THE J. Parker Read, Jr.,-Louise Glaum scenario competition came to a close last week. According to the reports from the J. Parker Read headquarters the greatest enthusiasm marked the progress of this competition of skill in writing photoplays. With thirty leading newspapers throughout the large cities of the United States carrying the instructions, terms and conditions of the contest, over 35,000 embryo scenario writers competed for the three major awards totalling $5,000 that were offered by Mr. Read and Miss Glaum.

The competition which started some months ago, was prompted by Mr. Read's desire to bring new talent to the screen.

In a statement just issued, Mr. Read describes the procedure that has been followed in sifting the manuscripts to determine which are worthy of final consideration. The judges are C. Gardner Sullivan and Miss Bradley King. The statement from J. Parker Read headquarters announces the winners as follows:

"The first prize of $2,500 went to Miss Frances White Elijah, Arlington Hotel, Santa Barbara, Calif.

"The second prize of $1,500 was awarded to A. Earl Kauffman, 40 W. Market St., York, Pa.

"The third prize—$1,000—was accorded to Mrs. Anna B. Mezquida, 969 Pine St., San Francisco, Calif."

George Arliss in "Disraeli," a United Artist release

A Scotch Picture by an All Scotch Staff

In the preparations for Donald Crisp's forthcoming production of "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., asserts, every care has been taken to procure a "native atmosphere" for this Highland story. The book itself is Scotch and was written by a Scotsman, the Rev. John Watson. The adaptation for the screen is by Margaret Turnbull, who, though an American citizen, was born at Glasgow. Donald Crisp, who is directing the picture, is a typical brawny son of the romantic north. Claude H. Mitchell, who is assisting Mr. Crisp in the direction of the picture, hails from Aberdeen. Casting for the production has not yet begun, but Mary Glynne and David Powell will have leading roles. Miss Glynne herself is of Scottish parentage, while Mr. Powell was born in Glasgow.

Outlook Photoplays to Make "Free Air"

Sinclair Lewis's out-doors story, "Free Air," which ran in the Saturday Evening Post, will be filmed by the Outlook Photoplays, Inc. Myron M. Stearns, for a long time scenario editor for D. W. Griffith, will be in charge of production. The story will be directed by Harry O. Hoyt who recently finished the production of Holman Day's, "The Rider of the King Log." The exteriors will be shot along the northern automobile trail from St. Paul, Minn., to Seattle, Wash. The scenic wonders of Glacier National Park will contribute the mountain scenery. Mr. Stearns has secured the services of E. D. Venturini, formerly technical director for Goldwyn Productions, and George de Richelavie, assistant to Marshall Neilan in his greatest productions. They will act as personal assistants to Mr. Stearns.

Valuable Pictures Used in "Three Musketeers"

Among the important properties being used on the sets for "The Three Musketeers," now being filmed in Los Angeles by Douglas Fairbanks, and which United Artists will release in the early fall, are twelve original drawings by Sir Thomas Langley, former associate of Sir Christopher Wren and recognized as one of the world's greatest architects.

These drawings belong to Edward M. Langley, art director for the Fairbanks Company, and have been in the Langley family for generations. They were made in 1666, and represent detail drawings for the rebuilding of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, a work that Sir Christopher Wren had in charge and in which Sir Thomas Langley was associated with him.

Famous Child Players in Alice Lake Film

Four celebrated child players of the screen—Stanley Goethals, Geraldine Condon, Frances Carpenter and May Garaci—will appear in the supporting cast for Alice Lake in her latest Metro special, a Dallas Fitzgerald production of W. Carey Wonderly's story, "The Infamous Miss Revell." All four of these children, ranging from four to twelve years of age have had screen experience.

Others announced for the cast are Jackie Saunders, onetime Universal and Balboa star and recently leading woman for William Farnum, and Herbert Standing.

Gladys Hulette to Play Opposite Barthelmess

Miss Gladys Hulette, who has won an enviable position as a motion picture actress, has been signed to play opposite Richard Barthelmess, new First National star, in "Tol'ble David," his initial production for Inspiration Pictures, Inc. "Tol'ble David" is a story of life in the West Virginia mountains and was written by Joseph Hergesheimer.

Miss Hulette has starred in screen and stage productions since she was 7 years old. She began her stage career as the "littlest lady" with De Wolf Hopper in "Wang" when she was 4 years of age, and since then has been constantly before the public.

Ingram in N. Y. with "Conquering Power"

The director's eastern trip has a double object; that of conferring with the officials of the distributing organization regarding "The Conquering Power" and that of being present at the Yale commencement exercises later in June, when the University will confer upon him the degree of Bachelor of Fine Arts for his achievement in translating to the screen Vicente Blasco Ibanez's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Kipling Picture Well Received

New York Dailies Hail "Without Benefit of Clergy"

THE premiere of "Without Benefit of Clergy" at the Capitol theatre, New York, has called forth a liberal measure of praise for the picture on the part of the critics of the New York dailies. In a statement issued from the headquarters of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., which is distributing the production, some of the press comments are submitted as follows:

Evening Post—"It is so seldom that one can say that a written masterpiece transferred to the screen still remains a masterpiece that it is almost an honor to say it. Rudyard Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy", as produced by Robert Brunton and directed by James Young, is the best example of a purely lyric film that has come out of an American studio.

Evening Sun—"Without Benefit of Clergy", the adaptation of Rudyard Kipling's story directed for Robert Brunton by James Young, which is at the Capitol this week, is a bit of gossamer thrown to the screen and actually caught there without being torn in the process of transposition. Virginia Brown Faire is beautifully appealing as the pretty little Hindu bride, asknowledged by neither law nor religion, who loses her child and then her own life in a cholera epidemic, and Thomas Holding made a fitting running mate for her as the British engineer who had a romance with her. It is a glamorous love epic of the East, with splendid settings and a fine atmospheric touch about it and lives up to the quality of the original in almost bringing the West to touch hands with the East."

Globe—"This is the 'Madame Butterfly' of India, the brief chapter of Ameera, who sang to her lord, the British officer, on the roof-tops, who gave him a man-child, and who passes out of his life as suddenly as she came. There has been no attempt to drag in extraneous ideas or climaxes to smother the life of the play for the benefit of its 'big scene', nor has it been sacrificed to a happy ending.

"A wistful, dark-eyed girl called Virginia Brown Faire, played the part of Ameera with tenderness and sympathy. Thomas Holding as Holden was most handsome in his uniform, but his emotions seemed in a constant unbridled state, which is not the state of the British army officer. In his background and selections of types James Young has been particularly fortunate."

The Telegraph—"'Without Benefit of Clergy' is a story that has been screened without being murdered. Randolph Lewis went to England and prepared the scenario under the direction of Kipling himself. The picture is a beautiful example of screen interpretation; it proves that sincerity on the part of both author and producer results in fine and sincere achievement.

"'Without Benefit of Clergy' is a beautiful and almost ideal romance. The story itself is simple—as simple and much more poetic than 'Madame Butterfly.' But it is steeped in the atmosphere and tradition of India. California has been eliminated from the settings; Robert Brunton, who has produced the picture has conjured up the land of India; S. L. Rothafel has given the picture sympathetic presentation."

"Woman God Changed" Going

Doing Fine Business in Keith, Moss and Proctor Theatres

ENTHUSIASTIC comments from leading showmen of the country are being received by Cosmopolitan Productions concerning "The Woman God Changed," its latest release. B. S. Moss broke a rule of his Broadway theatre by extending the booking beyond one week and then found that even two weeks did not take care of the crowds besieging the theatre and he ran the picture for a third week. Mr. Moss wrote the following letter to George B. Van Cleve, vice-president and general manager of International Film Service Co., creator of Cosmopolitan Productions:

"It is my pleasure to notify you that for the first time since the Broadway theatre began its policy of combining B. F. Keith vaudeville with a feature photoplay, a film is being retained for a second week. The picture thus honored is your production, 'The Woman God Changed' and the exceptional fervor which it found with our audiences during the entire week of June 6th literally compels us to hold over this stirring drama.

"I know it will interest you to learn that in view of the really phenomenal business brought by 'The Woman God Changed' we have already decided to give the picture a third week if we can possibly do so. Previous contracts may intervene but we shall bend every effort to satisfy what is so clearly the public demand for this strikingly original production.

"Once again Cosmopolitan Productions have demonstrated their extraordinary ability to provide the theatre with a universally popular photoplay. We congratulate ourselves upon having obtained 'The Woman God Changed' for the Broadway theatre, and congratulate your studios upon having made it."

Mr. Moss found he was able to book the picture for the third week as he desired.

The Keith, Moss and Proctor interests in New York have found Cosmopolitan Productions so profitable that "Cosmopolitan Productions Week" was held in six of their big theatres the week of June 19th. Reports from the head office are to the effect that these theatres did a banner business. "The Woman God Changed" and "The Wild Goose" are being run in these theatres.

The Mark Strand theatre is reported to be also finding "The Woman God Changed" a powerful attraction.

In Los Angeles Sid Grauman booked "The Woman God Changed" for an indefinite run in his Rialto theatre. He sent the following telegram to Cosmopolitan Productions:

"The Cosmopolitan Production 'The Woman God Changed,' is, in my opinion, a 100 per cent. picture and a box office attraction from every angle. It has a tremendous appeal to both men and women. I have booked 'The Woman God Changed' for an indefinite run at Grauman's Rialto. The mouth-to-mouth advertising is filling all performances to capacity. Exhibitors booking this production need not worry about box office returns."

"The Woman God Changed" was adapted for the screen by Doty Hobart from the story by Donn Byrne that appeared in Hearst's Magazine. Robert G. Vignol directed it and Dr. Frank Crane wrote the titles. Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln take the leading parts and are supported by Henry Sedley, Lillian Walker, H. Cooper-Cliffe, Brian Darley, Templer Saxe and Joseph Smiley.

"Mark of Zorro" Still Scoring Heavily

The United Artists home-office reports that evidences of the box-office success of Douglas Fairbank's "The Mark of Zoro" are still being received from all sections of the country. In speaking of this picture recently, G. Semper, manager of the Strand theatre of Brandon, Manitoba, said: "In this day of thinly disguised sex pictures and problem dramas it gives one a sincere pleasure to screen an attraction like 'The Mark of Zorro.' In my opinion, it is a good example of real screen entertainment.

"I recently played this production and it stood out like a bright light in the common ruck of general offerings. Give us some more like 'The Mark of Zorro.' Its kind are all too scarce."

From the Vaudette theatre of West Point, Ga., the report came: "Doug in 'The Mark of Zorro' was a tremendous success. "The Temple theatre of Bryan, Ohio, reported: "Everybody thought 'The Mark of Zorro' the best Doug ever made."

"'Mark of Zorro' is Doug's Best Picture. This is Box Office and Patron Opinion." was the message that the New Royal theatre of Findlay sent Mr. Abrams regarding the picture.

Frederick Warde Lauds "Three Musketeers"

Frederick Warde, the well-known Shakespearean player, was one of the recent visitors at Douglas Fairbank's Los Angeles studio. He was shown the finished portions of Fairbank's new picture, "The Three Musketeers," and declared the picture to be a most remarkable production as well as "a new standard of achievement in the moving picture world." It is expected that the filming of "The Three Musketeers" will be completed by the middle of July.

Predicts Success for "Ace of Hearts"

Goldwyn is predicting that "Ace of Hearts," the new Gouverneur Morris melodrama, which will be released among the first four or five of Goldwyn's fifth year productions early in the fall, is the greatest photoplay that that novelist has ever written.

"Ace of Hearts" was directed by Wallace Worsley. There are three leading parts portrayed by Lon Chaney, Leatrice Joy, and John Bowers. Other members of the cast are Hardee Kirkland, Roy Laidlaw and Edwin N. Wallack.

"Carnival" Opens in N. Y.

United Artist Picture is Well Received by Metropolitan Press

CHARACTERIZED by the motion picture critics of New York daily newspapers as "one of the most remarkable films of recent presentation," "engrossing and picturesque," with scenes "saturated with the irresistible power of imagination," "one of the most artistic photodramatic productions that has been presented on Broadway," and "one of the cinemas that ought to be seen," by every one, "Carnival," a Harley Knoles production, featuring Matheson Lang, the latest picture to come from United Artists, was greeted this week on Broadway with the approbation of the critics and the enthusiastic approval of the public.

"The Capitol," said Grace Wynden Vail, of the New York American, "has one of the most remarkable films of recent presentation in 'Carnival.' It is primarily remarkable for its featured player and the added interest in having been photographed in Venice, where its action takes place. In Matheson Lang, we meet one of the finest screen artists and fascinating personalities of years. He stands head and shoulders above the average screen actor. His 'Silvio' is a splendid achievement, one that towers above even the charm of the pictures' background. Were there no other virtues in this film, Mr. Lang's performance alone would lift it to the plane of the worthwhiles. Harley Knoles has sent us a cast of new faces, that, headed by Mr. Lang are welcome indeed."

The New York Herald said:

"'Carnival' makes an engrossing and picturesque cinema. Its scenes are saturated with the irresistible power of imagination, and the story of the jealous actor who in playing 'Othello,' almost kills, in his frenzy, the wife who is 'Desdemona' in the performance, is attractively and ingeniously told." Of Mr. Lang they also said:

"He is a graphic actor before the screen and all the qualities that have made him eminent in his own country contribute to his sucess in this part."

R. W. Barremore, in the New York Morning Telegraph said:

"One of the most artistic photodramatic productions that has been presented on Broadway in some time, is 'Carnival,' and will long be remembered as a motion picture that comes very near being perfect in every detail. Sponsored by the United Artists, 'Carnival' presents a series of dramatic incidents before a background that has seldom been seen in a picture heretofore. The production has been made with capable attention to every detail and the story is one that holds the interest at all times throughout the seven reels. It is a decided pleasure to see Mr. Lang on the screen, and we sincerely hope that we shall have more pictures starring him. As a matter of fact, 'Carnival' is a thoroughly worth-while feature picture, the kind that the public wants and will deeply appreciate.

The New York Times said:

"'Carnival' is genuine, and the picture as a whole has been authentically as well as elaborately staged. Matheson Lang who plays the part of the leading actor is a fine figure of a man and able to express himself on the silent screen.

The New York World said:

"'Carnival' is a very sweet love story, with a bit of ginger, built around picturesque Venice. It has color, plenty of life and a few ticklish situations."

Alison Smith, in the New York Globe said:

"The fact that this picture was filmed in Venice gives it an entire haunting background. There are the gleaming canals and the shadowy palaces, the Bridge of Sighs and the Plaza of St. Mark's, not made with hands in Hollywood. The pictures are a joy in themselves."

Sails for Conference on New Kipling Pictures

Randolph Lewis, of Pathe, who supervised for Rudyard Kipling the master story teller's version of "Without Benefit of Clergy," sailed for Europe on Saturday, June 25th, on the U. S. S. America. Mr. Lewis took with him a print of "Without Benefit of Clergy," which he will show to Mr. Kipling at the latter's estate, Bateman's, near London.

Mr. Lewis will first go to Paris where he will consult with Paul Brunet of Pathe regarding the other Kipling stories to be filmed in this country.

Proctor Uses Music Scores

Synchronized Music Scores Win— Favor in Big New York Circuit

JOINING with brother exhibitors Proctor's New York up-state houses are the latest large chain to sign contracts for Synchronized Music Score Service. Feeling the upward trend music is taking and that it has reached a place in the affections of their patrons Proctor management did not hesitate in signing their contracts for the Griswold Theatre, Troy, N. Y. The Leland Theatre, Albany, N. Y., Proctor's Theatre, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and Proctor's Yonkers Theatre, Proctor's 58th Street Theatre also is now using Synchronized Scores.

Arthur J. Abrams, president of the Synchronized Music Co., of 64 East Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill., publishers of these scores, in commenting upon their general use throughout the United States recently said, "It is gratifying to note that exhibitors are awake to the demand that their patrons are making upon them for better music. I do not say this because my company are publishing a series of scores. In saying that it is pleasing to note that exhibitors are awake to the importance of the musical end of their programs. I have in mind only that the better musical end of the program gets the better results exhibitors will derive. With better results comes progress, and I am intent upon seeing the motion picture industry rise to even greater heights than it has reached already."

Synchronized Music Scores are adapted to use in any motion picture theatre. No house is too small nor none too large. Each musical part is in a separate binding and a score can be used where only one piece (piano or organ) or as many as forty are used in the orchestra.

A cleverly conceived arrangement takes care of any cuts that may occur in the film before the exhibitor receives it. Scores have been prepared for all releases of all the standard producers and twenty offices in twenty key cities of the United States are ready to serve exhibitors everywhere.

Buddhist Ceremony in Fox News No. 75

Issue No. 75 of Fox News contains, among other features, some splendid pictures of the display and worship of Buddha's jewel, which took place recently in Rangoon, Burma, announces that company. The ceremony shown is a renewal of that in vogue before the British occupation of Burma. The jewels are brought down from the kiosk and exhibited to the natives to prove that they are safe. The news reel contains some remarkable close-ups of the jewels.

Pathe Review to Show Museum's Treasures

Pathe Review through the cooperation of the authorities of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City has photographed some of the rare historical and archæological collections to be found in that institution. The material photographed has been grouped into three separate subjects. The first of these, showing later addition to the Egyptian collection, will be released in August.

The two succeeding features of this Pathe Review series present the Museum's historical collections of violins and of the armor worn by fighting men in all ages.

Marie Prevost Saves Life of Director

Marie Prevost, former bathing beauty and new Universal star, recently saved the life of King Baggott, her director, when he fell into a pool of water during the making of "The Butterfly," according to reports from the Coast. Mr. Baggot struck his head against a rock as he endeavored to aid the assistant director, who had fallen into the pool.

Agnes Ayres to Start Career as Star Soon

Agnes Ayres, Paramount's newest star, will have cause to remember her last appearance as a leading woman in a Paramount picture. She was elevated to stardom by Paramount while working as leading woman with Thomas Meighan in "Cappy Ricks," a compilation of Peter B. Kyne's breezy stories of the sea.

The company directed by Tom Forman returned recently from the Maine coast off which the wreck scenes were made, and are now at work on interiors in the Paramount Long Island studio. Since returning from the locations Miss Ayres has received instructions to report in Hollywood early in July to begin her first picture as a star.

The "Cappy Ricks" company has worked day and night for a week, with only a few hours between scenes, to complete the episodes in which Miss Ayres appears.

Changes in Paramount Exploitation Men

Fred V. Greene, Jr., who was Paramount exploiteer out of Denver, has been transferred to the New York exchange. Leslie F. Whelan, formerly exploited for the Detroit exchange has succeeded Greene in Denver. Jack A. Lacy, well known as a showman, has entered the Paramount service and was assigned to Whelan's old post in Detroit. A new exploitation district was organized with Salt Lake City as the headquarters. Rick Ricketson, also a new acquisition, has been appointed exploiteer. These announcements were made last week by Claud Saunders, director of exploitation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"Terrible Turk" in Cast with Jimmie Adams

Kalla Pasha, widely known as a wrestler and called "The Terrible Turk" by opponents whom he has treated roughly, will be seen in the cast supporting Jimmie Adams in "A Good Scout," the first of the Educational-Adams comedies.

Universal's Summer Issues

Berman Decides to Release One a Week in July; Three Due in August

HAVING fixed the order of releases for the year starting September 5th, H. M. Berman, general manager of Universal exchanges, now announces the final pictures which will terminate the 1920-21 schedule.

The releases in their order are Carmel Myers in "The Kiss," Gladys Walton in "Short Skirts," George Larkin and Josephine Hill in "Man Trackers"; Edith Roberts in "Luring Lips"; "Danger Ahead!" with Mary Philbin and an all-star cast; Carmel Myers in "A Daughter of the Law"; and Edith Roberts in "Opened Shutters."

Owing to a general demand reported from several sections of the country. Mr. Berman has decided to abandon the plan of only five releases for July and August and to release one picture a week in July. August which has five release dates will have three pictures on its schedule.

"The Kiss" is an adaptation of "The Scarlet Shawl" a well known novel by Johnston McCulley, and was directed by Jack Conway. "Short Skirts" is the title given to Alice L. Tildesley's Saturday Evening Post story, "Cabella Drives the Nail." "Short Skirts" was directed by Harry B, Harris.

"Man Trackers" is the title of an extremely timely summer picture, a story of the Northwest Mounted Police in the depths of winter. The Story was written by Edward Kull and George Plimpton and was directed by Mr. Kull.

"Luring Lips" in which Edith Roberts is starred, is the photoplay name of the novel "The Gossamer Web," by John A. Moroso. "Luring Lips" was directed by King Baggot. "Danger Ahead!" is the title which Universal has given to Sara Ware Bassett's well known novel, "The Harbor Road," This picture has for its featured player Mary Philbin, the Chicago beauty who won second place in the Elks' Beauty competition last year. It was directed by Rollin Sturgeon. "A Daughter of the Law" has for its basis Wadsworth Camp's novel, "The Black Cap" a story of a criminal band whose extermination was undertaken by the daughter of a chief of police because they had been instrumental in corrupting her brother. The final picture of the 1920-1921 year is Edith Roberts in "Opened Shutters," the novel by Clara Louise Burnham. The production was directed by William Worthington.

Hodkinson Releases Named

Pictures Scheduled for Release in Summer and Early Fall Announced

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces the following productions for release during the summer and early fall:

The Journey's End—July 24th. This is a Hugo Ballin production. The featured players are Mabel Ballin, Wyndham Standing and George Bancroft. P. S. Harrison, writing in 'Harrison Reports' of June 25th says: "The Journey's End is a triumph viewed from any angle."

The Face of the World—August 21st. Irvin V. Willat's third independent production for Hodkinson release. The featured players are Edward Hearn and Barbara Bedford.

A Certain Rich Man—August 28th. Benj. B. Hampton's powerful production, made from William Allen White's novel. An all-star cast enacts this picture. Robert McKim appears in the central role, while Claire Adams plays opposite. The balance of the cast includes Carl Gantvoort, Jean Hersholt, and Joseph J. Dowling.

The Light in the Clearing—September 11th. A Dial Film Company Production made under the direction of T. Hayes Hunter with an all-star cast. This is the second of Irving Bacheller's stories to reach the screen.

The Foreigner—September 25th. Wilton Lackaye, Gaston Glass, Kate Price, Bigelow Cooper, Gladys Coburn, Bradley Barker. William Colvin are a few of the names which appear in the cast of this production which was made under the supervision of Henry Alexander MacRae. It is the screen version of Ralph Connor's popular novel.

Rip Van Winkle—October 2nd. It is predicted by Hodkinson officials that Thomas Jefferson in the title role of this picture, which is being made under the direction of Ward Lascelle, will achieve for himself an even greater following than he did when he played in the stage version. A strong cast supports him in which are included such players as Mary Anderson, Max Asher, Daisy Robinson and little Francis Carpenter.

Richard Stanton's Future Plans Uncertain

Considerable speculation has been made relative to the future plans of Richard Stanton. It is known that he has severed his connection with the William Fox organization, after having been with that concern for more than five fruitful years. In that time Director Stanton has achieved the reputation of being a producer of box-office successes.

Mr. Stanton does not comment on the rumors that he is to head his own producing organization. He has purchased the rights to a well known play, and has already received offers from various producing companies, but states that he will not make known his plans until his return from a long deferred vacation.

Henry Kolker, who directed George Arliss in "Disraeli," a United Artist release

Doris Kenyon Will Be Tearle's Leading Lady

Doris Kenyon has been engaged by Myron Selznick, Vice President in charge of production, to portray the role of Dorothy Jordan in "Shadows of the Sea," the new Tearle picture that has just gone into work.

Miss Kenyon was leading woman in "The Traveling Salesman;" in "On Trial" and in "The Hidden Hand," as screened by Famous Players, Essanay and Pathe, respectively. The Whartons presented her as star of "The Great White Trail" and then she was starred by DeLuxe Pictures in "The Street of Seven Stars" and "Twilight." Her latest presentations have been the Deitrick-Beck productions, "The Band Box" and "The Harvest Moon." In these pictures Miss Kenyon was presented as the star.

Buttolph Will Manage "A. P." Branch Office

General Manager Al Lichtman announces the appointment of Robert C. Buttolph, veteran film man, to the managership of the Minneapolis "A. P." branch office, effective immediately. For over two years Mr. Buttolph covered Ohio for the Fox Film Corp., after which he organized The Masterpiece Film Distributors Corporation. As president and general manager of that company he operated ten offices in territories east of Chicago. His fairness in conducting an exchange and his knowledge of exhibitors and their problems, has made a host of friends for him among the trade.

Goldwyn Adds "Pardon My French" to List

Goldwyn announces the addition of another picture to its advance list of fifth year productions, a comedy of American life entitled "Pardon My French." It is a Messmore Kendall production, starring Vivian Martin. The titling and editing has just been completed. The picture is adapted from "Polly in the Pantry" by Edward Childs Carpenter.

A scene from the Paul Terry cartoon released by Pathe. This is entitled "Mice in Council," and is one of the series of "Aesop's Fables Modernized"

Universal Employees Get Trip to Coast

As a reward for efficiency and good service, the Universal Film Manufacturing Company is sending two of its factory employes on a thirty-day trip to Los Angeles and the Universal studios at Universal City. The lucky workers are Mrs. Charlotte Marcus, private secretary of the factory superintendent, and Irving Stolzer, one of Universal's expert film printing timers. Both have been with Universal since it was organized.

"Silver Car" Introduces New Pantages Policy

The Pantages theatre in Minneapolis has changed its policy from vaudeville to a combination program of vaudeville and pictures. The theatre's program will be presented continuously from noon until 11 P. M. The first motion-picture booked for presentation under the new policy was Vitagraph's release, "The Silver Car," in which Earle Williams is starred.

No Dull Times for the Amer. Projectoscope

According to an announcement from the American Projectoscope Company, its factory has suffered none from the dull period which so many industries are having right now. The company states it is impossible to keep ahead of orders and attributes this great demand for projectoscopes to the increasing poularity of motion pictures for industrial purposes.

Pathe Salesman to See Big Bout

THE competition inaugurated by Pathe among salesmen to determine who could sell the greatest number of contracts on the Jack Dempsey subjects between May 7 and midnight of June 18, has ended and the four winners will attend the Dempsey - Carpentier fight on July 2. They are S. H. Hochfeld, of Philadelphia; P. Niland, of Cincinnati; C. N. Keppler, of Chicago, and G. Glosser, of San Francisco.

First Nat'l is Thanked for Aiding Army

MAJOR GENERAL ROBERT LEE BULLARD, commander of the Department of the East and former commander of the the Second Division, A. E. F., has caused a letter of thanks to be sent to Assoicated First National because of the latter's co-operation in the work of interesting young men in the Citizens' Military Training Camps. The letter reads, signed by C. S. Coulter, Captain, Eighteenth Infantry, Assistant Adjutant, and reads in part as follows:

"Major General Robert Lee Bullard has directed me to convey to you his sincere appreciation of the excellent co-operation which you have given to the Citizens' Military Training Camp to be held at Plattsburg in August.

"The publicity which has been obtained for the camp through the picture, 'Bob Hampton of Placer,' has resulted in several hundred applications for the camp.

"The Commanding General further directs me to say, and this he would be pleased to have you pass on to the theatres through your house organ Franchise, that he feels the Army can always count on the patriotism and hearty co-operation of the theatre owners and managers at all times."

Backer Will Release Western Thriller

Franklyn E. Backer, president of Horizon Pictures, Inc., announces that July 1st has been set as the release date for "A Western Thoroughbred," a five-reel drama of the west in which Harry McCabe has the featured role, and which was directed by Edwin Middleton.

It is said that this is one of the breeziest "westerns" that has come to the screen for a long time, full of action and thrills.

24-Sheet Shows '21-'22 Producing Units

A new 24-sheet poster, showing fourteen producing units on its schedule for 1921-22 is being shipped this week to regional offices by Associated First National.

In addition to Charlie Chaplin, the Talmadge sisters and others who have been identified with First National in the past, there appear Richard Barthelmess and Buster Keaton, two recently acquired stars who will produce for the organization exclusively.

The advertising department of First National laid out the spacing on the poster so that exhibitors have four full sheets for sniping in local announcements to their patrons, such as coming attractions, current attractions or special messages concerning their houses and policies.

"Four Horsemen" Opens in Atlantic City

The seventh premiere of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" took place Thursday evening, June 23rd, at the Globe theatre, Atlantic City, N. J.

Rex Ingram's screen production of the world-famous novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez already has opened for long runs in six other big cities of the United States: New York, Chicago, Pittsburg, Boston, Los Angeles and Detroit.

A. E. LEFCOURT, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, announces that M. H. Hoffman is no longer connected with the Pioneer as its general manager. Mr. Lefcourt will direct the managerial affairs of Pioneer until further notice.

The plans of the Pioneer Film Corporation, for the new season are perfected to a detail, according to Mr. Lefcourt, who made known some o fthe scheduled releases from August to the beginning of the year 1922.

Cosmopolitan Has Comedy with a Message

"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," a Cosmopolitan Production to be released in the fall, is not only uproariously funny, according to an announcement from the company, but in addition carries a vital message to every city and town and to every man and woman. That message, says Cosmopolitan Productions, is the worth of progressiveness, ambition, foresightedness and honesty.

Wallingford and his pal, "Blackie" Daw start out by being crooks. They find Battlesburg, the Middle Western town they invade to fleece its rich, is a sleepy, ultra-conservative and backward community. Wallingford and Daw, crooks though they be, so stir Battlesburg and its people by their breeziness, their vision, their ambitious plans that the town is transformed into a thriving city and its citizens into prosperous men and women.

Dolores Cassinelli in "Peter Ibbetson"

To the already unusual cast of "Peter Ibbetson," now under production in the Paramount Eastern studios, has been added Dolores Cassinelli, film star, opera singer and sculptor's model. Miss Cassinelli will play the role of a Spanish dancer.

Tests were made of twenty actresses before the exact type was found to play the character written into the adaptation of DuMaurier's novel by Ouida Bergere, scenarist.

Eugene O'Brien Release for June 30

The June 30th Selznick Pictures release is Eugene O'Brien in "Is Life Worth Living?" This comedy drama was written by George Weston and appeared in the Saturday Evening Post as "The Open Door." Winifred Westover plays opposite the star.

"Jackie Coogan 2nd," otherwise Bobby Vain, who has been with Walter Ross' Campfire Girls, and is now playing the part of "Woodie" in "Roger Bean Co."

The Richard Kipling Enterprises will make twelve releases during the coming year, six being Western features with an all-star cast, under the name of the Sylvanite Productions and six Northwestern pictures featuring a well known star, whose name will be disclosed shortly.

Comedian Injured in Hydroplane Accident

Jimmy Callahan, who was severely injured in a hydroplane accident at the Curtiss Station at the Inlet, near the boardwalk, in Atlantic City on June 23rd, was discharged from the hospital last Tuesday as well as ever except that the ends of three of his fingers on his left hand are missing. Mr. Callahan will resume work in two weeks.

Mr. Callahan was making his last shot on his fourth comedy, "King for an Hour," when the accident happened which nearly cost him his life. The incident in the story which was being photographed was a scene where the heroine and the hero, played by Florence Dixon and Mr. Callahan, and a character played by D. W. MacReynolds, escape from a cannibal island on a hydroplane.

To make this scene Ralph D. Whiting, Mr. Callahan's director, had the beach laid out in a tropical set with twenty men and women acting as natives. Before an audience of several hundred people gathered on the boardwalk the escape was photographed by Captain Charles W. Downs, Mr. Callahan's cameraman.

Mr. Callahan rose from the cockpit and waved his hand to friends on the boardwalk and the propeller struck the ends of his fingers on his left hand.

"Tarzan" Rumors Denied

"Adventures of Tarzan," Elmo Lincoln Serial, is Newly Made

IN ORDER to set at rest various rumors which, according to Louis Weiss, have been circulated since the announcement of the "Adventures of Tarzan" serial starring Elmo Lincoln, the executive of Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation issued the following statement this week:

"It has come to my notice that inquiries are being made as to whether 'Adventures of Tarzan,' our new fifteen episode serial starring Elmo Lincoln, is a new production or not. I wish to point out now that 'Adventures of Tarzan' is brand new. It is being produced at the present time at the coast by the Great Western Producing Company, with the direction in the hands of Robert F. Hill, responsible for practically all of Elmo Lincoln's great screen successes. It stars Elmo Lincoln, who up to now has never appeared in a Tarzan serial of any kind. It is being made from the concluding chapters of The Return of Tarzan' by Edgar Rice Burroughs, and I wish to state that in point of jungle settings, numbers of wild animals and general magnitude, not to mention story and star, 'Adventures of Tarzan' is undoubtedly the biggest serial ever offered the exhibitor of this country and the world.

"At the present time we are completing the production of the twelfth episode of this serial. It is our intention to present the entire fifteen episodes when they are completed for the consideration of all state right buyers so that they may know exactly what they are buying. Those interested in the production of 'Adventures of Tarzan,' including myself, naturally have a tremendous financial investment in this special production and I wish to nail now all rumors concerning this serial and to state that vigorous legal prosecution will follow any misleading statement regarding 'Adventures of Tarzan.'"

Strauss Picture's Opening

"Twice Born Woman" Has Premiere in Famous New York Hippodrome

THE Sonora Films Corporation, a new distributing corporation about which much will be heard later, has taken over the spacious New York Hippodrome, by arrangement with Charles Dillingham, for one month.

They opened Wednesday evening of last week with Malcolm Strauss' master motion picture "The Twice Born Woman." The story of "The Twice Born Woman" is based upon the biblical story and tradition of Mary Magdalene. Mr. Strauss in addition to producing the picture supervised the direction.

The picture was more than fourteen months in the making, with the principal scenes being made in Southern France, Egypt and in Palestine, where full advantage could be taken of architectural, geographic and historic settings for the period it portrays. Back of the actual taking of the picture is several years of research, undertaken with the purpose, now achieved, that "The Twice Born Woman" should be a great dramatic and artistic feature.

The role of Mary Magdalene is played by Deyha Loti, a French dramatic actress, and more than 200,000 people and more than 2,000 animals, including horses, donkeys, sheep, lions, camels and elephants, were used in its production.

More than four hundred newspaper men from all departments of the Manhattan press, Jersey and suburban periodicals witnessed the event, as also did many of the leading clergymen, exhibitors, civic officials, artists, theatrical managers and hundreds in other walks of life.

Julius Singer, the well-known film man, was the guiding hand of the event and he received hundreds of telegrams from every nook and clime of the United States congratulating him and wishing him "Good Luck" in his new venture.

Cummings Brings Two Pictures to N. Y.

Irving Cummings, starring in a series of Northwest Mounted Police stories that are being released through the Producers Security Corporation, came into New York last week and with two prints of his latest subject, "Patsy's Jim" and "The Rope's End," these being number three and four respectively of the Cummings series.

Federated Features in Fox and Loew Circuits

The Fox and Loew circuits have booked the entire feature output thus far of the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., it is announced by that organization.

New Producing Company is Formed

THE CHARLES R. SEELING PRODUCTION, INC., was incorporated under the laws of California on April 28, 1921. Its officers are as follows: Charles R. Seeling, a well known director, president; C. Vincent Clay, assistant director, vice preisdent; B. M. Silver, secretary and treasurer. It has secured a contract for six five-reel western features from the Aywon Film Corporation of New York City. It is starring Guinn Williams, known on the screen as "Big Boy" Williams, son of Senator Williams of Texas.

"Big Boy" Williams is a young Hercules. Though having worked for the screen even less than two years, "Big Boy" Williams is rapidly gaining popularity among theatregoers. His almost superhuman prowess coupled with his bewitching smile never fail to carry away the audience.

C. C. Burr to Distribute New Scenic Series

Announcement was made this week by C. C. Burr, president of Affiliated Distributers, Inc., of the negotiations of a long term contract whereby that organization acquires the exclusive distributing rights of the Rollin Lester Dixon scenic poems.

The acquisition of these somewhat different scenics is thought to be of manifold value in that they are vehicles which not only convey to the screen Nature in her happiest moods, but also are unobtrusive and subtle evidence of the artistry which guided the selection of the subjects.

Mr. Dixon has long been a familiar figure in the art centers of Europe and this country and is a noted painter of the great outdoors. He was entrusted recently with the making of the photographic records of the haunts, customs, art and warfare of the American Indian for the Wanamaker Indian Commission.

Kineto Review Ready for July 3

"Peculiar Pets," a Kincto Review, is the next Kineto Review scheduled for release. It will go out through the National Exchanges, Inc., on July 3.

The subject, according to reports, is an admirable subject for a summer program. It has lightness and humor.

Willis-Inglis to Close Booking Agency

Enlarging the scope of their work in the motion picture industry, the firm of Willis and Inglis announce that, beginning July 1st, they will discontinue their agency and booking department to confine their activities to production, management, the financing of companies and to film exploitation.

They will continue, however, to act in an advisory capacity between producers and distributors, and intend to retain and enlarge their present book and play department.

The firm of Richard Willis and Gus Inglis is the original film agency in the west . It was the first to become established as an institution and has grown correspondingly with the industry. From the earliest days the firm has represented practically every notable producer, artist, director, writer and technical expert through its engagement and exploitation departments, and has arranged some of the most important contracts at present existing in film circles.

Duncan Busy with Night Scenes for "Superman"

William Duncan and his co-star, Edith Johnson, returned to Hollywood from the Kern River section during the past week, and inaugurated their return by starting a campaign of night sequences upon a special street set especially constructed for their new special production, "The Superman."

Internat'l Photoplay Cancels Contract

The International Photoplay of Chicago announces that it has cancelled its contract with the Mt. Olympus Distributing Corporation, of New York, for the distribution of International's Dizzy Dumbell series of two-reel comedies.

The new plans for distribution will be announced within a few days.

Wallie Reid Featured in Screen Snapshots

Wallace Reid on his trip east from the coast, is one of the interesting "headliner" subjects that will be a feature of Federated Screen Snapshots No. 5.

Jack Hoxie Touring Southwest

Arrow Star is Given Big Reception on Tour

THE country-wide tour of Jack Hoxie, the popular western star, which began on June 13th, is proceeding with unusual success, according to the reports from Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, who are sponsoring the tour and who are releasing the Jack Hoxie series of productions. Judging by the present success of the trip the publicity and exploitation accruing, and the welcome this big husky cowboy-actor is getting everywhere, promises to be one of the most successful tours ever made by a motion picture star.

The welcome that greeted Hoxie on the first leg of his journey at Dallas, Texas, and Oklahoma City seemed hard to beat until he arrived at St. Louis on June 23rd where he stayed for three days. He was met at the station in that city by S. J. Hankin of the Fine Art Pictures Corporation, whose guest he was during his stay. In a by new Lexington car, furnished by the St. Louis agency of that company, because of the fact that Hoxie's own car is of that make, he was driven through the town to his hotel. The Lexington agency turned the car over to Hoxie for his own personal use during his stay and featured his name in all of their newspaper advertising during the three days.

Theatre Owners at Minneapolis, where he was one of the featured stars in attendance.

Arriving at his hotel, Hoxie was greeted by the chief of police of St. Louis, who was formerly a cowboy, and who presented him with a permit to wear his six-shooters during his stay. Later he attended a monster picnic given by the Automobile Dealers Association of St. Louis where he addressed an audience of 20,000 of the picnickers. One June 24th he was the guest of the Fine Art Pictures Corporation at a special luncheon given at the Elks Club and attended by several hundred invited guests, mainly exhibitors. The mayor of St. Louis was present at the luncheon and met Hoxie, besides sharing honors with him as guest. For this affair Mr. Hankin sent out especially engraved invitations. "Devil Dog" Dawson, one of Hoxie's latest pictures was shown after the luncheon. Afterward, as the special guest of the mayor, he was taken on a sightseeing trip through the municipal buildings.

He also managed to make personal appearances during these first two busy days at the Ivory, Gravois, Lafayette, Knickerbocker, Peerless and Family theatres. On his last day in St. Louis he was the guest at the annual western rodeo or roundup given by cowboys. Here he was introduced by his brethren of the chaps and saddle as "one of us cowboys who has made good in moving pictures." He also participated in a number of the riding and roping stunts. During the evening of this last day in St. Louis he was the guest of the management of the Forest Park Highlands, a monster amusement park, where he was presented to nearly thirty thousand pleasure seekers that thronged the park. The management for this occasion took much newspaper space to announce his coming and the park was filled with posters and banners bearing his name and portrait. On the following day, June 26th, he wound up his stay and departed for the convention of the Motion Picture

Useful Gift Advertises Backer Pictures

A useful and clever novelty in the form of a genuine leather memorandum book, with gold embossing, is being sent to the various state rights buyers of the country with the compliments of Franklyn E. Backer, president of Horizon Pictures, Inc. And Mr. Backer does not stop there, for in the letter he writes the recipient of the book he tells them that whenever the leaves become filled all that is necessary to get a fresh supply is to drop a line to Horizon.

Exhibitor Support for Texas Exchangemen

A. W. Thornley, executive head of Hy-Art Productions, Dallas, Texas, who bought the state rights to Robert W. Priest's production, "The Supreme Passion," for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, reports unusual exhibitor bookings on the feature.

Lincoln Suits "Tarzan" Role

Star of New Series is Ideal Impersonator of Famous Character

THE news that "Adventures of Tarzan," the brand new chapter play based on the concluding chapters of Edgar Rice Burroughs' famous novel, "The Return of Tarzan," brings Elmo Lincoln to the screen again in the role of Tarzan, should prove welcome news to state right buyers and exhibitors.

As the impersonator of the heroic figure of the ape-man in the two feature productions, "Tarzan of the Apes" and "The Return of Tarzan," Lincoln has established a world wide reputation. Suited exactly in the matter of physique, tremendous strength and daring courage to interpret the role of Tarzan, the various screen versions of Burroughs' famous fiction works synonymous. In addition to the enormous popularity which Lincoln has achieved in the role of Tarzan, he is a serial and feature star in his own right, having appeared in several serials during the past five years.

Messrs. Weiss and Stern, responsible for the production and distribution of the latest Tarzan serial, assert that in "Adventures of Tarzan" Lincoln finally achieved perfection in his portrayal of the superman of the jungle. In the various chapters which make up this new production he is called upon to perform many hazardous and daring feats in conjunction with the many wild animals running throughout the story. His gigantic stature and wonderful physical strength stand him in good stead in these various exciting incidents and a variety of spectacular stunts have been worked out in "Adventures of Tarzan" by Robert F. Hill, who has directed Lincoln in all of his principal screen successes.

Wide Publicity for Star

Audrey Munson, Equity Pictures Star, Featured in Nation's Press

A HUGE amount of free publicity has been recently secured by Audrey Munson, star of "Heedless Moths," the six-reel production directed by Robert Leonard and state-righted by Equity. To date the amount of publicity, measured in its advertising equivalent, that this world-famous beauty and artists' model has secured in the country's newspapers alone is estimated by Equity at over one and a half million dollars worth.

The quantity of free advertising that Audrey Munson has received is being increased weekly, and it is expected that another month will see the grand total raised to the two million dollar mark, it is said. Miss Munson, as a result, has become the sensation of press, public and picturedom.

The huge publicity mentioned consists of the fascinating account of Miss Munson's life as an artists' model. The entire Hearst syndicate, embracing forty-two of the nation's largest newspapers, has for the past six months been running double-page spreads on the biography of the star of "Heedless Moths" in every Sunday magazine issue. The number of readers of the Hearst chain of papers is approximately ten million. For twenty-six weeks the public has absorbed every word of the revelations that Audrey Munson has made concerning the secret doings in artists' dens. So popular were these disclosures that the circulation of the Hearst papers was increased.

The list of newspapers, each of which is the biggest in its territory, in which the life story of Miss Munson is now running in double-page splashes every Sunday, stretches from Maine to Florida and from New York to San Francisco. In every key-city of the country one or more newspapers have been publishing for the past twenty weeks the absorbing secrets of a model's life. The New York American, Chicago Herald-Examiner, Boston Advertiser, Philadelphia Inquirer, Pittsburgh Press, Washington Times, Cincinnati Enquirer, Kansas City Post, Minneapolis Journal, San Francisco Examiner, Portland Journal, Denver Post, Des Moines Register, Louisville Herald, Springfield Sun, Syracuse Herald, and thirty-three more newspapers, in addition to a number of papers not in the Hearst syndicate, have boosted the popularity of the star of "Heedless Moths."

Palmer-Cohn Consolidate

Al Cohn to Be Director of Sales Announces Palmer Photoplay Corp.

THE Palmer Photoplay Corporation announces the consolidation of the play brokerage agency of Alfred A. Cohn with its photoplay sales department. Mr. Cohn was for some time Associate Editor of Photoplay Magazine, and for a year and a half acted as personal representative for Mary Pickford. His book, play and photoplay brokerage organization, which he developed during the past two years, has been perhaps the most formidable in America.

With the merger Al Cohn becomes Director of Sales of the Palmer sales department. He left the Coast recently for New York, where he will make the preliminary arrangements for the establishment of an eastern branch of the Palmer sales organizations, and consummate deals which will widen the scope and extend the activities of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation internationally.

Roy L. Manker, vice-president of the Palmer organization in commenting upon the appointment of Mr. Cohn, says: "This move will make Los Angeles an international clearing house for screen rights to books, plays and photoplays. I estimate that of all deals closed for screen rights to books, plays and photoplays in Los Angeles in the past two years, ninety per cent have been transacted through two principal channels—the Alfred A. Cohn agency and the Palmer sales department. Mr. Cohn has sold such plays and stories as 'The City of Silent Men' and 'The Great Impersonation' to Famous Players-Lasky, 'The Virginian' to Douglas Fairbanks, Edna Ferber's 'Fanny Herself' to Universal for a Tod Browning special; and E. Phillips Oppenheim's 'The Black Fox', J. L. Frothingham's current photoplay for the Associated Producers.

"Mrs. Corbaley, who has been in charge of reading and sales for the past two years, will remain with us as department manager.

Bugs Baer Writing Titles

Famous Humorist Engaged for First Whitney-Keane Two Reeler

JOSEPH SAMETH, president of Forward Film Distributors, Inc., announces that the first of his series of two reelers featuring Claire Whitney and Robert Emmett Keane, is completed and will be titled by Bugs Baer.

Hal Benedict, who is producing this series of two reel features for Forward has been working night and day in order that the first picture would be released on schedule.

Everyone concerned in the production of the first picture has put their whole heart and soul in their work so that the pictures, although only two reels in length, will embody the same action and entertainment value as a five reel feature, states Mr. Sameth.

To those who have read the newspapers Bugs Baer has already been introduced. His work should prove a great asset to this series and will help to make these two reel features one of the best box office values ever offered the exhibitor.

"Co-operation spells success," said Mr. Sameth, "and I am sure we have it.

Report Burr Franchies Sold for West Coasts

While no definite announcement has yet been made, it is reported that C. C. Burr, president of Affiliated Distributers, Inc., has completed negotiations with the Los Angeles firm of independent exchange operators, the All-Star Feature Distributers, Inc., of which Louis Hyman is General Manager, whereby that organization will distribute the Affiliated product on the Coast, under the latter's franchise plan.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

SAN FRANCISCO

Tony Sarg's Almanac is making the same hit on the West Coast that it did in the East. It is handled in San Francisco by the Co-operative Film Exchange and has been put on by the California theatre.

A new salesman has been added to the force of the Co-operative exchange, M. M. Stern, who is traveling in the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys and doing a big business. "Exhibitors," declares Mr. St. John, manager of the exchange, "are with one accord patronizing the states right exchanges as evidence of their fight against those distributors who are building theatres in their territories."

Labor troubles have stopped temporarily all work on the four large theatres in process of construction in San Francisco, the New Granada, Loew's State, Loew's Metropolitan, and the Orpheum Jr. The theatre interests are, however, looking for a quick readjustment of difficulties so that the houses can be opened as scheduled.

The T. & D. Jr. circuit has taken over the Majestic Grand and Rialto theatres in Reno, Nevada, and the Goddard's in Sacramento.

Blair and Penny, owners of the Orpheum at Red Bluff, have bought out the People's theatre at Cloverdale.

KANSAS CITY

H. F. Chenoweth of the Chenoweth Film Company, Omaha, Neb., spent a week in Kansas City last week, filming a number of Kansas City's boulevards, which will be used as examples in a campaign in Omaha for the beautification of roads and drives.

Business in Kansas City and territory has become so rushing for Associated First National salesmen that motor cars have been purchased to cover the territory with.

W. H. Carson of Osawatomie, Kas., is building a new $40,000 motion picture theatre in that town. The house will have a seating capacity of 850 and will be opened about October 1.

The First National and Educational now occupy the entire fifth floor of the Film building in Kansas City, since the Crescent Film Company moved from that building last week.

Jack Hoxie, star in western serials, arrived in Kansas City Monday for a three day stop on his way from the Pacific Coast to New York. Under the auspices of the Phoenix Film Corporation, he will appear at all theatres showing his pictures. Invitations have been sent out exhibitors to attend a dinner to be given by Phoenix in honor of Mr. Hoxie.

Al Kahn of the Kansas City office of the Crescent Film Company, has closed a deal for a new series of 26 two-reel westerns, featuring Frank Braidwood.

INDIANAPOLIS

The safe at the American theatre in Terre Haute, Ind., was blown on the night of June 19 and the Sunday receipts, amounting to $1,500 stolen. Manager Shannon Kabeenbach discovered the robbery about 10 o'clock the next morning.

Indianapolis photoplay, vaudeville and legitimate theatre managers have served notice upon union projection machine operators, musicians and stage hands that they will insist upon a reduction when the new wage scale goes into effect Sept. 1. It is understood the house owners desire a 20 per cent cut. Conferences of the contending parties are being held and it is thought an amicable settlement may be reached some time before the new rates are effective.

DETROIT

Ollie Brooks has been appointed special representative for the F. B. Warren Corporation and will be in charge of the Detroit office until the arrival of L. J. Millstein.

Bert Williams of the Palace and La Salle Garden theatres, is booking the picture as well as the vaudeville programs for the new Macomb theatre in Mt. Clems, which opens in July.

Michigan theatre owners and lessees who operate the principal vaudeville and motion picture combination theatres, have formed a new association with Charles H. Seaman, of Grand Rapids, president. Other officers are W. S. McLaren, Jackson, vice-president; Claude E. Cady, treasurer, Lansing, and W. S. Butterfield, Battle Creek, secretary. The purpose of this new association is to harmonize all departments in the various theatres, to deal with railroad rates, legislation, union agreements, etc.

Jack Hoxie is to come to Detroit next month to make personal appearances in local theatres showing his pictures.

The Michigan Motion Pictures Exhibitors' association has passed resolutions condemning the film, "In the Shadow of the Dome."

Four neighborhood picture houses in Detroit are now operating on the open shop basis. They are the Medbury, Clay, Concord and Lyric. The operators sought to picket the Lyric, and an injunction was issued against them. This is supposed to be the opening of the battle the theatres will make against the unions as all agreements expire on September 1 and may not be renewed.

CLEVELAND

Phil Ryan of Associated Exhibitors, dropped in on his Cleveland friends recently. Ryan's business here was pertaining to franchises.

L. S. Diamond, secretary to the director of Pathe exchanges, spent several days in Cleveland recently on business pertaining to exploitation.

"A Child For Sale," released in Ohio through the Fidelity Photoplay Company, is one of the few films that is standing up under the pressure of hot weather. "A Child For Sale" opened at the Doan theatre, St. Clair and East 105th street for two days, and was held over for an additional three days.

George Jacobs, general manager of Masterpiece Films, inaugurates something new in Ohio film circles by setting aside the week of July 4th for a sales drive.

Sam Reece has been made manager of the Cincinnati branch of the Masterpiece Film Attractions.

There's a new photoplay producing organization in town. It's called the Juvenile Photo Play Company. It has taken over the Bradley Studios, Euclid avenue and East 30th street, for its scene of operation, and will start production the latter part of June under the direction of Jacque Bergh.

The Oliver Motion Picture Supply Company of Cleveland, has a new motion picture screen on the market which, according to Mr. E. E. Oliver, head of the company, and to the exhibitors who are using it, is filling a great want. It is called the Artco Screen. It is a bead screen, made of the minutest beads no larger than a grain of sand, each one perfect in shape and color, and made of fluorized glass, giving an intensified white surface.

CINCINNATI

B. F. Keith's recently began its new policy of reduced prices of the summer months. All seats, both day and night, will be 20 cents, including the war tax.

A delegation from the Indianapolis Film Exchange Managers' Association held a conference with the members of the Cincinnati Film Exchange Managers' Association at the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce recently. Close cooperation between the two organizations and the industry in general was discussed. Plans were formulated by which the practice of hicycling films will be eliminated.

I. Libson, manager of the Strand theatre, announced that beginning this week the house will go from a weely to a semi-weekly basis, with a uniform price throughout the house of 20 cents. The admission to the Grand for the summer season has been reduced to 25 cents throughout the house.

Hope Hampton accepted the invitation of the Cincinnati Better Pictures Council to address the council Tuesday, June 27, at the Hotel Sinton on "The Making of a Picture." The organization has invited the 30 members of the Russell Sage Film Committee to attend the meeting.

OKLAHOMA CITY

The Sunset Photoplay Company is planning to make pictures in Oklahoma City. Arrangements are now being made for the establishment of a studio in this ctiy. Two-reel Westerns will be the type of pictures made by this company. A five-reel feature will also be produced before the first of the year if the initial plans meet with success.

The Criterion theatre in Oklahoma City reports that since its opening on April 24 the house has been doing an S. R. O. business.

The Cozy theatre at Mosquito, Texas, closed down permanently, and the building leased to a business concern.

Julian Browder has purchased the Liberty theatre at Cleveland, Texas, and will assume the active management of the same.

Werner Bros. have opened their new Queen theatre at Trinity, Texas.

ABOUT PLAYERS

WALLACE REID, the popular and famous Famous-Player's star, inaugurated Photoplayers' Night, as guest of honor when Delmonico's upon June 23rd, set aside every Thursday night as one devoted to making photoplayers feel at home, upon the delightful roof garden. These Thursday gatherings will provide at least once a week some place for the players of the screen, their friends and associates, some where to go and mingle with their own. Betty Blythe will be the guest of honor for the second Thursday. Miss Blythe's recent success in "The Queen of Sheba" adds to the many interesting attributes identified with her.

Among the well known guests present at the first "Thursday party" were Mrs. Sidney Drew, Tom Carrigan, Andrew Callahan, Ben Ali Haggin, Ina Claire, Betty Brown, Jessie Reed, Ward Crane, Al Christie, Edgar Selwyn, and Mr. Reid, who presented the Wallace Reid Cup as a prize for the most graceful dancing, and a huge bottle of perfume, the second prize.

Anna Q. Nillson, vacationing in her native land, Sweden, has found that it pays to have become a motion picture actress ad interim, as it were, since her welcome has been one that she will long remember. In Astorp, Sweden, from whence hails the beautiful Anna, she has been presented to members of the royal family, and has had made a number of worth-while acquaintances through letters of introduction given her on board the Bergensford. On the trip over Miss Nillson was included in the social functions given by members of the Swedish Embassy, and was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. America may take another look at Anna Q. upon her return, about the first of August. Her screen activities thereafter have not yet been announced.

At the completion of the production in which Constance Binney is now working she will indulge in a much deserved vacation. It will be the first rest Miss Binney has permitted herself for several years. Since making her first picture for Realart, "Erstwhile Susan," Miss Binney has worked almost continuously, her present picture being the seventh she has made for that company.

James Harrison had reason to call this department to order, when, in last week's issue an item regarding the popular juvenile spoke of him as James Harrison twice, and then, in the last analysis referred to him as "James Morrison." Not that either James Harrison or James Morrison have any particular cause for complaint, both being among our best young actors. However, since James Harrison has signed to play an important role in "The Barricade" under the direction of Christie Cabanne, he will overlook the error in print, as he is delighted with the engagement. No need to say that Mr. Cabanne is fortunate in securing James Harrison, with a "fan" following all his own, chiefly the "fair sex."

Gaston Glass, now playing opposite Viola Dana in "There Ain't No Villains" (Metro)

As a result of the action of the Gerry Society in ordering little Miriam Battista out of the Winter Garden show in New York, this mite of an actress will return to her first love, the screen. Prior to her return she will be seen in a special prologue now being arranged for her by Hugo Riesenfeld for presentation at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres. Little Miriam, whose work in "Humoresque" established her as one of the foremost child actresses in pictures, appeared at the Winter Garden in "The Whirl of New York," but the officers of the children's society objected to her singing and dancing and she was allowed to remain only three days. She had appeared without hindrance as a member of the kiddie sextette in "Florodora," and had about decided to give up picture work temporarily.

The officers of the Gerry Society have been unusually active in their efforts to regulate the appearance of children during the vacation period.

Estelle Taylor has finished a long, strenuous engagement, terminating her work in the Fox production, "Footfalls," under the direction of Charles Brabin. She has joined the ranks of summer vacationers, and has left for the Maine woods by motor, where she expects to spend a most satisfactory time, resting. Miss Taylor's success since she joined the Fox organization has been phenomenal. Yet, in "Footfalls" it is said she surpasses any work previously done by her, taking advantage of the many opportunities offered to display her versatility, the part including scenes of a small town, innocent girl, to a sophisticated "vamp."

Madame Nazimova, accompanied by her husband, Charles Bryant, will journey to New York to witness the Dempsey-Carpentier match on July 2. They will return immediately to Los Angeles. Sort of a "Come right east and turn around and go back west again."

ABOUT DIRECTORS

AFTER all, Reginald Barker did not renew his contract with Goldwyn. Instead he will produce in his own right, and is already engaged in going over story material of the virile, human, heart-interest type, with which the Barker name is so closely identified.

"The Poverty of Riches," Mr. Barker's seventeenth and final production for Goldwyn, is in the cutting and titling stages. Upon its actual completion he will launch his own organization.

Reginald Barker is acknowledged a directorial pioneer as motion picture history is reckoned, having introduced Sessue Hayakawa, William S. Hart and George Beban to the screen. In three score pictures made during his career he has also directed Pauline Frederick, Geraldine Farrar, Louise Glaum, Bessie Barriscale, Dorothy Dalton, Enid Bennett, Frank Keenan, H. B. Warner, Dustin Farnum, Willard Mack and William Desmond. For Goldwyn he produced six features with Geraldine Farrar and three Rex Beach picturizations, and "The Old Nest," making its bow to New York audiences this week, is declared to be a masterpiece of human appeal.

Edward Jose will direct another of the Vitagraph stars, Miss Jeane Paige, in "A Prodigal Judge." A long list of photoplays can be named, which were directed by Mr. Jose, the most recent, Vitagraph productions starring Alice Joyce.

A few weeks ago, when Dell Henderson first arrived from the west coast, there were numerous inquiries as to his proposed activities, but it develops that Mr. Henderson doesn't really expect to remain in New York indefinitely and only arrived three weeks in advance to be in time for the Carpentier-Dempsey fight. He insists that his next move will depend upon the winner. The fight will have a bearing on motion pictures in more ways, therefore, than one.

Pathe Short Subjects for Week of July 10

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC. has scheduled an appealing array of short subject features and the current episodes of two different serials for release during the week of July 10th. "The Ants and the Grasshopper" is the fourth of the new animated cartoon series, "Aesop's Film Fables," created by Cartoonist Paul Terry and produced by Fables Pictures, Inc. The offering shows the well-known fable by Aesop telling the moral which has grown down to the saying "Make hay while the sun shines."

The new Hal Roach comedy, "The Bike Bug," shows "Snub" Pollard, the featured comedian, in the guise of a trick bicyclist.

"At Bay" is the title of episode four of the new Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," starring Juanita Hansen, with Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot prominently featured in the cast.

"The Sky Ranger," the new Pathe serial in which June Caprice co-stars with George B. Seitz, reaches its eleventh episode, "The Seething Pool," in the current release.

Pathe Review No. 111 presents a number of highly interesting and entertaining features for the week, including "The Kangaroo Canter" a slow-motion study of the kangaroo in action.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to February 26, 1921.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

ALL DOLLED UP (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....MAR. 12
"Pleasing offering with the star in an ideal role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture, though we had only average business with it and it did not come up to my expectations as a box office attraction." "A nice little picture, with no special attraction. Gladys Walton scores again, as a pert little 'flapper,' and is gaining quite a following." "Dandy little pictnre. Had more than the usual business with it." "Good business attended this feature. Picture pleasingly done."

ALL SOULS EVE (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....MAR. 5
"Incredible plot, but has appealing moments."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture. Receipts poor." "Played this on a donble bill with "Plaything of Broadway." The two make a pleasing program well liked by our patrons." "Rather weak as a drawing card. A good picture, bnt attractive only to a selective few. Just a fair house for the week."

AMATEUR DEVIL, AN (PARAMOUNT) BRYANT WASHBURN...MAR. 12
"A decidedly mediocre comedy with Washburn."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Two days to average bnsiness."

APPEARANCES (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 2
"Tedious drama lacks vitality."—M. P. News.

BARBARIAN, THE (PIONEER) MONROE SALISBURY.....FEB. 26
"Fine backgrounds but very little action."—M. P. News.

BARE KNUCKLES (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....MAR. 19
"Above the average thriller, only in exteriors."—M. P. News.

BARS OF IRON (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 19
"Just an ordinary production."—M. P. News.

BE MY WIFE (MAX LINDER PRODUCTION) MAX LINDER....JUNE 25
"Good incident and gags provide an amusing comedy."—M. P. News.

BEACH OF DREAMS, THE (HAWORTH-ROBERTSON-COLE) EDITH STORY.....JUNE 11
"Desert island picture conventional in theme and treatment."—M. P. News.

BEAU REVEL (INCE-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 26
"Fairly interesting, though would be more convincing if developed humorously."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wonderful picture which sure did go 'over the top.' Brought large box office receipts and much satisfaction from the audiences." "Fairly good picture with average business." "A splendid picture, well made, well acted, beautifully staged, but for some reason or other it didn't pull them in and business was only average." "Clever story with many new angles which makes a very high class and interesting photoplay. Drew splendidly and we played to big business for the week." "Great story. Story good; closely knit—but Lewis Stone and Florence Vidor gripped the attention from start to finish. Stone's work immense." "Good picture, but not much drawing power."

BEAUTIFUL GAMBLER, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST....JUNE 11
"Time-worn picture obvious all the way."—M. P. News.

BELOW THE DEADLINE (ASCHER PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) WARNER-BIRON.....APR. 30
"A well made melodrama, full of action."—M. P. News.

BEYOND PRICE (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....MAY 21
"An inconsequential story not suited to Pearl White."—M. P. News.

BIG ADVENTURE, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 23
"Simple heart interest picture carries some appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Poor picture which did not bave much pulling power. Played to poor bnsiness." "Did more than well for us and pleased."

BIG TOWN IDEAS (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAY 28
"Rural comedy-drama is fairly amusing."—M. P. News.

BLACK PANTHER'S CUB, THE (W. K. ZIEGFELD) FLORENCE REED.....JUNE 11
"Cost much and achieves little worthy of praise."—M. P. News.

BLACK ROSES (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA.....APR. 30
"Hayakawa has entertaining mystery picture here."—M. P. News.

BLAZING TRAIL, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....MAY 7
"Some moments of interest in Mayo's latest."—M. P. News.

BLUSHING BRIDE, THE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAR. 19
"Exceedingly weak; might have made a good Sunshine."—M. P. News.

BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER (NEILAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 14
"Wesley Barry saves the show."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to a capacity bonse all week, aided by some nnique exploitation. Eight Blackfeet Indians, first time off the reservation, a cowboy." "Disappointing. Not as clever as quartet, and the name Wesley Barry all served to attract mnch interest." "This picture is in no wise out of the ordinary. Business was only fair, though the fact tbat it was circus week was partly responsible." "One of the best pictures of tbe year in our estimation. Plenty of action and sustained interest. Custer's last stand brings a real thrill. Excellent box office attraction." "Best western picture we have sbown this year. A treat for those who like this sort of entertainment. High class all through. No rough stuff. Business better tban average for summer." "Pleasing picture, fair receipts." "A real big feature whicb appealed strongly to men and children but seemed to fail to interest the women. Business just about average for week." "Originally booked for week, was pulled in middle of engagement because it did not appeal to women. Production, bowever, is good one."

BOYS WILL BE BOYS (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....MAY 28
"Quaintly humorous, simple story with Will Rogers."—M. P. News.
Exhibitors Comment.—"Will Rogers in one of his best. Plenty of room for effective exploitation with tbis picture. The best week that I have bad in two months."

BROKEN DOLL, A (DWAN-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 25
"As it stands, very doubtful entertainment."—M. P. News.

BUTTERFLY GIRL, THE (PLAYGOERS-PATHE) MARJORIE DAW.....JUNE 4
"Little entertainment in this weak and sugary story."—M. P. News.

CABINET OF DR. CALIGARI, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST..APR. 16
"A radical departure; highly artistic and imaginative."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This powerful picture is very unusual and a distinct novelty to our patrons. Went over big during the week."

CHARMING DECEIVER, THE (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Mild interest because of its conventional treatment."—M. P. News.

CHARGE IT (GARSON-EQUITY-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.....JUNE 11
"Interesting picture of the eternal triangle."—M. P. News.

CHEATED LOVE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....MAY 28
"Carmel Myers has a gem in lifelike picture."—M. P. News.

CHICKENS (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....MAR. 26
"Forced comedy and hokum never ring the bell."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Brought average business. Fair picture." "Played this on the program with tbe Universal feature 'If Only Jim,' starring Harry Carey to two days of extra big business." "Not as good as previous McLean-May productions and the 'feminine half' of tbis combination was sadly missed. Still this picture was good and drew well." "Too weak even for the chickens. Wouldn't even stand on a double program as a comedy." "About the usual Douglas MacLean feature; good farce, but not up to '23½ Honrs' Leave.'"

CITY OF SILENT MEN, THE (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN.....APR. 16
"Interesting crook story with rich details and heart interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid picture, but rather heavy for this time of year. People left theatre feeling oppressed. Big opening, however." "An out of the ordinary picture; had to keep it over a second week." "Splendid picture which gave Thomas Meighan, who is a favorite of our patrons, excellent opportunities to show his ability as an emotional actor. Played to big business." "They seemed to like this one and it brougbt good patronage." "Record-breaking crowds. Equaled our biggest specials in drawing power." "One of Thomas Meighan's best pictures; entertaining, attractive and is a good subject for exploitation. A good house all week." "Went big with us, both from audience standpoint and tbe way it drew." "A good picture, well acted and having a strong, well-developed plot. Good box office attraction." "Very good entertainment and has good box office value." "Really a good story. One of Meighan's best. A good money-getter." "Declared by patrons to be Thomas Meighan's best picture. Excellent business recorded.

CLOSED DOORS (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN.....MAY 28
"Easily obvious picture carries mild interest."—M. P. News.

COINCIDENCE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Light, but breezy enough to get over."—M. P. News.

COLD STEEL (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 4
"Good acting in this ordinary western."—M. P. News.

COLORADO PLUCK (WILLIAM RUSSELL).....MAY 28
"Has not the action they expect of this star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Did average business."

CONCERT, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 5
"Another stage vehicle adaptation which flops."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Accurate photoplay of stage success. Moderately popular. Not enough action in it to make it a big success as a picture."

DANGEROUS MOMENT, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS...APR. 16
"A light and pleasing romance of Greenwich Village."—M. P. News.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

DECEPTION (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 30
"Historical drama is colorful and impressive."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Went very big. Tremendous production." "Held up fairly good for second week. Picture well liked by audiences." "Found this one to be a fair picture with average box office receipts." "Appeals to educated classes and lovers of history with peculiar force. General public not interested." "Went over very big." "Very elaborate production well received in spite of German agitation. Many favorable comments. Splendid direction." "Largely entertaining. Shot the box office receipts up high."

DESPERATE YOUTH (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....APR. 30
"Goes back to the early days of pictures, but is entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Gladys Walton becomes a better drawing card with every picture. This was good and business was fair."

DIANE OF STAR HOLLOW (PRODUCERS SECURITY CORP.—STATE RIGHTS) BERNARD DURING.....APR. 23
"A complex story, well acted and entertaining because of action."—M. P. News.

DOLLAR A YEAR MAN, THE (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE APR. 9
"Weak humor and hokum make this a poor effort."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A sure-fire attraction, which brought extra large box office receipts." "Fatty Arbuckle always a sure bet and this picture proves to be no exception. Capacity house all week." "Unfortunately, Fatty Arbuckle does not live up to his fan's expectations of him. This is no worse than previous feature-Arbuckies I've played—but it was no better, and business was poor." "Went over great. Fine audience picture." "Arbuckle good drawing card, but vehicle is very poor. Public greatly disappointed." "Good picture to good business for week run." "Roscoe Arbuckle in 'The Dollar a Year Man' and Larry Semon in 'The Rent Collector.' Good combination and one that pleased, although attendance dropped. Arbuckle picture not as well liked as previous releases."

DON'T CALL ME LITTLE GIRL (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....JULY 2
"Pleasing little picture furnishes ideal role for star."—M. P. News.

DUCKS AND DRAKES (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....APR. 9
"Bebe Daniels has a lively offering here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Best Bebe Daniels has to her credit up to date. Business was better than it has been for several weeks." "Bebe Daniels goes her former productions one better in this picture. A snappy production that brings results at the box office." "A good picture. They liked this one and went away and told their friends about it. Business was good."

DYNAMITE ALLEN (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....MAR. 5
"Disconnected and wildly improbable melodrama."—M. P. News.

EAST LYNNE (BALLIN-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 26
"Modernized version of play and book should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Stormy weather held down attendance on this picture, but those who saw it were pleased and we are holding this excellent picturization of the famous stage play over for a second week." "We were disappointed. Less than usual matinee and night crowds."

EXTRAVAGANCE (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....MAR. 5
"Interest dulled by a too lengthy picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A program picture with nothing out of the ordinary to recommend it." "A fair picture to fair business."

FIGHTING LOVER, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....JUNE 18
"Frank Mayo stars in fair mystery picture."—M. P. News.

FINE FEATHERS (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 25
"Fairly interesting melodrama on an old theme."—M. P. News

FOOLISH MATRONS (TOURNEUR-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS)..JULY 2
"Three character studies compose interesting picture."—M. P. News.

FORBIDDEN LOVE (WISTARIA PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16

FOUR HORSEMEN, THE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 5
"Marvelous production reaches the heights of picture art."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Packed them in on this one. People curious to see it. Great box office attraction." "Held over for fourth week. Picture at $2 scale has played to capacity nights and good matinees."

FREEZE OUT, THE (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....APR. 9
"Carey's personality its chief asset."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This got big business for us and they seemed to like it." "Just fair box office bet for us and pleased fairly well."

GARDEN OF RESURRECTION, THE (STOLL) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 2
"Poor direction makes this one mediocre."—M. P. News.

GET YOUR MAN (FOX) BUCK JONES.....JUNE 4
"Buck Jones feature consistent in action and suspense."—M. P. News.

GHOST IN THE GARRET, THE (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY GISH..APR. 16
"A rollicking farce comedy with Dorothy Gish."—M. P. News.

GILDED LILY, THE (PARAMOUNT) MAE MURRAY.....MAR. 19
"Mae Murray's latest is a winner."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only Mae Murray's tricky costumes, and dancing held this up. Business just fair, despite heavy advertising." "Superb production. Well directed, extravagantly conceived and a good audience picture." "Held up well for a two-week run. As a whole big picture from every angle." "Star is popular and in consequence picture went over all right." "Went over big. Everybody liked it and said so." "This one was mediocre. Business was only fair." "Big every day and they all liked it." "Exceptional fine settings and surprise features of story appealed strongly to our audiences, and we did good business with this picture." "Went over big for full week." "Going fine in its third week."

GUILE OF WOMEN, THE (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....MAR. 12
"Rogers, good story and clever titles make this fine entertainment."—M. P. News.

GYPSY BLOOD (FIRST NATIONAL) POLA NEGRI.....MAY 21
"Pola Negri flashes a fine talent in German version of 'Carmen.'"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture which went over well and brought good business." "Probably the best of the three versions of 'Carmen' seen here. Not so much on scenery, but excellent acting." "'Passion' grossed the biggest business of the season for me, but I lost money heavily on this second Pola Negri feature, which personally I think was much ahead of the first. Business bad throughout week." "A mediocre picture and business was bad."

HANDS OFF (FOX) TOM MIX.....APR. 16
"Humorous touches make Western entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Tom Mix seems to be a good box office star at this house. Business good. Picture full of pep."

HEART LINE, THE (PATHE) LEAH BAIRD.....JUNE 4
"Entertaining chiefly because of fake medium scenes."—M. P. News.

HEART OF MARYLAND, THE (VITAGRAPH) CATHERINE CALVERT.....APR. 16
"Excellent picture from a sure-fire success."—M. P. News.

"Heavy drama may satisfy star's admirers."—M. P. News

HOME STRETCH, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....MAY 14
Human interest story carries thrills and humor."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A pleasing little picture. Business about average." "Good picture to our usual capacity business." "Clever, clean and distinctly funny. Made quite a hit with my patrons and business was excellent."

HOME STUFF (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....JUNE 18
"Even hokum cannot make this a good one."—M. P. News.

HOME TALENT (SENNETT-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 25
"Good slapstick on both ends; sags in the middle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture with average business."

HOUSE THAT JAZZ BUILT, THE (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY..MAY 21
"Wanda Hawley's best bet; a cleverly directed picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Went over well. Business very good, and Wanda Hawley is building up quite a gallery of fans." "Wanda Hawley is Not a box office attraction, but picture pleased." "Nice little show. Pleasing, but not striking in any particular." "A bright, clever picture which appealed to the many admirers of Wanda Hawley and brought in excellent business despite the torrid weather."

I AM GUILTY (ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS—J. PARKER READ, JR.) LOUISE GLAUM.....MAY. 7
"Mystery story carries a trick finish and much melodrama."—M. P. News.
"Timely title these days, and attracted a curious crowd. Picture sufficiently strong to stand on its own merits after getting the people in." "This is an excellent Louise Glaum picture and our patrons liked it. Owing to the extreme heat, however, business was only average."

IDOLS OF THE NORTH, THE (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY DALTON.....MAY 28
"Elemental and rugged picture packs a healthy punch."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid northern picture, well acted and good settings, fair settings, fair photography, good direction. Splendid audience and box office picture." "Fans seem to like it, but no extraordinary enthusiasm." "A mediocre production which recorded fair business, because of star's popularity." "Fair picture that did pretty well considering the picture business slump."

IF ONLY JIM (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....MAR. 5
"Carey's latest is amusing and entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Great business with this one. Capacity houses. great deal of word-of-mouth advertising." "Played this feature on the program with the Paramount production 'Chickens,' featuring Douglas MacLean, to extra big business for two days."

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST..JUNE 4

New Saenger Theatre One of Most Beautiful in South

Monroe, La., Now Has Amusement House to Be Proud Of

As a monument to their faith in Monroe, La., the Saenger Amusement Co., of New Orleans, have erected a new house in that town that ranks among the finest in the South.

"The new Monroe Saenger theatre has no peer in the entire state," stated W. H. Gueringer, assistant general manager for the Saenger Company. "It nearly approaches the size of the New Orleans Strand, but it equals it in its conveniences and eclipses it in the beauty of its appointments; and then in its being fitted as a combination house, or one which will handle the largest of stage presentations with ease, it is more the representative theatre."

From thence we drew from Mr. Gueringer a description of the features of the theatre for our readers. The Saenger theatre is what is now generally known as a "combination house," i. e., one which may be used with equal facility and appropriateness as a photoplay theatre or a theatre for the spoken drama, musical comedy, vaudeville, opera, etc., where full stage is required. The stage has a depth of fifty feet, with a proscenium opening thirty-three feet wide and twenty-eight feet high. The gridiron and fly galleries, which are part of the equipment of the stage, are of the latest and most thorough design. The stage itself has a dancing floor, the first in the South. This is a recent innovation, the very latest thing, in fact, in stage construction. The dressing rooms adjoin the stage and are on two floors. Each of the dressing rooms is equipped with running water, and there are shower baths and toilets on each of the floors.

The electric switchboard on this stage is a marvel of ingenuity. It is equipped with the famous Cutler-Hammer dimmers so arranged that the entire lighting of the stage and auditorium is controlled from one central point, and so that the minutest variations of light may be made and imperceptibly graduated to full lighting in four colors in borders, footlights and proscenium strips. Extra electrical equipment and devices, all controlled from this major switchboard, will enable the Saenger theatre to furnish the most elaborate and intricate electrical effects which any theatre may be called upon to furnish. The Newberry Company of St. Louis performed the task of installing and connecting this switchboard and its manifold connections. The appointments of the proscenium and stage and of the boxes flanking the proscenium will evoke applause, for these consist of an elaborate arrangement of draw curtains and lambrequins in turquoise blue with gold trimmings. There is a deep valance and double draw curtain of the same materials for the stage. A 16-inch gold fringe finishes the bottom of the stage curtain and a 12-inch fringe completes the bottom of the valance, with galloon trimming to give a panel effect. These drapes, by the way, were made by the Monroe Furniture Company under the personal supervision of Joe Isaacman—and it is a worthy commentary that they could not have been surpassed by any New York manufacturer. Mr. Isaacman's treatment extended to the drapes for the lounge and for the lobby and foyer openings and the box office. His handiwork will be in evidence in the handsome, extra heavy pongee silk draperies made up in the up-to-the-minute French puff style. Getting back toward the stage which we were describing, we note an immense orchestra pit with an organ console to one side. This console will control a Moller organ of gigantic proportions. The orchestra will be seated in the pit so that their heads will be on a level with the top of the stage apron and they will not obstruct the view, while themselves having an opportunity to follow the picture for proper cueing.

The stage is equipped with a Minusa Gold Fibre screen, standard in the finest theatres, and of the unusually large size of 18 feet height and 24 feet width. It will repose in an artistic setting designed by the Saenger company's own scenic artist, John Platzer.

Thus far we have described the house from the standpoint of its entertainment possibilities. Let us get on the outside for an inspection, then proceed inward in customary manner. The style is an adaptation from the Italian Renaissance. The front and sides are finished in cream-colored cement made to imitate stone. In the front is a very ornamental metal marquis, which is brilliantly illuminated on the underneath and which conceals on its top a series of powerful headlights which will so brilliantly illuminate the front of the theatre that it will be visible for miles. Atop of the theatre are four batteries or twin sets of Typhoon fans eight feet in diameter and propelled by 15 and 30 h.p. motors. These tremendous fans are 65 feet above street level and will force cooled air from that height into the auditorium of the theatre. The distribution of this air in motion—or breezes, to be exact—will make the Saenger comfortable and healthful even in the most torrid weather. This point will impress itself upon the patron most agreeably, as the season for the use of this breeze-making equipment is at hand. And during the winter months there will be an equally grateful distribution of warmth through a series of gas-steam radiators placed in numerous vantage points throughout the building.

While still on the outside we note that the building is practically isolated from fire hazard from outside sources. The theatre stands on a corner, facing streets, therefore, on two sides. Its other two sides are separated from adjoining property by twelve-foot alleys. But the amusement company have made further provision towards the patron's safety and peace of mind, and at every turn one comes upon fire hydrants and reels of hose; and in addition there are numerous hand extinguishers. The entrance of the Saenger theatre is imposing with its massive columns of cream cement and its floor of gleaming tile in color effect of cream and black tile, with fancy border surmounted with base of verde antique marble. The lobby is the most stately and pleasing in Dixie. It is to remain unspoiled by loose framings, etc. The very elaborate poster display frames from the house of Menger and Ring, New York, will be enclosed by French plate glass doors. To the left of the foyer as one faces the theatre is the manager's office; to the right a set of two box offices, one facing the lobby and another which may be used for colored patrons in the farthest right.

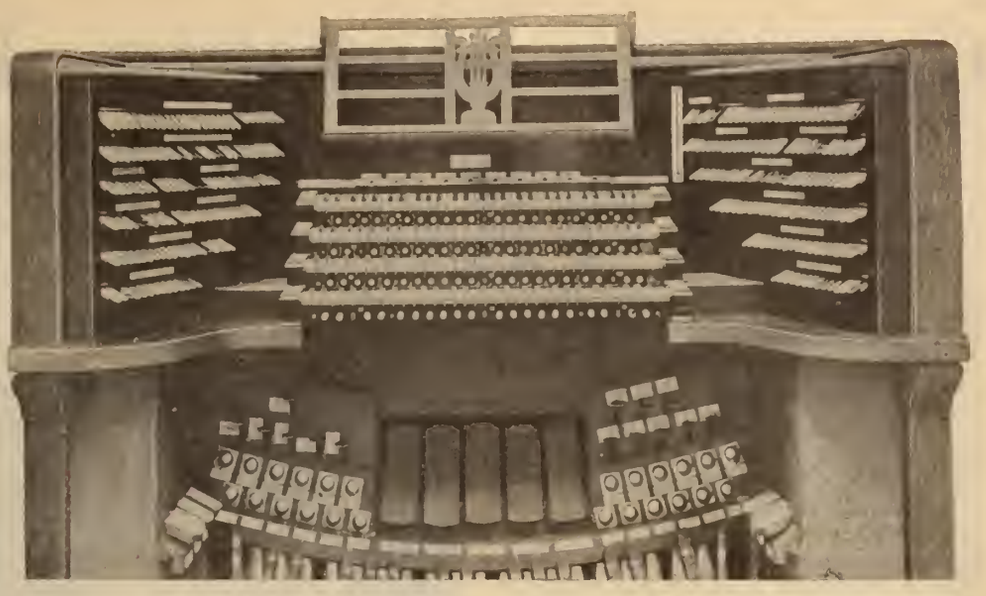
Stepping past the lobby one enters the foyer, leading off from the center of which is "the lounge," a cozy compartment in which will be found a telephone, writing table, easy chairs, drinking fountain with running ice water. And off the lounge is a cloak-room for the convenience of patrons, ladies' rest room and gentleman's smoking rooms, toilets, etc. In the ladies' rest room is a reclining couch and other comfy furniture. On either side of the lounge are ramps leading into the auditorium and steps leading into the mezzanine section.

There are three levels to the auditorium, orchestra, mezzanine and balcony. The approaches thereto and the aisles therein are covered with heavy linoleum. The seats are of the very latest design. The wood is of a beautiful silver gray finish and the upholstering is in Spanish leather finished gray. An association of this with the drapes of turquoise blue will reveal the motif in decoration, a charmingly restful, modernesque combination. The lighting fixtures are the pride of the Hartwell Company of New Orleans, who have equipped many Saenger theatres. They have evolved a distinctive design of direct-indirect fixtures of cast bronze and art glass of colors specially selected to harmonize with the color scheme of the house.



Console of Möller organ installed in Saenger theatre, Monroe, La.

The sight lines of the theatre have been so arranged that every seat in the house will have clear vision of the entire stage. This is even true of the boxes, twenty in number and each containing six chairs. The boxes are not situated in the usual oblique angle but parallel the side walls of the house so that every seat has clear vision of the entire stage. Box seats in many theatres are classed as undesirable. Not so those of the Saenger theatre.

Exits are visible and accessible from all parts of the house. The Saenger theatre prizes safety-first features. Numerous easily accessible exits make the house as panic-proof as it is fire-proof. And still another feature makes it fool-proof. That is an extra emergency lighting circuit removed from all connection with the usual lighting circuits of stage and auditorium.

The booth at the Saenger is a marvel of modern projection engineering. It is commodious and fitted with every convenience for the operator. And it is superbly equipped with the latest type Powers automatic projecting machines, a spot light and double dissolving stereopticons. Direct current achieved through a rotary

Complete Miniature Theatre Constructed in Oregon Supply Company's Store

Phenomenal Growth from Operator to Leading Supply Dealer in Territory

The General Supply & Repair Co., of Portland, Oregon, under the management of Matthew Aparton, has just completed a miniature interior theatre estimated to be worth two thousand dollars. The theatre has been under construction for several weeks, and has now blossomed out and is open to inspection by the general theatrical public.

Three ideas brought forth this theatre, and each one is in itself sufficient reason for its existence. First, and mainly, no supply house is sufficient within itself without an adequate testing room for every device that is sold by the house. No guarantee can be well placed unless both the house and the purchaser know that the article sold merits the guarantee in the first place. The General Supply & Repair Co. sells no article whatsoever without a guarantee, and for this reason Mr. Aparton decided that a testing room was necessary. Secondly, the very best way to prove to your patron that a thing is just what he needs is to use it yourself, and show him by actual demonstration just why he needs it also. The new theatre is equipped with the latest and best equipment available, placed under the best demonstrating conditions and supervised by the best salesmen and mechanics. From carbons, projectors, automatic dowsers, speed controls, arc controls, lenses, opera chairs, automatic deodorizers and perfume dispensers, decorative placques, fern baskets, plush curtain drop, automatically operated, to six different types of screens ready for immediate demonstration, the theatre is complete. And the last reason taken into consideration, was the necessity of another reviewing room in the city of Portland, where strict censorship of every foot of film is required. The fact that the theatre was built with the thought of demonstration in mind made comfort a natural result, but aside from this, Mr. Aparton kept the thought of safety also foremost in the construction. The metal booth has been built strictly according to city code and meets every regulation of the Fire Ordinance. Nothing has been left undone that should have been done to insure comfort and safety.

The viewing room of the theatre is ten by thirty feet, and is perfectly ventilated and deodorized by a thorough ventilating system. The lower portion of the screen and beneath the plush drop a bower of artificial vines and ferns is twined through a latticework of the same color. Practical, efficient and beautiful is the new projection department, and the General Supply

Matthew Aparton, Pres. and Mgr. General Supply and Repair Co., Portland, Ore.

& Repair Co. may well be proud of the advantages thus added to their already well ordered departments.

Two years ago Matthew Aparton, one of the operators of the Liberty theatre projection machines in Portland, Ore., opened the General Supply and Theatre Equipment Co. with store space at 213 Fourth street. The project was backed by a capital on hand of $60, and by Aparton's income received from operating.

Today, capitalized for $14,000, the General Supply and Theatre Equipment Co. receives its patrons in roomy offices in the heart of Portland's rialto at 392 Burnside street. Four persons are regularly employed in its salesroom, office and machine shop and business which pours in from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oklahoma, Wyoming and Alaska is about to make necessary the services of a bigger force. Matthew Aparton, no longer works from 6 p. m. until 1 p. m. operating the Liberty theatre projection machines, in addition to his long day spent as manager of the shop. Instead he is regarded as one of the foremost business men connected with the motion picture industry in the Northwest and his opinion is eagerly sought by Western exhibitors on all phases of cinema game.

Growth of the General Supply Co in Portland corresponds to a great extent to the growth and stabilization of the cinema field in the Northwest. Prior to the establishment of his company in Portland, sale of motion picture equipment was one of speculation and chance. There was in Oregon no firm holding a majority of the reliable agencies. Business for the most part fluctuated between Seattle and San Francisco making slow deliveries and poor service for the Oregon exhibitor. Small stocks were carried and companies having reliable agencies often forced their patrons to make long delays in installing and repairing theatre equipment. Today all is changed. Not only does Mr. Aparton handle the great bulk of Oregon equipment and supply business, but his business has crept out so that it includes equipping theatres in six prominent Alaska cities, and supplying exhibitors in Oklahoma, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and Southern Washington.

"The Powers Cameragraph" is one of the principal agencies Mr. Aparton holds. When he first obtained this agency he did not have a single machine in stock, and not for seven months after he obtained the agency did he have sufficient funds to obtain one. His new offices opened last month with seven complete machines on

TYPHOON COOLING SYSTEM

On the Hottest Days Typhoons Will Draw the Crowds

It makes no difference how good the picture, or how fine the music, if your theatre is not properly cooled and ventilated during these warm days you are going to lose money.

Cooling and ventilation during the hot weather is considered to-day the greatest drawing power of any theatre, and hundreds of the best theatres throughout the country have proven this statement to be true—they are equipped with TYPHOONS.

There is still plenty of time to install a TYPHOON COOLING SYSTEM. If installation is made now it will pay for itself by the end of the season through the increased commissions a cool theatre is bound to bring you.

He first opened his shop on January 1, 1919, having in his possession not more than $60, some second hand tools and a few Mazda lamps. There were no shelves, counters or other usual outfitting luxuries.

Mr. Aparton opened the store at 8:30 each morning, closing it at 5:30 o'clock so that he could report for duty thirty minutes later for his shift as one of the regular operators in the Liberty theatre.

State To Approve Projection Machines

Motion picture projecting machines used in Pennsylvania will have to be approved by the State Department of Labor Industry, if Labor Commissioner Connelley adopts recommendations made to him at a meeting in the capitol at Harrisburg on June 21, by the special committee he appointed recently to help draft a code of regulations to govern the exhibition of motion pictures by religious, welfare, educational and other institutions, in places other than theatres.

It was the first time the committee, which is composed of representatives of the various interests concerned in exhibitions of film pictures outside of theatres, had met for conference. Other suggestions made were for the adoption of types of machines so safe as to do away with the necessity of projection booths in these classes of exhibitions, and for doing away with the present system of licesure of motion picture machine operators.

Dana Pierce, representing the underwriters' interests, was unable to attend. The labor interests were represented by Dana oJnes, of Erie, instead of M. C. Goodspeed.

The other members of the committee are: Rev. Daniel Marsh, Pittsburgh, representative churches; Louis Nusbaum, Philadelphia, representing schools; Charles C. McMahon, Washington, D. C., representing Welfare Organizations; I. W. Driscoll, Newark, N. J., representing manufacturers of motion picture machines, and S. A. Kegley, Swissvale, Pa., representing manufacturers of films.

Eastern L. & C. Co. Moves To Larger Quarters

Announcement is made of the removal of the Eastern Linoleum and Carpet Company to 156 East 34th Street, New York City.

The new location offers larger working quarters and allows an opening of a retail department for linoleums, coca matting, mats and rugs.

No Indication of Poor Business in Theatre Construction Noticed in Harrisburg, Pa.

Several More Theatrical Projects Have Been Announced—One Half Million Dollar House

Construction of new motion picture theatres inn Harrisburg, Pa., is contemplated on a large scale notwithstanding reported depression in the motion picture business in some parts of the country. Despite the recent doubling of the seating capacity of the Victoria theatre, on Market street, near Third, in the central business district of the city, so that it now provides accommodations for 2,200 patrons, and regardless of the fact that a new neighbohood theatre is about to be opened by the Broad Street Theatre Co. at 1302 and 1304 North Third street, announcement is made of several other important new theatre projects about to be consummated.

Perhaps the most ambitious of these enterprises is that announced by three prominent real estate men who have never before ventured into the motion picture field but who, nevertheless, declare that they are acting in their own behalf and are not representing any outside syndicate. They are Edward Moeslein, a contractor, realty dealer and former city building inspector, at one time chairman of the Democratic city committee; Peter Vanderloo and John E. Gipple, the latter a former president of the Harrisburg Realty Board.

This trio has announced the purchase of three adjoining properties on South Second, and three on Chesnut street, near Second, the two groups of properties connecting at the rear and forming an "L" from Second to Chesnut street. Their announced plans are for the construction of a $500,000 theatre which may be used in part for vaudeville. The site is located near the center of the city business district.

Moreover, Peter Magaro, proprietor of the Regent theatre, which has for a number of years been in successful operation at 410 and 412 Market street, has acquired a large amount of the property intervening between No. 400 Market street, a corner, lot, and his present theatre property. The sale of part of the property that he desires is halted temporarily by litigation, a dispute having arisen as to who of several bidders is entitled to purchase the parcel from an estate, and the court is to decide the question. It is strongly intimated that if Magaro acquires full title to all the property he desires, he will combine it with the site of his present theatre and build a large, up-to-the-minute motion picture house.

Another Harrisburg theatre enterprise which is under way, came to light when John C. Orr, a real estate dealer, announced the purchase of a large plot at Sixth and Forrest streets, to be used as a site for a new neighborhood picture theatre. Orr said he was acting for a second party and has not revealed who the real purchaser is. It is denied, however, that the site was acquired by the Wilmer & Vincent interests, who control a number of motion picture theatres in Harrisburg and who announced more than a year ago that they planned to erect a number of neighborhood theatres—a program which has not yet been consummated.

The new theatre of the Broad Street Theatre Co., referred to above, is already completed at 1302 and 1304 North Third street. It is just announced that it has been acquired from W. B. Markley, a contractor and the original promoter of the enterprise, by Samuel Katzman, a Harrisburg hotel man, and O. B. Felder, at present connected with Wilmer & Vincent's Colonial theatre, at Third and Market streets, in the capacity of house manager. The new theatre is practically ready to be opened for business.

Another New Theatre for Hartford

A modernly-constructed and equipped motion picture theatre will be a factor of the four-story business block that the Lyric Amusement Company of Hartford, Conn., is to put up at Park and Broad streets in that city, as soon as plans are completed and contracts awarded. Plans are now being drawn by E. T. Wiley, Hartford architect, and bids will be asked for as soon as they are completed. The theatre bowling alleys, a large dance hall, stores and offices will be amply provided for. While the building will be originally four stories high, foundations and walls will be so constructed that two more stories can be added, when necessary.

The building, which will be of brick, will front on Park street, the first floor containing several stores and the theatre entrance. The theatre proper will be in the rear, of modern fireproof construction and handsomely finished throughout. In addition to the main floor, there will be a gallery. In the basement of the building there will be bowling alleys, on the second floor, offices and on the third floor a large dance hall.—AGARD.

Asheville Rapidly Coming to the Front

Asheville, N. C., is rapidly developing into the motion picture theatre centre of the Carolinas, announcement having just been made that two $100,000 motion picture theatres will be erected immediately in that city. The addition of these modern houses enables Asheville to compare favorably with cities twice her size.

This ought to cool you off! Russell A. Muth (in the fur cap) of the Fox News, who made the startling pictures of this year's championship skating races at Lake Placid, N. Y., and his trusty Akeley. Muth is fast forging to the front as an expert cameraman, and with his new Akeley camera, declares he is going to cover news events in a way they have never been covered before. He says the Akeley provides unlimited resources for gathering news from an entirely different angle, and that he intends to set a new standard in news pictures

New House of Excellence Opens Its Doors, in Vermont

Black New England Theatres Co. Adds Another Theatre to String

If the famous "Green Mountain Boys" could return to Vermont and by chance stop off at Barre, they would be greeted by a most interesting and imposing sight; that of the New Park theatre, which recently opened up in that city.

The citizens of Barre, have just reason to boast of their new $100,000 theatre, seating 1,200 persons and Manager A. B. Carter, states that the New Park theatre is the finest and coolest in the state of Vermont.

Tho, the New Park itself is a comparatively small theatre, when compared with the big theatres in larger cities, nevertheless, it possesses equipment that is found only in the leading theatres of the country.

The Park theatre will be operated by the Black New England Theatres, Inc., who at the present time control over sixty theatres in the New England States.

A most completely equipped projection room fitted out with two regulation model motor driven Simplex Projectors, a special spotlight, and General Electric Motor Generator, provide Floyd Hunt, Chief Projectionist and his assistants, Arthur Ganglough and Raymond Ashline, with splendid working material.

After giving the matter the utmost consideration, and investigating the matter from many angles, the architect and Mr. Black decided to entrust the entire equipping of their new theatre to Hicks & Pryce, Inc., 97 State Street, Montpelier, Vt., one of the New England units of the Simplex Distributing Organization.

Messrs. Hicks & Pryce recently took over the business of the Leland Theatre Supply House and are at present conducting a very active campaign throughout Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

With a throw of 105 feet, upon plain white 12′ x 14′ screen, the projection results, as viewed the opening night could not easily be surpassed.

The color scheme of the New Park theatre is a delicate shade of grey, with artistic decorations on the wall panels. A stage with area and facilities for handling legitimate productions is one of the outstanding features of this up-to-date theatre.

A direct and indirect lighting system is also one of the features of the New Park theatre. Said system is controlled from both the projection room, and the stage as well, by a remote controlled system.

Six 36" exhaust fans, located at advantageous points throughout the theatre, keep the air continually circulating, while a 6′ blower in the basement constantly keeps a stream of fresh, hot, or cold air pouring into the theatre.

On the main floor are located two spacious artistically decorated and decidedly comfortable lounging rooms. The gentlemen's room is fitted up as a smoking room. The ladies' room offers the feminine patrons a most tempting and inviting reclining room.

On the mezzanine floor, similar lounging rooms are to be found and also thereon is located the House Manager's office.

The New Park contains eleven exits, which not only add to the safety of the patrons, but also tends to facilitate excellent circulation of air, during the hot summer months.

A Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones $10.000 Organ, furnishes the music for the pictures and with a staff of eight pretty girl ushers, Manager Carter, in conjunction with the equipment, as described herein, has material with which he can well pilot his new house on to an unusual success.

The present policy of the New Park is one solely of pictures. Three shows a day and six days a week.

The classy little "Rialto" has just opened for business at Oklahoma City, Okla., and is a unique example of enterprise in that J. C. Hartman, owner and manager, was also his own architect and contractor. He completed his theatre in exactly seven weeks' time, working day and night shifts. He won several suits of clothes, and hats, from friends who said it could not be done. He only had one day margin of victory at the finish. It has a capacity of 500, and was a surprise to the public, as Mr. Hartman had played a trick on the city by building a high fence all around the front on the plea of laying a new sidewalk, so the passing crowds did not know all that was going on behind until the opening day.

Universal Films new portable power plant, designed and constructed by the electrical department of the Universal studio under the personal supervision of Harry Brown, chief engineer (seated on truck). Set consists of 1-6 cylinder Winton high speed marine engine direct connected to 1-75 kw. Westinghouse generator, 125 volts, d. c., 865 r.p.m. Engine is supplied with automatic governor and the set will handle 100 per cent overloads and maintain good voltage regulation without any field regulator. There is a switchboard panel mounted on the truck, and all necessary accessories are carried. Specially large gas and oil tanks are provided so that this truck can run for long periods and take long trips to distant locations. The entire outfit is mounted on a 3½ ton Fageol truck having 7 speeds forward. This outfit received its first test when it ran 400 miles up to Monterey and ran there for more than 20 hours one day furnishing power for Von Stroheim's superproduction, "Foolish Wives"

New Saenger Theatre A Beautiful House

converter insures a brilliant steady arc, the alternations having been destroyed and the usual fluctuations eliminated. The operating booth is of steel and concrete construction and is ventilated with exhaust fans. All of its openings close automatically in case of fire.

In addition to the electric exit lights, and these are on the emergency circuit already described, there are gas exit lights.

The Saenger theatre was designed by Chas. G. Davis, chief architect of the Saenger Amusement Company, and the plans drawn in his offices in the Saenger Administration Building, New Orleans. The designs of drapes and lighting fixtures and working out of the color scheme, at which Mr. Davis is adept, was done by him and the work carried out under his direct supervision. The H. T. Underwood Company of New Orleans were the general contractors. Jens B. Jensen was consulting engineer of construction and William Ennis consulting engineer of electrical construction.

The Saenger Amusement Company's own staff artists have done all of the painting and decorating under supervision of Anthony Bruno, head decorator, and all scenic work under direction of J. Platzer.

The plumbing and heating installation was done by the American Heating and Plumbing Company.

The electric switchboard, a massive mechanism, was manufactured by the specialists, the Frank Adams Co., of St. Louis, Mo.; and the great Typhoon installation is the handiwork of the Typhoon Fan Company of New York and New Orleans.

The Moller Company of Hagerstown, Md., built for the Saenger theatre, the largest organ south of the Mason-Dixon line. There are five units in the composition of this Moller organ: a Great organ, an Orchestral Organ, a Solo organ, an Echo organ and a Pedal organ. The action of the organ is electro-pneumatic throughout, the entire mechanism from key to pipe being controlled electrically.

The following are contractors in their various lines.

Millwork—Chas. T. Abeles & Co., Little Rock, Ark.

Limestone—Bedford Cut Stone Co., Bedford, Ind.

Roofing—J. G. Bell & Co., Monroe, La., and H. H. Bain Sheet Metal Wks., Shreveport, La.

Plastering—C. B. Humphrey, Little Rock, Ark.

Plumbing—American Heating & Plumbing Co., New Orleans, La.

Marble and Tile—Southwestern Tile Co., Little Rock, Ark.

Electric Wiring—F. E. Newbery Elec. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Brick—Acme Brick Co., Ft. Worth, Tex.

Steel—Houston Structural Steel Co., Houston, Tex.

Sheet Metal—Monroe Blow Pipe & Sheet Metal Wks., Monroe, La.

Fire Escape and Marquis—Decatur Cornice & Roofing Co., Albany, Ala.

Mr. A. D. Stuart was Field Superintendent in charge of construction.

For the general lighting of this theatre something like 5400 watts are used. On the stage, 5700 watts are used in the footlights, two colors and white being used; 3300 watts for the white, 1200 watts for the red and 1200 for the blue. Each of the two borders is equipped with 3600 watts of white light and 4500 watts of colored lighting. The colored lights consist of equal amounts of amber, red and blue.

In order to get the novel lighting effects which are said to be equal to those which can be obtained in any theatre in the South, a Cutler-Hammer bank of dimmers is arranged to control the various circuits. The dimmers are of the interlocking type so that by manipulating the master lever it is not only possible to dim or brighten

Some day the camera in the home will be the most important means of preparing new knowledge for dissemination to the world. Can we imagine what a thousand future men like the French Fabre could do with the hundreds of thousands of insects and other forms of life, each with a life history of fascinating interest. Multiply the same possibility by all fields of human interest and research and some vision may be possible of the contributions which will slowly distil in countless homes for the enlightenment and entertainment of mankind.

What of the motion picture camera of the future? Thinking of the year 1950, or before, as we will, may we give for a moment free play to our imagination and fancy the specifications for the camera of 1950. Dare we expect a camera with automatic focussing, automatic aperture adjustment, a camera recording in full color, with bi-visual stereoscopic effect, developing the picture instantly, telegraphing the pictures, exactly as recorded, automatically to be filed, and with mechanism for instantly locating any film without index, and exhibiting it immediately; a camera with self-sensitizing plates on which not separate pictures but a continuously changing picture is formed and erased after being telegraphed to the storage room; a camera equipped with mechanism for automatic cleaning of the glass surfaces, and the whole not to exceed in size the smallest kodak of today. For fear such a comera may be declared impossible, I hasten to remind you that Mother Nature anticipated my specification by some million years when she gave us our two eyes. The result is that each of us has such a pair of cameras, self-directing, self-focussing, and self-cleaning, the exposed surface being cleansed twenty times every minute. These wonderful eye cameras are not made with hands but they have automatic aperture adjustment, sensitize and develop their own plates instantly, taking colored pictures in full motion, stereoscopic pictures, telegraphing them exactly as recorded to the optic lobes of the brain subject to instant recall in our little theatres of the mind. The cameras are portable, not larger than the smallest vest pocket camera of today. The plates are concave, the lenses always in focus, giving a wide angle image of more than 180 degrees. The camcra is guaranteed to work continuously sixteen hours a day for three score years and ten and with care will give excellent service for twenty or thirty years longer. These camcras are equipped with self-renewing plates on each of which three processes—sensitizing, development, and erasure—are continuous and simultaneous. Mother Nature as an inventor has done some unpatented miracles and has no copyright on the designs.

Now here we have a real motion picture program for 1950. Nature has set us a splendid goal and blazed the way to that goal when she gave us our two eyes. Dare we predict or plan that the motion picture engineer shall perfect such a motion picture camera according to Mother Nature's specifications? Why should we not? Mother Nature has already done it, and has given us the model. We outstrip Nature in many ways. We can fly better and faster than the bird, outswim the fish, outspeed the deer, with mechanism of our own devising. Our telescope and microscope vastly excel the eye in seeing the distant and the small. Our camera prints may be duplicated in material form, those of the eye cannot. Again the eye must see at once or not at all, but in the camera the effect of light is cumulative. In photographing the stars, each additional second exposure brings new and farther distant stars into range so that twelve hours exposure records stars we may never hope to see. Nevertheless the specification of Nature's marvelous cameras offers a wonderful program for the next quarter century or less, one which will attract the inventive genius of many engineers.

Automatic Keynote of Motion Pictures

May I predict that in education, in diffusing new knowledge, in visualizing the results and methods of industry, exploration, research, in entertainment, in stirring men to high ideals, the motion picture will prove man's greatest single power. More interesting than the printing press and its art, more eloquent and intelligible than the spoken word, more effective in many ways than our chance contact with life itself. Its mission, already great, knows no natural bounds and has possibilities of which as yet we dare not dream.

Washington, D. C., May 9, 1921.

Notable Foreign Visitors Buying Equipment

The arrival this week of A. L. Pratchatt and George I. Rosenthal, notable impresarious of Havana and the West Indies to look over modern theatre equipment, demonstrates the interest that is being taken in American made motion picture apparatus by exhibitors from other countries.

A. L. Pratchatt is a big supply dealer in Havana. He handles the Simplex exclusively in that territory, being the general manager of the Carribean Film Co., Havana, Cuba. They also have offices at Porto Rico.

George I. Rosenthal is the president of the Colonial Traders, Ltd., operators and owners of thirty-five theatres in the West Indies.

For years these two buyers of American film products have been making their headquarters in New York at the main office of the Howells Cine Equipment Co., Inc., 729 Seventh Avenue, New York.

Joseph C. Hornstein, general manager of the Howells Cine Equipment Co., told a representative of the NEWS that both these foreign buyers reported good business in their respective territories.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

Two Selig-Rork Dramatic Subjects ("The Northern Trail" and "The Policeman and the Baby"—Released by Educational Exchanges—Produced by Selig-Rork—Length, 2 Reels Each)

TWO of the most pretentious short reel subjects ever presented are to be found in the initial productions of the Selig-Rork partnership, "The Northern Trail" and "The Police and the Baby."

Since both productions are a new departure in production, standard stories possessing dramatic possibilities carefully selected and enacted by all star casts of recognized screen artists produced with all the care and detail of a multiple reel picture, they deserve review first as a unit.

Both pictures set new standards for short reel screen drama. Stories of unusual dramatic strength and plot have been selected and the players secured give performances that are as good as they have ever done in longer releases. The result is features that have every right to the title. In fact both pictures screen as multiple reelers with all the padding and unnecessary scenes that clutter up the average feature eliminated.

In "The Northern Trail," a story of the Northland, with fine snow exteriors and plenty of melodramatic action—Lewis Stone is the hero and Wallace Beery is the heavy. Both give splendid performances and figure in many scenes that will hold the attention of the most sophisticated audience. The plot of the picture is of course that of practically all productions of its kind, the eternal triangle. The picture has been produced with a great deal of detail and is told in an epilogue in which a young wife about to go away with another man, is turned from her resolve by a story of what happened to her mother years before.

"The Policeman and the Baby" is a comedy-drama with a trick finish with some of the best acting Wallace Beery has ever put over. Mr. Beery is presented in a sympathetic character and strange as it may seem, makes his portrayal so big and human that for the time being his villainy as a usual role, is forgotten. Playing the part of a notorious crook, he runs away with the show although William Desmond has a good role and gives a finished performance.

Both pictures are two reels in length and are suitable for any program.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"Holy Smoke"
(Mermaid Comedy-Educational—Two Reels)

JIMMIE ADAMS, assisted by a flock of comedians of all sizes and shapes and whose activity cannot be questioned gains the spectator's eye in "Holy Smoke" principally for the manner in which a number of rather new ideas are worked out.

The stunts are performed in a country hotel lobby where the elevators are always out of running order, until weights are placed upon them or taken off according to the poundage of the person or persons riding in them.

When the fat man enters one of the elevators it is found necessary to add several pounds of weight to the other elevator which rests at the top of the hotel in order to give him a lift.

Quite a few bits of comedy are introduced in putting over this stunt which is varied many times, as the hotel seems to have numerous guests.

And then there are many scenes in which many of the guests are seen walking under the elevators, just missing being hit or being hit and sinking beneath the floor to come up half their original size. A dwarf used in this particular instance to portray the difference in size.

All in all there are so many different entrances and exits that it would be impossible to remember half of them. But they are amusing when not funny and will give good entertainment.

The exteriors are given more to action than comedy which keeps up the excitement especially by the various stunts performed. Jack White directed and did very well with the burlesque situations.—FRANK LEONARD.

Kineto Review
(Urban)

HERE is a reel devoted to informing the spectator about Cairo, in Egypt, touching upon the most interesting and historical places of moment in that ancient country. The native women, always mysterious, are shown with and without their customary veils, and in the latter instance, it would seem there is more than a religious belief in their reason for wearing the face covering. These are not grouped about the entrance of the famous Shepherd's Hotel in Cairo, where the sight-seers flock. Cairo is most attractive by moonlight. The photoplay in the closing of the reel showing the night light on the great city, is very beautiful.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Singer Midgets' Scandal"
(Sunshine Comedy—Fox—Two Reels)

THIS is a "weak sister" among a consistently clever group of Sunshines since it is obviously made up to exploit the Singer Midgets of vaudeville fame. These tiny funmakers are involved in a series of scenes which have to do with mistaken identity. A certain interloper is thrust in a room and when he emerges is revealed as Slim Somerville, or some other tall comedian. Naturally the other Midgets are considerably perplexed, as well as Slim's crowd on his own side of the door. The rest of the comedy concerns chasing Slim around the lot. He dives into a barn, a dog follows with a stick of dynamite held in his mouth. And when the stick is dropped, Slim picks it up and discovers it to be an advertising fan exploiting the Midgets. The comedy fails to carry a laugh.—LAURENCE REID.

"Who's Who"
(Sunshine Comedy-Fox—Two Reels)

THE law of average has come into expression in the latest Sunshine comedy, "Who's Who," which compels us to say that it is the weakest effort flashed in some time. There is no really funny scene which may be said to furnish new gags and incident, and the captions are not amusing enough to compensate for the lack of humor in this mild burlesque of a murder trial. The small bit which shows the defendant, lawyers and judge checking their hats and tipping the lackey as they depart might arouse a faint guffaw. But the trial of the indicted man is deadly dull.

As he relates the episodes leading up to his arrest, the action flashes back to scenes of a Western camp—scenes which have to do with a saloon, a gang of villains and a frame-up which they put over on the hero. The heroine takes the stand for the defense and a similar line of action is disclosed. Finally the jury takes the case to the jury-room where the foreman, who is really the arch-villain, beats up the other men and compels them to render a verdict of "Guilty!" As mentioned above the lack of novel gags and exaggerated hokum make make this a second-rate offering.—LAURENCE REID.

"Skipping the Pen"
(Inkwell Cartoon—C. C. Burr—Affiliated Distributors)

THE little fellow who jumps out of the inkwell and cuts up capers has his inning in this interesting one reeler, sponsored by C. C. Burr of Affiliated Distributors. It is a clever invention and the animated figure is similar to one featured in the "Out of the Inkwell" series. This time he hops down on the street and torments a policeman. He hides in a waste paper can, picks up a cigar butt and causes a fire. Next he climbs the Metropolitan tower and bobs in on the table of a dining room, the young married couple indulging in a quarrel at the time. He tosses lumps of sugar at the poutful benedict and has a merry time before the pen picks him and empties his vital fluid in the inkwell.—Length one reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"WHERE LIGHTS ARE LOW"
(Robertson-Cole)

Good Vehicle for Hayakawa

A TYPICAL Hayakawa story is offered in "Where Lights Are Low," since it emphasizes a Chinese romance, with its attendant pathos and sentiment. Indeed the picture is saturated with these two ingredients, which are balanced with sequences of colorful action and suspense. The Japanese star being equipped with emotional talent, the element of humor is entirely neglected. Naturally when viewing one of his pictures the spectator is looking at a serious slice of life or fiction. "Where Lights Are Low" is not up to the caliber of "Black Roses" in point of entertainment values. It lacks the conflict, incident, detail, counterplotting and other melodramatic ingredients.

However, it does furnish a story, which while easily obvious and orthodox, is nevertheless interesting, because the star plays his part with such sincerity. Besides the atmosphere and local color of 'Frisco's Chinatown is remrakably well emphasized. Hayakawa has surrounded himself with a cast that is almost entirely Oriental—the Jap players giving vivid performances, particularly Togo Yamanoto and Toyo Fujiti. He believes in the Occidental girl for his heroine. But Gloria Payton suffers from too much make-up and she never gives the impression of belonging to the Orient. The plot is a favorite one and has seen service on the stage and screen a number of times. One knows how each scene and incident will develop. Yet it carries such good atmosphere and suspense that the spectator will forget its obviousness.

The hero belongs to the aristocracy and, according to Chinese custom, his future bride is selected without his consent. The youth loves a girl far below his station in life. When he rebels his uncle sends him to America to complete his education, thinking that his sojourn in the Occident will make him forget his romantic fancies. The forepart of the action has to do with certain college scenes which do not carry much interesting detail. But when he takes a trip into Chinatown and discovers that his beloved has been smuggled into the country and is about to be sold into slavery, the action picks up in strength and finishes with a melodramatic sweep that holds the attention. The youth bids the highest figure and wins her, but finds that he is unable to pay the debt. So he is forced to go to work for three years. The climax offers a rip-roaring fight between a hatchet-man and Hayakawa for the possession of the girl. He triumphs after tense moments and sails away to China with his bride. The finale is unusually vivid and compensates for the "planted" scenes in the introductory reels.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A throbbing photoplay of Chinese love and vengeance—a vivid story of San Francisco's Chinatown is "Where Lights Are Low," the new Sessue Hayakawa feature, which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. The eminent Japanese star, than whom there is no better actor on the screen today, has in this story a subject well fitted to his emotional capabilities. It is a story which has to do with the violation of an ancient Chinese custom. Hayakawa plays a son of royalty whose uncle has chosen his bride, also a daughter of the aristocracy. But the youth loves a poor maiden from a less fortunate station.

He is determined to marry her. His uncle sends him to America to be educated and in a few years is graduated. He still longs for the day when he may marry his beloved. He is shocked to discover that she has been smuggled into America and placed on the auction block. The picture builds a number of tense scenes which concern a daring fight and rescue and is remarkably rich in atmosphere and color. The offering is splendidly acted.

PROGRAM READER

It was a tremendous shock when the aristocratic Chinaman learned that his uncle refused to allow him to marry the girl of his choice. He rebelled, but was sent to America to forget his romantic fancies. But the lapse of time and distance only emphasized his faith and his determination to marry her. Then he discovered her in America—a slave girl on the auction block. It necessitated quick action to save her from a horrible life. And he acted with quickness and dispatch. How he triumphed over the cunning criminals of Chinatown—how he fought for his life—is told in five reels of interesting action in "Where Lights Are Low." This Sessue Hayakawa picture will appear at the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

This Jap star is either popular with your fans or he is unpopular. If he gets over with your crowd then play him up big here. Tell that he has a typical picture—one which shows his splendid acting capabilities. Tell that it is a poignant romance which is balanced with the elements of pathos and sentiment. Tell that the picture is charged with rapid action and fine suspense—and that it offers several thrills. You can decorate your lobby with Chinese lanterns and other Oriental paraphernalia. And a tabloid sketch can be given with players made up as Chinese, singing some Oriental lullaby. Tell them that one of the exceptional actors of the screen will appear at the ————.

CATCH LINES

She was placed on the auction block to be sold to the highest bidder. Her lover bid successfully and then——. See Sessue Hayakawa in "Where Lights Are Low."

Genuine Venetian Backgrounds Compensate for Talky Picture

WERE it not for the fact that this picture carries some remarkable old-world atmosphere in its Venetian backgrounds, it would scarcely pass muster as an offering likely to entertain because of its profusion of talky subtitles. If there is one scene there are at least ten captions giving emphasis to it. Yet despite its wealth of dialogue, the colorful and picturesque backgrounds offer something absolutely new in screen decoration. Harley Knoles, the director, has taken his company to Venice, and has caught all of its beauty. The lagoons, the palace of the Doges, St. Mark's Square—these and many more are brought forth and lend an enchantment, the appeal of which cannot be denied.

"Carnival" is a story within a story and is based upon a triangle theme similar to the Bard's "Othello." In fact the principal figures are presented as the leading actors of Italy, who are giving a performance of Shakespeare's tragedy. The forepart of the action is taken up with planting the conflict. The wife, disappointed with her husband's attention to business, encourages the other man. It is carnival time and she has pleaded for her better half to attend the ball—giving as her excuse that if he refuses she will not be responsible for her conduct. The husband, as is natural with stories of this character, has implicit faith in his wife, though he has been warned of intrigue.

Comes the night of the play and with jealousy dominant in his mind he resolves to play the brooding Moor to the life. He will kill Desdemona in reality. The scenes in the reception room before the final act are held too long and Matheson Lang, excellent actor that he is, fails to hold the interest. When the tragic moment arrives to kill the heroine, he forgets his lines and substitutes the names of his wife and lover. The fellow players noticing something wrong go to her rescue just in time to save her life. Then it is that she explains and tells him that she has been above reproach in her conduct—that she has always been faithful.

Mr. Knoles has wisely varied his interior scenes with the beautiful exteriors. The gliding gondolas, the trips through the canals, the picturesque quaintness of Venice—these are always before you. A big set shows the carnival ball and the entire picture suggests lavish expenditure. Matheson Lang gives a convincing performance in the leading role, while Hilda Bailey, as his wife and Desdemona, is not so succsesful. She appears to be too fragile for the demands of the role. Trimmed to five or six reels, the picture would present a compactness that is missing in the extended footage. It will get over. The settings and novel characterization will see to that. It's a great picture to embellish with a prologue.—Length, 9 reels. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Carnival" is the name of the feature which will come to the ———— theatre next ————. This production is marked for its splendid foreign atmosphere, since a majority of its scenes were taken in and around Venice. The lagoons, the garden spots—these furnish an old-world atmosphere which is appealing because it is real. The story is a dramatic one and furnishes the spectator with rich entertainment, since it involves love, intrigue, jealousy, romance, pathos and sentiment.

The picture presents a story within a story. The leading figures are playing "Othello" when the player enacting the role of the Moor, broods over his domestic troubles in an identical manner with the Shakespearean character. The picture does not end tragically, for the wife shows forgiveness and all ends happily. There are a number of highly interesting scenes which are capably interpreted by an English cast headed by Matheson Lang. Harley Knoles directed this picture, which is highly colorful because of its Venetian backgrounds.

PROGRAM READER

A picture taken in the beautiful city of Venice, furnishing the spectator with an old-world atmosphere which takes him on an interesting journey is "Carnival," the United Artists production, which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is a picture which carries a novel plot—one that presents a story within a story since the principal figures are interpreting "Othello" upon the stage, the Moor brooding over his domestic troubles much after the manner of the Shakespearean character. It is a picture which is effective through its dramatic sweep and vigor. These elements are vividly brought forth through the rich and colorful backgrounds.

SUGGESTIONS

Since this picture has to do with carnival time in the beautiful city of Venice it would be well to give your house a gala dress. Use pennants and flags and lanterns. Stage a prologue after a tabloid sketch of "Othello." Or a musical act based upon Neapolitan or Venetian songs. The singers can be garbed in Venetian costumes. If you can run a strip of Venice, do so. It should be easy to get hold of a short scenic of this city. Have your orchestra play Italian numbers. Italian songs may be featured for vocal numbers. Play it up as a fascinating drama laid in the beautiful city of the Doges—Venice. Play up its atmosphere. Another idea for a prologue can be used having a carnival scene for its setting.

CATCH LINES

See "Carnival," a picture of Venetian love and romance, laid in the beautiful and picturesque city of the Doges—Venice. See "Carnival."

Venice—the wonder city of the Old World—Venice—the picturesque and quaint—. See Venice in carnival time! See "Carnival" at the ———— next ————.

"SALVATION NELL"
(Whitman Bennett-First National)

Good Incident and Fine Acting Gives This Exceptional Audience Appeal

SINCE the war, people of every nation and every creed take off their hats to the Salvation Army. This fact and the fine screen possibilities possessed by Edward Sheldon's famous play in which Mrs. Fiske was starred, "Salvation Nell" has made possible a picture that, while not without its faults, should find unusual favor with audiences, especially the feminine of the sex.

There are a number of things that make "Salvation Nell" an audience picture. To begin with the story has a great character in "Nell," girl of the slums, born to poverty, toil and misery, who all her life has seen only the sordid side of the world, yet who possesses enough innate goodness to stick to one great love and to avoid the pitfalls of her environment until she finds a home with the Salvation Army where her mind, body and soul could develop until her faith became so great that not only she is regenerated but also her "man," bum, roughneck and jail bird, is reformed.

Pauline Stark makes of "Nell" one of the most sympathetic characters ever presented on the screen. A fine type to begin with, she adds to her pathetic wistfulness, a skill in characterization and a depth of emotional acting that places her among the front ranks of screen personalities. As "Jim" Joseph King is a remarkable foil. His portrayal of the bar room bum, "Nell's" man is the best thing he has ever done.

As for plot, the picture isn't especially strong. The story is not new either in real life or in drama. What is told is the love story of "Nell" and "Jim" as it begins in the gutter and ends so far as the picture is concerned in the Army barracks. There are people who try to drag "Nell" down. Others who help her to rise.

The picture is sad, unnecessarily so it would seem, since there were opportunities presented for bits of comedy relief, but a lot of people have a fine time crying over the woes of a heroine.

Director Kenneth Webb has injected much good incident and his atmosphere and types are flawless. However, there are places in the picture where a tendency to stick to the construction of the original and use dialect titles slow up the action considerably and detracts rather than adds to its entertainment values.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Salvation Nell," the famous stage play in which Mrs. Fiske achieved such great success, has been adapted to the screen with pretty Pauline Stark in the title role, and will be the feature attraction on the bill at the ——— theatre for a ——— days' showing beginning ———.

The story of a girl brought up in the slums, but who finally finds the right road through the Salvation Army. "Salvation Nell" is an acknowledged classic, abounding in dramatic situations and with a heart interest theme of splendid scope. The play has made unusual screen material, dealing as it did with the life of a girl who wanted to be good, but as she said "had to be taught the difference between right and wrong." For the production one of the finest sets ever used for picture work was built. A full sized street was constructed, street cars installed, sidewalks laid and paving put down. All for a few scenes, but these scenes were of vital importance. In support of Pauline Stark is a strong cast of great types. Joe King is "Nell's man" and the balance of the cast are well known and popular players. The picture is in six reels. It was directed by Kenneth Webb and personally supervised by Whitman Bennett, in whose studios the production was made. It promises one of the most interesting events of the season.

PROGRAM READER

The name of Mrs. Fiske and "Salvation Nell" are known to all theatregoers the country over. It was this talented actress' greatest success, giving her a role of unlimited appeal and great acting opportunities. The famous play has now been adapted to the screen by the Whitman Bennett studios, with Pauline Stark in the name part and is released as a First National attraction coming to the ——— theatre for a ——— days' showing beginning ———.

In the engagement one of the greatest heart interest pictures is to be presented. "Salvation Nell" was an ideal picture story. It not only has great acting parts, and opportunity for interesting incident and atmosphere, but it has a theme of tremendous power. The Salvation Army and faith in God through it, wrought a miracle in the heart of "Nell," waif of the slums, just as has happened many many times in real life.

Pauline Stark as the heroine of the story has the best role of her career. The acting she does as "Nell" has never been excelled by any screen star.

The picture screens in six reels, and was directed by Kenneth Webb with Whitman Bennett personally supervising the production. The feature offers a rare evening's entertainment.

SUGGESTIONS

Tie up with the Salvation Army wherever possible and make much of the fact that this is a picture with its heroine a "Lassie." Play up the fact that the play was one of Mrs. Fiske's greatest successes. Give Pauline Stark some of your billing promising a performance that has never been surpassed. Use stills that will show the variety of incident in the production. In your newspaper advertising do the same thing. Bill it as a heart interest story, not as a starring vehicle. Make a play for the patrons who like to "cry."

"OVER THE WIRE"
(Metro)

Picture Starts Well and Loses Its Punch

THIS photoplay of a girl's determination to exact vengeance upon her employer for being instrumental toward the suicide of her brother started off in a blaze of glory but soon after lost its momentum and high lights and finished with drooping colors. "Over the Wire" is a familiar story on the screen, though the single-track theme and orthodox characterization cannot be said to offer very much in sustained interest. Alice Lake as the star, plays as natural as the part permits, but she is limited here by a role which allows her considerable posturing.

The star has really nothing to do but stand before the camera and register wistfulness, pride, pathos and poutfulness. In fact the director has allowed the players to indulge in a variety of close-ups. George Stewart flashed a performance which will place him in demand. The short time he is before the camera he made the part stand out like a cameo. Albert Roscoe seemed to lack enthusiasm for his part of the powerful financier, since he put no color and force into his portrayal. Indeed had he showed more animation the picture would have presented a greater appeal. His is an important part—an integral part of the plot—for every sequence revolves around it.

The early scenes present a brother and sister deeply worshipful of one another. The boy embezzles his employer's funds and the predicament in which he finds himself enables Stewart to put over some real acting. He goes to his employer with his sister's wealth, determined to square accounts. But the rich man's object is to teach him a lesson by stern reprimand. Fearing a prison term, the youth commits suicide and calls up his sister at the moment he presses the trigger. This is the explanation of the title. It is her object then to avenge the boy's death since she thinks the rich man had threatened him. The subsequent scenes are easy to penetrate. One knows far in advance that she will capitulate to the power of romance after moments of conflict with herself. There is a caption which will generate a laugh. The magnate dismissed his homely secretary by telling her to take a vacation. When she informs him that she has just taken one, he replies—"Well, take another." It is our belief that this caption was written in all seriousness.

The picture becomes garbled in its action and strains credulity in several places. The heroine marries the financier, but leaves him to join an interloper. The magnate stops the train through his powerful influence and brings back his bride. And she soon understands that he is a model character. The director failed to point the contrast or to emphasize the conflict of temperament. And he has neglected to add incident as compensation for the slow moving scenes.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A story of big business, of youthful pride, of a girl's desire to square accounts with the powerful employer of her brother who committed suicide to avoid scandal is "Over the Wire," the Metro attraction starring Alice Lake. Written by Arthur Somers Roche, the popular short story writer, and directed by Wesley Ruggles, the offering presents Miss Lake in a role which enables her to flash her abundant emotional talent.

Her brother in the story has embezzled funds from his powerful and rich employer. The latter is an idealist who possesses a kindly heart despite his craving for power and wealth. He is determined to teach the boy a lesson by putting him to work in a mine, but the latter believes that he will be prosecuted. So he commits suicide His sister, thinking that the rich man has been responsible for the youth's death, seizes an opportunity to square accounts by seeking employment and ruining the financier. But she fails to understand the force of romance. In the end she finds herself beaten. It is a picture charged with good drama and moving incident and is well acted.

PROGRAM READER

She took up the telephone receiver to answer her brother's call and heard a revolver shot. She understood what the report meant—that he had committed suicide. He had gone to his employer to square his theft but the rich magnate advised him to come back in the morning. Fearing the worse, the boy killed himself. So his sister was determined to avenge his death by seeking employment from the rich man and ruining him financially. How she was beaten—how she failed to reckon with the power of love—how she finally won respect for her husband—is told in five reels of dramatic action in "Over the Wire," the Metro attraction starring Alice Lake. Come and be entertained next ——— at the ———.

SUGGESTIONS

You can link up with the telephone company or electrical stores with this title. Tell that it is an adaptation of Arthur Somers Roche's popular story and that it features a tense drama of a girl who stirred by her brother's death resolved to avenge herself upon the lad's employer. You can make much out of this plot for program readers and teaser ads. Bill it as a picture which shows the futility of sowing hatred in the face of powerful love. Bill it as a picture of high finance and big business, seasoned with an effective romance. Play up Alice Lake, telling that she has one of her most appealing pictures. Use the title in every imaginable way.

"Conrad in Quest of His Youth" (Paramouut)—"Meighan is a genuine favorite. Picture liked. Business above average." "Picture much below average. Poor business during run."

"The Cradle of Courage" (Paramount)—"Audiences enjoy Hart in this different type of characterization. Went over very good with excellent box office results."

"Lahoma" (Pathe)—"Poor picture, poorly made. Everyone dissatisfied. Wrew fair houses but failed to please."

"The Dice of Destiny" (Pathe)—"The best H. B. Warner has given up to date. Artistic, snappy, with running all through it and enough of a love story to make it seem real."

"The Vice of Fools" (Vitagraph)—"Interesting but utterly improbable. However, we opened to better than average business."

"The Master Stroke" (Vitagraph)—"An average production, bringing average business."

"Mid-Channel" (Equity-State Rights)—"Only fair picture and business." "One of Clara Kimball Young's best pictures and has done excellent business for two weeks and is being held over for a third week."

"The Furnace" (Realart)—"Very entertaining feature. Fair box office value."

"The Soul of Youth" (Realart)—"Pleasing picture. Business about usual."

"Last of the Mohicans" (Tourneur)—"Fair business. Indians and fighting dominate. May please some."

"Kismet" (Robertson-Cole)—"Wonderful oriental picture carried over another week on account of big business."

"So Long Letty" (Robertson-Cole)—"A fair picture doing only fair business."

"Mid-Channel" (Equity)—"A good Clara Kimball Young feature to which is tacked the artificial 'book ending' in order to give the story a happy twist. Outside of this, a good picture which drew well."

"The Forbidden Thing" (Associated Producers)—"Seemed to entertain my patrons. Larger houses than usual."

"Blind Wives" (Fox)—"Wonderful picture. Opened big and kept it up all week. Business fine."

"The Texan" (Fox)—"Fairly entertaining. More than usual business."

"You Never Can Tell" (Realart)—"They received this with open arms. Great little picture and went over to full houses. They were crazy about it."

"The Forbidden Thing" (Paramount)—"One of the best things I have seen in the past year. Splendid picture. Good box office receipts."

"Felix O'Day" (Pathe)—"A cracker-jack attraction. Warner always draws well for me—and here is a picture that suits him like a glove. A real attraction."

"THE LAND OF HOPE"
(Realart)

Entertaining Comedy Drama, Built Around New and Appealing Theme

FAR, far different from the flapper or the neglected wife roles, is Alice Brady's part in this picture. She plays a Polish immigrant, and the story deals with her trials and disappointments when she learns that America is not the Utopia of her dreams, but a place of drudgery, roaring elevators, and Russia crowded into the East Side.

The picture is genuine entertainment. Frederick and Fanny Hatton and Robert Milton have injected numerous humorous incidents as they tell the interesting story of the trials of passing through Ellis Island. There are human touches throughout, and there is an especial appeal to Gothamites in the Chatam Square sequence. And in addition there is a splendid cast, some high class dialogue and descriptive titles, and an attractive star. Miss Brady is not called upon to be emotional, but she shows that she can handle the lighter situations to perfection. Her role is a difficult one, yet she does not overact in portraying the inflammable foreign type nor does she try to Americanize the character a few hours after arrival.

The story proceeds logically and convincingly until the little immigrant and her Polish lover, with their hopes and dreams of riches shattered into a thousand pieces, are on the verge of despair. There is one course open for the girl. Her dancing has attracted the attention of a Russian ballet master, and she goes in training. Her angry lover leaves her, is overcome by poverty, and ends in the bread line. The motives of the ballet master are, of course, not of the best, but the happy ending and reconciliation is brought about by an eccentric philanthropist, who befriends the young Pole and persuades the girl to give up her stage ambitions. It is a story where the expected never happens. The Bolsheviki ballet master is not a pernicious spy, and the girl does not rise from immigrant to Broadway star in a few month's time. There are twists and turns of the most refreshing sort which keep the ending, or at least the means to that end, ever clouded. And the old philanthropist, while evidently manufactured to clear up the plot, is still sufficiently convincing.

All the players are good types and act well. Jason Robards, the leading man, resists the temptation to become debonair and is a splendid immigrant. Schuyler Ladd, as the ballet master, gives the excellent performance which is naturally expected from him. There is pathos mixed with humor as the disillusionments of the foreigner are shown. Unless they insist upon seeing Miss Brady as one peg of the triangular story, or as a flapper, they cannot possibly be disappointed.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Alice Brady, the Realart star, will be seen at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in "The Land of Hope," a drama dealing with the experiences of a beautiful young Polish girl who comes to America to win her fortunes as a dancer. The story was written by Frederick and Fanny Hatton, two of the cleverest playwrights in the business, and permits Miss Brady an opportunity to flash her versatility in a role which calls for much character interpretation. In the shawls and clumsy shoes of a steerage passenger the star gives a most appealing and convincing portrayal.

The picture is a sharp contrast to the society roles in which this popular actress has usually been seen. "The Land of Hope" is a powerful story of the dreams and accomplishments of a boy and girl in an adopted land. The heroine realizes that America is ready to crown with success and happiness even the poor immigrant who brings something of genuius and beauty to her shores.

PROGRAM READER

One look at the glinting gray eyes of this young man convinced the sneering ballet master that he had better beat a graceful retreat. He had reasoned that because he had taught her the steps of the ballet she was quite as willing to be taught other arts. As the Russian dancer in "The Land of Hope," Alice Brady plays with all her splendid emotional fire. We see her first as the wistful immigrant, then as the eager-eyed dancing girl, and finally as the proud woman choosing between three lovers. Here you have a powerful story, realistically and colorfully told. "The Land of Hope" comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. See Alice Brady in a new role—a role which permits her to show her versatility.

SUGGESTIONS

You can feature this by catch lines and a teaser campaign. Play up that Miss Brady is seen in a new type of story—that it permits her to show her ability in a character role. Play up that she appears as a pretty, though ignorant immigrant girl, who cherishes an ambition to come to America and win success and happiness. Tell that Frederick and Fanny Hatton (the famous Hattons) wrote the story. They are well known playwrights and scenarists and should come in for some special exploitation. Also feature the director and cast. Schuyler Ladd is of "Yellow Jacket" fame. A colorful prologue can be used, featuring a dancing act—with the principals attired in Russian costumes and interpreting Russian music. Play up America as the land of hope.

"WEALTH"
(Paramount)

Ethel Clayton Has Emotional Opportunities Here and Expresses Them

COSMO HAMILTON has stopped, temporarily, skating on thin ice with his screen essays. His latest contribution, "Wealth," has nothing in common with the eternal triangle and the trespassing figure of the moral leper. Instead he has used an ordinary theme based upon the curse of money and has dressed it up with obvious, though fairly interesting dramatic situations. Hamilton becomes a trifle tedious in presenting the lesson to be learned from the idea—since his characters and plot and incident are stilted and they are placed in well grooved scenes. The picture does serve however, in presenting Ethel Clayton, in a role which enables her to express her well grounded talent for emotional expression.

It is a sympathetic drawing which is offered here—that of the poor, struggling artist who marries a wealthy "playboy" and discovers that money cannot buy happiness. William D. Taylor has given the picture a splendid production, as well as seeing to it that the action progresses with very little recourse to dialogue. The discriminating spectator will notice, however, that the latter sequences are forced—that what takes place is introduced for dramatic effect rather than for any regard for logical climaxes. Particularly is this true when the husband and wife are separated for a brief time. The introduction of the baby and the subsequent death has no reason to be incorporated except to stress the conflict engendered by a dominant mother-in-law. The infant's death is certainly not pleasant and will invite criticism from feminine patrons.

The wife simply gets tired from living a parasitic life and possessing a husband who has never worked a day in his life. It is the mother's object to bring about a separation through making life miserable for the young wife. The latter is refused admittance to the child's nursery, and has to find expression by taking up child welfare work. These scenes are padded, though the fire sequence carries a mild thrill for compensation. When the husband returns home the truth dawns upon him that money is a curse. He denounces his mother and joins his wife with a determination to go to work. The director has failed to touch upon the human touches which are noticeable in an elusive way. An instance is given when the young father fails to look in on his child before his departure. There is very little intimate incident—the director following the author's idea to stress the conflict and the lesson. It is not a picture which will live in the memory, it being simply an average program release.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Well acted, well directed and with a particularly apropos theme, "Wealth," Ethel Clayton's new Paramount picture, will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— as the chief attraction. It is based upon the idea that money is a curse when it removes the incentive to work. The principal figure is Mary McLeod, an artist. At a cabaret she is attracted by Philip Dominick, a young millionaire whose exploits are daring. Weeks later Mary is aboard a train enroute home and discovers that her pocketbook has been left behind. Dominick, also a passenger, gives up his drawing room for the night and retires to the smoking car.

A romance develops which is not sanctioned by Philip's mother who is determined to marry her son to a wealthy society girl. The young people marry however, and Mary is disappointed at the parasitic conditions of her life. A misunderstanding occurs and the young wife leaves. Philip tells his mother that her money has been a curse and leaves to join his better half. Miss Clayton gives a convincing performance and her support which includes Herbert Rawlinson, is excellent.

PROGRAM READER

Wealth is a blessing when it is properly employed in the interests of mankind—a curse when it robs men and women of the incentive to work. The inevitable results of the latter course is admirably shown in Ethel Clayton's latest Paramount picture "Wealth," which will be on view at the ———— theatre next ————. Independent of its dramatic interest as a story and the lesson it teaches, the picture is a veritable Parisian fashion display. It will please the women, delight the men and fascinate the children. Don't miss it. Anyone who is an heir to wealth or who has money to burn should see "Wealth." Miss Clayton gives a brilliant performance and Herbert Rawlinson in the opposite role gives splendid support.

SUGGESTIONS

A mail exploitation for this picture would be a good angle. The title is attractive and can be linked up through placards with modiste shops. Placards announcing that Fashionable Gowns Such as These Are Worn by Ethel Clayton in "Wealth." Buy a Gown and Then See the Picture." You can employ throwaways asking: "Are You an Heir to Wealth? Have You Money to Burn? If so it is Your Duty to see Ethel Clayton's newest picture, "Wealth." Bill it as an entertaining drama of timely importance. Tell that it interests because of its dramatic action as well as giving the spectators a lesson. Announce that Herbert Rawlinson appears in the opposite role. Bill it as a drama which teaches the curse of money. A prologue can exploit a fashion display.

CATCH LINES

She married a rich man thinking to end her struggles. And found that her troubles had just started. See Ethel Clayton in "Wealth."

"THE BRONZE BELL"
(Thomas H. Ince-Paramount)

Big Production, But Lacks Audience Appeal

THE word "special" and the names of Thomas H. Ince and Louis Joseph Vance promise much when applied to picture making—a promise, however, that so far as "The Bronze Bell" is concerned is scarcely realized.

The plot of Mr. Vance's story is very old stuff in pictures, and while it has been magnificently produced and very well acted, there is so much mystery, kow-towing by the actors playing the Hindus, titles that refer continually to the "ordeal" and the "token," that the whole is a confusing conglomeration of scenes that never get anywhere in particular.

Courtney Foote plays a dual role. As "Har Dyal Rutton" he is a Hindustan prince who runs away to America rather than lead a revolution that he believes would plunge the world into another great war. As "David Amber" he is an Englishman impersonating "Har Dyal Rutton," who in some mysterious manner, not quite clear in the picture, is the means of defeating the revolutionists without bloodshed.

The romance is negligible except by inference. "Amber" is in love with the daughter of an English army officer whom he has met while she was visiting an uncle in America, so when "Har Dyal" tells him the girl is in danger, he hikes for India to protect her. After a title tells you that "Amber" has saved the day, the girl, Doris May, registers that she is "willin'."

The size of the production, the lavishness with which it has been produced and the generally excellent atmosphere of India, does much to make the picture impressive and it probably will slide by on this account, but it is not big from an audience standpoint, at least not as big as it ought to be considering the amount of money that was spent in making it.

The supporting cast is of the usual Ince calibre and the direction and lightings up to standard.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A stirring romance of British East India, written by the popular author, Louis Joseph Vance, is "The Bronze Bell," which has been adapted to the screen and will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast that includes Courtenay Foote, a well known actor, and Doris May, formerly a co-star with Douglas MacLean. The picture presents Oriental pomp and ceremony in all its bizarre splendor. In his novel Mr. Vance has combined literary skill, stirring dramatic situations, and a pleasing love story, and vivid, spectacular action.

In the screen production, Thomas H. Ince has enhanced the interest and power of the drama by striking scenic achievements and the superior cast which he has chosen to portray the leading roles. A number of the startling episodes were photographed between dusk and dawn. The most impressive of the scenes is that within the Hindu "Temple of the Bronze Bell," a massive stone structure, wherein fanatic natives are routed by British soldiery and a revolutionary plot crushed.

PROGRAM READER

India! Tiger-land of the East. India! Mystic land of the Orient—that land which has ever intrigued the imagination. America! And a dare-devil Yank who looked like a murdered Indian prince. Mutiny! And the young American fighting for his love and life in the Temple of the Bronze Bell! That is "The Bronze Bell," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast that includes Courtenay Foote and Doris May. It is an adaptation of Louis Joseph Vance's popular novel, and Thomas H. Ince has made it into a palpitating, startling romance—a romance crammed with dramatic action and suspense. The picture is handsomely staged. See it! A tingler!

SUGGESTIONS

The author should come in for some advertising here and you can link up with book-dealers in exploiting the book and others written by him. Play it up as an Oriental spectacle—one which offers a stirring romance crammed with action and suspense of the most startling kind. Ask your patrons why they should want to go to the Orient when it can be enjoyed at home. Bill it as "Intrigue in New York—rebellion in India, love and adventure in two worlds." You might place a large bell in your lobby with two men in Hindu costumes guarding it. Bill it as a story of love and rebellion in that fascinating land of the East-India. Have your orchestra play Oriental numbers and a dancer may be employed for a prologue—a dancer costumed in the garb of the East.

"THE KISS"
(Universal)

A Well Balanced Story of Old California

THE author of this story has gone back to the days of the California padres, when the Spaniard dominated the west coast, and has written an interesting account of its struggles and turmoils.

Stories of this kind have always held a strong affection in the hearts of those who admire the romantic, provided they are mixed with the proper ingredients.

"The Kiss" is one of those tales which hits the high spots with a good punch, sticks to history and varies a bit now and then to give good measure. It has romantic interest, a few good thrills and although it lets up occasionally as far as the story is concerned, it has plenty of action, of the kind that tends to excite.

The director, Jack Conway, has been careful in the selection of his exteriors and interiors, the casting of his actors and the direction of his "extras," many of whom appear in the various scenes, to give the proper atmosphere.

Carmel Myers, the star, has not a great deal to do in the role of the young señorita, who sacrifices all for the man she loves, but to look pretty.

This she does with the required amount of personality and grace—and she is never caught overacting.

There is also some commendable riding in scenes depicting a fight between the Indians and Spaniards.

When the father of the young señorita discovers that she loves a young man above her station in life, he decides to thwart her plans. In the final scenes he shoots the young man but is saved from the hands of the mob by the appearance of the hero who shows his friends that the bullet only grazed him. He then proclaims his determination to marry the young girl.

"The Kiss" will interest when it does not thrill.—Frank Leonard.

"LIVE WIRES"
(Fox)

New Stars Appear in Orthodox Story

THE new Fox co-stars, Johnnie Walker and Edna Murphy, are introduced to the screen public in a convenient melodrama entitled, "Live Wires," which is crammed with stock incident, hut which manages to please after a fashion due to its rapid action and a rather thrilling climax. It is a story which relies heavily upon a note of heart interest—a note introduced at frequent places in the action to stress the sympathy and pathos. The authors have not used any imagination with the idea which seems to have heen written in a hurry so lacking is it in continuity. In fact the element of speed is behind the story and production which eliminates any regard for truth.

The stock figures are a young college fellow, his proud and honest parents, the sweetheart, who is the telegraph operator at the railroad station, and a typical stage villain, whose object is to steal the papers or get an option on the old man's property, as well as hribing the youth to throw the football game. The story is as simple as a h c and it does not take any ingenuity upon the part of the spectator to know just how the scenes will develop. The stars appear over-anxious to make an impression in the early scenes. When the action hecomes hectic they seem more at ease. Both play with a deal of enthusiasm and are certain to he heard from if given stories which emphasize the human touch like "Over the Hill."

The picture did not cost a great deal of money and certainly cannot he called anything else hut an average program offering. In fact it does not possess enough stamina, enough character to carry a program by itself. One may say that it is a series of hokum incidents strung together with a slight thread of romance and the notes of heart interest and sentiment. The old man is killed in an accident which necessitates the hoy coming home to cheer up his brokenhearted mother. The villain is introduced arbitrarily and induces the woman to sign away the property. But the heroine's father comes to the rescue and steals the option. With the story nearing the finish, the hero is kidnapped hy the villain's hired thugs, hut is rescued hy the girl in time to reach the football field via areoplane and save the game. The title finds its meaning in the active figures and the ahility of the hero to tap the wires at an opportune moment and warn his sweetheart of his plight. No one will take the picture too seriously, but it will prohahly get hy in the neighhorhood houses hecause of its rapid action. There is one glaring error—the sponsors have presented a scene of pitch darkness outside the station window when it is hroad daylight.—Length, 5,200 feet.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A new pair of stars will be seen at the ———— theatre next ———— in a photoplay entitled "Live Wires." They are Edna Murphy, blue-eyed and fair-haired, and Johnnie Walker. These Fox luminaries gave such convincing performances in "Over the Hill," that they were elevated to stardom by William Fox. Both stars have had plenty of screen experience and in "Live Wires" they carry out the fine things said about them in previous productions. The picture permits these two lively young people to romp and play to their hearts' content.

The picture written by Edward Sedgwick and Charles Cook, presents a college story with a football game as the big finale. It is a story with an emphatic heart interest since the hero loses his father and has to save his mother from being victimized by a scoundrel. The latter endeavors to involve the Hardings in a frenzied finance deal as well as involve the boy in throwing the football game in favor of the opposing eleven. However virtue has its reward. The picture is flavored with rural touches and offers clever action and incident.

PROGRAM READER

Two new stars have appeared over the film horizon in the latest Fox picture, "Live Wires," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The players in question are Johnnie Walker and Edna Murphy, who have been elevated to stardom through their fine performances in "Over the Hill," the Fox masterpiece. Both give clever portrayals here and indicate that their work in the above-mentioned production was no flash in the pan. The picture is an appealing study in young romance and offers moments of heart interest, pathos, thrills, and charming sentiment. We feel sure that these stars will win a way into your affections. Come and be convinced.

SUGGESTIONS

You can advertise this picture as featuring a couple of new screen stars. Since the public is ever desirous of seeing new faces, you can go the limit in exploiting Johnnie Walker and Edna Murphy. You can state that they were elevated to stardom because of their clever performances in the Fox masterpiece, "Over the Hill." Tell that the players are welcomed to the screen and that they are clever enough to establish a fine popularity. You can exploit the picture as featuring a heart interest story—one punctuated with flashes of college life and offering a pretty romance. Bill the stars as Live Wires in picture called "Live Wires." Exploit it as a picture offering several thrills. A male quartette can be used for a prologue.

CATCH LINES

The new Fox stars, Johnnie Walker and Edna Murphy, will appear in their first attraction, "Live Wires," a picture offering heart interest and a pretty romance.

"SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN"
(Realart)

Hardly Substantial Enough for the Grown-Ups

THERE is so much naive incident of a juvenile character incorporated in this newest edition of an oft-told tale, that patrons who have reached maturity are likely to dismiss it as lacking in substance. When the play was first produced on the stage it carried such a wealth of amusing high lights in the quaint characterization and plot that its appeal was certain. But since 1909 it has heen served up to the public in so many guises that its power to conquer is lost. It once did service for Mary Pickford and was highly appreciated at the time. But this comic opera plot and characterization have heen taken to the well too often—the well has hecome dry.

Constance Binney is the latest star to tackle it and the star uses the original manuscript and title. There is no denying that she is ideally suited for the demands of the naive role. She is petite and wistful enough to make the sketch thoroughly appealing. The action is so mild and obvious, however, that the opportunity never arrives to appreciate some particularly hright high light. The queen of some Graustarkian kingdom with an unpronounceable name hecomes the victim of a revolutionary uprising and flees to America accompanied hy her minister of state. And the subsequent action presents her holding court among the pots and pans of a tenement kitchen.

The director could not make anything of this incident because of its time-worn detail. The prince of a neighhoring principality arrives incognito to renew his courtship. It was the impending ceremony which led to the revolution. And between presenting this mild hy-play in the queen's kitchen together with the efforts of the prince to acclimate himself to American customs, the director hrings it to an end with the ohvious finale —the royal couple heing requested to return to the throne. The queen finds occupation in an office, and there is a counter conflict which has its source in the mercenary scheme to win the prince away from his fiancee —the scheming heing done hy an amhitious father who is desirous of seeing his daughter married into royalty. There is great effort made to holster up the weak action with gag suhtitles, hut it does not succeed to any extent. There are only a few scenes and they vary between the kitchen, the parlor and the office. Vincent Coleman plays the prince in a heavy manner with nary a trace of humor. The most consistent performance is furnished hy J. H. Gilmour as the minister. If you have not heen presenting a dozen similar pictures the past year, this one will prohably please.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Directed by George Fawcett.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The winsome Realart star, Constance Binney, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in an adaptation of Channing Pollock's famous play, "Such a Little Queen," a play which raised Elsie Ferguson from obscurity to stardom. The star is the little queen who has to flee her country when a revolutionary uprising overthrows her gilded throne. She is equally appealing in the gorgeous atmosphere of her court or in the sordid surroundings of a New York flat, where, as a penniless but courageous and sensible little exile, she manages to maintain her quaint dignity even while struggling to cook her own meals, wash her clothes and earn her living.

There are several princes in the play, some of them plain American. One, however, is Stephen of Hetland, to whom she is betrothed. He follows her to America and is instrumental in winning her for a bride. The picture is filled with quaint touches of sentiment and humor and is splendidly acted. George Fawcett directed.

PROGRAM READER

She was a royal exile in America. Little did she realize that while reviewing her royal bodyguard that in a few days a revolution would deprive her of a throne and that she would have to find refuge in America. She became a real queen of the kitchen. She used her crown and scepter to concoct palatable dishes. It was a game struggle which tbis dainty little sovereign made when she suddenly found herself without a throne. As the proud, regal queen, and as the wistful, unknown stenographer in an American business office, Constance Binney achieves the triumph of her career. The popular star appears in "Such a Little Queen" next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

A good angle to exploit here would be to concentrate upon catch lines and teasers—these to be written up in a satirical fashion to catch the eye. You can state that the original play was mighty successful and that it lifted Elsie Ferguson from obscurity to stardom. You can put a lot of interesting material in your copy. Play up that the exiled queen remained a queen, although she worked in a business office as well as in the kitchen. Constance Binney has won a big following and you can state that this picture offers her the triumph of her career. A prologue can feature a tabloid comic opera or a quartette or a single number. Any act would do which carried some singing or dancing. Bill it as a fascinating comedy-romance.

CATCH LINES

Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and be entertained by a queen.

"THE SHERIFF OF ETERNAL HOPE"
(Federated Exchanges)

Conventional Western, But Will Get Over in Right Houses

AS a program release this should get by very well with the sort of audiences that like 'em orthodox. It has all the sure fire stuff that goes to make the Western acceptable: handsome hero, big Jack Hoxie, wearing an eighteen dollar Stetson; had, bad villain, James Gerard, frockcoated and with a stovepipe hat; dance hall and saloon stuff, the stagecoach, pretty heroine, etc. There are a few thrills, considerable action, pretty fair atmosphere and a plot that, while conventional and convenient, carries considerable interest. The star as an actor registers as a first class cowboy, but he has a likeable personality and plenty of Western togs and good looks. Joseph Girard as the "Jack Rance" plays the part well and the rest of the roles are well taken.

The story is about the old timer of a western mining town, whose adopted daughter returns from the effete east about the time he is cashing in, so he appoints Jack, who is sheriff and stage driver, her guardian. Subsequently there is a wedding, with maritial happiness threatened for a time hy the fact that the girl's hrother, who has been sent to prison for a killing that the villain committed, shows up, and Jack thinks he is his wife's lover. More trouble comes when Girard trys to pull some more dirty work and gets shot hy the dance hall girl, with Jack and his wife both trying to accept responsibility for the crime, each thinking the other did the shooting. The dance hall dame finally confesses, clears the boy and then the picture is over. Nothing very wonderful, but compared to many a picture that cost ten times as much, good enough to get the preference in hooking, if they like Westerns.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Drew Halliday ..... Jack Hoxie
Hela Marcale ..... Marin Sais
"Silk" Lowry ..... Joseph Girard
Judge Clayton ..... William Dyer
Marybelle Sawyer ..... Lee Monson
Her father ..... Theodore Brown
Her brother ..... Wilbur McGough

Directed by Ben Wilson. Released as a Ben Wilson production.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Those who like the good old fashioned Western picture, with its picturesque cowboys, good horseback riding, a little gun play and plenty of atmosphere will find "The Sheriff of Hope Eternal," a five-reel Ben Wilson production with big Jack Hoxie starred, splendid entertainment. The picture is booked for the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

Prominent in the cast in support of the star is Joseph Girard, as the frock-coated villain; Bee Monson as the pretty heroine; William Dyer in the role of a Western justice of the peace; Marin Sais as the lady villainess and others whose names are well known to picture fans.

The production has been photographed amid fine scenic settings and has action, atmosphere and thrills in plenty. The star plays the role of a stage driver and sheriff in a Western mining town and is given plenty opportunity for the display of his talents as a horseman and actor in "blue shirt" parts. The feature is released by Arrow Film Corp. and is announced as one of their best productions.

PROGRAM READER

"The Sheriff of Hope Eternal" is the title of a new Western picture coming to the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

Starred is big Jack Hoxie, playing the title role and supported by a cast of well known players that includes Marin Sais, Joseph Girard, William Dyer, Bee Monson and others of equal rank.

"The Sheriff of Golden Hope" is an old time rip-roaring melodrama of the Golden West, and has plenty of action and thrills, lots of horseback riding, picturesque cowboys and atmosphere.

The story told concerns the sheriff of the town of Eternal Hope, his wooing of the pretty miner's daughter, with complications in the way of the machinations of Mr. Girard as the villain that threaten his domestic happiness. There is a good plot to the story and it has been developed logically and with an occasional bit of comedy relief put over by William Dyer as the town Justice of the Peace.

Those who like Westerns will find it especially enjoyable. The picture is in five reels and was written and directed by Ben Wilson. The releasing corporation is Arrow Film Corporation.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill the star as a "he" type of man, promising action and rough riding and a pleasing story. Give Marin Sais and Joseph Girard some of the billing calling attention to other parts they have played. Both have good careers that will help you establish the fact that the picture is well done. Use stills and 24-sheet stands, all Western pictures being especially adapted for this form of exploitation.

CATCH LINES

A story of the old West with a new twist and enacted by a fine cast headed by big Jack Hoxie, a real cowboy as well as a competent actor.

Just good entertainment, with the old West in characters and atmosphere brought to life on the screen. Jack Hoxie is the hero, James Girard the villain and Bee Monson the pretty heroine. A pleasing picture with action and heart interest, nicely mixed and clean as a hound's tooth.

"DESPERATE TRAILS"
(Universal)

Good Story, Well Worked Out, Gives Harry Carey Many Opportunities

"DESPERATE TRAILS" is a "well rounded" western which looks as though it might have heen written to suit the personality of Harry Carey. This does not mean that the star does any better work than he has in past productions, but that he has heen given a story with highly colored incident cropping out here and there which allows him to "get in" that mixture of pathetic and dramatic action for which he is famous.

The plot shifts about hither and thither hut always keeps within the bounds of logic, the locale giving impetus to the story which jumps from the wild and rugged scenery of the west in the season of the year when nature is in full hloom, to the prison with its usual surroundings, the railroad stations, the freight cars and Pullman cars, where the star does very good work in well thought out dramatic situations. The director and cameraman have co-operated in taking many rather thrilling scenes of the trains, as they move to and from the small town stations, with their enormous headlights protruding out of the darkness. For contrast the closing reels show the change of seasons. Winter has come and the actors are shown in the trackless forests and about the log cahin where the big scenes are played—another nice piece of camera work and direction.

The story concerns a man who goes to prison voluntarily to save another man whom he believes to he the brother of the woman he loves; and then to discover that the man is her lover.

The opening scenes are played quietly with incident breaking out here and there until the hero learns in jail that he has been duped and decides to make his escape. From here on until the closing scenes the plot develops rapidly, contains a few good thrills and has plenty of action.

The cast is up to standard with George Seigman playing the sheriff and Irene Rich and Barbara LaMar in contrasting roles.—Length, 4,577 feet.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Harry Carey, Universal's star actor of western roles, will again be seen at the ———— theatre in his latest feature "Desperate Trails."

The story varies from the usual run of Carey attractions, having a strong note of pathos running through it with the star doing his usual good work in the role of a rugged son of the great outdoors.

Bart Carson is desperately in love with a ravishing beauty whose only weakness is that she loves a number of men, most of them lacking the sincerity of Bart.

The young fellow has just completed a cabin in which to house the belle of Rawlins and is on his way to the latter town when he stops at another cabin where lives Mrs. Walker and her two children. Mrs. Walker has been the best influence in Bart's life and when his sweetheart fails him and he goes to jail in order to protect her supposed brother he learns that he has been led into a trap and that he has been betrayed.

Bart breaks jail and makes his way to the cabin of Mrs. Walker where on Christmas Eve he gives the little ones a wonderful present. And what a present it was.

See "Desperate Trails" and let Harry Carey give you a pleasant evening's entertainment.

PROGRAM READER

It was Christmas Eve and Bart had promised the children a wonderful present. A reward of $10,000 had been offered for his capture and when the little boy snaps the handcuffs on his wrists as the sheriff enters and the latter hears the child exclaim, "I captured him and I claim the reward," it is evident who is to receive the mony.

What was it that led the man to do this desperate thing? Was it love for the children or their mother or was it a debt he was trying to pay? Maybe it was and maybe it wasn't, but if you care to see an interesting story, strong in dramatic moments and pathos with the great outdoors as its locale, don't fail to see Harry Carey in his latest Universal feature, "Desperate Trails."

It is one of those stories that grips you and holds you throughout and gives you something to think about.

"THE JOURNEY'S END"
(Ballin-Hodkinson)

Remarkable Picture, Especially Since It Is Titleless

EVERYTHING considered, this is a most remarkable picture; one which establishes the fact that Hugo Ballin is not only an expert in lightings, artistic sets and all the other branches of the technique of making pictures, for which he is already famous, but is as well a director of intelligence, imagination and skill.

Mr. Ballin has taken a story that is fundamentally the oft told tale of the girl who through force of circumstances marries a man totally unfitted to be her life mate, with the right man coming along later, and developed it in a way that makes it fine entertainment. He not only avoids the usual conveniences and stereotyped ways of the average director, but he tells the story in every detail without the use of a single title. This has been done previously, but never, so far as we have observed, with a dramatic story that, viewed from an abstract angle, was difficult of expression in picture form no matter how many titles were used. But Mr. Ballin has accomplished the apparently impossible without any great amount of excess footage—say five hundred feet—and his continuity is flawless.

"The Journey's End" is also splendidly acted. Mabel Ballin is a pretty and appealing heroine. George Bancroft, a newcomer to the screen, gives a performance as an uneducated mill hand that stamps him as an actor of rare ability and great promise. Wyndham Standing is a satisfactory hero. The supporting cast is small but competent.

"The Journey's End" is adapted from a story, "Ave Maria," and relates principal events in the lives of three people: a young girl educated in a convent at Rome who comes to America only to find herself homeless and friendless, a rough, uncouth miner, an escaped convict whom the girl marries and the owner of a steel mill and employer of the miner. The mill owner and the girl fall in love with each other presenting the complications to the plot with the husband eliminating himself as its solution.

The picture has been made exceedingly human and characterized as it is by fine acting, direction that gets the most from each scene, with its unbroken continuity through the elimination of titles, it will stand as a model for what the picture producer should strive for. Especially is this true of the title proposition. It demonstrates that pictures can be made without inserting a book of explanations and any step in this direction needs encouragement.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

The Girl ..... Mabel Ballin
The Ironworker ..... George Bancroft
The Mill Owner ..... Wyndham Standing
The Child ..... Georgette Bancroft
The Uncle ..... Jack Dillon

Adapted from the story "Ave Maria," by Hugo Ballin. Directed by Hugo Ballin. Photographed by J. Diamond.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

One of the most remarkable pictures ever filmed, especially since it nas absolutely no subtitles and still tells its strong dramatic story faultlessly, comes to the ———— theatre ———— for a ———— days' showing, in "The Journey's End," an adaptation of the magazine story, "Ave Maria." Hugo Ballin, producer and director, has brought forth a masterpiece, in its combination of effective well acted drama, fine artistic lightings and pleasing atmosphere—a picture that should please every person, young or old, rich or poor. In the leading role is Mabel Ballin and in her support are such well known players as Wyndham Standing and Jack Dillon. George Bancroft, a newcomer, and hailed as the find of the year, also has a principal role, that of a rough and uncouth mill hand who marries a refined educated girl, only to learn that he can not make her happy. The picture which is in seven reels is released by the Hodkinson organization. The story told is one of domestic relations and the problem that confronted a young girl who was mismated.

PROGRAM READER

"The Journey's End," an adaptation of the story "Ave Maria," produced by Hugo Ballin with Mabel Ballin in the leading role, will be presented at the ———— theatre for ———— days' engagement, beginning ————.

In the production the management of the ———— is able to announce one of the most remarkable motion pictures ever presented in that a strong dramatic story is perfectly told without the use of a title and also without the use of excessive footage of film. This picture is hailed by reviewers and critics as a masterpiece, and also as a fine human interest drama, beautifully acted and wonderfully produced.

In Mabel Ballin, the production has a pretty and appealing star who also demonstrates that she is an actress of rare ability. In her support are such players as Wyndham Standing, Jack Dillon and others. A newcomer, George Bancroft, demonstrates that he is one of the great screen finds of all times, in the role of the steel worker, an escaped convict who has married the heroine.

SUGGESTIONS

The biggest exploitation possibilities of this picture lie in the fact that it has no titles and still tells its dramatic story without loss of action or incident. Play up Miss Ballin as a beauty, with many promises for a remarkable acting performance by George Bancroft. Give Wyndham Standing the least of your billing, since he has the least important of the three roles and does nothing out of the ordinary. The story from which the picture was adapted will have an appeal to many. Be sure and make it plain, however, that the production is not a religious picture. For a prologue the recent presentation of "Scrap Iron," by the New York Mark Strand theatre, will fit this picture exceptionally well.

CATCH LINES

The most remarkable picture of all time telling its strongly dramatic story without a subtitle and marking a new epoch in the history of picture production.

The story of the refined girl who married a rough uncouth, although kindly jail bird, when in the deptbs of despair only to bave the man with whom she could live happily come into her life, when it was too late. A new angle of the eternal triangle, told in absorbing, heart interest way, without the use of a single title.

"CHILDREN OF NIGHT"
(Fox)

Dream Formula Furnishes Hectic Melodrama for Russell

BY utilizing the dream formula for William Russell's latest picture, "Children of Night," the sponsors have taken the sting off the improbabilities of the plot. What occurs in the hectic action will be accepted as unadulterated fiction. The dream formula has seen yeoman service upon the screen, but because of its adaptability as a medium of expression it still manages to furnish fair entertainment. In this case however, the element of suspense is missing because the hero is allowed to fall asleep in the introductory reel, thus doing away with the surprise twist. The more successful treatment of the idea is to permit the character to fall asleep unbeknown to the spectator.

William Russell is hardly the ideal type for the part since it is represented as a spineless, colorless nonentity, and the star possesses a rugged personality which he asserts in all his screen appearances. As the wage slave who dreams of conquest, power, adventure, and romance, but who is too meek to take advantage of his opportunities, Russell seems out of place. He enters into deep sleep at his desk in the shipping room of a factory and the dream takes on the form of a wild melodrama—a melodrama closely akin to a serial. He is lifted out of his environment, becomes the man of wealth who oppresses those less fortunate. Realizing, however, that he is missing adventure and romance, he takes advantage of them when they appear.

The title finds its meaning when he is escorted by a charming girl to the bizarre quarters of a secret society. The action would be ridiculous if it had not been colored hy the dream. And even as it is the spectator might remark—"what's all the shootin' for?" There is a little group of members seated in the lodge room and they accept the hero as their leader without being acquainted with him. There is much hokum here which has to do with much salaaming and scraping in the style of college fraternity initiation. The real leader enters the scene and the hero risks his life in making his escape. The subsequent scenes find him protecting the girl whose life is in danger for introducing a stranger to the lodge. Which of course furnishes the melo-dramatic incident.

The picture is without rhyme or reason, and after a vivid fight in which the hero knocks his rival for a goal—a fight which involves husky bodyguards, et cetera, the girl is rescued and the wage slave comes out of his coma. The dream has had its effect in giving him courage. And the moral is planted that one should always take advantages of one's opportunities. Ruth Renick makes a charming heroine and flashes real talent. One thing in its favor—it moves quickly.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

William Russell, noted as a star in western dramas, has left the plains and ranch life temporarily for life in the big city—that is on the screen. The popular Fox star makes his appearance in an adaptation of Max Brand's story of high finance and intrigue, "Children of Night," at the ———— theatre next ————. While the star appears as a Wall Street magnate, his host of admirers will be delighted to know that the picture admits of no let-down in the display of nerve and muscular power with which his name has been associated.

The story is one which sweeps from high finance and high society into the secret places of the underworld. It moves with dramatic action, revealing hair-breadth escapes, death-plotting, flight, pursuit, terrific battles with desperate criminals and the ultimate triumph of law and love. It is a love story steeped in heroics of the appealing sort and in its central character the star has a role which fits him admirably.

PROGRAM READER

High finance—high society—a secret criminal society—plots and counter-plots—battles in underworld dens—romance which defies death threats—the triumph of right and a strong right arm—these are all found in William Russell's newest picture, "Children of Night," adapted from Max Brand's vivid story of intrigue and romance, which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is a play of big city life and furnishes a full quota of thrills which are revealed in scenes which move with startling action. The star is admirably fitted to the demands of the vigorous role. In his support is Ruth Renick. Remember, next ————. A treat is in store for you.

SUGGESTIONS

Advance notices should be played prominently in the exploitation of this feature. You can state that the star has left the plains and ranch life temporarily for the environment of big city life and society. Make mention that the picture is an absorbing drama which pulsates with tense action—a drama which furnishes thrill after thrill. Bill it as a drama of intrigue and the underworld. You can stage a prologue after the fashion of a tabloid play—with a well dressed figure falling asleep in a cozy chair—the scene to be followed by a melodramatic one. Get out your posters and paper and put over your mailing list.

"The Haunted House"

(Buster Keaton Comedy-Metro—Two Reels)

BUSTER KEATON certainly brings down the house with his latest concoction. This newest comedy is a slap-bang—slapstick—crazy quilt which has no thread of story whatsoever. It comprises a series of episodic high jinks which are so ridiculously fashioned—so filled with rare stunts and snappy hokum that the spectator is kept busy following them. He will find time to laugh long and heartily when Buster, as the cashier of a bank, makes the error of putting his fingers in the glue-pot instead of the watered sponge while counting bills. The money sticks and Buster cannot get rid of it. The customers at the little window are also stuck up with the currency.

The idea plays out after a fashion and the next jump shows a barnstorming Faust company being "vegetable-ed" off the stage. What follows caps the climax in rousing the risibilities of the audience.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Twice Born Woman"

(Produced by Malcolm Strauss—Distributed on State Right Basis by Sonora Films Corp.)

MALCOLM STRAUSS, after fourteen months of labor, has given to the screen a biblical photoplay based upon the life of Mary Magdalen as drawn from scripture, legend and tradition.

The picture as shown at the New York Hippodrome has some points to recommend it.

It appears to be a most sincere effort on the part of the producer to offer an artistic photoplay along higher lines than the average feature. The photography is excellent and there are a number of well executed sets, but artistic beauty is not combined with well constructed drama. Pictorial beauty, effective mob scenes, the picture has; and this can be said with emphases.

The story does not follow the Bible in every detail. Mary of Magdala is taken from the streets into the house of Simon of Cyrene and loaded with luxuries. She plays with her admirers and then, ever eager for novelty, visits the Man from Nazareth. She is converted and goes into seclusion in her sister's house. Mary's washing of the feet of Christ is shown, as is the crucifixion, which is not, however, dwelt upon in detail. Mr. Strauss does not often show the face of Christ, and then not in a close-up. He will thus avoid much criticism.

The picture is not, we understand, offered as a piece of biblical history, but it would make an excellent subject for the churches simply because of its scriptural theme and religious tone. The part of Mary is played by Deyha Loti, whose chief attraction is a beautiful pair of eyes. Properly exploited—along lines peculiar to the subject—it has theatre possibilities that must be reckoned with. Length 7 reels—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Ready to Serve"

(Chester-Educational—Two Reels)

THIS two-reeler was written and directed by W. S. Campbell, who has a very clear idea of what "Snooky the Humanzee" can do. But this is not all, for Campbell has introduced all kinds of situations in which various animal actors appear and do their bit.

To the casual observer the cleverness with which these scenes are handled and the tremendous amount of energy expended in developing them is lost, but it must not be forgotten when the comedy is reviewed and analyzed.

It would be almost impossible to remember the tricks which "Snooky" and the other animals and humans do, but when the playlet is finished its a sure thing that the patrons will be satisfied.

One of the important tricks which the monkey does is to swing on a rope, one end of which is attached to a tree and the other to a window and rescue a little girl. It is thrilling and amusing to see the animal perform this stunt, especially when the child climbs upon his back and hangs there while the monkey swings back to the tree.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Judge Her Not"

(Merit)

EXCEPT that Pauline Curley and Jack Livingston appear in the leading roles, one might believe that "Judge Her Not" was a resurrection from the old shelf where films made when features were first introduced, are stored. For it is "old timey" in every way, including an ancient plot, old time tricks and photography without regard for detail.

The story is one we would call "a western." It is all about a poor chorus lady, with a traveling burlesque show. The manager wears diamonds and the actors go hungry. They decide to quit, but are in fear of being stranded, when the soubrette gets a letter back-stage, informing her that she has fallen heir to a ranch further west. Immediately she invites the company to go with her to the ranch, which is the reason for the show girls being transported to the wild and woolly.

The foreman, and his accomplice, a villain, whose wife is also of a vicious nature, have reasons to believe that there is "gold" in the old creek and plan to drive the newcomers away, with the hope that the owner will sell out "cheap." But country life is a change and appeals to the intruders, who refuse to be "ousted." Then, the woman plans to start a gossip fest, and make life so miserable the attractive young ladies will be obliged to "clear out." Things start happening, and while circumstances are against "her," "Judge her Not," is the lesson derived from the inability of the scandal mongers to win out. Gold is discovered, the rescuing cowboy is accepted, the villain rejected and "fade out" into "The End." For low priced houses only. Unknown direction. Faint suspicion of suspense. Artificial love interest. Length five reels.—LILLIAN GALE.

A new theatre has been opened at Oak Cliff, Texas, which will receive admissions from colored people only.

The Pathe Film Corporation has opened a cleaning establishment at Dallas, Texas, which office will take care of Oklahoma City, Memphis and New Orleans. The new plant will be used for cleaning films, keepiug same in perfect condition, and free from grease and streaks.

The New Queen theatre was opened at Victoria, Texas, last week with D. W. Griffith's "Love Flower" as the initial feature picture. T. P. Peters, the manager and owner, announces that the Queen at Yorktown, Texas, will be opened in the near future.

C. O. Fulgham, formerly with the R. D. Lewis office, is the new booker for Educational, and John Miles, shipping clerk, at Dallas, Texas.

The Tucker Brothers Amusement Company's business and assets were sold under the hammer May 16 to C. W. Griffin, of Bristow, Okla., for a consideration of $11,000. Approximately 1,500 reels, tons of advertising matter, a full compliment of exchange equipment, and a Ford car were included in the assets. Mr. Griffin stated that the business would be continued as soon as the details have been worked out.

The Independent Film Service Company of Dallas, Texas, has established an Oklahoma City exchange at 106 South Hudson street and has started distribution with H. W. Ferguson as manager.

The Princess Airdome was opened at Eldorado, Ark., last week to a large business.

R. M. Avery and C. S. Tucker of Gatesvills, Texas, have purchased the movie theatres at Hamilton and Gustine, Texas.

W. M. Smith and Associates will make movie films in Tulsa, Okla., in the near future. A studio is now being built at that place.

The Saenger Amusement Co., of New Orleans, has purchased the Jewel theatre at Helena, Ark., and will enlarge same.

MINNEAPOLIS

Manager Jack Prescott left the New Lyric theatre here a few days ago—and returned shortly, a full-fledged Benedict. His partner in the booking for life was a non-professional, Miss Mona Cooley, of Flint, Michigan. It was while he was managing a theatre at Flint that Jack met Miss Cooley. Miss Cooley, who is a graduate of Smith College, was head of the Michigan State School for the Deaf and Dumb at Flint. Her father is perhaps the oldest jeweler in Michigan and is now the Tiffany of Flint.

DETROIT

Practically all the neighborhood motion picture theares here are dispensing with their orchestras for the summer months. The large first run houses downtown have also chopped the size of their orchestras. When the present contract with the musicians' union expires on Sept. 1st, it is very probable that a lower rate will take effect.

J. Cosco has leased the Stratford theatre, which with the Jefferson gives him two houses here.

The William Fox Washington theatre has reduced its prices from 50 to 40 cents at night for the main floor and from 30 to 25 cents in the afternoon. Commencing Sunday, May 29, the Broadway Strand will put its usual summer scale into effect, main floor seats being 50 instead of 60 cents.

Frank Drew and W. J. Mozealous have formed a partnership and taken over Masterpiece and World features.

The Majestic theatre will close on Saturday, June 4, for the summer.

Vaudeville agents furnishing attractions for the motion picture theatres in Detroit and the state have formed the Theatrical Brokers" Protective Association.

J. M. Leasia has leased the Tuxedo theatre, now building at Hamilton and Tuxedo avenues.

Bryant Washburn appeared for a week at the Adams theatre in person and was feted and entertained all week.

SAN DIEGO

William White Stammler, formerly house manager at the Broadway theatre here and for a time with the Superba theatre in Los Angeles, was a victim of sunstroke on June 6.

The Bush theatres, combining the Superba, Broadway, Silver Strand and Vista, have decided to discontlnue the publication of their house organ, The Chain of Blue, which has been issued weekly for the past two years.

G. A. Bush, head of the Bush theatres, was named as the San Diego representative on the general committee of the Actors' Fund of America in connection with the festival given in Los Angeles on June 4 for the benefit of the fund.

In connection with the presentation of George Beban's latest picture, "One Man in a Million," the management of the Superba theatre furnished a special treat for its patrons by having Mr. Beban present for three performances each day for the week, Mr. Beban giving a talk on cleaner motion pictures and presenting his act, "The Sign of the Rose." When Mr. Beban arrived in San Diego from the north he was met by a committee of citizens, headed by Mayor John L. Bacon, who presented him a handsome floral key to the city.

Author Endorses Screen Version of His Story

Here is what William Allen White, the well-known author, wrote to Benjamin B. Hampton, after witnessing Mr. Hampton's screen version of his story "A Certain Rich Man:

"I have seen 'A Certain Rich Man.' It is a great picture and it carries the spirit of my story fairly. I most earnestly hope that it will be a success. You have done an artistic job and have departed in no serious way from the spirit and intention of my story and I am greatly pleased with the results."

—but of all that happened nothing was of greater significance to the industry as a whole than the absolute determination of exhibitors to rent their future pictures upon their merit!

This means everything to an organization such as Associated Producers, who have no axe to grind and whose success depends entirely upon the good will of all exhibitors.

Our whole aim is to produce the best pictures our ability will permit and to market our product upon an equitable basis.

Producers such as Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett, Maurice Tourneur, J. Parker Read, Jr., Allan Dwan and J. L. Frothingham deserve the whole-hearted support of the exhibitors, because they are putting forth a sincere effort to create great motion pictures.

The Old Nest Opens

RUPERT HUGHES' heart-gripping drama of Home, directed by Reginald Barker, starts a limited engagement at the Astor, N. Y.

THE OLD NEST is a Goldwyn Picture which will be offered to you for playing, beginning Sept. 11.

It will receive, prior to that date, the widest national publicity.

You will make a great deal of money with this picture.

It is one of those rare triumphs that every once in a while darts across the film horizon—

—as in the case of "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Miracle Man."

THE OLD NEST has just opened for a limited engagement at the Astor Theatre, N. Y.

The prices are top. The crowds are there in the hottest weather of the year.

We do not quote a sentence from each critical review.

This would not do full justice to the picture.

Besides it is a simple thing to find a sentence of praise even if a review slams a picture.

The reviews on THE OLD NEST have been unprecedented in the matter of praise.

A partial list of the publications which have printed enthusiastic comment on this picture follows:

The Verdict of the Press Is the Proof of the Pudding

NEW YORK MAIL

Tibet, the mystery land of Asia, is the scene of "Tradition," the new feature which was added to the motion picture programme at the Hippodrome yesterday. The theme of the film deals with the ruling power of ancient traditions in the country of which the outside world knows so little, and a graphic, thrilling tale is told of the consequences when the tradition of the Far East clashes with the practical civilization of the Occident.

"Tradition" adds another to the list of German made pictures which have recently been imported and introduces a new director to the American public in the person of Paul Otto, who also plays the leading role in the film and is co-author with George Jacoby of "Death and Love," the story upon which the picture is based.

As in the other German films which have been shown here, the production has been made with a lavish hand, striking exteriors as well as gorgeous interior sets for the portrayal of royal Tibetan splendor furnishing the background for the picturesque costumes with which the film abounds.

The story is, briefly, that of a Prince's efforts to avenge the murder of his sister. Suspicion is cast upon a young white man. The Prince follows him to his European home and in revenge takes the suspect's fiancee back to Tibet with him, where he is about to make her his bride when the true culprit is revealed and the lovers are reunited. The traditions of Tibet enter importantly into the development of the story and gave the picture its name.

"Tradition" added to the Hippodrome programme of films yesterday, proved to be a picture of melodramatic color, a story that holds interest, some elaborate costuming, and a big production. It is a foreign made affair, and was directed by Paul Otto, who also plays the role of Tantara Bagha. He proved an effective actor.

NEW YORK AMERICAN

"Tradition," a foreign-made film, based on "Der Tod Und Die Liebe," was added yesterday to the screen programme at the Hippodrome. There is a great deal of good background in the picture, an elaborate production, and the story has certain twists that hold the attention. Of the cast, Carl Wagner is successful as Ras. Paul Otto gives a certain pathos to the brother in his devotion to a sister's memory.

MORNING TELEGRAPH

An European film version of a novel by Paul Otto and George Jacoby, under the title "Tradition," was added to the program at the Hippodrome yesterday.

In many ways "Tradition" will appeal to the public. It is melodrama of the gruesome, thrilling kind, picturing a story that is a series of highly dramatic scenes enacted in Oriental settings. The story concerns the manner in which an Indian prince seeks to be revenged for the murder of his sister. He believes the crime to have been the work of a young marine engineer whose fiancee he seeks to destroy. The cunning and mystery of the Orient enter into his plans, thus providing a photo-dramatic plot that bids fair to keep an audience on the edge of their seats and provide them with enough harrowing episodes to last for some time.

Announcing Our First 18 Productions

While 1,500 delegates in convention and several thousand exhibitors at home have been fighting the battle of screen independence, the F. B. Warren Corporation has organized itself into the largest independent distributing company in the industry and procured for exhibitors the powerful producers and productions that make independent theatres possible.

We take pride in announcing the first highly successful producers who have chosen our distribution as their agency of contact with the exhibitors of the world.

We now announce:

REGINALD BARKER PRODUCTIONS: Four of them. One of the industry's ablest and greatest directors. A man of vision, power, refinement and dramatic intelligence. His power and skill are freshly demonstrated in "The Old Nest," just launched by Goldwyn as its greatest picture of the year. A wonderful picture! Mr. Barker will make even bigger productions to be released through our company, with his first release in October.

LOIS WEBER PRODUCTIONS: Four of them. This brilliant, able woman was making pictures that grossed upwards of $500,000 each four years ago when no pictures except "The Birth of a Nation," "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria" were grossing half of that amount. She has now set out to excel everything she has done before. Her production, "The Blot" is our first release on September 4.

VICTOR SCHERTZINGER PRODUCTIONS: Four of them. Remember "His Mother's Boy," "String Beans," "Nine O'clock Town," "Mr. Barnes of New York," "The Hired Man" and a score of other human pictures? He made them and in addition wrote several of the stories. It was pictures like these added to the splendid Charles Ray personality that established Ray's deserved success. Our first Schertzinger release, "Prosperity?" is set for September 25.

INTERNATIONAL BIG 4: One great production from each of four European countries —Norway, France, Italy and perhaps England. Each a production that will gross upwards of $300,000. Our first release is Charles Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend," in early October. Produced by Nordisk Films of Copenhagen.

QUO VADIS. We have been selected by George Kleine and associates to distribute the revival of this tremendous Cines production, completely re-edited by one of the greatest of American screen dramatists. This production was the first picture ever played in America at advanced prices, and in 1914 ran twenty-two weeks at the Astor Theatre, New York.

GOOD AND EVIL. A magnificent panorama-drama starring beautiful Lucy Doraine. Produced by Sascha Films in Prague, Bohemia. A cast of 10,000 persons in a picture greater in magnitude than "Passion" or "Deception"; a modern society drama; rich, opulent, colorful and clean. Released in September.

MOONGOLD. The most successful short-length feature ever made in America. A Will Bradley production that is just finishing a five weeks run in the three Famous Players-Lasky Theatres in New York.

This one announcement embraces eighteen smashing big, feature-length productions and one established short-subject success. We have closed other producers who will be announced in a few days at the expiration of their present contracts.

We will release a minimum of 30 big productions in our first year; one release each week from September to June, starting Sunday, September 4. We also will release other short-reel attractions on regular weekly schedule.

500 big theatres in the United States are playing our attractions September 4 for INDEPENDENCE WEEK.

THE STORY

MEL BRADY was a shrewd and resourceful girl, living in New York's lower East Side with her lovable old uncle, "Nunc" Brady, who made his living by the gentle art of cracking safes. In the gang of which he was the brains were Jim Crawkins, gunman and yegg, and Gimp, a hunchback who played "lookout." Mel was a clever "combination reader," expert in opening safes. Sometimes she played at shoplifting.

Mel goes "shopping" and is arrested by the store detective. Mrs. Creighton Hardage, wife of a millionaire, becomes interested and saves her from the police, giving her employment on her "fair price committee."

Nunc and Jim are arrested on suspicion, but are released. Gimp, who has followed Mel, is mystified when she drives away. Mel makes her home with Mrs. Hardage.

Capt. Ward Ransom, home from overseas, visits the Hardages. Rhoda Hardage is deeply interested in him. She is piqued by the attention Ransom shows Mel. Crawkins learns from Gimp of Mel's new home, and manages to get into the house. Mel hears him, thinking him a burglar. She has a revolver. They meet and she tells him of certain jewels in the house that she can get later. Crawkins leaves. Mel takes up her work on the "fair price committee." Capt. Ransom likes her and accompanies her to dangerous quarters of the city. Under new influences Mel decides to go straight and lead an honest life.

While Mrs. Hardage was working to uncover profiteering, she did not know her husband had got control of food supplies and was the greatest profiteering crook in the country. Hardage kept his correspondence and papers in his safe at home. Hardage tried to force his attentions on Mel. Mel repulsed him with her finger-nails. She realized she was at a crisis—that she loved Capt. Ransom, but must tell him of her dishonest career. She told the story and Ransom forgave the past, saying he loved her. Crawkins, mad with jealousy, went to Ransom's home and told him Mel was a thief, and was laughed at. Crawkins then lied to Ransom, saying she had been too friendly with other men. Ransom sent word to her he would not see her again. Mel decided to return to her old life —to rob the Hardages. She was surprised while rummaging the safe. She got the wallet, however, which contained Hardage's papers, connecting him with the profiteering ring. Ransom had been invited to become Hardage's partner. Mel loved him and determined to save him from an unholy business alliance. She went to Ransom's home and told him the contents of the papers. Crawkins had followed her and in jealous rage tried to shoot Ransom. In the struggle "Gimp" was shot and mortally wounded. Crawkins confessed to Ransom that he had lied about Mel.

With the papers in her possession, Mel forced Hardage to reduce food prices through his own organization. Mel and Capt. Ransom were married and Ransom established "Nunc" in a cottage near the sea where he spent the remainder of his days fishing.

DIRECTION ..... Splendid
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Excellent throughout
LIGHTINGS ..... Very good in parts
CAMERA WORK ..... Good
PLAYERS.....Matheson Lang does fine work. Support very good
EXTERIORS ..... Real Venice
INTERIORS ..... Good. Some big sets
DETAIL ..... Lot of money spent
CHARACTER OF STORY.....Modern Othello with tragedy avoided
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..... 7,300 feet

"Carnival" is a well balanced and very satisfying production, by far the very best that has come over from England since the war. First it was German films but now it threatens to be British.

The success of this production is due to a variety of attractive combinations. The acting stands out as excellent work and the support is very good. The story is quite plausible and is given a very attractive setting in the tragic city of Venice with its many gondolas, that do the work of our trolley cars in a more romantic manner. Besides this there are several very spectacular scenes employing hundreds of extas that are well registered and beautifully photographed. The picture has also a good balance between love, sex, jealousy and incident. There is also a relation between plot-development and characterization.

The story deals with an Italian Shakesparian actor in Venice, his attractive wife and her lover. Silvio Steno, the actor, has been neglecting his wife for his work and she has been accepting the attentions of his best friend. He soon finds out that something has been going on behind his back and the poison of jealousy gnaws at his nature. The climax comes during a performance of Othello. Just before the bedchamber scene Steno discovers that his best friend has been paying attention to his wife and they had been to the Carnival the evening before. His wife plays the part of Desdemona and from this moment on the play is taken out of Shakespeare's hands and becomes a reality. The curtain is rung down and in the blue room of the theater the wife explains the circumstances, and it all ends with a very satisfying clinch.

There are many very beautiful scenes and unusual effects in this production. Some of the photography is excellent and the night effects all well done. Especially beautiful lightings were given to the scenes in the nursery at night and big carnival shots where the light is played among the dancers. In some of the early scenes, however, the lighting was too diffused and uninteresting, and also in the stage-upon-the-stage the bed chamber of Desdemona should certainly have received a more dramatic lighting effect.

Matheson Lang plays the part of the Italian actor with a good deal of thought and care. His facial expressions are well registered and get over his thoughts, thus reducing the number of titles. Hilda Bailey plays his wife in a satisfactory manner though she does not build up the character in as convincing a manner as accomplished by the star. The supporting cast all do good work and include Ivor Novelle, Clifford Gray, Duchess D'Ansola, and Twinkles Hunter.

This production as a whole makes a very satisfactory feature and stands up well alongside of some of the season's best.

Don't Hesitate—It Will Please Them

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Judging from the applause that followed the showing of this at the Capitol Theater, New York, it don't seem that you can go wrong in placing it before your people. It is not very often that an audience in New York applaud a picture, especially in hot weather, and when they do it is significient.

Lay stress on the foreign settings, and the theme. Use the lines "A Modern Othello." "A story laid in Venice" or "See the Power of Jealousy."

Stage life is always attractive and the romantic settings will be well appreciated by your women patrons. You can safely talk about the star for his acting is sure to satisfy and there will certainly be more pictures featuring him.

Anything gay like streamers, toy balloons, and flags hung around the entrance will attract and at the same time symbolize the "Carnival." This feature presents many exploiting angles and is the kind of a picture your people want and will enjoy.

HUGO BALLIN

UNIQUE is the position of Hugo Ballin in the directorial world today. Far and above all the rest he stands; a distinction that is his only after years of study and application. Renowned in the field of Art, he has brought to the screen that beauty of feeling and form which only a true artist can create.

"The Journey's End" is his masterpiece. Surpassing even his two recent achievements, "Pagan Love" and "East Lynne," it stamps him indelibly as a directorial genius. In it he has dared to do what has never been done in dramatic pictures before, and the great reward is his.

The first dramatic photoplay ever made without a single subtitle

"THE JOURNEY'S END" is the first dramatic picture ever produced without a single subtitle. Yet, withal, a perfect continuity, direction of the highest calibre, and superb acting have made the action crystal-clear.

The eloquent reviews of the trade press are lavish in their praise of it, and as one they acclaim Hugo Ballin, the producer, a genius for having made such progress in the art of motion picture construction.

"The Journey's End" is the most unusual picture produced in many months;—it has a box-office appeal that is unparalleled. The wide-awake exhibitor will book it immediately.

What the Critics Say

Is an Undoubted Success

HUGO BALLIN chose to produce a picture that entirely omitted the customary subtitles, with the result that unless the onlooker was acquainted with the fact previously it would be some time before he realized the lack of printed matter, so clearly and completely is the tale narrated. "The Journey's End" is an undoubted success. The story is simple, direct and of a type that has a wide appeal, and the telling is interesting. Ballin is to be congratulated for giving the screen a novelty that is not merely a curiosity.

There is a tremendous audience for the kind of story "The Journey's End" relates. MOVING PICTURE WORLD, July 2, 1921

Action—Not Words—A Beautiful Film

HUGO BALLIN is the first producer to dare make a picture any complication of story entirely without titles. Mr. Bal has shown that it can be done provided there are artistic imaginati and inventive resource to start with. The clarity of the fi is remarkable.

Suffice it to say that Mr. Ballin's effects are those of a genuine arti that his picture has more imagination to a reel than the usual program feature has in six. Mabel Ballin has the leading part. For cle transcendent beauty, for perfection of feature that epitomizes all W. T. Benda's work, she surpasses the whole galaxy of the so-call film stars about whom is raging the press-agented ballyhoo. If Broc way does not see her and Mr. Ballin's "The Journey's End" it will a shrewd loss to Broadway. NEW YORK EVENING POST, June 17, 1

EVERYTHING considered, this is a most remarkable picture; o which establishes the fact that Hugo Ballin is not only an expe in making pictures, for which he is already famous, but is as well director of intelligence, imagination and skill.

Mr. Ballin has taken a story and developed it in a way that mak it fine entertainment. He not only avoids the usual conveniences a stereotyped ways of the average director, but he tells the story every detail without the use of a single title. This has been do previously, but never, so far as we have observed, with a dramat story that was difficult of expression in picture form no matter hc many titles were used. But Mr. Ballin has accomplished the apparent impossible—and his continuity is flawless.

"The Journey's End" is also splendidly acted. Mabel Ballin is pretty and appealing heroine. George Bancroft, a newcomer to t screen, gives a performance as an uneducated mill hand that stam him as an actor of rare ability and great promise.

The picture has been made exceedingly human and characterize as it is by fine acting, direction that gets the most from each scen with its unbroken continuity through the elimination of titles, it w stand as a model for what the picture producer should strive fo Especially is this true of the title proposition. It demonstrates th pictures can be made without inserting a book of explanations and ar step in this direction needs encouragement.

THE YEAR'S MOST

(ALLIN'S MASTERPIECE

RNEY'S END"

Is a Masterpiece

F any one should have made a prediction that the day would come when dramatic pictures would be made without a single ıbtitle, he would undoubtedly be considered either a theorist or a ılamer, and yet such a dream has been accomplished in "The ırney's End." There is not a single subtitle in it, . . . and yet the ion is crystal-clear. This feat has been accomplished by intelli- ıt construction, more intelligent direction, and skilful acting.

"The Journey's End" is a masterpiece, no matter from which angle ı's viewed. The interest of the spectator is so aroused that he omes a participant in the unfolded drama; he feels the sorrows the characters as intensely as the characters themselves feel m; and when the trials of these characters are over, he rejoices ıally as well. The story is so different that it should prove a relief he picture-goer who has been bored by so much sameness.

Director Hugo Ballin should be congratulated for this accom- shment. Mabel Ballin does excellent work; so does all the sup- ting cast. Pictures of this type add class and distinction to a theatre.

HARRISON'S REPORTS, June 25, 1921

We Have Seen Nothing to Surpass This Picture

HIS is the first screen drama shown without one subtitle or a single word of explanation. For exquisite artistry, flawless oduction and acting of the highest calibre we have seen nothing to pass this picture. It is an achievement for Mabel and Hugo llin. Their efforts inaugurate a new development in picture ıstruction.

Nothing more eloquent, more enthralling or satisfying has been oduced in films . . . the scenes are a mere trifle compared to the npelling values of the story.

Mabel Ballin has never contributed finer work to the screen. better selection of the wealthy mill owner than Wyndham unding could have been thought of. The part of the uncouth nworker was taken by George Bancroft, and at moments he ost ran away with the acting honors. The atmosphere is perfect d the photography exceedingly fine, especially of the gardens Rome.

Exhibitors will make no mistake in booking this picture, which will ase the highest class audience and also supply interest for the sses.

THE BILLBOARD, June 25, 1921

A Photo-Dramatic Triumph for All Concerned

THERE hasn't been such an unusual production in months. There are so many unusual things about "The Journey's End" that one can hardly mention them all, but the biggest thing of this kind is the fact that just when the story seems to develop into the ordinary plot an original turn is taken and things happen that you least expect. This element of surprise and suspense holds the attention of the spectator and places this feature on a high plane.

The acting is by far the best we have seen in a long time. Mabel Ballin, beautiful and talented, makes a truly wonderful character of the girl, playing it to perfection. As to George Bancroft we heartily agree with Mr. Ballin that he is a "find." His work in the role of the ironworker places him in the front rank of character actors. Others worthy of real praise are Wyndham Standing, J. Webb Dillion, and the child, Georgette Bancroft. A screen story that can be listed as a photo-dramatic triumph for all concerned . . . a genuine success from every angle. THE MORNING TELEGRAPH, June 19, 1921

Is a Big Picture

THE story is well told, the continuity being well established at all times without a slip-up on the part of the director in planting his points.

Although short in numbers the cast has been well selected.

"The Journey's End" is a big picture. . . It is a new departure in film making and for the initial production along these lines is commendable.

VARIETY, June 24, 1921

Class AA—Exquisitely Staged Drama Presented Without Subtitles

IT is needless to draw attention to the fact that when a moving picture, and especially a serious drama, can be presented on the screen intelligibly without the aid of subtitles, its technique must be well-nigh perfect. "The Journey's End" is just such a picture. The story as presented stands out with cameo-like clearness. It is exquisitely staged and contains a rare degree of spirituality, which is due partly to Hugo Ballin's conception and development of an absorbing theme, and partly to the delicately beautiful outline of the character of the girl by Mabel Ballin. . . . The moral standard is kept always on a high plane, causing the picture to bear a very marked contrast to other productions. . . George Bancroft and Wyndham Standing both do excellent work, . . and the child, Georgette Bancroft is unusually clever.

An Editorial Summing Up That Hits the High Lights and Makes You Feel "On the Spot"

There are distinctly two sides to the Exhibitors convention held last week in Minneapolis.

One is the surface side.

A large and representative gathering of exhibitors was held. The proceedings were exceptionally well-managed, well organized and entirely business-like. The committees and general sessions worked fast, earnestly, even fiercely, in a hot spell scarcely bearable. It was fully evidenced—and perhaps this is the largest result of the convention—that the theatre owners of this country, representing the largest branch in this industry with by far the greatest investment of capital, can organize, have at last organized and do now present a solid and respect-compelling backbone of strength.

If this present organization is held and extended, if it continues to be led by men of sincere and broad and, above all, unselfish motives, then—and there is no argument whatever about this—the industry from now on will have under it a foundation that will not only make for the best interests of the deserving exhibitor but also for the enduring best interests of every other branch of the business.

We want—all of us want—the best interests of the industry wants—this business market kept open.

We want each of the three branches of this industry to be and remain neutral—entirely independent of any overlapping control of any other branch, or branches.

Industrial growth and prosperity demand this economic platform;—so does the freedom of expression of this new medium, which after all is a matter deeply and broadly concerned with public welfare and public opinion.

* * *

An Exhibitors League rightly conducted can, eventually, build this platform.

The Convention made evident this important fact.

Producer ownership of theatres was attacked.

Unfair practices were denounced.

Unmistakably it was made known that unfair competition will not be tolerated—that exhibitor organization has the power to stop it.

We say unmistakably and mean it; and the lesson ought to carry far and wide in this industry. It rings loud.

A number of important resolutions were adopted:

To designate September as a month in which exhibitor members shall book as many independent productions as possible.

For uniform and equitable contracts.

For a law to modify the copyright law so as to remove the music license fee.

In favor of foreign pictures.

Against improper films, Blue Laws, Censorship, Distribution waste.

For the independent laboratories.

For screen propaganda to the end of a public understanding of the picture, its industry, its enemies.

These resolutions are in the hands of active committees.

The keynote of this convention was Independence.

Independence, we take it, means the neutrality of producer, distributor, exhibitor, toward each other; the specialization of each in their particular fields, with hands off the other fellow's interests and specialty.

And this is right—right as right itself—from every angle business sense and history.

In an effort to construct independence, to do something definite, the convention devoted much of its time to the consideration of a project to create an exhibitor owned distributing corporation, a single channel for all pictures—this to the end, it was advanced, of eliminating distribution waste and of encouraging independent production.

The project is now in the hands of a committee who will report back to the Executive Committee of the Association.

This matter of an exhibitor owned distributing corporation is an extremely serious proposition.

We suggest to the committee that it proceed only with a lot of figures not now in the possession of this industry, and even then with a far look ahead for the biggest possible breakers the industry has yet faced.

We are compelled to regard the project as unnecessary, inconsistent and dangerous.

It is inconsistent in token of its very name. An exhibitor-owned distributing corporation signifies the union of two branches of this industry, which the key-

Convention of the M. P. T. O. A.

"Live and Let Live" Is Suggested as a New Slogan—Other Lessons of a Big Week in Industry's History note of the convention declares must be kept utterly distinct.

It is dangerous because it throws a hat, a big hat, into the ring. It is a declaration of renewed warfare not of independence. It brings about a theatre coalition which will by its very existence induce other theatre chains of whatever nature of ownership or coalition to go ahead and extend their holdings to the very limit.

But it is unnecessary.

And now we come to what we regard as the other side of the convention—the after thought of it, the serious, sit-by-the box-office-side contemplation of what the convention did and what will come out of it.

* * *

The primary aim of the convention was the encouragement of the independent producer.

Well, just what is it that discourages right now the independent producer?

Not a thing in the world except the profitable sale of his pictures.

Profitable sale means a sufficient number of bookings at a sufficient price.

And who will settle this problem?

No one in the world except the exhibitor. Not necessarily the organized exhibitor; not the formation of an exhibitor-owned distributing corporation. But simply the individual exhibitor everywhere.

And he'll settle it, not with sentimentality, not with resolutions for independence, but simply with hard, cold, business sense.

The independent producer says he can't get first-runs or if he does he can't get a fair price; and failing to get first-runs and first-run prices his distribution is difficult, inadequate and expensive.

The first-run theatre and most every other house goes after volume of good product. Naturally. That is its big business problem.

Quality counts a lot: but so does volume.

Every exhibitor knows that; so he signs up for volume. Consequently when the good independent picture comes along he generally has to put a contract picture on the shelf in order to book it. But—also—he generally makes the independent picture pay for the loss. Which doesn't encourage independent production.

We are not theorizing now. We are citing facts given up by exhibitors broad enough and frank enough to admit them.

Obviously the encouragement of the independent producer is up to the exhibitor. It's his problem—his business problem.

He must first sit down and figure volume of product—from all sources, independent and otherwise. Then, in fairness to all sources of supply, he must give the independent producer all the show his product deserves, taking into consideration what volume means, what quality means and what it means to secure variety of product through the fair encouragement of the independent producer.

This, it seems to us, is the practical answer to the problem.

And it's right up to the exhibitor—up to his good business sense and foresight.

* * *

In closing may we suggest to the M. P. T. O. A. the consideration of a new slogan:

"Live and Let Live."

There's a lot to say for it.

We don't mean to do away with the present one: "An injury to one is an injury to all."

It is a good one. It has brought about a spirited and salutary fight for a principle.

Let it continue to stand for principle.

But something has to be done now besides fighting; and we don't believe much fighting will be necessary from now on.

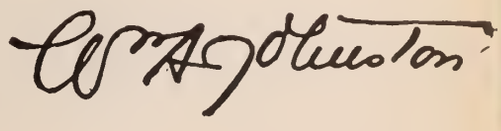
We do need construction—coolheaded, liberal-minded, specification-planned construction.

And construction, in any industry, means giving due consideration to all the important and inter-dependant factors that make up an industry.

The producer needs theatres; the theatre needs product; the distributor must deliver the goods in the best interests of each.

It can all be worked out with business facts, figures and service.

Construction is the keynote now. And that means: "Live and Let Live."



Sydney Cohen Makes Post-Convention Speech

Has Not Decided About Accepting Salary Offer, He Tells Jersey Exhibitors

RE-ECHOING the enthusiasm of the national convention at Minneapolis, the second annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey opened on Wednesday, July 6, at Atlantic City, N. J.

Effective measures are expected to result from this important meeting, which is now in progress on the Jersey coast. One of the most important measures to be discussed was the consolidation of the Northern and Southern New Jersey organizations into a united body. Censorship, Sunday openings and other matters pertinent to the welfare of the New Jersey exhibitors, are also before the convention.

Sydney Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, addressed the exhibitors, and announced that as yet he could not state that he would accept the salary of $25,000 per annum which was voted to him at the national convention in Minneapolis.

"I had made up my mind," stated Mr. Cohen, "to retire as president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and would have done so if it were not for the urgent pleading of the delegates and representatives to the convention from all parts of the country.

"I read in the trade papers that there is some talk about a salary being voted to me by the organization. I don't know of same and, undoubtedly, it was discussed while I was requested to leave the room. While I appreciate the thought of the sponsors of this move, I cannot say at this time that I will accept same, as the most important thing to me is not compensation for whatever little services I can render. What matters most is the upbuilding and development of our national organization so we can really function to protect the interests of every theatre owner, particularly the so-called 'small man.' Whatever moneys will be subscribed by the motion picture theatre owners, will be used to develop our organization to such a basis that we can adequately compensate those whom we employ to do the work necessary and so we can increase the number of workers in order that more and better service can be given to the exhibitors. We must enlarge our offices, create new departments and increase the scope of our work, and the moneys received will be used in furtherance of this plan.

"We are now passing through very troublous hours and trying times owing to business depression and the tremendous losses being suffered everywhere. We are passing through a period of reconstruction where the concerted action of every one in this industry must be used most intelligently and sanely.

"I am particularly interested at this time in the appointment of a committee of five to meet with Mr. Adolph Zukor and the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., for the drawing up of an agreement, as per the mandate of the Minneapolis convention, for the permanent settlement, I hope, of the producer-exhibitor problem and for the reparation of all damage done to every exhibitor.

"I am interested in the adoption and use of a uniform and more equitable contract by all film exchanges with the commencement of the new season. A copy of the contract recommended by the Committee on Business Relations of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has been sent to every film manufacturer, distributor and producing company. We insist that a copy of the application or contract be left with the exhibitor at the time of signing same.

"We must organize the few states still unorganized and strengthen our organization in every part of the country by sending organizers through the territory bringing the organization to the exhibitor, aiding him in his problems and enlisting his cooperation for the great work before us."

Independent Laboratories Further Cause

M.P.T.O. and Federated Members Pledge Support in Fight Against Alleged Monopoly

THE Allied Film Laboratories Association, composed of several independent laboratory companies, reports a successful campaign at the recent exhibitors' convention in furthering the cause of the independent laboratory. Not only did the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America pass a resolution pledging their support to the Allied Film Laboratories Association, but the members of Federated Film Exchanges of America, assembled at Minneapolis, promised to support and co-operate with the Allied in whatsoever manner that organization requested.

Major Tom Evans and H. E. Yates, of the Allied Laboratories, presented a brief to the Executive Committee of the M. P. T. O., in which their case against the Eastman Kodak Co., was stated. After showing that the Eastman Company controls the raw stock market, the brief characterizes Jules E. Brulatour, as "the real czar in the motion picture industry," and charges him with attempting to control the laboratory business.

The brief then states that three laboratories, which, it is claimed, are under the control of Mr. Brulatour, have a capacity of 40 per cent greater than the total volume of prints required. "Undoubtably," reads the petition of the independents, in analyzing Mr. Brulatour's motives, "you are wondering why Brulatour is attempting to monopolize the laboratory business. Certainly he does not miss the small profit the independent laboratory earns. It is the independent producer and distributor that he is attempting to reach. First, however, he must put the independent laboratory out of existence. This will be a sorry day for the independent producer and exhibitor. Just think of it, one man in control of the raw stock supply and the same man in control of the developing and printing, and the same man actively identified with the Famous Players and a member of their Board of Directors.

"Gentlemen, if you know the man Brulatour, you are not going to trust him with such great power. Remember, Brulatour is Treasurer of the N. A. M. P. I., a business partner of Wm. A. Brady, who is interested with him in the laboratory business, besides being a director of Famous Players."

The result of this brief was that the convention passed a resolution stating that "evidence has been furnished that unless the independent laboratory is assured of support from the independent exhibitor, our mutual enemies will be in control of both the exhibition and the laboratory branches of our industry." The resolution was concluded with a pledge to support the independent laboratory in every way possible.

At the request of Joseph Friedman, president of Federated Film Exchanges, the laboratories placed their plea before that body in the form of a letter. In this letter Mr. Brulatour is accused of compelling the independent laboratory to pay him cash in advance for raw stock, and then going to the distributor, often customers of the independent laboratory, and quoting them a lower price, as well as offering extended credit.

"The independent laboratories are organized and are becoming stronger every day," concludes the letter, "you cannot continue to maintain your independence and allow our appeal to go unheeded. This is not, as Brulatour says, 'Silly drivil.' We are fighting for our very existence, and will continue to fight until every independent distributor and exchange recognizes we are fighting for a principle, and regardless of cost, we are going through."

Independence

For a Trade Paper

IT is only fair to MOTION PICTURE NEWS to state that we have never, in our eight years' history, asked for a single resolution of official exhibitor recognition.

Nor for a single resolution of producer or distributor recognition.

We haven't needed this kind of support.

On the other hand we have no criticism of either the asking or receiving of such official recognition.

It is purely a business matter.

That is one way of doing business.

Our's is another.

We sell subscriptions in return for business service, impartiality of reviews and editorial opinions and all that goes to make a comprehensive service paper.*

We sell advertising in return for a comprehensive and preferred circulation.

And these facts are simply matters of unanswerable record.

This is our idea of trade paper independence: and a trade paper must be as independent as any other business factor—as exhibitor, producer, distributor.

We preach independence—and practise it.

Fox Film Announces Release of Specials

WILLIAM FOX announces the release direct to the exhiibtors of the United States and Canada of a number of special attractions, the first of which is, "Over the Hill."

"A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" is also named in the first group of super-specials to be released by Fox during the new theatrical season of 1921-1922. This list will comprise twelve pictures in all. These attractions will be available to those exhibitors who can give them extended runs at admission prices in keeping with their value, declares the statement from the Fox headquarters.

Coupled with the announcement comes the news that Ralph Proctor, formerly assistant general manager of United Artists and prior to that division manager for Pathe, has been placed in charge of the newly created special feature department of Fox Film Corp., which department will deal directly with exhibitors on the booking of the super-special attractions to be released by Fox during the coming season.

These super-attractions, which will be released by the new Fox special feature department, will be sold individually to the exhiibtors, each picture being marketed on its own merits. The entire group, however, has been so designed as to furnish a complete year's program for the first-run theatre of any important city.

New York engagements at a Broadway theatre will be enjoyed by each of these special attractions prior to its release to the exhibitors, it is announced.

"Over the Hill" has remained one solid year in New York, having opened at the first of last season at the Astor theatre, and having moved from one theatre to another until it settled down for its spring and summer engagement at the Park theatre, Broadway and 59th Street. "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" has experienced not only a successful run in New York, where it opened last March, but has been well received in London, where it is being exhibited at the Alhambra theatre, and in Los Angeles where it was given a twelve weeks' run at Miller's theatre. "Shame" is now being advertised in New York City for early opening at a Broadway theatre, the exact date and place to be announced later.

The first six pictures to be released under the new Fox plan have been determined and are as follows: "Over the Hill," "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," "Shame," "Perjury," "Footfalls," and Zane Gray's "The Last Trail."

"Perjury" is a strongly dramatic story of American life in which William Farnum plays the leading role. The picture was directed by Harry Millarde. The cast surrounding William Farnum includes Sally Crute, Wallace Erskine, Alice Mann and John Webb Dillon.

Ralph Proctor

The motive of "Footfalls" depends entirely upon conveying via the screen a sense of hearing on the part of the chief character, who is a blind man. This role is played by Tyrone Power. Estelle Taylor has the leading feminine role in "Footfalls."

Director Emmett J. Flynn had charge of the direction of Zane Grey's story, "The Last Trail." Maurice (Lefty) Flynn plays the male lead with Eva Novak opposite him. Wallace Beery, Rosemary Theby, Charles French and Francis McDonald also appear in important character roles.

In submitting proposals for the exhibition of these pictures exhibitors are asked to address their inquiries direct to the special feature department of Fox Film Corp. This department has been created for the particular purpose of contracting with theatres for the exhibition of these productions, and the Fox exchanges throughout the United States will not conclude such contracts. Mr. Proctor states that applications for the special productions will be considered in the order of their receipt, and he asks that important exhibitors who are desirous of obtaining these pictures communicate directly with him by wire or by long distance telephone.

"Sheriff of Eternal Hope" Released by Arrow Film

Due to an error, "The Sheriff of Eternal Hope" which was reviewed last week in the Motion Picture News, was listed as being released by the Federated Film Exchanges of America. The feature is released by Arrow Film Corp., on the independent market.

Synchronized Music Score Corp. Elects Officers

The Synchronized Scenario Music Score Corporation of Chicago has elected the following officers:

President, Arthur J. Abrams; vice-president and general-manager, M. J. Mintz; sales-manager, George F. Meyers; director of publicity and advertising, Charles Donald Fox; general field supervisor, Paul H. Bush; and division supervisors, H. S. Buck, Lesley B. Mace, W. A. Haynes and Hy Smith.

Twenty-two branch-offices have now been established in various parts of the country for the distribution of the music scores. The New York branch is the Music Score Service Corporation located at 1600 Broadway.

Washington Exchangeman Dies

LIEUTENANT JAMES P. ANDERSON, manager of the Associated First National Exchange at Washington, D. C., and one of the best known and most popular exchange men in the United States died suddenly of heart failure at his home in the nation's capital early on the morning of July 5th. The funeral was held in Washington, July 7th, and Lieut. Anderson was buried beside his mother, herself a familiar figure in the capital for thirty-five years until her death four years ago.

For ten years Lieut. Anderson had been identified with the motion picture industry. He had been with First National from the moment of its organization, serving it in various capacities and in all with equal success and brilliancy. Among his most successful performances was his personal handling of the tour of the Armenian refugee, Aurora Mardiganian, in connection with the presentation of "Auction of Souls" in the principal cities of the United States.

"Jim" Anderson, as he was universally known, was born forty-six years ago in a little town in Indiana. His father had been a captain in the United States Army, and, upholding the family tradition, Jim went to the Military Academy at West Point. After leaving West Point, however, he chose to follow a civil rather than a military career. He entered the newspaper field, but abandoned it for the more fascinating work of the amusement business.

New Independent Ass'n Perfects Its Organization

To Begin Activities at Once with Joe Brandt as President

THE Independent Producers and Distributors' Association, whose membership is made up of a substantial percentage of the independent producers and distributors of motion pictures, completed its organization and commenced active operations at a meeting held Thursday, June 30th, at the Hotel Astor in New York.

The officers of the corporation for the first year elected at that time are, President, Joe Brandt, of the C. B. C. Film Corporation; First Vice-President, Mr. Joseph Schnitzer of the Equity Pictures Corporation; Second Vice-President, Mr. David Horsely, of the David Horsely Enterprises and Treasurer; Mr. Lee A. Ochs, of Screenplays Productions.

The By-Laws as adopted, provides for a total of twelve directors, six of whom shall be in the class of producers and six in the class of distributors. Eight directors were elected at this first meeting and the vacancy of four will be filled from the representative of new members, who might join within the next thirty days. The present directors are, in addition to the officers of the association, William Alexander of the Alexander Film Corporation; J. Joseph Sameth of the Forward Film Distributing Corporation; S. J. Stebbins of the Rialto Pictures Corporation, and Jesse J. Goldburg of Imperial Productions.

The practical control of the association will be in the hands of the Board of Directors of which the President is chairman. The rules of operation and those governing the membership will be prescribed by the Board at a meeting called for July 6th at the office of the first Vice-President.

The first plan as laid down by the membership embraces practical constructive work, and includes the immediate preparation of legislation for introduction before Congress making it a Federal offense for any person, firm or corporation to transport from one state to another positive or negative motion picture films, that title to which is not in the person so shipping or transporting, and making it a Federal Penal offense to advertise in any publication distributed through the United States mails matter concerning any motion picture, the title to which is not in the person so advertising, or to advertise in any such publication statements that are untrue or any matter dealing with obscene or immoral motion pictures.

A standard form of contract is now being prepared by the Committee on Standards, which form of contract will be used by every member of the association in leasing or selling productions. The same committee is now at work at an equitable adjustment of territorial percentages, as well as a division of States Right territories based upon geographical location, railroad transportation and accessability to main distributing centers.

In line with its policy to stabilize the independent production and distribution of motion pictures, the Committee on Grievances will immediately upon its formation take up the complaints of certain of the members against three State Right Exchanges, and it is predicted and hoped that the activities of this new association will go a long ways toward correcting one of the prevalent evils of State Right distribution, namely, the failure on the part of some exchanges to lift their shipments or in other respects to comply with their contracts.

It is the intention of the leaders of this association to bring into its fold every reputable producer and distributors of independent productions in the United States. Plans are now being made to make the month of September, 1921, which has been set aside by the National Theatre Owners Association as Independence month, as near a one hundred per cent success as is possible. A propaganda campaign through the medium of trade journals and newspapers, it is expected will be inaugurated, so as to not alone popularize independent productions, but as well to establish the permanency of that form of product and convince the exhibitors and prove to them and the public that the foundation of the entire industry and its permanency rests upon the independent producer and distributor.

Offices of the association have been engaged in the Gotham National Bank building, at Columbus Circle and Fifty-ninth Street, New York, and an office secretary will be appointed by the Board of Directors at its meeting, July 6th.

At the meeting of the association held June 30, a vote of appreciation and thanks was spread upon the minutes extended to Jesse J. Goldburg for his unselfish and untiring labors in inaugurating this national movement. Mr. Goldburg was tendered the office of president and first vice-president, but declined with the statement that in conceiving and organizing this movement he sought no personal honors by way of position or otherwise, and that he felt he could work more effectively as a member on the floor and on the Board of Directors.

The enthusiasm and whole-hearted co-operation displayed by the members augers well for a permanent institution which must have a deep impress and effect upon the future activities of the entire industry.

Mr. Brandt, president of the association stated: "This will be no milk and water organization. We mean to stamp our activities upon the industry nationally as a permanent proposition. The I. P. D. A. for it will for brevity be called such, recognizes that in unity there is life for the independent producer and distributor, without it there is extinction. It will not be a one man organization nor will it serve any particular group or faction. We intend to keep a sharp eye on every branch of the industry. Necessarily we can't accomplish everything over night. We will move fast but decisively yet with caution."

Mr. Brandt, in commenting upon the present membership of the organization stated that he realized that there are a few of the more prominent independent producers not represented, that he felt certain that after the merits of the Association and the good work it intended to do was brought to their attention, that every independent producer and distributor would be listed in the membership.

Paramount-Skouras Consolidation Is Rumored

A LATE wire from St. Louis, Mo., reports that a rumor is being circulated to the effect that the fourteen local Famous Players-Lasky theatres have been consolidated with the eight Skouras houses. The rumor is described as being "exceedingly persistent." Such a consolidation would mean that the control of all the first-run houses would be placed under one organization. The Skouras Brothers left St. Louis for New York on Tuesday, July 5th, according to the telegram.

Seek Permit to Employ Girl Ushers in Penn.

A petition from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania, affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was received on July 2 by Commissioner C. B. Connelley, Department of Labor and Industry, asking for permission to employ girls and women between the ages of 16 and 21 after 9 o'clock at night as ushers and musicians in motion picture theatres.

"The theatrical people feel they are being discriminated against from the fact that women and girls employed by telephone companies are exempt from complying with the Woman's Law as regards night work," said a statement by Commissioner Connelley. "The petition will be referred to the State Industrial Board for action at its July 12th meeting at Harrisburg."

Charles Urban Celebrates 25 Years in Filmdom

Pioneer Developer of the Educational That Entertains a Quarter of Century in Industry

TWENTY-FIVE years a steady builder in the motion picture industry is the record Charles Urban achieves in this month of July, 1921.

Not so long, perhaps, in any ordinary business, but in the case of the motion picture it is an all-inclusive history. Mr. Urban travelled post-haste to New York directly he heard there were such things as moving pictures actually in existence and then and there he became a figure in the industry. He has never left it.

Of all the many men who have been variously concerned with the development of the motion picture, Mr. Urban stands practically alone in having been continuously associated with that development from what was practically the beginning.

Few have remained with it as he has. The changes in the personnel of those who have had a part in building up this giant industry have been almost as rapid, as kaleidoscopic, as their achievements have been. Few have come through from the beginning as has Mr. Urban.

It is a point worth noting that his interest and attention has always been centered on the film of instruction. The dramatic films never interested him; the pure entertainment angle never attracted him.

It is on this account, in all likelihood, that he was able to remain in the field when so many of his colleagues gradually retired. He never was concerned purely with making money. In the gradual building up over these twenty-five years he has managed to make a great deal of it, but it never was his primary object. He was always looking ahead at least 20 years. He is in his fifties now and still has the same habit. It is probably that tendency of his which brought him the reputation of being a "visionary," but whenever he is reproached on account of it, he reminds one that the people who named him so have long since dropped out of the race. He does look far ahead, but he keeps both feet on the ground, just the same.

Most of Mr. Urban's working life up to 1921 was spent in England, though he commuted pretty regularly between London and New York. He made 79 round trips. He had gone there in 1896 on a three months' trial trip to handle the agency for Edison pictures. That three months' trial developed into a stay of 21 years during which time he rose to the top of the heap and was by all odds the biggest moving picture man in Europe.

Being a pioneer in London forced many developments. There were only two kinds of pictures in those days; French pictures made by Lumiere and American pictures made by Edison. The English wanted to see English pictures. So Mr. Urban developed the Urban camera, the forerunner of all the cameras used today. Lumiere and Edison would not sell their cameras.

In the same way he developed the Urban Bioscope, a projector that was largely used during the first eight years in Europe and the basis of all the projectors used today.

It was in 1898—two years after his arrival—that he took the first instructive picture ever made. The subject was an English training ship off Portsmouth. Since then he has made thousands of educational subjects, never taking one that did not have permanent value. He has accumulated a library of film that is not even approached by any other in the world. It is the basis of "The Living Book of Knowledge," which is the film encyclopedia of the world, now in process of editing. Every subject capable of being illustrated by photography is in that library.

Mr. Urban sums up the results that he considers of value of his long residence in London in two broad strokes. They are:

1. The accumulation of his great library of film which he is now editing into its final form.

2. The development of Kinemacolor.

That film library was gathered because of those qualities by which he became known as a "visionary." It would not be in existence today if he had been a diffrent kind of man. It took him more than a score of years—and it is still growing—and it took the combined efforts of scores of photographers in every country of the world. It value, both in money and use, is incalculable.

The story of Kinemacolor is a romance all by itself. There is no space available here to even begin to tell it. Mr. Urban says it would take volumes and some day, if he ever gets the time, he wants to tell it. It is a story of an epic fight; first the fight of the experimenters, then the fight against the vultures, for when after many years it became a great commercial success, the attacks on his patents began. He had then many expensive law suits on his hands, but withal, Kinemacolor netted him more than $1,400,000. It was shown all over the world and a sample of its success was a consecutive twenty-seven months' run at the Scala theatre in London at prices of $2.50.

Mr. Urban's pride in Kinemacolor is intense, though he realizes it had grave faults. The main fault was what was called "fringing," a shooting of color flashes all over the screen. So when it was still at the height of its commercial success just before the war, Mr. Urban decided to correct those faults of process and rid himself of all the suits at law. He did it by developing Kinekrom.

Neilan Denies Rumors of Contract Renewal

An announcement from Los Angeles to the effect that Marshall Neilan has signed a new contract for eight productions with the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is untrue, states Mr. Neilan's representative. Mr. Neilan has four more productions to deliver to First National under his present contract and no additional contract is being considered at this time.

Memorial Tribute for George Loane Tucker

THE memorial service held on Sunday of last week at the Brunton Studio for the late George Loane Tucker proved to be a memorable tribute to the name and achievements of the departed master-director. The services were conducted in accordance with the wishes of the late producer, in the interior of the castle set built for Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The Grauman's theatre orchestra rendered appropriate numbers, and James Young and Frederick Wards eulogized the life and character of the director in simple and brief memorial addresses. A number of the sequences from "The Miracle Man" were shown, and several passages from the works of Mary Baker Eddy were read. A large number of film celebrities were present for the ceremonies, including a number of the cast members of "The Miracle Man" company. Many beautiful offerings of cut flowers were received and sent to the local hospitals.

George Loane Tucker, who succumbed at his Hollywood home following a protracted period of illness, is survived by his wife, Elizabeth, his son, George Loane Tucker, and his mother, Mrs. Ethel Tucker, of Chicago.

George Loane Tucker was born in Chicago, Ill. When but a young man, he selected the stage as a career, and was first recognized as an artist in connection with the Cohan and Harris productions. He will be remembered for his clever characterization of the country grocery habituate, his quiet and subtle humor always apparent.

Eventually, he turned his attention to the direction of motion pictures, and was awarded only meager recognition until "The Miracle Man" brought him into national prominence, and at the same time laid a milestone in the history of the art. Frequently is his photoplay used as a criterion, but without the interpretative genius, an integral part of George Loane Tucker, few directors have come near the goal he reached when his production scattered a welcome message, broadcast.

The loss of George Loane Tucker, the man, the citizen, the director, will come as sad news to all within the sphere he claimed as his own.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

Paul Rorig, of the Orpheum theatre, Elgin, when in Chicago this week, denied reports that had been circulated to the effect that the Orpheum, Ralph Crocker's Star and the Thielan Circuit house, the Rialto, were to close for the Summer. Mr. Rorig states that all three theatres will continue to do business as usual.

Chicago Sales Manager Milton Kusel, of Famous Players-Lasky, is back at his desk after a vacation spent in New York with his family, who reside in that city.

L. H. Hollis has purchased the Princess theatre at Winslow, Ill., from Emil Levin, and will continue to operate it as a high-class motion picture house. The Princess is one of the finest and best equipped small houses in the state and has been putting on first-class programs.

Sales Manager Kent, of Paramount, spent Wednesday and Thursday in Chicago after attending the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Convention in Minneapolis. From Chicago he left for the West Coast. Mr. Kent brought District Manager Gilday, who was forced to take to his bed with a broken arch while attending the Minneapolis convention, to Chicago. Mr. Gilday was able to be at the office this week, although still suffering with his foot and under the care of physicians.

P. L. Quinlan, formerly connected with Pathe, has joined Manager Bob Lucas' staff of salesmen, and will cover the Illinois territory for Robertson-Cole.

The Holmes Theatre Company, of Danville, which operates the Terrace and Palace theatres of that city, has taken over the Fisher from Manager Heller, of Anderson, Ind., giving the Holmes Theatre Company control of the town.

The Dreamland moving picture theatre has been sold to H. I. Roberts and John L. Beidler, owners of the Beidler theatre, by Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb and C. Zah, who have operated the Dreamland for several years.

Two of the happiest men who left Chicago on the Century Thursday to attend the Dempsey-Carpentier fight were H. R. Phillips and E. B. Ishmael, of Robertson-Cole's Chicago sales staff and winners of that company's "Wonder Man" selling contest. These two live-wire salesmen had won out in a contest in which they were pitted against every Robertson-Cole salesmen in the United States and the reward was a trip to the big fistic contest with all expenses paid. Chicago Manager Bob Lucas was as pleased and proud over their success as were Messrs. Phillips and Ishmael and the entire Chicago film colony was elated over the fact that the prizes were earned by two Windy City men.

Charles Lindau, whose resignation as assistant manager of Vitagraph's Chicago Exchange was announced sometime ago, is now associated with Reelcraft in a similar capacity.

Si Griever, of Griever Productions, is one of the optimists on Fall business and is preparing to reap the harvest by purchasing a number of feature pictures for release in this territory. In addition to the list published recently he has secured a number of other pictures, in regard to which, an announcement will appear in a few days.

Manager Carl Harthill, of Reelcraft, reports that three new series of comedies being released by his company, the Mirth series of two reelers, the Sunlight two reelers and the Aladdin two reelers are going over well in this territory.

Ex-service men, who have been employed by the Herald-Examiner and Chicago Evening American to work as subscription solicitors and thereby tide themselves over the period of unemployment, reaped a harvest at Universal Exchange this week when they called there at the invitation of District Manager Stern and Manager Lesserman. They are also going to canvass other exchanges in the film district, and in addition Maurice Hellman has volunteered the use of his car to take the ex-service men around to various theatres where he has promised to introduce them.

Construction is being pushed on the beautiful nine hundred seat house being erected at Kewanee by William Peatle. The theatre, when opened, will be managed by H. E. Grampp, of Rockford, and will be one of the handsomest structures devoted to the movies in that part of the state.

Condon & Reynolds of De Kalb, have completed arrangements whereby they will show motion pictures every Wednesday and Saturday in the Opera House at Hinckley.

Arthur Lowy, of the Illinois and Indiana Film Exchange, has purchased "Reckless Wives," from Pinnacle Production, Inc., and will release this feature in the Illinois and Indiana territory.

Vice-president Sid Goldman, of F. B. Warren Company, will put salesmen to work July 11th in anticipation of the release date for Warren releases which is September 4th. J. L. Campbell will cover the city territory and M. Whitmore has been assigned to outside territory.

M. Feldstein, of Wholesome Film Corporation, will leave in a few days for Montreal and other eastern Canadian states on company business.

Gollos & Gollos have purchased extensive territory on "The Wandering Jew," the All Art Pictures Corporation super feature, including Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Missouri and Kansas. The first Chicago showing of this feature will be at Barbee's theatre, opening September 3rd for an indefinite run. Gollos states that arrangements already have been made for an elaborate prologue and use of opera singers during the presentation at Barbee's. Another Gollos & Gollos picture being shown in Chicago this week is "Your Daughter and Mine" which is going over well at the new Adams theatre.

I. Maynard Schwartz, Chicago manager of Educational, is busy taking care of the details in anticipation of the Educational convention to be held in Chicago on July 18th, 19th and 20th, one of the features of which will be a dinner tendered by President Hammons to the branch managers, producers of pictures released by Educational, and a number of stars which appear in these pictures. Mr. Schwartz reports business holding up well despite the oppressive heat and looks for a marked revival of theatre attendance during August. Messrs. Hammons and Ginsberg stopped off in Chicago Sunday for a conference with Manager Schwartz and will return for the convention.

Manager Ben Beadell, of Associated Producers, reports extensive bookings on "Mother O' Mine," the widely advertised Ince feature. It will open for a week's run at the Roosevelt on July 10th and also is going into Balaban & Katz and Lubliner and Trinz houses.

Charles Miller, well known in Chicago motion pictures circles as a successful manager, has purchased the Monarch theatre on West Division street, from Louis Bloom and it is reported will personally take charge of the house.

Herman Stern, district manager of Universal, was the host at a dinner given on the La Salle Roof Saturday, at which Chicago Manager Lesserman and department heads, with their wives were guests. The occasion marked the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Stern, and a pleasing feature was the presentation of a magnificent bouquet of twenty-five American beauty roses by the dinner guests to their chief and his wife.

John Silha, president of the Chicago branch of the Illinois Exhibitors Alliance is taking a week's vacation in Michigan. Before returning to Chicago he will visit Detroit and other cities.

Chicago Office of Universal Has New Aid

A new service stunt has been put into effect in Universal's Chicago Exchange, which is declared to be of especial service for the small town exhibitor. It is the preparation of expertly written advertising appeals for small town mailing lists. These appeals are prepared individually for each theatre requesting them and are mineographed and forwarded to the theatre from Universal's Chicago office, ready for mailing, it is announced. The bulletins are made up exactly according to the specifications of the theatre manager and there is nothing on them to indicate that they were not prepared in his own office, declares a statement from Universal's home office.

Paramount Will Add to Exploitation Staff

ON the eve of the second anniversary of the Paramount Exploitation Department, Claud Saunders, director, announces that the present force of twenty-five exploiteers will be increased to sixty. The Division of Exploitation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. has so justified itself in its two years of existence that S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution, authorized the expansion which will take place next fall.

The department was launched July 10, 1919, when nine men under the direction of Mr. Saunders went into the field to help the smaller exhibitors put over "The Miracle Man." An increase in the staff followed immediately for the exploitation of "Male and Female." The exploiteers now number twenty-five, averaging one man to each exchange.

Music and The Picture

The Fool-Proof Picture

By Charles D. Isaacson

FOR the idea of this article I am indebted principally to my friend, Mr. Lee Roberts, a well known song writer and thinker. Mr. Roberts, I believe has written many popular songs, including "Smiles" and is as well, one of the principal executives of the Q. R. S. Music Roll Company. He says of himself that he is only a business man dabbling with music, but this is not so. For I know that recently Schirmers accepted a set of his Piano Etudes . . . . Besides, who said that "Smiles" is not music?

Said Roberts to me the other day over the luncheon table:

"What makes a thing the biggest money maker? What's most essential to secure the largest success?"

I suggested the universality of a thing, its appeal to all.

Roberts shook his head negatively.

"No sir. A thing must be fool-proof. It must be made so that it can't go wrong . . . Take the phonograph. Any dub can turn the crank and set the needle. You can't go wrong. Compare the player-piano. You had to pump, and make expression marks. The result? The dubs and lazy ones gave up. Not fool-proof! Suppose you had to pump the phonograph to make Caruso sing! That you had to try to make expression marks. It would be no go with the phonograph. Take the kodak. Stop, look, press—picture taken. You can't go wrong. Take the automobile. Most drivers don't know the difference between a differential and a spark plug. But they know you simply pull this, press that, put your foot and—off to the White Mountains.

"Best of all take the motion picture. The greatest actors, scenery, direction, all locked up securely and made ready for projection. No matter where you go or how stupid the opera star the picture is right. It is utterly fool-proof.

"But when you come to the music—where are you? There's the greatest fault of the producer of pictures. He is at the mercy of every jerk-water founder of the ivories. The great star, the great scenes can be pounded to destruction by a wrong set of chords on a piano . . . Not fool-proof. This to my mind concluded Lee Roberts is the most important need of the picture field . . . Fool-proof music."

The point of Mr. Robert's plea is well taken. And every sensible film man must agree that there is a matter for genuine consideration. How can a picture be sent forth in all its regalia, fool-proof? The wise picture company doesn't leave it to the theatre manager to sell the entertainment. It doesn't seem to be the policy any longer to sit on one's dignity and say: "I made the picture. It's good—now it's up to the theatre to take care of their end of it." There are fine examples of lithography for twenty-four sheets down to one sheet. There are window cards, newspaper advertisements and stories—a complete selling and advertising campaign.

But the chain is not complete unless the musical link is forged strongly. What if the crowd does pack the auditorium, drawn by your clever publicity and advertising, Mr. Promotion Manager? What if the picture itself is admirably made, Mr. Director and members of the cast?

Down in the musician's pit, the wrong sort of musical accompaniment is being used, to the detriment of the film. And who's being blamed? Principally the picture manufacturer. I know because I have been a film fan, and I have listened to film fans. The theatre manager and the musician are looked upon with disdain, but not equally with the producer. It is considered to be his fault. And in a way, it is absolutely his own funeral.

For irrespective of the fact that the audience does or does not analyze the matter, this does apply: The picture is being made to seem less than what it is, by the musical massacre. Do you for one moment imagine that the same degree of enjoyment can be had out of a picture with or without music, with or without good music or with or without bad music?

Suppose that while the producing director was making the big scene, somebody had run in front of the camera doing antics which were farcical and disastrous to the situation? Of course the intruder would be "murdered," the scene would be taken over. Yet the way that the interrupted scene looked on the screen would be no worse than the proper "take" of it with improper music. We see not only with the eye but the ear. We translate our hearing into pictures, and when the wrong pictures are created they conflict with the action of the drama.

I should like to compare the film producers who are willing to allow their master pictures to go out without the music problem being settled—to builders who erect a magnificent and luxurious palace and then refuse to pay the fire insurance premium.

The picture calls for a Music Insurance Policy, too—it must be insured against the boob and the incompetent musician. How can the musical situation be made fool-proof? There's the problem to enlist the mental cooperation of the best thinkers in the country.

Of course there are many so-called solutions, some of them possibly the way out.

Heretofore the manufacturers of film have been perfectly content to leave it pretty nearly all up to the theatre men.

Now it seems to the writer that the problem is one for the producers of America. The musical matter is one which should bring them together for a genuinely serious discussion. Together, they can settle upon a plan which will settle everything. Together they can make a central Musical Committee and spend some money in investigating and experimenting. Together they can define a policy and create a uniform procedure.

Then and only then will we arrive at a musical device or plan which will be utterly foolproof.

Review of Musical Offerings

The editor of the Musical Department offers this service to the musical artists and their managers. Throughout the summer, he will conduct a series of Reviews of Musical Numbers, and invites all who are interested to send at once their notification to him at the News offices.

In unprejudiced manner, the editor then purposes to write his impressions, good, bad and indifferent in these columns.

This service is in reality not for the musical artists but for the theatres and will bring them an accurate account in advance of the acts they are about to engage. Reputation of the artists will have no weight at all. The newest comer whose ability is unquestioned will be hearlded, and the poor material will be assigned to its appropriate place and labelled for the discerning theatrical manager.

Who's Who in the Musico-Picture Field?

The Motion Picture News Music Department plans to introduce the personages in the field—the conductors, organists, etc., to each other. North, South, East and West will get acquainted in these pages from week to week.

The stars of music, who are seeking engagements as soloists and novelty numbers will be pictured, described and given a standing with the managers through these pages.

This new development of the Music Department has been urged from many quarters, not least of which has been a demand from musical conductors who want to know "who is open for engagement?"

Ray Ready to Edit "Two Minutes to Go"

Charles Ray, who has been working night and day on "Two Minutes To Go," his ninth production for First National release, announces his latest comedy-drama will be ready for editing and cutting this week. It took Mr. Ray just five weeks to finish the picture.

It is understood that Charlotte Pierce will play the most important feminine role in Mr. Ray's next and tenth production for First National release, the title of which has not yet been decided upon.

"Two Minutes To Go," was directed by Mr. Ray himself from the scenario by Richard Andre. Prominent in the cast are Mary Anderson, Lionel Belmore, Tom Wilson, Lincoln Stedman, T. Van Dyke, Bert Woodruff, Adamae Vaughan, Phil Dunham, Francis Dumas and George W. Comm.

Synchronized Music Is Aided by Silverman

With the use of Synchronized Music Scores becoming an actual fact in many of New York's greatest motion picture theatres it is timely that attention is drawn to Jack Silverman, president of Music Score Service Corporation, the metropolitan distributors of Synchronized Music Scores.

To his energy in the early days of Synchronized music scores when a great deal of introductory work was necessary, a great deal of the headway that these scores have gained can be attributed. Mr. Silverman enjoys a wide acquaintance in the industry and this is true solely by right of the fact that, as actively interested in the Active Supply Co., he has, by the exhibitor service that company maintains, won the esteem of hundreds of New York and New Jersey motion picture men.

Always on the alert to render them any assistance calculated to make exhibiting motion pictures a pleasure, Mr. Silverman, exercising that breadth of vision, which has made his success possible early saw the possibilities of Synchronized Music.

John Stahl Starts His Second for Mayer

John M. Stahl this week began the filming of his second independent unit offering at the Louis B. Mayer studios. The story, as yet without a title, is from an original theme by the director. Bess Meredyth prepared the continuity. Like its predecessor, "Retribution," the second of the John M. Stahl productions will be presented by Mr. Mayer through Associated First National. Nanine Wright, Gaston Glass and Grace Darmond are among those already signed for the cast.

Forman and Meighan to Go West for Next

Upon the completion of the Paramount picture, "Cappy Ricks," in the Eastern studios, Tom Forman, director and Tom Meighan, star, will return to the West Coast studios in Hollywood.

Meighan's next vehicle will be "A Prince There Was," George M. Cohan's stage play. The adaptation is being done by Waldemar Young. Mr. Forman will direct the next Meighan production, which will be started about August 1st.

Turpin Well Received in "Love's Outcasts"

Mack Sennett's "Love's Outcasts," in which Ben Turpin is starred, has played a pre-release engagement of one week at the California Theatre, Los Angeles. According to word from Associated Producers, which is distributing this subject, the picture drew "unqualified praise from the patrons of the theatre and the newspaper critics." The reception accorded the comedian, says Associated Producers, is proof of Mack Sennett's foresight in starring Ben Turpin.

Associated Producers released "Love's Outcasts" on July 3rd.

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Sacred and Profane Love—
An excellent attraction in every respect. (Middle West.)

Just fair, and somewhat disappointing to admirers of Miss Ferguson. Business just fair. (East.)

Fairly well liked, but nothing to rave about. Receipts poor. (East.)

The Woman God Changed—
Pleased very much. Really a good picture. But unequalled hot weather ruined business. (Middle West.)

Only pleasing, receipts fair. (East.)

The Bronze Bell—
Just a fair picture, and we did only average business. (Middle West.)

Pleasing, receipts average. (East.)

The Wild Goose—
An excellent picture. Something unusual. Drew fair-sized crowds. (Middle West.)

Just an ordinary picture which did an average week's business. (Middle West.)

The Lost Romance—
A fair business. The slender plot allowed only an average production. (East.)

This advertised "The Man Tamer" for the Superba in Los Angeles.

Too Much Speed—
Good picture. Average business. (East.)

City of Silent Men—
Best Meighan picture so far. Business good. (West.)

Traveling Salesman—
Fatty's poorest—and not doing business, either. (West.)

White and Unmarried—
Fine picture. Every one liked it. Business was very good considering the extreme heat. (Middle West.)

Sham
Nice little picture, but not strong enough to compete with the heat. (Middle West.)

One a Minute—
Breezy, light summer entertainment. Somewhat better than Douglas MacLean has done before. Business not so good. Too hot. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Dream Street—
As usual with a Griffith picture, opinions differed, but the box-office receipts were great, and the picture is being widely discussed. So we are satisfied. (East.)

Business picking up. Doing well for second week. Will hold same for third week. (West.)

Satisfies 90 per cent. of the patrons. Not a big Griffith but a satisfying one. (West.)

After a number of showings this is still making good. (East.)

Great picture. Went over big. Packed houses at all performances despite the terrific heat. (Middle West.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

Black Roses—
Fair business, but business not commensurate with value of picture. Too hot for any picture to do itself justice. (Middle West.)

Salvage—
The star attracted a fair amount of business, but it was not Pauline Frederick at her best. (East.)

Good Women—
An average picture, and only a fair box-office attraction. (Middle West.)

So Long Letty—
As good as the stage success. Went over big. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Peck's Bad Boy—
A real business getter.. You can't make a mistake in this one. (Middle West.)

Good hot weather stuff. Coogan is a big attraction. (Middle West.)

Old Dad—
No matter how hard I try, I can't put Mildred Harris over here. They just won't have her. Double this with a screaming comedy, and business just barely stayed away from the losing side of the ledger. (East.)

Scrap Iron—
Knock-out of a picture. psychological time for good attendance on account of the "fight" talk thruout the country. Did good business. (West.)

Gypsy Blood—
Disappointing. Lacking in originality. Played to good receipts. (East.)

Mamma's Affair—
Went over big and pleased my patrons greatly. (West.)

The Sky Pilot—
A great picture; went over big. Give us more like this. (West.)

Jim the Penman—
An average picture with the usual business. (West.)

Girl in the Taxi—
Fairly good picture which brought average box office receipts. (West.)

REALART

Such a Little Queen—
My patrons were well pleased with the production. A good business for the week. (Middle West.)

Private Scandal—
Fair amount of business but those who saw "Sentimental Tommy" were disappointed in the star's role in this production. (East.)

House That Jazz Built—
Good business and an unusually good domestic drama. (East.)

Ducks and Drakes—
Not as good as some of Bebe Daniels other pictures, but fair. Drew well, as she is very popular here. (Middle West.)

Two Weeks with Pay—
Excellent picture. Did good business despite torrid weather. (Middle West.)

Don't Call Me Little Girl—
One of Minter's best. Women and children patronized it heavily. (West.)

GOLDWYN

Tale of Two Worlds—
The attendance did not justify the merit of this production. A fair week's business. (Middle West.)

Made in Heaven—
Business excellent. Nice clean little picture that goes good on a hot day. (East.)

EQUITY

Charge It—
They liked this. Good type and excellent role for Miss Young. Has pronounced public appeal. (East.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Rider of the King Log—
The picture did a fair business despite bad weather conditions. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

A Divorce of Convenience—
A very excellent box office attraction. Business very satisfactory in spite of extremely hot weather. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Fighting Lover—
Picture is all right, but we can't pull any business in this heat no matter what the attraction. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Man of the Forest—
Strong, interesting tale well acted throughout. I was very well satisfied with the attendance, which was average, altho mercury reached 90 degrees in shade. (Middle West.)

Preacher Sermonizes on "The Inside of the Cup"

The Stratford Congregational Church advertised "The Inside of the Cup" in their printed weekly programs. A. S. Nathan, Paramount exploiter for the New Haven exchange, arranged the tie-up with Rev. Robert C. Whitehead, the pastor.

F. Feldman, manager of the Stratford theatre, gave a private showing to the ministers. Reverend Whitehead was so impressed with the picture he advertised the film as "A moving picture worth seeing," and asked his audience to hear his remarks about the film and its subject matter at the Thursday night prayer meeting.

Nelson Grabs Billboard Site on Hotel Walls

Two circuses had all the billboards in Lowel so John P. McConville, Paramount exploiteer out of Boston and Walter Nelson, manager of the Merrimack Square Theatre, copped the Arlington Hotel walls, which are located in one of the best corners in town. The sides of the building accommodated a six and a 24-sheet. "Deception" was the picture.

Seattle Has a "Dream Street" Now

The changing of the names of streets for the time being to "Dream Street," as exploitation for the picture, "Dream Street," began in New York and has been followed with success in Philadelphia, Chicago and Denver.

Now the stunt has been put over at Seattle, where "Dream Street" has been playing at the Winter Garden.

Besides having the city council pass resolutions allowing the name of Third Avenue to be changed to Dream Street during the period of the run, all of the merchants on the block, on which the Winter Garden is located, cooperated with the management and decorated their stores and the exterior of their buildings, strung lanterns along the sidewalks and streamers across the street, giving the entire place an appearance of gayety. The newspapers of Seattle devoted much front-page space to the occasion.

Unusual Denver Occurance Makes Great Publicity for "Reputation"

One of the most unusual coincidence of the moving picture business occured last week in Denver. "Reputation," the current Priscilla Dean Jewel production, was booked at William Fox's Rivoli theatre and already teaser ads had appeared two weeks prior to its booking. The cashier of the Rivoli, an exceptionally pretty young woman, was attacked on a lonely street on her way home from the theatre one night, and in self defense shot her assailant and killed him. Her husband is a policeman and after her sister had been killed under very similar circumstances a short time before he secured a permit for her to carry a revolver. At the inquest next day she insisted on telling her story to the coroner, and in bringing in the verdict, the jury absolved her from any blame on the ground of self defense and in "protection of her reputation."

This phrase was picked up by the theatre in which she worked for their exploitation and they came out with an advertisement carrying the picture of the cashier and opposite, this caption: "This plucky Denver girl shot and killed a man to save her reputation." Below that a picture of Priscilla Dean and opposite her picture, this: "See what Priscilla Dean does to save her Reputation."

Cloakey Pulls New One for "The Nut"

Winnipeg, Manitoba, newspapers announced the escape of a "nut" on the day that "The Nut" opened at the Lyceum theatre, which is now under the management of Oral D. Cloakey, one of Canada's most renowned showmen. The reward offered for the capture of the "nut" was $1 and two complimentary tickets to the show. It was stated in the papers that the escaped person would visit certain places in the city at certain hours and could be identified by the fact that he would carry a bag of peanuts in his left hand. The captor was required to go through the ceremony of tapping the "nut" on the shoulder and saluting him with the question, "Are you a 'nut?'"

Incidentally, the "nut" was allowed to escape every day and the dollar prize was given each of the six days of the run.

Owensboro Theatre and Department Store Co-operate

"Nineteen and Phyllis" is a picture that just naturally makes it a great feature in which to interest the clothing merchant in a window tieup, since part of its story is how Ray managed to keep well dressed on $18.00 a week, and this is what started Manager A. E. Bamberger, of the Bleich theatre, Owensboro, Ky. to one of the most exclusive stores of the city with the request for a co-operative window display.

The result was the use of the most prominent window in the whole city all dolled up as is shown in the accompanying cut.

"Home Stretch" Ties Up with Latonia Races

Douglas MacLean's racing picture, "The Home Stretch," was tied up in an effective fashion with the Latonia races when the picture played at the Lyric theatre, Cincinnati. Norman Dixon, the Paramount exploiteer, printed each day two thousand cards with the entries for the day on one side and the advertisement of the picture on the reverse side. The thousands of automobiles crossing the river to the tracks are held up at the toll gate. Here a man distributed the cards. Dixon also used a street ballyhoo stunt with a race horse and boy dressed like a jockey.

Teaser Ads. Work Well for the Majestic

Teaser advertisements in the newspaper classified columns attracted considerable attention and comment during the run of "Good References," at the Majestic theatre in Streator, Ill. One specimen of the advertisements was:

"Wanted, a job as stenographer. You will need references. See 'Good References' at the Majestic tonight."

Another read: "What do you require to secure a position? See the answer at the Majestic Theatre tonight."

"These advertisements brought them in." Manager Bradford Brayton declared.

Meister Scores in Milwaukee with Novel Lobby Display

O. L. Meister, manager of the Whitehouse Theatre in Milwaukee, recently attracted great attention in that city by the theatre front and lobby display he arranged for "The Man Tamer."

Stretching across his entire theatre front and extending for eight feet from front to rear, he put up a double marquee, with brightly colored and scolloped edges, closely resembling a circus tent. Under this tent he sprinkled saw-dust on the floor of the lobby. To the two tent poles which held up the marquee, he attached cut-outs of Gladys Walton in circus costume. Other cut-outs of the star were planted near the box-office. Toy balloons fluttered from the edge of the tent.

Meister also provided a bally-hoo—a clown in regulation garb, and a pretty girl in the costume of a wild animal tamer. An additional touch to the front was given by a huge buffalo skin mounted high above the entrance.

Meister also introduced a novel lobby stunt for his recent showing of "Wolves of the North." In addition to pine tree and snow effects for his lobby, Meister constructed a shadow-graph screen over his entrance so that it looked like the frost-covered window of a northern-woods log cabin. Behind this window he had figures moving, and casting strong shadows. The unique effect caused great crowds to collect and did much to swell the box-office receipts on the showing.

Breslin Takes Page from Medicine Show History

Manager John J. Breslin, of the Jefferson theatre, Auburn, N. Y., which abandoned vaudeville in favor of summer pictures, is a man willing to try anything once which stands a possible chance of improving his summer business. Here is an example of how he worked:

He booked "Peck's Bad Boy" for four days, starting with Sunday, and decided upon a "string" test as a good way to pep up receipts. On the final night of his showing of "Peck's Bad Boy," six boys, ranging from 10 to 15 years of age, appeared on the stage in their ordinary clothes. A plain deal table was set in the center of the floor and a large 10-penny nail driven firmly into the middle of it. On this nail was tied the ends of six pieces of string about 12 feet long each. Each boy was to take the free end of a piece of string between his teeth and see how quickly he could reach the end of it by collecting it gradually into his mouth.

The sight of half a dozen boys chewing away on long pieces of string and gradually getting closer to the table in the center of the stage was a funny one. The audience did just what it was supposed to do—laugh.

The boy that came to the "end of his rope" soonest got $3; the best second received $2, and best third $1. In all, the stunt took about fifteen minutes to pull, and it was a laugh from start to finish. Result: it relaxed the audience, gave them something to smile about, provided the little bit of variety so essential to keep them keen and alert for the picture to follow.

Harwell's Ballyhoo Works at Ball Park

"Bill" Harwell, who manages the Empress Theatre, Wichita Falls, Texas, has been pulling some more original exploitation stunts, thereby getting his name, that of his showshop and the program he is presenting on the front pages of the newspapers, besides the word of mouth advertising he pulls down.

Mr. Harwell's latest stunt was for "Get Your Man." Wichita Falls' baseball club was playing a game at the local park so Mr. Harwell planted a rough looking customer in the grandstand.

Just before the game started, in walks a fellow in boots and spurs and army clothes, representing as nearly as possible a Canadian mounted police, and carrying a suit case. He walked up and down the aisle several times, casually looking over the crowd, stirring up quite a bit of curiosity. After he had spotted his man, he set down the suit case, and calmly started up into the grandstand. When he got to him, he suddenly slapped a pair of handcuffs on him, and then the fun started. Everybody rose to their feet to see what it was all about. They were still standing and curiously watching as he dragged the fellow down the aisle and back to the suit case, from which he took a card, bearing the inscription, "Buck Jones in Get Your Man, Empress, Tomorrow," and suspended it on the wire netting. When they realized it was a fake everybody laughed and a few applauded.

Wilkerson Stages Prologue for "Snow Blind"

I. P. Wilkerson production manager of the California theatre, Los Angeles, added a bit of contrasting color to the program prepared for the engagement of "Snow Blind" with a prologue in which the Sylvana Dancers introduced a pantomimic interpretation of the "William Tell Overture." The numbers included "At Dawn," "Storm Scene" and "Finale."

The stage setting provided is illustrated by the accompanying cut.

Some black and white exploitation for "Black is White" by the Bluebird theatre of Orangeburg, S. C.

Chicago "Reputation" Exploitation Goes Big

One of the most striking examples of merchant co-operation, in exploitation recently was successfully put over in Chicago when more than 3,000 merchants helped to exploit "Reputation." The exploitation was arranged by the management of Asher's Roosevelt theatre, where the picture was shown, and by W. L. Hill, Universal's exploitation expert in the Chicago territory.

The wholesale tie-up, perhaps the most complete ever made in any locality, was built around an attractive window card printed in two colors on special stock. There was nothing on this card to boost the picture except the word REPUTATION. The reading matter on the cards was as follows: "Our Reputation built on quality, excellence of Service, fairness of Prices," artistically displayed.

There were few merchants approached on the subject who did not gladly put one or more of these cards in their shop windows. The cards were distributed by five pretty girls, and, during the week before the showing, blossomed forth in more than 3,000 Chicago shop windows.

Other widespread methods were used to exploit "Reputation" for the Roosevelt theatre. Forty thousand automobile tags were distributed to car owners and drivers. This tag cautioned the driver to observe the city parking ordinance and "save his reputation." The following caption also was on the card:

"You are Summoned to Appear at Asher's Roosevelt Theatre.—P. D."

In addition to the usual billboard advertising, a drive was made through the Elevated Railway billboards. Every one of Chicago's "L" stations had at least one one-sheet concerning "Reputation", and at the important stations and intersecting points, special art three-sheets were used.

To put the finishing touches on the exploitation, a group of young women devoted several days to sending out hundreds of telephone calls.

"Witching Hour" Bargain Sales Win in Sioux City

A "Witching Hour" bargain sale was worked to great advantage for the picture of this title when it played at the Royal Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa. John J. Friedl, manager of the Royal, tied up an entire page of advertising. These stores advertised bargain sales on all their goods from 3 to 4 on Saturday. Friedl's representatives were on hand and passed out passes to the first twenty persons patronizing the bargain sales in all the stores.

The papers were sold on the idea through the unexpected whole page on a week-day. They gave the stunt good free publicity. The proprietors pronounced the sales a big success and Mr. Friedl's idea of the free passes lured the people even more than the low prices of the merchandise.

Essays Interest Many Atlantans

Miss and Mrs. Atlanta revealed a lot of secrets a week or two ago, when Frank Hammond, of the Forsyth and Rialto theatres, Atlanta, conducted an essay test on the intriguing subject of "What Every Woman Knows—About Men."

It was exploitation for the picture, "What Every Woman Knows."

Mr. Hammond tied up with the Atlanta Georgian, and gained two columns of free publicity for every evening for a week before the picture opened, and until Thursday night of the engagement, the winners being announced on Friday.

The publisher of the Georgian, James B. Nevin, and one of the most prominent of Atlanta's literary women, Mrs. Lollie Belle Wylie, consented to act as judges, and the essays flew thick and fast.

The essays were limited to two hundred words, and literally hundreds of essays were received. The first prize was twenty-five dollars, the second prize ten dollars, and the remaining prizes were tickets to see the picture.

Cash's Exploitation Ties-Up with the Bakers

Lowell Cash, who exploited "Outside the Law" through the Middle West for Universal, believes that the surest way to get into the homes with your advertising is to get in by the back door—with the milk man, the grocery man, or baker's boy.

Recently he startled an Ohio town with dodgers under the milk bottle. His latest stunt was the appearance of dodgers with every loaf of bread on the kitchen tables of Emporia, Kan. He had tied up with bakeries in that town.

Character Reading Stunts Aid Showing

W. A. Moore, manager of Poli's Theatre in Meriden, Conn., reports that he has great success with exploitation dealing with character-reading stunts. His latest achievement along this line was a novel competition inaugurated during the run of "Reputation."

In "Reputation," Priscilla Dean plays a variety of roles, so Moore obtained photographs showing Miss Dean in four different poses, depicting four entirely different character phases. These he caused to be published with a challenge to the reading public to characterize each pose with a single word.

The stunt was tied up with the local interest in the character reading experts employed by the Meriden factories. Hundreds of replies were received and much interest in the production aroused. To the patrons who showed the most ingenuity in characterizing the four poses of Priscilla, Moore presented complimentary tickets to his theatre.

Wesley Barry and Jack Coogan Exploited

During the past two weeks "Dinty" and "Peck's Bad Boy" were featured at the new Stanley theatre and at the same time several of Philadelphia's leading department stores participated in effective tie-ups. Strawbridge & Clothier had a window full of "Wes Barry" hats during the "Dinty" showing, with pictures of Barry and baseball bats, gloves, catchers' masks and other appurtenances of boyhood on the floor of the window.

Snellenburg's and Wanamaker's advertised Jackie Coogan dolls in their daily ads and in their windows by small window displays, and in every case the fact was mentioned that the picture was then being shown at a leading theatre.

Mystery Overture Is Hyman's Latest Stunt

The stereotyped overture number in which the symphony orchestra plays a recognized composition was avoided at the Brooklyn Mark Strand when Managing Director Edward L. Lyman presented "the mystery overture," in which a mechanical contrivance was utilized to close the opening offering. The electrical contrivance was a rapidly twirling ball apparently unsuspended in mid-air with a woman soloist in the middle of the varicolored sphere singing a Herbert popular hit.

While this electrical effect appeared costly it was an economical innovation according to Mr. Hyman. The ball was nothing more than two highly polished, circular tin bands mounted upon a frame made invisible by a black mask which black background created the illusion of the sphere being suspended.

The soloist concealed below the spherical device was hauled to the center of the ball on what amounted to an elevator or adjustable platform. The orchestra played Herbert's "The Only Girl." Then the curtains parted and in a dark stage disclosed the circular tin bands revolving rapidly with a color wheel also in operation creating the effect of a highly colored bubble. Slowly the soloist was raised to the center of the twirling bubble and suspended there he sang, "When You're Away," with the ribbons of light made by the color wheel encircling her.

This novelty was called "The Crystal Girl," and gave a distinct new note to the overture.

The mystery touch was that of the ball or sphere apparently twirling without axis or suspension and the sudden appearance of the soloist in the sphere. It almost seemed that she developed out of a wraith of color.

Here is the "circus" which the Strand theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, used in the lobby as exploitation for "The Little Clown."

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Paramount Announces July 10 Releases

THE productions listed on Paramount's release schedule for July 10 are Wallace Reid in "Too Much Speed" and the first Paul Powell production from the London studios of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., titled "The Mystery Road."

The Wallace Reid picture is a continuation of the experiences of the characters in "What's Your Hurry?" Mr. Reid's previous automobile picture for Paramount, and the three principal characters of that story, Dusty Rhoades, played by Mr. Reid; Virginia MacMurran, played by Agnes Ayres, and Pat MacMurran, played by Theodore Roberts, are again brought to life. Frank Urson directed.

"The Mystery Road" features David Powell, the eminent Scotch actor. The story was written by E. Phillips Oppenheim, with scenario by Margaret Turnbull, and Paul Powell directed. In addition to David Powell, the cast includes Mary Glynne, Ruby Miller, Nadja Ostrovska, Pardoe Woodman, Percy Standing, Lewis Gilbert and Irene Tripod.

Rialto Presents Semon's "School Days" Again

The Rialto Theatre, New York City, has just presented the Larry Semon comedy, "School Days," although this subject was screened throughout the country several months ago. This was done, says the Vitagraph headquarters, as a result of the popular demand for a revival of this comedy production.

Several exhibitors, in addition to the management of the Rialto, have signified their desire and intention to revive a number of the Semon comedies, just as they were originally produced, declares a statement from Vitagraph's home-office. Meantime Semon has just completed a new comedy, "The Bell Hop," which is now being edited.

Norma Talmadge to Star in "Smilin' Through"

Norma Talmadge upon the completion of her vacation this month, will return to the studio and start work on "Smilin' Through," her next production for First National release. Miss Talmadge will be seen in the part played by Jane Cowl in the stage version, last year. Herbert Brenon will be the director.

Two Reel Drama at Capitol

First of Educational-Selig-Rork Short Features Given Premiere

THE world's biggest theater, the Capitol in New York, was the scene of the revival of short photoplays when the Educational-Selig-Rork Photoplay was given its world premier with one of the series as the only dramatic subject in an interesting programme of short pictures.

The photoplay which was presented was "The Northern Trail," from James Oliver Curwood's story "The Wilderness Mail." It is a well acted picture of the Far North, with Lewis Stone, Ethel Grey Terry, Wallace Beery, Walt Whitman and Margaret Landis playing the leading parts in a play as full of thrills and heart throbs as most long features.

"The Northern Trail" shared with Sam L. Rothapfel, manager of the Capitol, the approval of the New York newspaper critics of a summer programme devoid of any "padding."

"A revival of the screen drama in its original two-reel form," says the American, "is seen in 'The Northern Trail,' based on James Oliver Curwood's story 'The Wilderness Mail.' It has the Curwood flavor and is a fine story of the snow-covered country."

The Times speaks of the "excellent refreshing snow scenes and the sincere acting of Lewis Stone." The Morning Telegraph says: "Something unusual in drama is the short picture from the story by James Oliver Curwood called 'The Northern Trail.'"

"The Policeman and the Baby" is another of the Selig-Rorak series that has been completed and will be released soon by Educational.

Richard Tully to Film Plays

Completing Personnel for Production of His Noted Stage Successes

RICHARD WALTON TULLY, well known dramatist and stage producer, who has entertained the motion picture industry as an independent producer, releasing through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is rapidly completing the personnel of his organization and making plans for the future. "Omar the Tentmaker," the first of the Tully Productions, is now being filmed at the Brunton Studios, in Hollywood, and will be followed by another of his famous stage successes, "The Masquerader."

Guy Bates Post, who starred in both plays on the stage, will likewise play the lead in the film versions. A carefully picked cast is being engaged by Mr. Tully in support of Mr. Post, including Lawson Butt, Virginia Fair and Otto Matiesen.

While the filming of the productions will be under the direction of James Young, Mr. Tully will personally supervise the work. Wilfred Buckland has been engaged as art director, and the chief cameraman will be Rene Guissart, who for the last three years has been photographing the Maurice Tourneur productions.

Praise "Foolish Matrons"

Los Angeles Critics Receive New Maurice Tourneur Film Favorably

IN a statement just issued from the New York headquarters of Associated producers it is stated that Maurice Tourneur's "The Foolish Matrons," distributed by Associated, was highly praised by the critics of the Los Angeles newspapers during the recent engagement of the production at the Symphony Theatre in that city. Excerpts from the leading Los Angeles newspapers, as quoted by the Associated's home-office, are submitted as follows:

Grace Kindsley in the Times: "Maurice Tourneur has set a new pace for the picture producers who would make great human dramas for the screen. 'The Foolish Matrons' indeed makes up for a long season of namby-pamby milk-and-water drama, with its puppet heroine and hero, its obvious stories, its tiresome twaddle. That real literature may actually be developed on the screen is revealed by the newest Tourneur picture."

Florence Lawrence in the Examiner: "For the moment Maurice Tourneur has turned from the pictorial and the frankly historic mood and gives us a chapter out of real life, 'The Foolish Matrons' is unquestionably one of the greatest pictures."

Frank Lloyd Company Busy on New Subject

DIRECTOR FRANK LLOYD, of the Goldwyn producing staff, took the members of "The Man from Lost River" company to Big Bear, Calif., recently, to shoot the final scenes of the Katherine Newlin Burt original scenario. House Peters and Fritzi Brunette have the leading roles.

Richard Dix, playing the male lead in "The Poverty of Riches," the Leroy Scott picture directed by Reginald Barker, is recovering nicely from the operation on his left eye, but will not be able to resume work for two weeks yet.

J. G. Hawks, Goldwyn's managing editor, is spending his vacation at Big Bear, Calif. He is also spending some of his time in writing the continuity for Henning Berger's drama, "Syndafloden," the screen rights to which were recently purchased by Goldwyn.

Tom Moore has finished the new Rupert Hughes picture written especially for him, "From the Ground Up," and will soon begin work on a new production.

Anita Stewart Finishes "Question of Honor"

The final scenes of Louis B. Mayer's latest Anita Stewart production, "A Question of Honor," were filmed this week under the direction of Edwin Carewe. This Ruth Cross story ran as a serial in the People's Home Journal about a year ago. The screen version was prepared by Josephine Quirk. It will be released as an Associated First National attraction.

Supporting the star in "A Question of Honor," Edward Hearn heads the list as leading man, and Arthur Stuart Hull has the role of the heavy. The others are Frank Beal, Walt Whitman, Bert Sprotte, Adele Farrington, Ed Brady, Mary Land and Doc Bytell.

Hope HamptonScores at Columbus Theatre

Hope Hampton scored at the Colonial in Columbus, Ohio, the last three days of the past week during her engagement in person and in her First National picture, "Love's Penalty." Miss Hampton was given the benefit of a thorough campaign of newspaper advertising. Miss Hampton appeared at four performances daily and met Governor Harry L. Davis at the State House on Thursday.

Asks Exhibitors to Decide Title

ONE of the most discussed and still open questions in the picture business is the value for pictures of original book titles. The greater the circulation of the book the more urgent is the question. H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges for the Universal, has such a question on his hands at the present time. In the endeavor to answer it for the present occasion and to throw light for all time on the subject, he has adopted the very sensible course of going straight to the exhibitor, because in the last analysis it is his problem even more than the problem of the manufacturer or the distributor.

The first Jewel picture that Universal will release next Fall is Tod Browning's production of Edna Ferber's best known novel, "Fanny Herself." The production has just been completed at Universal City with Mabel Julienne Scott in the title role. It will be cut immediately and will be ready for release early in September.

In a statement issued during the week from the headquarters of Universal City, General Manager Berman explains:

"Ever since I have been in the moving picture business I have been deeply concerned with the matter of titles. The greatest amount of arguments always centers about the advisability of changing the title of a book or a play whose popularity is evidenced by tremendous circulation or a long theatrical run. The producer is always at a disadvantage in the matter because he has two situations to consider. First, he must have a title which commends itself to the exhibitors and second, he must have a title which commends itself to the public. He naturally thinks that a title which has been proven by the experience of the book or play to have been exceedingly popular will serve the latter purpose. Unfortunately he frequently finds the first purpose and the second quite different.

"Now, the question is just this: Shall the Universal Company put its first Jewel of the coming year, a Tod Browning production with an Edna Ferber story, a superb cast, plus Universal's justly famous exploitation, out under the title which made it famous as a book, "Fanny Herself,"—or shall the Universal, which has supplied to exhibitors some of the most cleverly contrived selling titles in the world, put its brains to work on a new title for "Fanny Herself?"

"We, in the home office, have been debating this for some time. We are now preparing our exploitation campaign. The question is extremely important to us because it is so important to exhibitors. For that reason it occurred to me that the only sensible course to pursue was to frankly ask the exhibitors of the United States whether "Fanny Herself," in view of its wide popularity, is a title that they can sell to the public which patronizes their theatres, or whether we shall throw aside the circulation value of this title and devise an entirely new one along box-office, or punch lines.

"I know that it is an unusual thing for a company to make such an appeal to the exhibitors of the country, but I cannot conceive of anything which would be of more interest to them, and I also feel that I am going to get a tremendous number of replies to my question. I know that if I were an exhibitor I would be extremely frank in telling a man who asked me such a question just what I felt about it. I sincerely hope that a great many exhibitors will be kind enough to express themselves fully and frankly in this matter. As I say, it isn't only for "Fanny Herself" but it will set at rest once and for all the arguments which have come up every year and, in fact, every day of every year.

"It is quite possible, of course, that a great many exhibitors have not read "Fanny Herself." Exhibitors are pretty busy making both ends meet and every day they see a different story unfolded before them on their own screens. I am taking the precaution to let them know the story of "Fanny Herself" in the event that they have not read the book. This is the precaution: A very complete and quickly read synopsis of this story will be found in the Moving Picture Weekly dated July 16th on Page 37. If any exhibitor does not get this Weekly, or if he has for any reason misplaced the issue of July 16th, I will be only too glad to supply him with a copy. It is hardly necessary to add that whatever action is taken on the title of "Fanny Herself" will have to be taken in a very short time, so that our Fall campaign on this first Jewel can start as soon as possible. I would, therefore, appreciate it if exhibitors would write to me at my office, 1600 Broadway, as soon as they have made up their own minds on this important matter."

Synchronized Names Chiefs

Arthur J. Abrams President of Synchronized Scenario Music Co.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by the Synchronized Scenario Music Co., of Chicago, of the personnel of its executive staff. To Arthur J. Abrams, originator of these music scores, falls the post of president of the organization. Mr. Abrams, a composer of note and known to many exhibitors through his activities as sales manager for a prominent organ house, brings to his company a wealth of experience which fits him for the important post he holds.

M. J. Mintz is the vice-president and general manager. He has had a long and varied experience in the motion picture industry, and was one of the first to realize the importance of music in connection with pictures. George F. Meyers, sales manager, is returning to the picture field after a short absence, during which he served as production manager for a Chicago printing house. Mr. Meyers was formerly with Essenay in an executive capacity with the Bryant Washburn unit.

Charles Donald Fox, director of publicity and advertising, was one of the first advertising men in the industry. He has been affiliated with the industry continuously, and was at one time an exhibitor in New Jersey. Mr. Fox is the author of many stories and co-author of "Who's Who on the Screen."

Paul H. Bush has been appointed General Field Supervisor, with H. S. Buck, in charge of the Eastern district. Leslie B. Mace is covering the South, while Hy Smith looks after the West, and W. A. Haynes keeps a watchful eye on the Central district.

Twenty-two distributing centres have been located in twenty-two key cities and exhibitors are responding to the invitation of the company to visit these offices and learn more about Synchronized Music scores.

Before-and-After Fight Pictures in Kinograms

EDUCATIONAL'S KINOGRAMS, which just before the Dempsey-Carpentier battle at Jersey City, July 2, provided exclusive motion pictures of the last week's training of Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, followed this by offering immediately after the battle exclusive pictures taken at the scene of the great international boxing contest. The law forbids showing pictures of the actual fight itself. Everything else of interest was "covered" by Kinograms photographers, and the scenes were included in the regular semi-weekly news reel service.

Exclusive rights to take motion pictures inside the grounds were obtained for Kinograms, state that company, so that it was the only news reel able to obtain these scenes.

Tex Rickard was shown in conference with the staff of Kinograms men, and then pictures weer obtained of the contestants. Carpentier, "beaten but glorious in defeat," was shown just after the battle and as he left the arena. Pictures were made of Dempsey, still the champion.

Properties on "Ye Old Days" Used for Film

Several features of American life which were formerly common but which have long since passed from use were obtained with great difficulty for "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," Cosmopolitan Productions' adaptation of the famous play by George M. Cohan which will be released early next fall. One of these was the old photographic head-rest, familiar to our grandfathers whenever they went to have their pictures taken.

In "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford" a picture of the board of directors of the Universal Tack Company is taken in the directors' room, and it is necessary to apply the head-rest in order to keep Judge Lampton's head in order.

The 'bus that meets all the trains in the venerable town of Battlesburg, the seat of Wallingford's daring enterprises, is a type of vehicle that the coming generation of city folks will never see again. It is the old-fashioned four-seated buggy with spangled hood which Abe Gunther, the Battlesburg baggage master drives from the Palace Hotel to the one train a day.

Gladys Walton Finishes "High Heels"

Gladys Walton, Universal's popular young star, has just completed a new feature, "High Heels." It is from the widely read novel, "Christine of the Young Heart," by Louis B. Clancy, the scenario for which was prepared by Wallace Clifton. Lee Kohlmar directed the production.

In "High Heels" Miss Walton plays another of those girl roles which have endeared her to the picture fans of America. The supporting cast includes Frederick Vogeding, William Worthington, Freeman Wood, Kirk Lucas, Jean De Briac, Milton Markwell, Dwight Crittenden, Robert Dunbar, Ola Norman, Leigh Wyant, Huge Saxon, and the De Briac twins.

The picture will be released early in September.

Elaborate Press Book on Kipling-Pathe Special

A comprehensive campaign book will accompany the release of Pathe's "Without Benefit of Clergy" the first story written directly for the screen by Rudyard Kipling. As a part of the exploitation suggested for this production, Pathe is incorporating the beautiful musical presentation given it by Samuel Rothafel, at its world premiere in the Capital theatre. Details of the simple but effective prologue used by Mr. Rothafel in his presentation, will also be given in the campaign book.

F. B. Warner Announces Releases

Gives Producers Affiliated With Company; Has "Quo Vadis"

F. B. WARREN Corporation announces the first installment of its production and releasing plans for the new season, beginning in September. It will distribute in the United States, Canada and the entire world four Lois Weber productions, four Reginald Barker productions, four Victor Schertzinger productions, and a group of four powerful pictures from four nations of Europe to be known as the "International Big Four," with one picture from Scandinavia, one from France and one or two from Italy.

Announcement is also made that the Warren organization has obtained the revival or reissue rights of the famous George Kleine-Cines production "Quo Vadis" for which half a dozen distributors have been competing; a fifth sensational European production made by Sasch Films in Prague, Bohemia, entitled "Good and Evil," released under a contract with the Herz Film Corporation, of New York, which stars Lucy Dorrain and wich has been running for months in the principal European capitals. and the Will Bradley novelty production "Moongold," which is just finishing a five weeks' run at the Reisenfeld Paramount theatres in New York.

The first Warren announcement comprises eighteen feature length productions by big directors and concludes with the statement that other units to come through this distribution will be announced shortly. This new organization will release a production a week, beginning September 4, in addition to an attractive selection of short-length subjects.

Lois Weber's producing unit is well under way and her first big production for release through the Warren organization, "The Blot," is already completed and is now being edited for delivery to the laboratory. It is a story of unusual theme and power that represents Miss Weber's biggest effort since "Where Are My Children?" and "The Price of a Good Time" and it will have the full backing of public sentiment in every part of the country. Prints will be in all Warren branches by August 5th. Pre-release engagements will begin in several large cities in late August. Miss Weber will make only four productions a year and having started work in March gained five additional months, or seventeen in all, in which to produce and deliver her four big specials.

Reginald Barker is just starting production on the first of his unit of four big "Reginald Barker Productions." The splendid technical organization which Mr. Barker has asembled will remain intact and go with him to maintain and increase the high standards that always mark his work. Mr. Barker is the first American director to open the new season with the release of a long-run picture made for fall issue. This is his Goldwyn production, "The Old Nest," which opened on June 27 at the Astor theatre, New York, and created a sensational hit. All of Mr. Barker's new productions are to be released through the Warren organization. He has completed his contract with Goldwyn, having been their most successful director in the past two years.

Victor Schertzinger comes into his own with "Victor Schertzinger Productions" for release through Warren organization. He will also produce four pictures and already he is at work on the first of his unit, which at the moment has the title "Prosperity?" No announcement has been made of his cast. Advance reports from the coast are highly enthusiastic as to his story.

The Warren organization at the moment is guarding the secret as to what four pictures are included in what it announces as its "International Big Four" of productions —one picture from Scandinavia, one from France, one from Italy and still a further one the nationality of which has not been revealed. Current reports in New York identifies one of this series as the famous Nordisk Film Company production of Charles Dickens' famous story "Our Mutual Friend," about which many returning American film men have brought back favorable reports.

It is understood that the Warren forces will release certain one-reel scenic productions of unusual character, as well as a highly popular make of two-reel comedies. An unusual phase of this announcement is that the Warren organization has been selling its output to exhibitors for the past month without having made any printed announcement of what productions it controlled to any one other than exhibitors themselves.

Hoffman with Metro Film

Will Be Production Manager on Coast, After Years With Lasky

MILTON HOFFMAN, formerly in charge of the Famous Players-Lasky West Coast studios, and builder and organizer of that company's London producing plant, has been appointed production manager of the Hollywood studios of Metro Pictures Corporation, according to announcement this week from the Metro home offices.

The former Lasky chief will share responsibilities of the studio with Joseph Engel, who thus will be given an opportunity to devote all of his attention to the business affairs of the organization, which have increased in importance since the unit system of production there.

Mr. Hoffman, who carried American methods of picture making in England as the builder of the Famous Players-Lasky studio in London, has enjoyed a range of experience in film work that has extended from exploitation to the actual making of pictures. Beginning his business career as a newspaper reporter in Cleveland, Ohio, he soon answered the call of the camera —this time in the somewhat remote field of film selling.

After selling his stock of films under conditions far different from present-day picture distribution, Mr. Hoffman became treasurer for William Morris.

After some time with the World Special Film Corp., Mr. Hoffman went to Paragon Special Features and later to Lasky's. He was sent to Hollywood to take charge of the company's West Coast studios, where he remained for nearly five years. At the conclusion of that period he agreed to go to London to organize the Famous Players-Lasky producing unit there.

Scores Nation-Wide Success

"Woman God Changed" Praised by Critics in All Parts of the Country

"THE woman God Changed," Cosmopolitan Productions' great success, has been hailed throughout the country with the same enthusiasm that press and public showed at its pre-release showings in New York.

The daily newspapers in all the big cities have paid tribute to the story, the direction, the scenario, the acting and the settings and photography. The "Plain Dealer" of Cleveland, Ohio, writes:

"'The Woman God Changed,' in Loew's Stillman, is of the highest order. It is based on the supposition that regeneration is possible in the basest of characters, and it proves its point in a convincing manner.... Suffice it to say that for thrills, heart interest, suspense and well delivered punch 'The Woman God Changed' has not been surpassed for many weeks. Prominent in the cast is Seena Owen. His work is remarkably convincing. E. K. Lincoln has been acting before the camera for many years but never before has he done any characterization quite as powerful as his Thomas McCarthy. The rest of the cast does brilliant work."

"The Washington Post" said: "It reveals a theme of tense and gripping power and is notable for some of the most beautiful and gorgeous settings both of metropolitan luxury and the beauty of the tropics, that the screen has yielded during the current season."

The critic of the "Indianapolis Star" writes: "For a picture of entertainment, action and tense dramatic situations, excellently depicted, it is a pleasure to recommend 'The Woman God Changed' at the Ohio.... The story is interesting and holds the attention throughout. Moreover, it is extraordinarily well told and acted. . . . In consideration of the thrashy pictures which have been made from similar plots and could be made from this one, 'The Woman God Changed' is one of the miracles among recent happenings in the film world."

Strauss Picture Praised

New York Press Critics Enthuse Over "The Twice Born Woman"

THE consensus of opinion among the critics of the New York Press was very much in favor of Malcolm Strauss' master motion picture, "The Twice Born Woman" which the Sonora Films Corporation is to distribute in the state rights market. The following are some of the excerpts from the Metropolitan dailies.

Robert G. Welsh, Evening Telegram:—"Naturally, the big Hippodrome lends itself admirably to motion pictures.  But the picture itself is very beautiful and abounds in notably excellent scenes, big animated crowds and vivid character delineations."

Stephen Rathbun, Evening Sun:—"Good taste and discretion mark the course of the picture throughout.  Done with a keen eye to the picturesque.  Unusually fine and uniform, photography, considering that this picture was taken in the United States, Egypt, Palestine and Southern France and consumed many months in the making.  Striking effects are achieved!"

Charles Darnton, Evening World:—"'The Twice Born Woman is an attraction that will appeal to all.  The scenes incidental to the story are gorgeous.

"There is an appeal that disregards creed. Story and lesson are universal in human life and these characters and their emotions are duplicated today and will be tomorrow!"

John McMahon, Evening Journal:—"Relates with sincerity and fine instinct that greatest tale of woman's sin, repentance and atonement!"

Blackton to Film in Color

Prizma Perfects Process for This Purpose; Lady Diana Manners Leads

A CABLEGRAM from the Prizma Laboratories of New York received in London Wednesday, June 8th, by Mr. J. Stuart Blackton announced the completion of work on the process by which the first Blackton photoplay made in England is to be taken in color.

Mr. Blackton, at his office in Bush House, Melbourne Place and the Strand, announced that the color camera expert with his specially designed and perfected apparatus and a special type of film negative for this color photoplay would sail from New York on the Mauretania June 15th, and immediately after his arrival in London and the making of preliminary tests, the large cast for the first British-made Blackton film would be assembled and thereafter production start at once.

Lady Diana Manners (who retains her maiden name in her professional work) is to be featured in this photoplay, and the supporting cast will include many well known artists of the English stage and screen. There are around 130 parts in the play, and the crowd scenes will employ thousands, it is declared.

For some time Mr. Blackton has had an ambition to produce a superfilm play in natural colors.

Anniversary Period Opens

Exhibitors "Swamp" Universal Exchanges to Share in Celebration

THIS is the first week of the Laemmle-Universal Anniversary, and the response of the exhibitors to the special inducements offered for the celebration, has virtually swamped all of the Universal exchanges, declares a statement received during the week from the Universal Film home office.

The fact that the anniversary period extends over two months, because of the double celebration of Mr. Laemmle's fifteenth year in the business and the ninth birthday of the Universal, allowed plenty of leeway for the exhibitors to set aside a full week in which to run a selected list of Universal subjects, but in spite of this, a record number of bookings are reported to have been signed up for the first week of the period, which began Monday, July 4th.

Universal officials notified its exchange managers, less than two weeks ago, to offer all exhibitors all regular advertising material, such as posters, photos, heralds, throwaways, mats, cuts and lobby displays, free of charge, provided the exhibitor booked a solid week of Universal pictures any time between July 4th and September 4th, —giving the exhibitor his choice of any pictures produced by the company.

In addition to this regular material, a special line of posters, heralds, window cards, cuts, mats and publicity stories for these Gala Weeks has been gotten up and this material is also given absolutely free to the exhibitor.

The results of the offer have surprised the Universal managers themselves, because while they expected that it would appeal to the exhibitors, they looked for the responses to stretch out over the two months, instead of which there has been a rush to get in at the very start.

Goldwyn Negatives Ready

Most of Fifth Year's Productions Finished; Prints in Exchanges Soon

GOLDWYN announces that negatives of nineteen out of the twenty-five fifth year productions named for fall release have been completed. Prints of these nineteen pictures will soon be in all twenty-two Goldwyn branch exchange offices ready for inspection by exhibitors, it is declared.

Among the productions, the negatives of which have been completed, are the two Rupert Hughes pictures which are to receive a national advertising campaign at the time of their release to exhibitors in the fall, "The Old Nest," and "Dangerous Curve Ahead"; Charles Kenyon's "The Invisible Power," with Irene Rich, House Peters, Sydney Ainsworth and DeWitt C. Jennings; "Doubling for Romeo," Elmer L. Rice's starring vehicle for Will Rogers; "Beating the Game," Charles Kenyon's story written especially for Tom Moore; Gouverneur Morris' "Ace of Hearts," with Lon Chaney, Leatrice Joy and John Bowers; Betty Compson in her own production of "For Those We Love," with Lon Chaney; "All's Fair in Love," from Thompson Buchanan's stage comedy, "The Bridal Path," with Richard Dix and May Collins; Vivian Martin in the second Messmore Kendall production, "Pardon My French," from an Edward Childs Carpenter story; D'Annunzio's spectacular story of the birth of Venice, "The Ship," and the Ambrosio spectacle made from Victorien Sardou's romantic drama, "Theodora."

Samuel Goldwyn, president of the corporation, has just gone to the Goldwyn Culver City studios to confer with production executives about the photoplays now nearing completion and others scheduled for production.

New Alice Brady Picture

Realart Favorite is Again Cast as Foreigner in "Little Italy"

"LITTLE ITALY" is the second picture of an exotic nature that Realart has produced, in which Alice Brady is starred. Her previous release was "The Land of Hope," a story of a young Polish immigrant girl.

In view of the comments which Realart has received anent Miss Brady's departure from the society roles which she has always portrayed, it shows foresight to again furnish her with a character part such as she is called upon to play in "Little Italy." Advance reports from Realart are to the effect that Miss Brady duplicates her splendid performances as a type of foreign maid, the story revolving around a fiery young Italian girl.

Virtually all of the outdoor scenes were made in the actual locale from which the authors selected their story atmosphere. Frederic and Fanny Hatton, who wrote the story, and Peter Milne, the adapter, are familiar with the Italian colony near Stamford, Connecticut, and a number of its residents voluntarily became part of the cast when the Realart company went there for the exteriors.

The picture was directed by George Terwilliger, assisted by J. D. MacKenzie. The photography is by Gilbert Warrenton, who also made "The Land of Hope."

Supporting Miss Brady is Norman Kerry, Jack Ridgway, George Fawcett, Louis Alberni and Marguerite Forrest, as well as several hundred Italian supernumeraries to lend the proper atmosphere.

Four Features Finished for Universal Release

ACCORDING to a word from the Universal headquarters the closing scenes have been taken on a number of new productions destined for release through the Universal exchanges.

These newly completed subjects include: "Danger Ahead," in which Mary Philbin, one of the winners of the recent Chicago beauty competition, is the featured player under the direction of Rollin Sturgeon; Hoot Gibson's first stellar feature production, "Action," which is based on J. Allan Dunn's popular story of the old West, "The Mascotte of Three Star"; Frank Mayo's new production, "The Shark Master," which was written by Fred LeRoy Granville and based on his experiences as an explorer of the South Seas; and "High Heels," which features Gladys Walton in an adaptation of the novel, "Christine of the Young Heart," written by Louis B. Clancy.

Christie Features Viola Daniel & Jay Belasco

As an example of the variety of stars presented in Christie Comedies released by Educational, the latest picture, "In for Life," which is the third in the new year's series, presents Viola Daniel and Jay Belasco, with a supporting cast, including Eugenie Forde, Ward Caulfield and George French. In the first comedy of this new series, "Nothing Like It," the cast included Dorothy Devore, Earl Rodney, Eddie Barry and Helen Darling. The second picture, "Oh Buddy," features Neal Burns with Vera Steadman.

Strong Staff to Assist Arvid Gillstrom

Arvid Gillstrom, the new director of Educational-Adams Comedies, has associated with him one of the strongest executive staffs to be found in any picture comedy studio. Bob Eddy, who is well known for his work on Torchy Comedies, which also are released by Educational, has joined the force. Jess Davy is assistant director and Bert Glassmire is providing the scenarios.

Gillstron has just finished work on "A Good Scout," the first of a series of eight Adams Comedies to be released by Educational. It is the first film comedy ever based on the Boy Scouts.

Pathe News Gets Fight Scenes

SIXTY theatres in New York City and vicinity, including the Rialto, and Strand, and all the first run Keith houses, on Saturday night, July second, only a few hours after the memorable fight, showed the Pathe News special on the Dempsey-Carpentier "bout of the century." This is one of the greatest, if not the greatest accomplishment, of all times in news reel history.

Twenty hours after the count of ten had been recorded over Carpentier, the leading theatres of Chicago were also showing this special. One negative had been made by the Pathe News cameramen for Chicago. Fifteen minutes after the knockout, a fast automobile drove up to West Side Park, Jersey City, transferred the negative to a waiting aeroplane, and in another few minutes it was on its way to Cleveland. Arriving there at 8:45 that evening, the negative was transferred to a fast train for Chicago, where it arrived at exactly 4:45 Sunday morning.

Arrangements had been made in Chicago for the printing of the necessary number of prints for the territory. Titles already had been wired and were ready for insertion in the special by the time the negative had been developed.

The Pathe News was the only reel to show the fight pictures in Chicago Theatres Have Film 24 Hours After the Final Punch

Chicago Sunday afternoon.

Two specials, as a matter of fact, were issued by the Pathe News. The first, showing the crowds entering the arena, and other interesting preliminary sidelights, were in the principal first run motion picture houses on Broadway Saturday afternoon, so that audiences in these houses were having enacted, before the fight actually took place, scenes that were virtually just occurring on Boyle's Thirty Acres.

By two o'clock Sunday morning, the Pathe News laboratories had completed the big job of printing the full quota of "specials" for every branch and they were being rushed to every corner of the United States.

The Pathe News feat is made remarkable, even more so than by the rapidity of distribution, through the fact that it showed the actual scenes inside the arena during the fight, as well as before. Only the Federal law prohibiting the exhibition of fight pictures, prevented the News from showing the pictures of the fight itself, announces Pathe. In spite of all physical handicaps, rules, and regulations, Pathe staff men photographed every blow struck during the fight, it is reported. The special contained pictures up to the minute that Dempsey faced Carpentier in the first round, and was cut just as Carpentier led for Dempsey's head, the first blow struck in the great battle.

While Emanuel Cohen, editor of the Pathe News, who directed the operations of a staff of ten men, declines to tell how he overcame all difficulties, and got "inside" pictures of the fight, it is easy to see from the Pathe News special, an unobstructed view of the ring, that he had a cameraman stationed not very far from the arena, with an unobstructed view of the ring and a sweeping command of the entire coliseum.

Orders had been issued that no photographers except those officially chosen, were to be permitted withing filming distance of the great arena. Yet in spite of this the Pathe News obtained every highlight of the great battle, and showed everything it was legally permitted to exhibit under the Federal laws. In doing this, too, the Pathe News cameraman violated no laws, except the law of nature. They took desperate chances to obtain results, yet despite this, their plans materialized without hitch, as they had been laid out weeks ahead.

Clara Kimball Young in Oregon

"FRONT-PAGE" CRANDALL is the title that the Equity exploitation director has merited from coast to coast as a result of his advance publicity promotion in behalf of the Equity star, Clara Kimball Young and other screen personalities. In a nation-wide tour that took him through every key city of the country, Milton D. Crandall has secured front pages of direct publicity for the Equity star to an extent that the industry has seldom seen.

A number of out-of-town newspapers that has just arrived at Equity headquarters representing every principal city of the country, fairly screams with the name of Miss Young. Associated Press papers, independent dailies and every shade of periodical proclaims in headlines the arrival and visit of Clara. Every newspaper precedent seems to have been smashed, states Equity. Applying his own bag of tricks that weakened all opposition of editors, Crandall kept piling up columns of interviews, articles and out-and-out publicity matter.

To take one case out of a score of unheard of publicity strokes, there is the visit of the Equity star at Portland, Ore. Instead of the usual reception accorded a visiting screen notable, Crandall put over an unusually big scoop. Enlisting every civic organization and every public official from the Governor down, the publicity promoter persuaded the State of Oregon to stage a public ovation and to declare the occasion a civic holiday in which every man, woman and child took part. The moment she alighted at Portland, a regiment of marines escorted the star to the Rose Festival Center where the Equity actress was formally invited as the first woman of the world to attend the 1925 Exposition now being planned in Portland. A huge picture of Miss Young centered around a rose-bed stood behind the rostrum of the hall, and Miss Young made her unique appearance on the platform by stepping through the picture. A State prize was announced by Julius L. Meier, chairman of the Exposition, for the best drawing of Miss Young, to be exhibited at the Exposition.

To cap the climax Crandall manipulated some political wires and paved the way towards a joint resolution in both houses of the Oregon State Legislature calling a special session of the body to honor the presence in their midst of the Equity star. Miss Young was then presented with an engraved resolution of the Legislature, inviting her to honor the International Exposition and thanking her for her civic interest in the State. Another resolution of the Gubernatorial Chamber was presented to Clara by Governor Olion at the steps of the State Capitol at which a throng estimated at 20,000 attended. To reach the widespread multitude, Miss Young spoke through a telephone amplifier, connected to the principal cities nearby.

All in all, Crandall succeeded in making the visit of Miss Young to Oregon a memorable one in that State's history. Newspapers opened their front pages to the Equity star, and the name of Miss Young was the topic of the day.

Alf Goulding Directing Harry Sweet Comics

The latest addition to the Century Comedies is Alf Goulding, late of Sunshine Comedies, and recent director of Harold Lloyd. Alf Goulding has been chosen to direct Harry Sweet Century Comedies, alternating with Tom Buckingham, who has been directing Harry Sweet in nearly all of his Centuries. Buckingham, who was laid up with influenza, has been given a vacation, and Goulding immediately started on "Stealin' Home," a baseball story.

Upon the completion of "Stealin' Home" Buckingham will take over Sweet while Goulding will prepare a new script.

Edw. Monagne Finishes Script for "Justice"

Edward J. Montagne, of the Selznick scenario staff, has completed the continuity of John Galsworthy's "Justice," and work will begin upon the production very shortly at the West Fort Lee studios of the Selznick Pictures Corporation, with William Faversham in the role of Falder.

The combination of Montagne continuity and Ralph Ince direction has been very successful in a number of the most important productions of the Selznick Corporation in the last few years. Among these is a big special, not yet released, "A Man's Home," made from the play by Anna Steese Richardson and Edmund Breese, and which promises to be one of the fall sensations.

All-Star Special Announced

Wallace Reid and Gloria Swanson to Head Cast; Sam Wood to Direct

WALLACE Reid and Gloria Swanson, who played the leading roles in Cecil B. DeMille's twelve-star special production, "The Affairs of Anatol," soon to be released by Paramount, will be seen together in another all-star special to be made at the Lasky studio. This announcement was made at Hollywood Monday by Jesse L. Lasky, who stated that work on the new production would be started as soon as Wallace Reid returns from New York where he is now engaged with Elsie Ferguson in the production of "Peter Ibbetson," under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

Elliott Dexter will have a leading role in the new picture, the story of which is by Lorna Moon and which has been entitled, "Rainbow's End." Sam Wood will direct.

"So certain are we," said Mr. Lasky in his announcement, "that the impression made by "The Affairs of Anatol," with its galaxy of stars consisting of Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Monte Blue, Wanda Hawley, Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Kosloff, Polly Moran, Raymond Hatton and Julia Faye, will be so sensational wherever it is shown that the public will want to see at least some of these stars together again, that we have selected three of the most eminent of them for this new production.

"'Anatol,' it will be recalled, with is super-star cast, was our first production featuring more than one big star. It was in the nature of an experiment, and so satisfactorily was the result that Mr. DeMille, in casting his next picture, 'Fool's Paradise,' adapted from Leonard Merrick's 'Laurels and the Lady,' chose Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris, Conrad Nagel, Theodore Kosloff and John Davidson for the leading roles. We were then making our plans for 'Peter Ibbetson' and following out the same policy we surrounded Wallace Reid and Elsie Ferguson, two of the greatest stars of the screen, with a cast which includes Elliott Dexter, Montagu Love, George Fawcett and Dolores Casinelli.

Herbert Howe Signs with Magazines

Herbert Howe has signed to act as Western representative of the Brewster, publications, Shadowland, Motion Picture magazine and Motion Picture Classic, according to an announcement made by Frederick James Smith, managing editor and critic, who has just renewed his contract with the three publications for a long term period. Mr. Howe recently resigned as Western editor of Picture-Play magazine.

Hearst Studios Show No Let-Up in Production

THERE is no slowing up of production during the summer months at the International Film Studios, New York City, according to word from the Cosmopolitan Productions headquarters. Production work on Marion Davies' new stellar vehicle for Cosmopolitan, titled "The Young Diana," is well under way. Albert Capellani is directing. The supporting cast includes Forrest Stanley, Maclyn Arbuckle, Pedro DeCordoba, and Gypsy O'Brien.

"Back Pay," a Fannie Hurst story, is nearing completion. Seena Owen, Matt Moore, Ethel Duray and J. Barney Sherry have the principal roles in this drama of a country girl's experiences among a fast set in New York. Frank Borzage is directing.

At William Randolph Hearst's Astoria Studios, Tom Terriss is directing "Find the Woman," from the story by Arthur Somers Roche that appeared in Cosmopolitan Magazine. "Find the Woman" is a remarkable drama of sustained mystery with a powerful climax which divulges the murderer of one of the characters. The cast includes Alma Rubens, Eileen Huban, Harrison Ford, Norman Kerry and George MacQuarrie.

Flax Brothers Purchase "Black Panther's Cub"

FOLLOWING the standard set by Sam Zierler, of New York; J. L. Friedman, of Celebrated Players, Chicago, and Phil Selznick Productions of Cleveland, Flax Bros., of Washington, D. C., took the lead in their district by buying "The Black Panther's Cub" for Virginia, Delaware, District of Columbia and Maryland. Their purchase was in line with the policy of the new exchange which Flax Bros. operates, The Liberty Film Exchange, which is scheduled to handle nothing but the greatest features on the independent market.

"The Black Panther's Cub" will be offered to exhibitors of the Washington territory as a summer attraction.

Ingenue Is Sought for Hallroom Comedies

Hallroom Boys Comedies, of New York, have issued a call for a screen ingenue to play opposite Sid Smith in the two-reel comedies which they are now making for release through Federated Film Exchanges. The applicant must be attractive and have a certain amount of screen, but not necessarily comedy, experience.

A committee composed of Joe Brant, Jack Cohn, Harry Cohn, Sid Smith, Herman C. Raymaker and Jimmie Davis, the directors, and J. L. Friedman, president of Federated, will pass upon the applicants.

'Pancakes and Pirates' is Callahan Comedy

Jimmy Calahan has sent Robert W. Priest, president of The Film Market, Inc., his distributor, the first print of another new comedy called "Pancakes and Pirates." Tom Bret edited it and wrote the titles.

Reelcraft Names Program

Mirth, Aladdin, Sun-Lite Comedies for Release During Hot Weather

REELCRAFT PICTURES CORPORATION'S distributing schedule for the summer months will include more than a score of new comedies according to the list of releases made public this week by R. C. Cropper, President of the Reelcraft organization. Prints of fully eighty per cent of the company's summer releases have already been shipped to Reelcraft's twenty-two branch offices, and according to Mr. Cropper, are now available for screening purposes. The balance of releases promised for the summer months are expected to go forward within the present month.

According to the present schedule, Reelcraft Pictures Corporation will release one Aladdin Comedy each week; one Sun-Lite Comedy every two weeks; and a Mirth Comedy every second week to alternate with the Sun-Lite Brand. Thus, according to present production plans, the company will release a total of one hundred and four comedies during the year, to be divided and classified as follows: Fifty-two Aladdin Comedies; twenty-six Mirth Comedies; and twenty-six Sun-Lite Comedies.

Below is a tabulated list of Reelcraft releases for the summer:

The list of Aladdin releases follow: "A Headwaiter's Heart," "Tuning Up," "Washed Out," "Hot Cakes," "Scream Street," "Lion Liars," "All Wet," "Stuck Up," Rattling By," 'Hot Stuff," "Spring Fever" and "The Smoke Eater."

The Sun-Lite releases scheduled for summer releases are: "Baby! Baby!!", "Bride and Broom," "Mother's Lamb," "Don't Mary!" and "Brown Derby."

The list of Mirth Comedies promised for release are: "Here He Is," "Sweet Daddy," "Chick-Chick," "Vacation" and "Speed."

Urban Subjects at Capitol

Rothafel's Short Subject Program Includes La Fontaine Fable

FOUR URBAN POPULAR CLASSICS are being shown at the Capitol theatre this week in Mr. Rothafel's all-short-subject program.

Of special interest will be the showing of the first in the series of "Modern Truths from Old Fables," which are the film versions of La Fontaine's Fables. Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society and Charles Urban have been working on these Fables for many months and the interest in them is keen. "The Hare and the Tortoise" is the one shown this week at the Capitol. It follows faithfully the text as La Fontaine wrote it. The entire series of "Modern Truths from Old Fables" will number twenty of the most popular of all La Fontaine is credited with and will be released by the Kineto Company of America as a special animal series. All the actors in them are animals. There is no technical or animated drawing in the films at all; it is all faithful photography of animals.

Other Urban Popular Classics to be shown will be two Kineto Reviews and a Science Series. The Reviews are "Ancient Customs in Egypt" and "The Science of a Soap Bubble." The Science Series is "From Egg to Chick."

"The Science of a Soap Bubble" was made in England by Prof. F. Percy Smith, a constant contributor to Mr. Urban.

Exchange to Pay Interest on Deposits

ROYAL PICTURES, INC., the Philadelphia, Pa., independent exchange, announces an unusual method of taking care of exhibitors' advance deposits. On and after July 15th, exhibitors will be paid interest on their deposits at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. There will be a separate deposit account kept for each individual exhibitor. This book will be open at all times for inspection by any authorized committee appointed by the Exhibitors' Association.

The plan was worked out by David L. Segan, president and general manager of the exchange.

Iris Pictures Acquire Ideal Studio

Announcement is made by Walter Steiner, director general of the Iris Pictures Company, of the acquisition of the Ideal Studio, Fort Lee, New Jersey, where all future productions of this company will be made.

The Ideal Studio is one of the finest and most modernly equipped in the East. Besides several large stages, it has a wonderful lighting system which will be used to a great extent in the pictures of this company.

Canadian Censors Pass "Madonnas and Men"

H. F. Jans, president of the Jans Productions, Inc., recently received word the "Madonnas and Men" had finally passed the Censorship in Montreal, Province of Quebec, and that accordingly the Allen Brothers of Toronto, who are releasing all of the Jans pictures in the Provinces, were enabled to realize on several thousands of dollars worth of contracts which had been held up in the Province of Quebec.

Federated Film Makes Territorial Changes

FEDERATED FILM EXCHANGES OF AMERICA, INC., this week announces a number of changes in the organization of its territorial exchanges.

Joseph Friedman, of the Celebrated Players Film of Chicago, who is president of Federated, has taken over the territory of Southern Wisconsin, and has established an exchange in Milwaukee, from which he will carry on the business.

Harry Charnas, of the Standard Film Service Co., of Cleveland, will open an exchange in Pittsburgh, from which he will handle Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Sam Grand, of Boston, has taken over Upper New York State, which he will control from an office of the Federated to be opened in Buffalo.

"Burn 'em Up Barnes" Nearing Completion

Production on "Burn 'em up Barnes," in which Johnny Hines makes his debut to stellar honors in feature length productions, is now nearing completion at Mastodon Films, Fifty-fourth Street Studios and it is expected that cutting will begin early next week. More than seven miles of film were exposed in the making of this picture. Three cameras used in photographing the racing scenes.

In "Burn 'em up Barnes," Johnny is said to outdo himself in comedy effort and to play the dramatic scenes with a depth of sympathy and understanding and with a wealth of dramatic power hitherto only suspected. The cast is headed by Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, J. Barney Sherry, Betty Carpenter, Matthew Betts, Dorothy Leeds, Julia Swayne Gordon and Harry Fraser. The picture is by George A. Beranger from Ray Schrocks original screen story of the same name.

"Shooting the Chutes" Bought by Reelcraft

Reelcraft Pictures Corporation through its president, R. C. Cropper, announces this week the acquisition of the motion picture rights to "Shooting the Chutes," the well-known stage farce, for use in the production of the fifth Sun-Lite Comedy. It will be used as a vehicle for the comedy talents of Billy Quirk, Jobyna Ralston, Bobby Burns, and Ollie Mack. The picture will be known and released under the title of "Brown Derby."

"Diana of Star Hollow" on Keith Circuit

Arrangements were made this week by the Producers' Security Corporation whereby "Diana of Star Hollow" is to play the B. F. Keith circuit of vaudeville theatres. The Bernard Durning - Evelyn Greely feature will likely start its first Keith exhibition the latter part of this month.

Equity Films in Big Houses

New Allen in Cleveland and Pantheon in Toledo Book Big Picture

TAKING the lead in independent exchangedom in Ohio, Phil Selznick, head of the exchange which bears his name in Cleveland wired Equity this week that the new million-dollar theatre of the Allen chain, the New Allen of Cleveland had booked "The Black Panther's Cub" for a first-run, and that the palatial Pantheon in Toledo had accepted the Florence Reed feature for a two-week run. This double-barrelled stroke establishes two distinct records. In the case of the New Allen booking it marks the first independent feature to gain entrance into the big Middle West house. The Pantheon booking adds another laurel to the independent cause as the longest run ever granted a state-right feature in that house, according to Equity.

The speed in which Selznick closed the contracts with both first-run houses is another event that testifies to the merit of the Zieg-feld-Equity Production, states the releasing organization. The Cleveland exchange man has only had "The Black Panther's Cub" in his hands for two weeks. In that short period he had no difficulty in winning a private screening of the picture before the two exhibitors.

The Selznick Productions further report that the territory of Cleveland has never before witnessed as much excitement over a feature as that exhibited over "The Black Panther's Cub." The moment it became known that Phil Selznick had bought the rights to the seven-reel release that had played at the Capitol in New York and had won a tribute from S. L. Rothafel, exhibitors poured in their inquiries for immediate booking dates. Among those who were keen for the picture were three first-run houses of Cleveland besides the Allen itself.

Pyramid to Start Shortly

To Begin First Production in Two Weeks, Announces W. E. Greene

WALTER E. GREENE, president of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., after a conference with Ray C. Smallwood, who is to be in charge of the first producing unit for Pyramid, announced that actual production on the first picture would commence within two weeks.

"During the past two weeks," said Mr. Greene, "I have talked with many of the leading independent exhibitors in the United States. They substantiated my arguments that the time for bigger and better pictures is at hand and that the fall will see a new and brighter motion picture industry.

"The convention at Minneapolis will spur the independent producer to greater length. The exhibitor wants the best pictures and we must give him just what his public demands. Pyramid will make only those pictures that have a box office value and directed in a lavish super fashion manner."

Contracts for the use of a studio in New York City will be signed this week and according to plans of Mr. Smallwood he will be in a position to go ahead with his story within a week's time and that he will be cast and ready to shoot by July 15th.

That Mr. Smallwood had the right idea in allowing authors a certain percentage of the gross of the picture, is best exemplified by the number of stories he has received from recognized box office writers. Mr. Smallwood will give the author a substantial cash advance against the gross of the production and authors have taken more than kindly to his proposition.

Interest In "Tarzan Serial"

Exhibitors Seek Information on Lincoln Serial, States Mr. Weiss

ACCORDING to Louis Weiss, of Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation, this organization is receiving an unusual quantity of inquiries from exhibitors in all parts of the United States relative to "Adventures of Tarzan," the new serial starring Elmo Lincoln.

Since the initial announcement of this serial for the state right market, less than three weeks ago, wires, letters and phone calls, have been received from numerous showmen requesting an early booking for the latest Tarzan serial.

In commenting on these inquiries recently, Louis Weiss had the following to say: "In spite of the general business depression which has undeniably affected the exhibitor during the past six months, we have been particularly gratified at the intense interest displayed by innumerable exhibitors in our serial 'Adventures of Tarzan.' While it has been announced that this serial starring Elmo Lincoln will not be released until the fifteenth of October, requests for bookings are coming to our office through the mails daily from every section of the country. In each instance, the exhibitor has requested the name of the state right exchange which will handle 'Adventures of Tarzan.'"

New Star Ranch Western Is Completed

"The Scorpion's Sting" is the title of the newest of the two-reel Western thrillers, which are being released by the C. B. C.

Iris Pictures Formed to Make Features

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the formation of the Iris Pictures Co., to produce a series of six super-photodramas for the first year, to be released through the foremost independent exchanges.

Walter Steiner, director-general of the new company, has, under his supervision, one of the most capable and experienced staff of assistants consisting of Vincent de Maria, former architect and interior decorator, as technical director; Frank de Maria, well known cinematographer and inventor of a new camera for use during night work; Jack Goulde, one of the few successful pioneers in the moving picture business, as business representative; and Meyer Keilsohn, prominent playwright and short-story writer, as scenario editor.

Branford, in New Jersey to Run Equity Picture

The Branford, one of the country's largest and most beautiful screen temples, has this week booked "The Black Panther's Cub" for a full week run. The contract was put through by D. M. Sohmer, Sales Manager of the Commonwealth Exchange of New York, which holds the distribution rights to the Florence Reed feature for the metropolitan district and Upper New Jersey. Sohmer also signed the Garden Theatre of Paterson and the Montauk of Passaic, each for a full week, as well as the Opera House of Rich Hill for a four-day run. This completes the round of the theatre-chain operated by A. Fabian.

Sohmer stated that Mr. Fabian's choice was guided by the box-office results of "The Black Panther's Cub" run had won at the Capitol.

Reelcraft Comedies in S. A. Lynch Circuit

By virtue of a contract signed this week, the series of Mirth and Sun-Lite Comedies, both of which are nationally distributed through Reelcraft Pictures Corporation's twenty-two branch offices, will be shown in the large chain of theatres owned and operated by the S. A. Lynch Circuit throughout the South. This is the gist of a telegraphic dispatch to R. C. Cropper, President of Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, and made public in a statement issued to the trade press this week.

WARNING TO THE TRADE:

Whereas, prints of the LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS, A MAN IN THE OPEN, A MAN'S FIGHT, featuring Dustin Farnum; ADELE and PLAYTHINGS OF PASSION, featuring Kitty Gordon, are being illegally offered for sale and distribution.

Warning is hereby given that these subjects can only be distributed by the Arrow Film Corporation and its franchise holders possessing territorial rights. All legal purchasers will be protected to the fullest extent. Any others offering for sale, purchasing or booking these subjects will be prosecuted.

Wide Exploitation for "Adventures of Tarzan'

Under the direction of Bert Ennis, an elaborate exploitation and advertising campaign will mark the distribution on the state right market of "Adventures of Tarzan," the new wild animal serial starring Elmo Lincoln. In order to keep this serial constantly before the exhibitor, thereby aiding, materially the state right buyer, an advertising campaign has been inaugurated and will be carried on weekly in the various trade papers until the serial is completely disposed of.

In addition to an elaborate line of exploitation matter, including a thirty page press book, eight by ten, eleven by fourteen and twenty-two by twenty-eight lobby displays, one three, six and twenty-four sheets, two color letter heads, oil paintings, etc., special assistance will be given the buyer and exhibitor in various other directions. Arrangements are now being completed for the syndication of the story of "Adventures of Tarzan" throughout the entire country and a special tie up will also be available for window displays of the novel by Edgar Rice Burroughs, "The Return of Tarzan," from which the serial is being filmed.

Sameth Has Attractive Announcement Booklet

Joseph Sameth, president of Forward Film Distributors, has issued an attractive brochure to announce the new series of two-reel short features starring Claire Whitney and Robert Emmett Keane, which he will offer on the independent market.

The announcement contains handsome semi-detached photographs of the two principals, statements by both, and on the rear cover, a postscript by Mr. Sameth, announcing that the picture will be made under the personal supervision of Hal Benedict, and that they first will be released on July 15th.

New Callahan Comedy Is Cut and Titled

Jimmy Callahan's two-reel comedy, "King for an Hour," during the last shot for which he lost the tips of the fingers on his left hand in an aeroplane accident in Atlantic City two weeks ago, has been cut by Director Whiting and turned over to Tom Bret for final editing and titles. Mr. Callahan will resume work in Atlantic City in his new studio next week.

The story of this comedy originally served as the story of a musical extravaganza called "Hokomoko Island."

An After-the-Convention Plea
By Joe Brandt

"NOW that the convention is over—it's over," most exhibitors have been in the habit of saying, and they have gone back to their homes and their theatres, and, as far as they were concerned, that's all there was to it.

"But the convention isn't over. The actual convention is only the beginning—and if the resolutions passed there are forgotten as soon as the convention is over, there isn't a bit of use in having the convention at all.

"Trade in general has always lulled itself to sleep with the consciousness that it doesn't matter much what happens at the convention—that the purpose of a convention is to adopt resolutions and there it ends. They have attended the conventions, made a great display of their apparent interest with their 'yeas' and 'nays'—and then, when the convention is over, they go home and are satisfied to attend to their own knitting—and if the other fellows' socks have holes in them—that's their worry.

"The M. P. T. O. A. should gain in power—and the members individually and collectively should be strong enough to exercise that power for the common good. If the interests of the members individually are to be paramount to the interests of the entire exhibitor field, what is the use of having an organization at all?

"Don't be accused of 'watchful waiting.' Make this year one that will record real achievement. You can do it if you will submerge your personal gain and realize that eventually you will benefit by what is for the common good. Traveling to a dozen conventions won't do the real lasting good that abiding by the rules made at one such convention could accomplish.

"Let's get behind the M. P. T. O. A. resolutions now. Let's follow them carefully, right or wrong—for if they're wrong, that's the only way we'll find it out—and only so will the organization become a real power."

Popular Sport Pictorials
Production of Second Series of Arrow Short Subjects Progresses

ACCORDING to an announcement from Town & Country Films, Inc., makers of the Sport Pictorial releases handled by the Arrow Film Corporation in the independent field, the producing of the second series of these popular short reel subjects is proceeding in a manner and with such an unusual and splendid selection of subjects that it is predicted that they will have a greater interest and value than the first of this series.

The fourth release of the second series is to be an interesting treatment of sports at Wellesley College. Besides the exclusive and interesting quality of the subject matter, it should have added value and merit due to the fact that Katherine Hilliker has been engaged to do the titling.

The fifth release has the working title of "Oh! For the Life of a Fireman." This shows the members of the city and volunteer fire departments engaged in their annual program of sports during the recent firemen's convention on Long Island.

No. 6 of this series is an exceedingly humorous and interesting reel showing young America engaged in their various native games and sports—the kid contests played by boys all over the United States.

No. 7 has been titled "Hook, Line and Sinker," a subject devoted to the sport of rod and reel fishing in stream, surf and deep sea.

No. 8, the final subject of the series, has the working title of "Boats."

Fabric Studios Equipt New Century Theatre

Charles Whitehurst, owner of the $2,000,000 New Century theatre, Baltimore, and a string of other houses in that city, has closed a contract with the Fabric Studios, Inc., Chicago, to completely equip the New Century stage with curtains and other decorations, as well as the other houses controlled by Mr. Whitehurst in Baltimore.

E. B. Marshall, of the Fabric Studios, will go to Baltimore to personally supervise the installation of the decorations.

Reggie Morris Starts New Comedy Series

A new series of comedies are being made at the Berwilla Studios by the newly organized Reggie Morris Productions, Inc., of which Reggie Morris, the director of Sennett, Chester and Educational Comedies; Frank H. Marshall and G. C. Watson are the organizers.

Distributing arrangements have been made for this series through the Arrow Film Corporation and Director Morris and a company including Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Jack Duffy, Margaret Cullison, Eddie Baker and others are now at work on the initial offering. This producing unit was organized recently to make a series of comedies for Educational and the producing organization will remain the same for the new Reggie Morris Productions.

Morris has a number of very excellent comedies to his credit as a director in addition to making a number of Sennett subjects for release through Paramount. Morris made many of the Triangle Keystone Comedies. He directed the making of all of the "Bringing Up Father" Comedies.

New Independent Distributing Company

Announcement is made to the trade of the formation of a new independent distributing organization under the name of Rialto Productions, Inc. The company aims not only at distribution, but it means, also, to offer a service to completely cover the individual field of the exhibitor, carefully considering his own peculiar problems toward their solution. For this purpose it devotes a special department to aid the exhibitor in his efforts to improve the quality of his performances and to provide the kind of entertainment that will satisfy his patrons.

Lou Rogers is president of the new company. During the coming year at least 26 new features will be distributed through this organization. This company is distributing Tony Sarg's Almanac.

Spence to Write Titles for Johnny Hines

Ralph Spence, who achieved fame as co-author of the titles of William Fox's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," has been engaged by Charles C. Burr, President of Mastodon Films, Inc., to title "Burn 'em up Barnes," the high-speed automobile story in which Johnny Hines achieves stellar honors in feature length productions and the premier release of Affiliated Distributors, Inc.

ABOUT PLAYERS

THE visit of Sessue Hayakawa, the noted Japanese motion picture star, with his wife, who is known to countless screen fans as Tsuru Aoki, to the East has been a veritable triumphal march. Unusual honors have been conferred upon them, the most notable having been the reception of Mr. Hayakawa by President Warren G. Harding in the Executive Offices of the White House on June 27.

Irene Castle Treman, upon the completion of her film "A Broadway Bride," by Clarence Buddington Kelland, will leave for her home in Ithaca, where she will rest, prior to starting work on her second production. In this picture, Irene Castle Treman does her first exhibition dancing since "Watch Your Step," and can be found daily at Delmonicos brushing up on her dancing steps.

Virginia Valli, who was well known under the old Essanay banner as leading woman with Bryant Washburn and Taylor Holmes has returned to the screen as the leading woman with Bert Lytell.

At the conclusion of the first production, "The Man Who," it was decided to send the company to the west coast studio of Metro for the following two or three productions.

Miss Valli found herself with only one day in which to pack her trunks for the west.

This proved very irritating to Demarest Lamson, then Miss Valli's fiance.

But a certain New Jersey clergyman, sent the happy young couple on their way west on a honeymoon.

Miss Valli is now working in the second west coast picture with Mr. Lytell—"Junk," the first completed some time ago having the euphonious title "A Trip to Paradise."

Elaine Hammerstein's vacation is drawing to a close. She had hoped for a much longer furlough. During the past Winter and early

Richard Stanton, director who expects to announce promising producing activities, shortly

Spring Miss Hammerstein worked almost continuously on productions for the Selznick output, going from one picture to another with practically no intermission.

When she finished "Handcuffs or Kisses," at the Fort Lee studios, Myron Selznick, Vice President in charge of production, hoped to give the energetic young woman a respite for several weeks, but plans of the producer, like theatrical programs, are always subject to "change without notice." Miss Hammerstein must start at once upon pictures for next season's distribution.

Rex Taylor's story "The Way of a Maid," will go into production at once with William P. S. Earle directing. Incidentally, Mr. Earle will be the third director Miss Hammerstein has collaborated with in three successive pictures—George Archainbaud having directed "Handcuffs or Kisses," while Ralph Ince was director of "Remorseless Love."

"The Way of A Maid," will again bring Niles Welch into Miss Hammerstein's company as leading man. He played opposite the Selznick star in "Remorseless Love." Another Selznick production in which Mr. Welch has prominence is the special offering "Who Am I?" in which Claire Anderson is featured along with Mr. Welch.

Miss Hammerstein's forthcoming appearance in "Remorseless Love" and the presentations of "Who Am I?" threaten to be the last appearance of Niles Welch in pictures for some time to come. He has contracted to play the leading part in "The Hot Heads," a stage production that comes to Broadway early in the new season.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

AT the first July meeting of the Motion Picture Directors Association, Charles Giblyn, for the past several months directing on the west coast for Fox, put in an appearance at the New York Lodge. During the illness of William Desmond Taylor, Director of the Los Angeles Chapter, Mr. Giblyn acted in his stead. Mr. Taylor now abroad and Mr. Giblyn returned to New York, who will preside at the west coast meetings?

Fred J. Butler, directing his son in "Bing-Bang-Boom," in which David Butler will be seen as star, found a location which gave him an idea. It was the use of the old Redondo Beach Hotel, for many years a noted landmark of Southern California, overlooking the Pacific ocean and covering spacious grounds. It offered recommendations as a motion picture studio and the director is therefore seriously considering the possibility of renovating the building for this purpose. The ground floor will provide ample room for two immense stages, while the floors above can easily be turned into offices and dressing rooms. Redondo Beach is near enough to Los Angeles for every picture necessity but according to Mr. Butler, the surrounding country will provide sufficient material for many feature pictures. Though the hotel has been closed many months, "Bing-Bang-Boom" called for scenes that were excellently furnished by the old building. Some of the company made their residence in the hotel during the process of filming scenes on the convenient location.

Directors George Sargent and James Vincent accompanied by E. M. Simpson, attorney for the Motion Picture Directors' Association, were among those present at the M. P. T. O. Convention, Minneapolis, representing the organization of bona fide directors of motion pictures.

James Vincent is receiving congratulations upon having enlarged his family. A baby girl, born the latter part of June, provides the two-year-old boy with a blonde sister. Mother and baby both well and happy.

Reginald Barker's first step in his plans for individual picture production is the engagement of Roland Rushton, New York stage manager, as assistant. Throughout the past year Mr. Rushton has been studying motion picture technique with Mr. Barker, and in recognition of his attained proficiency he has been signed for at least two Reginlad Barker productions.

Mr. Rushton is now in New York, and as Mr. Barker's representative has secured options to a number of stories that are being considered by the newest independent film producer.

Roland Rushton staged "Kitty McKay," which ran sixty-three weeks on Broadway. Besides his career in New York he was noted as a stage director in Australia for several years.

Mr. Rushton's apprenticeship to Barker parallels the latters apprenticeship to Thomas H. Ince. Reginald Barker as a boy actor became Henry Miller's stage manager at 19. After an extensive career as actor-manager with Walker Whiteside, Robert Hilliard, Olga Nethersole and Emily Stevens, he bound himself to Mr. Ince to learn the film game and almost immediately was graduated to directorship.

Monster Bowl and Largest Dimmer Installed in Milwaukee

Last Word in Illumination and Electrical Control in Alhambra

The last word in the control of illumination and electrical effects has been reached by Manager Leo Landau of the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee. Upon recently acquiring the Alhambra from the Saxe interests, Landau completely redecorated the interior of this spacious theater which is one of the largest in the northwest. Landau had his own ideas on illumination and electrical effects and was determined to secure them with the help of one or two of the largest American electrical concerns. As a result of the various installations which have been made perfect control of all lighting has been obtained.

One of the largest dimmer boards built in recent years was designed and manufactured by The Cutler-Hammer Manufacturing Company of Milwaukee. It is approximately 11 feet high and 8½ feet wide. The equipment includes 130 dimmers for 101 separate circuits, the circuits being broken into 23 groups. Each of these groups has a master lever and each master lever can be interlocked on the shaft so that when the master handwheel is rotated, some can be used to brighten the lights in a group of circuits while others can be used to dim out certain groups. It is not essential to have all masters operating, which means that there is always an opportunity to drop out or pick up other circuits to get new effects. All the six rows of operating levers are within easy reach of the operator as he stands on the floor.

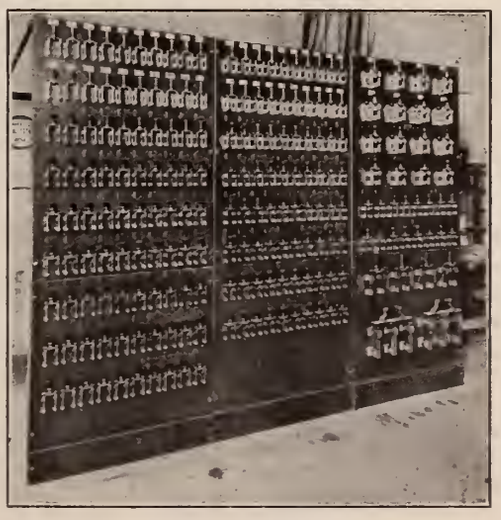
The dead front construction, which eliminates the possibility of accidental contact with live parts, meets the requirements of the most stringent municipal regulations.

Manager Landau believes that while many exhibitors spare no expense in securing novel lighting effects on the stage they overlook a splendid possibility in securing lighting effects in the auditorium of the theatre. That the auditorium of a photo play theatre has as much to do with successful staging as the stage itself is the opinion of Landau.

In the center of the huge dome of the Alhambre theatre, Landau has suspended an immense bowl lighting fixture designed by J. M. Weimer and manufactured by the National X-Ray Reflector Company, Chicago. Some idea of the size of the bowl can be gained by the accompanying photographs which show the steel frame work of the fixture. The outside diameter measures 178 inches and the inside 148 inches.

The bowl lighting fixture includes a total of 20,000 watts in lamps. Four colors—white, amber, red and blue—are used and each color can be varied in any way desired. The heat from these lamps is so great that artificial coloring of the lamps is not possible. Gelatine screens to diffuse the transmitted lights were also impractical; consequently specially prepared natural colored glass screens were used.

The bowl is suspended from the ceiling by 2 inch gas pipes 25 feet long. The electric wires are brought down through these pipes and are then taken through flexible Greenfield cable to the wiring channels to which the receptacles are attached. Each lamp is provided with an individual silvered glass X-Ray reflector of special design over which the cover glass is placed for color effect.



Front view of stage switchboard, Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee

Augmenting the large center fixture is a small bowl directly underneath it which carries the emergency lighting. The lights in this bowl must be left bright and so no dimmers are used on this circuit. The distance from the top edge of the large bowl to the bottom of the small bowl is 6½ feet.

A novel and practical arrangement has been worked out for cleaning and relamping the large center bowl and the auxiliary bowl. An opening is provided in the ceiling above the fixture through which a man can descend into the bowl enabling him to reach all the lamps and reflector in the large bowl. While he is there he works a worm gear winch and lowers the smaller bowl to the floor below where other workers clean the lights and reflector. Before the man in the big bowl leaves he hoists the smaller bowl in position.

The auditorium is further lighted by smaller bowls, 60 inches from the ceiling, four at each side and five at the rear of the house. These bowls can also be lowered for cleaning. Each of these bowls contains lamps of four colors—250 watts of each color. These auxiliary bowls are in three groups, each side being independent of the other. By controlling each group with separate dimmers, one side of the theatre may be bathed in purple gradually changing to amber. The rear of the house may dissolve from red to blue while the other side of the house can work out other color combinations. It is seldom, of course, that easter egg color varieties of this type are attempted, but it shows what complete control is had over the house lights.

The fact that there are only lamps of four colors in the auditorium of the theatre does not mean that effects are limited to white, amber, red or blue. The colors may be thinned out by bringing up the white so that amber is any color from deep gold to white; red, any tint to a delicate pink, and blue any shade from a deep indigo to a tint hardly recognizable as any color but pale lavender. In addition to this, the flexible control allows the mixing of the prime colors or mixed colors and the obtaining of any of the rainbow shades desired.

All C-H dimmers which form a part of the new installation have indicator attachments which allow the operator to take record of the lever settings which gave him certain results, and this when he is called upon to repeat an effect he has no difficulties to contend with, as his formulae is all prepared.

In the ceiling directly over the orchestra pit there is a band of hidden lights totaling 16,000 watts divided into four colors by means of which novel flood lighting effects can be produced with the orchestra. One thousand watt lamps are used together with a special concentrating type of silvered glass X-Ray reflector by means of which the lighting is cut off so as not to spread over the audience or stage. In addition to the Cutler-Hammer dimmer board the Alhambra theatre is provided with a specially constructed switchboard, designed by the Wisconsin Electrical Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee, and installed by the A-C Electric Company of the same city.

The dimmer board and the switchboard take care of 526 circuits. From the pho-

EXTENDING a CORDIAL INVITATION

BEAUTIFUL and attractive, the front of the Empress Theatre extends a cordial invitation to the passer-by. It clearly says: "Come in and see the enjoyable motion pictures you know are shown in a theatre like this."

Alert exhibitors have found by experience that such an exterior, conveying a clear, definite impression of quality, is in the long run a theatre's best advertisement.

Beautiful cream glazed Terra Cotta, imperishable, unchanging, is the material that has given to the Empress Theatre its beauty and power of attraction,—given it an exterior that is a profitable, permanent advertisement. All the elaborate decoration which adds so much of grace and dignity to the building is carried out in the same permanent material.

If you are planning a new theatre, Terra Cotta will give you endless choice of design, color and ornament. There's no limit to its versatility of form and color. Your architect will show you how to adapt Terra Cotta to your own needs, and National Terra Cotta Society's beautiful illustrated brochure, "The Theatre," will show you what Terra Cotta has done for exhibitors in other cities. tograph of the switchboard it can be seen that the right hand panel is equipped with two main switches one controlling the house and the other controlling the stage.

Connections are then made through master switches to the different lighting circuits. There is a master switch for each color. If the operator intends to change his colors, whether on the foot lights, on the strips, on the house or on the rear of the stage, he can throw in the individual switches while the master switch is open and as soon as his signal is given he opens the master switch of the previous color and closes the master switch of the new color. This arrangement gives the operator sufficient time and has done much to eliminate mistakes and confusion. All switches are labelled on different colored cards and indicate the name of each particular circuit. The right hand panel in the front view illustrates all of the master switches, while the other two panels provide space for the circuit switches. The board itself is built of Ebony asbestos wood, manufactured by the Johns-Manville Company. All connections in the rear are made by means of bus bar copper and the board itself provides the front wall for a little switchboard room. The outgoing wires are carried through a steel box resting on top of the floor to the cabinet in the rear of this switch board room. It will be noted that the neighboring poles of two switches are of the same polarity, which allowed a considerable saving in space.

It can be readily seen that the Alhambra theatre has perfect control of its lighting. The main stage of the Alhambra is an immense one and on it have been built three smaller stages separated by large columns. The footlights of the main stage include 9,600 watts or 2,400 watts of each of four colors. Three borders are used, each border having 5,040 watts in lamps.

The three auxiliary stages include 48,-

Some Insights Into Problems of Directors and Cameramen

Prepared by a Cameraman Who Has Met Them All

By Pierre A. Jeltrup

Many people have asked me time and again—"How do Directors and Cameramen get along?" There is no doubt that this question has passed through the average person's mind more than once. If it has they must be interested about this subject and consequently curious to know how it may be answered. Naturally, some people have received answers, and as a rule they vary. I will endeavor to give an unbiased opinion on this subject.

The first question I think is, "How does a Director help a Cameraman?" By advice? Yes and no. It all depends upon the cameraman, but especially on how the advice is given. Some people make great use of advice while others might as well give a child a bag of beans and tell him that above all not to shove them up his nose. Naturally, as soon as he has a chance up go the beans in his nose. Discretion must be used when giving advice. Some people give it all the time and can never be shut off. Which is like the wife of an uncle, in a story, who died, and when a member of the family was asked what were the uncle's last words they responded —"Aunt was with him to the end."

However, a director can aid the cameraman by making a few suggestions at the right time which may solve the cameraman's problems, either in regards to the position in which to shoot or how it may be done. Also by not causing a too great unnecessary delay during rehearsals.

Some directors like to stall around and waste time. Of course, this means longer employment and longer pay, but unless the director is very good he doesn't last very long. I have found out that the majority of cameramen would rather work more in the mornings and finish at some reasonable time in the afternoon. Because it never fails, that if much time is lost, there will come a period when the picture must be finished, which will mean greater hurry, longer hours and more or less inferior work. It is true some cameramen are found who love to stall. Every line of business has that kind of men. But do they last? The answer is quite clear.

Some people bring up the argument that if you rush around you don't make as good pictures. Working hard does not mean to rush around. As a rule those who rush around accomplish nothing and only use this as a blind when the studio manager comes about. But he gets wise soon enough and when he does—well, like the old story, you still have two chances—either you get fired—or you don't. But it means a change whichever way it goes.

Often the director and camerman have great co-operation, they both agree on the position of a shot and on the lighting of it. They discuss the relative positions and decide upon the best, all in a short time. Other directors never bother with the cameraman and let him do his best—or his worst. Then again there are others who, after finding a shot position, insist upon arranging the lights. A great number of directors—so called—know no more about lighting than an ordinary street laborer. Still they insist they do and won't leave the cameraman's job to himself. I remember a story which will illustrate this:

In one of the large studios in this city a well-known director was shooting a very dramatic scene. The action had been gone through once and then the lights had to be all set. When the rehearsing began in earnest the "boards" and "spots" had been turned off leaving only the "banks" to give light. When the director had the actor's emotions worked up to the highest

If You Made Your Own Floor-Covering—

You would build sturdy durability all the way through—you would make it easy to clean in order to lessen your upkeep bills—you would have it soundproof, soft underfoot.

In other words, you would make a floor-covering identical with Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum.

Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum measures up to and overtops every one of these requirements—it even exceeds the specifications of the U. S. Navy. More than that, it bears a positive guarantee of "Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back", no other floor-covering sold bears such a liberal pledge of satisfaction and safety for the purchaser.

Springy, easy to clean, attractive, remarkably durable, Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum is both built and guaranteed for satisfaction. Made in soft restful shades of brown or green.

Gold-Seal Cork Carpet

If you want absolutely silent floors in your theatre—lay Gold-Seal Cork Carpet. Velvety soft and springy, this wonderful floor-covering deadens all sound of footsteps and is as yieldingly cushion-like underfoot as the heaviest woven rug or carpet.

Made in soft shades of green, brown and terra cotta—with polished or dull surface—6 pleasing shades in all. Remarkably durable—satisfactory service and wear guaranteed by the Gold-Seal Guarantee.

Put up your floor-covering problem to our Service Department—they will be glad to help you. Write our nearest office for samples of these quality floor-coverings.

Problems of the Cameraman

pitch he said to his cameraman, "Shoot!" "Wait," cried the cameraman, "the lights are not on!" "O, never mind those, there's plenty of light!"

Most everybody knows that "banks" don't give enough light to light up a whole large set.

Cameramen, as a rule, don't like to have someone else set their lights. It is really the setting of the lights that earns for them the title of cameraman, and often when someone else sets them it cramps their style.

Then there is another phase to this subject. "How can a cameraman help a director?" Most directors are, as a rule, temperamental. Now the best way to keep them in good spirits is never to make them wait. When the director asks, "Ready?" and gets the answer, "Just a minute!" time and again during the day he naturally becomes exasperated and things happen which could be avoided if the cameraman made it a point to be prepared when the director shouted, "Ready."

One of the most prominent directors in the pictures today, as a rule, becomes very excited when he gets the answer, "Just a minute." Because invariably when "just a minute" is shouted, "just an hour," is meant. Delays are, I think, the most expensive thing in the pictures. And to a director who always wants to be shooting, it is most exasperating to have to wait for, ofttimes, unnecessary delays.

There once came across my line of vision both a temperamental director and a temperamental cameraman. Things would flow pretty smoothly except when one would hold the other up. It would be amusing to watch them. Both did not like to stall, yet invariably at some moment during the day they would get in each other's way. Nevertheless, under these circumstances, both of these men got very good results. But things like that don't usually happen that way and the results are very often not what would be desired. A director is by right of "office" a temperamental and emotional being, but a cameraman should be the opposite—outwardly, at least. The director has the idea and the cameraman should execute it, make it real and have it flashed on the screen. The director makes the puppets play according to his will and the cameraman should "shoot" those puppets to best advantage so they will represent more than they do. By the director and cameraman, the "reel" life of the studio must be made into "real" life for the audience, to have a successful picture. A director is usually judged by how true to life he can manage his actors. The truer the better.

In this life nothing is impossible, but lots of things are absurd. A short while ago I saw a picture by a famous director. The director had a wonderful idea, but both he and his cameraman failed to realize that idea and the picture did not go. Nevertheless, I firmly believe that this director had well thought of this idea, but which he did not materialize by a real true-to-life-fact picture.

Many times, in large concerns, the director and cameraman are both handicapped by the erection of impossible sets which are difficult to light and well nigh impossible to photograph. When I say that, I mean I have a certain firm in mind whose hobby seems to be the building of pretty but unreasonable sets. Sometimes the cameraman is blamed and sometimes the director, but one on whom all blame is due is the scenic director. He is the guilty one and he is the one on whom such responsibility rests. But this is a great age for "passing the buck," and, as usual, it's the underdog who pays.

Theatrical Improvements Include New Buildings for Oakland

Expect to Spend Several Million Dollars on Renovation and New House

Theatrical improvements in Oakland, Cal., totalling several million dollars and including the construction of at least two new theatre buildings and other developments along similar lines were announced yesterday. In addition to giving assurance that all the big road shows will come to Oakland hereafter, the contemplated development will, it is stated, give a great impetus to motion pictures in the Eastbay district.

Construction of two new theatres, announcements of which have been made in the past thirty days, will total $2,500,000. Construction of a third was also announced, the cost of which will be made public at a later date.

Confirmation of a long-term lease of the MacArthur theatre, on which $100,000 will be spent in improvements, has also just been announced.

Construction of new theatres will include modern buildings of the first magnitude. They are:

First—Construction of a new theatre at Nineteenth and Broadway with a 75-foot frontage, to cost a total of $1,125,000, to be used exclusively for motion pictures. Maury Diggs, architect, will construct the new theatre, in addition to the $1,500,000 office building to be erected on adjacent property. According to reports received from the southern section of the state, the theatre will be constructed by the Paramount Pictures.

Second—Unofficial announcement that Orpheum Circuit plans the construction of a new theatre at some location north of Fifteenth street. Although it was stated that the Orpheum corporaion had purchased the site at Nineteenth and Broadway on the northwest corner of the intersection, Harry Cornell, manager of the Oakland house, could not confirm the rumor yesterday. The building will cost when finally completed, it is said, a total of $1,500,000, and will be one of the most modern theatres west of Chicago.

Third—Formation of a theatrical syndicate which, if capitalized, will probably construct a theatre somewhere in the vicinity of Twentieth and Broadway, or Twentieth and Telegraph. The theatre will be under the management of the syndicate, supervised by the Oakland representative, in all probability to be John J. MacArthur.

With Oliver Kerhlein, manager of a circuit of motion picture houses in California and the East, it is expected that he will return to Oakland with the information that he has secured sufficient backing to erect a modern million-dollar motion picture theatre in Oakland. The permit for the construction of the theatre at Nineteenth and Broadway has already been issued by J. A. Lloyd, city building inspector, and work of tearing out the present old-fashioned buildings is expected to begin soon, Architect Diggs announced.

Following the news yesterday of the lease of the Curran theatre in San Francisco, A. C. Blumenthal & Co. announced a confirmation of a long-term lease of the MacArthur theatre in Oakland, formerly known as Ye Liberty, situated in the Realty Syndicate Building, this lease being made with the Realty Syndicate company.

The gross rental on this lease amounts to approximately half a million dollars. The lessees are the same syndicate of San Francisco theatrical men who have taken over the Curran theatre.

The name of the MacArthur theatre will be changed to the Metropolitan and it will be entirely reconstructed inside and modernized. Also, within a short time, the present entrance will be closed up and a new entrance provided on Broadway. It is said that the new tenants will spend $100,000 in modernizing this theatre.

Blumenthal further states that complete announcements as to the plans of the new company will be forthcoming within a short time, together with the names and location of the other chain of theatres on the Pacific Coast, among which will be a new theatre in the city of Los Angeles.

It is announced in connection with the remodeling of the theatre that Oakland is to be assured all the road shows in the future.

The Liberty theatre was originally built by F. M. Smith and associates for a stock house and has the largest revolving stage in the world.

The plans of the new syndicate contemplete a change of the front so that the entire entrance will be a blaze of lights, which will materially improve the whole neighborhood.

Possession of the theatre will be taken by the new tenants on August 15 of this year, but all reconstruction work will commence before that time.

A Detailed Description and Instructions for New Lamp

An Explanation Fully Illustrated on New High Intensity Lamp

BY HERBERT GRIFFIN, TECH. ENG. NICHOLAS POWER CO.

In last week's issue we published a good working description of the Powers-G. E. High Intensity Lamp and this week is given operating instructions and suggestions which should be followed upon receipt of the Powers-G. E. High Intensity Lamp and Lamphouse from the Power's factory.

All of the lamps and lamphouses before being shipped are in correct alignment with regard to the optical axis but, inasmuch as there remains a possibility of the apparatus getting out of alignment due to rough handling in shipping, the instructions given below should be carefully followed when installing same.

To test the apparatus for perfect alignment a pointed metal rod of the same diameter as the carbon should be used (approximately 7/16ths of an inch). This rod should be inserted through the rear of the positive carbon holder A (fig. 1) and, with the condensers and lens tube removed, it may be pushed right on through the aperture plate and out through the lens opening. It may be stated, however, that the position of the aperture plate is in reality far enough to push this lining rod forward, and in this case the rod would need be but only about 30" in length. After the rod is pushed forward a pair of inside calipers should be used to measure the distance between the edge of the condenser holder and the outer circumference of the lining rod. If the lamp is correctly lined with relation to the condensing system, the distance, top and bottom, of the rod, and also on both sides of it, will be exactly the same. If this distance is not the same for all four points then the lamp is not in correct alignment and the projections should proceed as follows:

Loosen the four lock nuts B (fig. 1). This leaves the lamp free to be moved up or down and, also, from side to side. If it is necessary to raise the lamp so that the center of the condenser holder may be reached with the lining rod in position, the four lock nuts B (figs. 1 & 2) should be raised a sufficient number of threads to allow the center to be reached, and the four lock nuts C should then be turned to the right, by which operation the lamp will be raised the necessary distance. If it is necessary to lower the lamp the four lock nuts C (figs. 1 & 2) should be turned to the left, which will allow the lamp to fall lower on the studs supporting it. If it is necessary to move the lamp sidewise this may be accomplished by loosening the four lock nuts B and by inserting a screwdriver in the slot of screw D. By giving this screw a turn to left or right the lamp may be moved into the respective positions desired. After the necessary adjustments have been made the lock nuts B should be thoroughly tightened, as it will be unnecessary to make any further adjustments after the correct alignment is first obtained.

If, after the lamp is correctly lined with respect to the condensing lenses, it is found upon projecting the spot on the aperture plate that the spot is not in the correct position sidewise with relation to the aperture plate no further adjustment should be made to the lamp. The lamp and lamphouse complete should be moved to that position on the lamphouse sliding rods which brings the spot in its correct relation to the aperture, and the stop screw which will be found on the lamphouse sliding carriage casting should be so adjusted that, when the lamphouse is pulled over to its projecting position, the lug W (fig. 1) on the lamphouse spider will bring up against the before mentioned stop screw on the carriage casting. This screw should be so adjusted that the lamphouse will always stop in the correct projecting position.

It sometimes happens that condensers are of a trifle smaller diameter than the opening allowed for same in the condenser lens ring. When this is the case the centers of the condensers will be a trifle lower than the center of the condenser lens ring. This will tend to throw the spot a trifle low on the aperture plate, and this condition may be corrected by readjusting the heighth of the lamp as previously set forth.

It is necessary to bear in mind that, due to the fact that the positive carbon rotates on the optical axis of the projecting machine, a correct alignment is necessary at all times and too much thought cannot be given to this point, although once the lamp is in proper alignment no further adjustment need be made.

Instructions On New Projection Lamp

RHEOSTAT

This lamp is rated at 75 amperes at an arc voltage of 55 volts direct current, and the rheostate used in connection therewith should be set to give this current and voltage at all times. The lamp will also operate successfully from a motor generator set from which it is possible to get the number of amperes and the arc voltage already specified.

CONDENSING LENSES

The best results will be obtained by the use of a 6½" focus condenser nearest to the arc. The second condenser should be of such focal length as projecting conditions warrant.

CARBONS

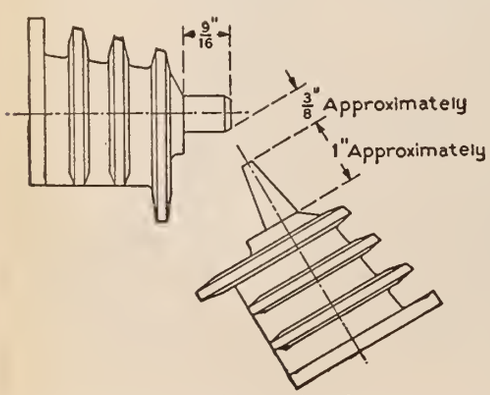
Use only high intensity carbons 11 m.m. in diameter—positive carbon length 18", negative carbon length 9", one end pointed. Do not use copper coated carbons or carbons having any metallic coating whatsoever as they are not necessary and are apt to cause trouble in the lamp. No other carbons other than those specified should be used, and these carbons may be procured from the National and Speer Carbon Companies, specifying high intensity white flame 75 ampere projection carbons.

CARBONING

Turn the positive feed handle counterclockwise until the positive carbon clamp E (fig. 1) is at the extreme rear position; in other words, a trifle further back than it is shown in the photograph. Next, turn the negative carbon feed crank R counterclockwise until the negative carbon clamp F is at its lowest position or a trifle lower than shown in the photograph. Push the negative carbon through the negative carbon head G on through the negative carbon clamp F until approximately 1" of the point of the carbon projects above the negative carbon head. Push the 18" positive carbon through the rear of the positive carbon tube A on through the positive carbon clamp E and on through the positive carbon head H. This carbon should project about 9/16ths of an inch beyond the head. After the positive wire is connected to the postive wire clamp J, (fig. 2) and the negative wire is connected to the negative wire clamp K, (fig. 2) the lamp is ready for operation.

When the first setting of carbons has been consumed the negative and positive feed clamps E E will be found to have traveled the entire length of the feed screws L and M (fig. 2), so that the negative is in contact with the negative head support bracket O, and the positive with the forward part of the revolving head P.

To reset the carbons the positive feed handle Q (figs. 1 & 2) should be turned in a counterclockwise direction as before, bringing the positive carbon clamp back to its original position. The negatve carbon should be carefully pulled up through the negative head with a pair of pliers until the bottom of the carbon reaches the negative carbon clamp F. The negative carbon feed handle R should then be turned in a counterclockwise direction, which will take the negative carbon down through the head into its original position. If more than 1" projects after this operation has been performed it should be pushed down until this amount of carbon projects above the negative head. The positive carbon should then be pushed forward so that about 9/16ths of an inch projects through the positive head as before, and the lamp is then once more ready for operation.



Correct positions of carbons

If the instructions are followed as given here no burnt fingers will result and no difficulty whatsoever will be experienced in resetting carbons.

Two safety clutches S (figs. 2 and 3) are attached to the negative and positive automatic feed controls so that if, for any reason, the negative and positive feed clamps F E should be allowed to reach their respective upward and forward limits—which would normally stop the feed motor—all danger of burning out the feed motor is eliminated inasmuch as it may continue to operate when this condition has been reached without feeding the carbons.

OPERATION

Closing the lamp switch starts the motor rotating the positive carbon. To strike the arc turn the negative feed handle R clockwise until the carbons touch and IMMEDIATELY reverse until the arc is approximately ⅜ths of an inch long.

No further attention is necessary unless the arc length varies considerably due to the uneven burning of either carbon, or an increase in voltage. If, however, it does become necessary to slightly adjust the carbons for proper arc length this may be done while the lamp is operating by simply turning the negative and positive feed handles in whichever direction is necessary to bring the carbons into proper relation with each other. To move the carbons ahead turn the knobs clockwise. To move them back turn the knobs counterclockwise.

The lamp will burn approximately 1¼ hours with on setting of the carbon clamps. However, the length of carbon still remaining to be consumed should be carefully noted after each reel so that no inconvenience is caused while the picture is being projected. When carbons are too short to run the required time they should be removed and new carbons inserted.

All lamps are set before leaving the factory to feed at a definite rate of speed which is predetermined by the amount of time necessary to consume the carbons with a current of 75 amperes flowing through the arc. If, however, a slight further adjustment becomes necessary this may be accomplished by loosening the locknut on set screw T and if the positive carbon feeds too fast the screw should be given a slight turn to the left; if the carbon feeds too slowly the screw should be given a slight turn to the right, and this adjustment should be made until the carbons are being fed at the correct speed. The lock nut should be tightened at all times between adjustment tests to prevent the screw being turned out of its correct position by the pressure applied to the feed ratchet pawl U. As will be seen from the accompanying cuts, the positive carbon feed is brought about by the star wheel V coming in contact with the ratchet pawl U at every revolution of the positive carbon revolving head. The speed with which the positive carbon is fed may be varied as before stated by an adjustment of the ratchet pawl U. Moving it in will cause the carbon to feed faster; moving it out will cause the carbon to be fed more slowly.

CARE AND ATTENTION

It is important that the lamp should be kept clean and all carbon dust should be brushed or blown from the mechanism once a day. Inspect the contacts to see that they are not wearing excessively. Do not substitute other material, as the contacts supplied have been found to be the best suited for this type of lamp. See that the springs on the contacts have not become weakened. DO NOT USE ANY GREASE OR OIL ON ANY MOVING PARTS OF THE MECHANISM.

MOTOR

Once a month the motor brushes should be inspected to see that they are wearing evenly, and the oil cups should be kept full with a good grade of heavy cylinder oil. The motor may be inspected by the removal of the motor and clutch cover attached by four screws to the lower side of the lamphouse spider casting.

Each week the equipment section will present special articles of interest to wide awake exhibitors

"If I made as big a profit for every square foot of floor space in my store as I make from my new BUTTER-KIST machine space I could quit business in a year and live on my income," says a BUTTER-KIST machine owner.

This is the famous machine that makes BUTTER-KIST popcorn, advertises it and sells it as fast as it is popped. A sure-fire money maker.

BUTTER-KIST POPCORN AND PEANUT MACHINE

Here is a money-maker. Merchants who have installed this machine say that it is a regular little gold mine of profits. It occupies only a few square feet of waste space in your lobby. In some cases it has paid an annual profit of $1,000 PER SQUARE FOOT of space occupied. Not only does it pay a profit from the sale of popcorn and peanuts, but it is a TRADE PULLER.

Popcorn is an everyday, every season seller. People love it. They love peanuts. BUTTER-KIST popcorn is so delicious people will go for blocks out of their way to get it.

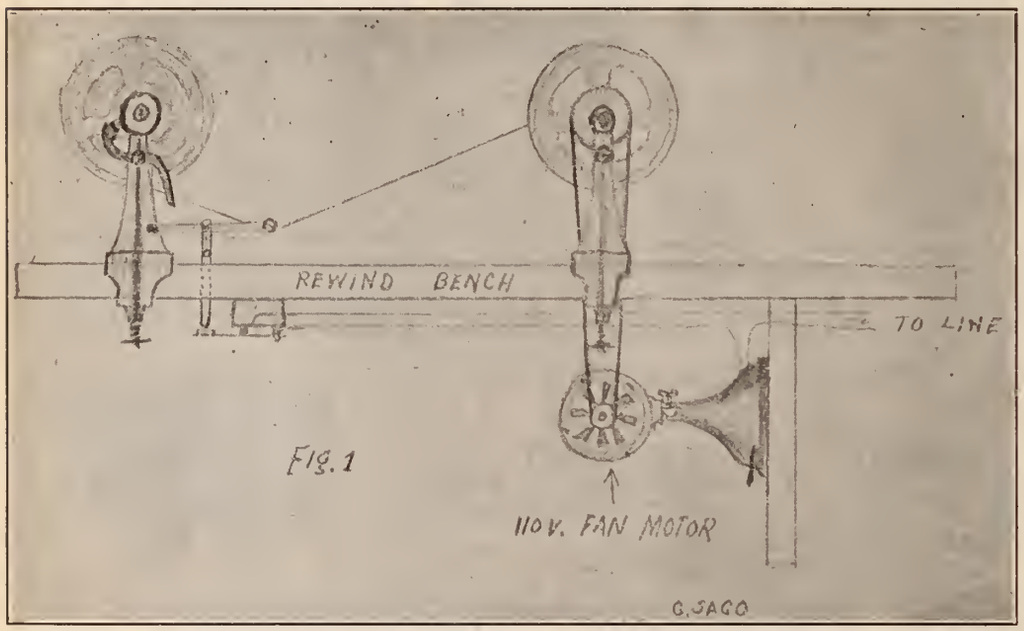
The "automatic" stop for the motor rewind, shown in detail



This drawing, prepared by Mr. Sago, shows the layout of his scheme

Brayton to Rebuild Majestic, at Streator

Monday, June 15th, marked the last show to be given at the Majestic theatre, Streator, Illinois. Bradford Brayton, manager of this theatre in the busily growing city of 17,000 people, has long wished to rebuild. During the winter and spring it hardly seemed feasible with a steadily growing line of patrons before the box office, but when the summer slump arrived, and it arrived in Streator with both feet down hard even to the extent of closing some of the manufacturing plants and resulting in a near financial panic, the line before the box office dwindled to some of the dyed-in-the-wool picture fans.

Mr. Brayton decided to close the show for the summer and to employ that time in carrying out his ideas along the line of the theatre beautiful. That is just what the new theatre will promise—the theatre beautiful, with artistically arranged lobby, foyer and a stage that will house many prologues for Associated First National super-specials when the new theatre reopens in the fall.

Mr. Brayton plans to make the new Majestic one of the leaders in the foremost ranks of cinema theatres in Illinois. The opening date will be about September 1st, and there will be a First National Picture booked to open the theatre.

No Let Up In Business For This Concern

Joe Hornstein, manager of the Howells Cine Equipment Co., 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, talks very enthusiastically about conditions in the motion picture industry.

"Why, we don't feel any let-up," he states. "Things are going fine with us. Of course we know money is a little tight but we seem to pick up new business every day. Right at the present time we are equiping the Plaza, of Paterson, N. J.; Glenwood, of Brooklyn; Capitol, of Irvington, N. J.; Lythic, of Brooklyn; Supreme, of Brooklyn and the Rivoli, of New Brunswick, N. J. We just finished the Florence, of New York; the Kinsway, of Brooklyn; Roosevelt, of Jamaica; Merrick, of Jamaica; Capitol, of Paterson; Astoria, of Astoria, L. I.; Capitol, of Riverhead, L. I.; and B. F. Keith's, of Boro Park. Not so bad?"

Howells specializes in Simplex Projectors, Westinghouse Motor Generators, Gardner Velvet Gold Fibre Screens, Peerless Arc Controls, and Snaplite Lenses.

Projectionist Offers Valuable Suggestion

From time to time projectionists send in valuable ideas that are of interest to their brother workers throughout the country. A letter and two diagrams received this week from F. G. Sage, projectionist at the Wolverine theatre, Saginaw, Michigan, contains a scheme that he has worked out to save time. His letter follows:

"I have noticed in the Projection Department of the Motion Picture News a number of different devices, very simple to construct, that save the projectionist a great deal of time and trouble. I think the little 'stunt' that I am submitting will be appreciated, especially by those projectionists who have motor rewinds of the hand stock variety.

"My device is very simple and easy to make. It consists of a couple of pieces of band iron bolted together and attached to the rewind stand as shown in the accompanying drawings. It makes a very efficient automatic stop for a motor rewind.

"I think very little explaining is necessary, as the working parts and manner of attaching the same is clearly shown in drawing number 2, as is also the electrical connections to the motor.

"The arm bearing the roller is about seven inches long, while the arm extending down is about five inches, depending upon the thickness of the rewind bench. From the diagram it can be seen that the instant the film leaves the reel the arm bearing the roller will drop of its own weight, striking the spring switch below the rewind bench, thus breaking the motor circuit. There is no danger of injury to the film, as the roller is of the relieved type such as is used on magazine valves, only the sprocket holes touching the roller.

I have had one of these stops on my rewind for over a year and a half, and I would not be without it. Hoping this will be of some benefit to the rest of the boys and wishing your department the best of success, I remain,

"Yours truly,

"(Signed) F. G. Sago."

New York Hippodrome Now a Modern Moving Picture Theatre

Julius Singer Opens There with His Two Big Features

The New York Hippodrome, the largest legitimate theatre in the world, which has been for years recognized as an international institution, has now thrown open its doors for an indefinite engagement of pictures.

Julius Singer, president of Sonora Films Co., fully realizing the necessity of acquiring excellent projection in the presentation of his two new pictures, "The Twice-Born Woman" and "Tradition," after having received previous satisfaction from Simplex Projectors, decided to select them to project his two latest masterpieces.

Accordingly, two of the latest type Simplex motor-driven projectors, equipped with Simplex lenses, two 110 ampere Simplex rheostats, along with other projection room accessories, were installed through B. F. Porter, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, the greater New York distributor for the Simplex Projector.

One of the interesting facts about this particular installation, is that Arthur Allen, better known as "Spike" Allen, formerly of the Capitol theatre, completed the installation at the Hippodrome in forty-eight hours, erecting the booth, installing the two type "S" Simplex projectors and piping from the booth to a vent in the roof. This in itself is indeed an accomplishment and it is interesting to know that Mr. Allen was the first man to start on the road with the famous Kinema-color Pictures and made an extensive tour, not only throughout the states, but in Canada and Europe, as well as playing before the King of England and the former German Kaiser.

Possessing a seating capacity of 5,000, the New York Hippodrome offers exceptional opportunities for the presentation of motion pictures, along with the customary prologues and incidental entertainments.

With a throw of 136 feet onto a twenty-two foot white special screen, installed and manufactured by B. F. Porter, the pictures projected the opening night were exceptional.

The present policy of the Hippodrome is two shows a day, seven days a week, with the two feature pictures, "The Twice-Born Woman" and "Tradition," which go on two times a day, each elaborately prologued along with selected acts of dancers and singers.

The above mentioned pictures are splendidly weathering the heat wave which has New York in its grip and Mr. Singer states that he looks forward to a very prosperous engagement at the Hippodrome.

Three New Houses for Los Angeles

A. L. Sanborn & L. A. Grant, 46th and Western-Rivoli theatre, will erect at cost of $250,000.

Gore Bros., Ramish and Sol Lesser will erect motion picture theatre at Gardner Junction at cost of $200,000.

Monster Lighting Bowl and Dimmer

watt lamp in the base. A panel in the floor for producing flame effects is illuminated by about 500 watts. In addition to this there are other floor panels and panels in the stage stairs which are used to illuminate the singers and other performers. In adition to all this electrical equipment, 5,000 watts are provided for sciopticon effects, such as water falls, clouds or lake effects and about 32,000 watts in lamps for flood lighting to obtain scenic color effects.

This equipment, though briefly described, enables much to be added to the presentation of Alhambra programs. The novel combinations and unlimited effects which the stage electrician has at his control and which are always completely recorded automatically before his very eyes are merely another example of the twentieth century genius which is steadily advancing the photoplay industry.

Installs Modern Ventilating System

In keeping with their policy to give their patrons the best, the Columbia theatre, Dayton, O., has installed the latest model of ventilating system in their house.

The Monsoon Cooling System was the fortunate candidate for the honor of being installed in this Dayton house. After a careful investigation, the Monsoon engineers decided that a complete equipment of a No. 7 Duplex Set of Monsoons, operated by a 10 h. p. motor and installed above the main ceiling, would furnish the Columbia theatre's patrons with gentle breezes sufficient to warrant their constant attendance through the hottest summer weather.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"Who Am I"

(Selznick)

"WHO Am I" is one of the best Selznick productions the writer has seen. And had it not been for its abrupt ending it would almost qualify as the best. This is because of the story which although of a well used calibre is woven in such a way that it appears entirely new and grasps and grips one until its rather abrupt finish.

We might say that the story is strong in dramatic moments, has enough well sustained interest for two productions, has love interest, plenty of heart interest, etc., etc., but it is not this that appears to be its attractive point. It is the air of mystery with which the picture is surrounded.

As an illustration of this, the opening reel starts off with the burial of a prominent gambler who is beloved of his associates. The large spacious rooms of his elaborate home are pictured with the well dressed mourners assembled to pay him tribute. The scenes then shift to the church which is filled with well drilled "extras."

During the opening scenes the heroine appears and is told by the man in charge that she should not have come as it was not her father's wish. The scenes are very touching. From the second reel on the story builds in excitement, reaching its climax when the scheming, cheating, villain tries by underhand methods to lead the young daughter of his dead friend astray. In a fight which follows he is killed by another woman who enters just in time to save the heroine.

The story is strong in love interest and is developed by degress until the final scenes.

It shows the love of a young gambler for the heroine. In developing the love interest the author has injected many exciting moments which are logical and well done.

And a word about the direction—it couldn't have been better, either in the handling of the actors, the selection of sets and exteriors or anything that a picture needs.

The leading roles are played by Claire Anderson and Niles Welsh, Gertrude Astor, George Perilot and Joseph Sweekard also being members of the splendid cast.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Among Those Present"

(Roach-Lloyd Comedy—Asso. Exhibitors —Two Reels)

AMONG those present in Harold Lloyd's latest comedy are Mildred Davis and Aggie Herring, who provide more or less atmosphere for the comedian with the horn-rimmed spectacles. Among the "also rans" are a temperamental horse, a Boston terrier, a trick suit of B. V. D's, a group of hunting dogs, and other properties and effects too numerous to mention. The idea itself is a favorite one on the screen, having been used in both legitimate and comedy circles time and again. Bebe Daniels had a lot of fun from the formula and scored a hit as the girl masquerading as a society queen. Now comes Lloyd as a bell-hop endeavoring to crash the aristocratic gates with a borrowed dress suit and a variety of trick manners.

The pattern has long been used by George McManus of cartoon fame. The figure of the stubborn Irishman in "Among Those Present" who is determined to keep in character despite the social aspirations of his wife who is a double for the picturesque old man of the funny page. Recalling some recent Lloyds we must admit that the offering does not compare with "Now or Never" in originality of idea, gags, incident or plain hokum. But Hal Roach and Sam Taylor have been together long enough to know something about comedy writing. They have conceived some admirable gags which, while not new, nevertheless are provocative of laughter because they are executed with plenty of spirit and dash.

The star appears in swell togs for his first appearance. No one thinks he is a bell-hop until a guest at the hotel claims the clothes. So he snatches them off Lloyd's back. A lounge lizard noticing that the clever kid can put over the Kuppenheimer stuff invites him to masquerade as a titled Englishman at a week-end party. Here come the gags and incident. The flash-back is resorted to when the star tosses off too much liquor and he relates whopping big lies to the amazement of the guests. He is a huntsman and a lion tamer rolled into one. Fred Newmeyer, the director, has kept the comedy lively throughout. There is no forced incident. Nary a scene is dragged in by the heels for the sake of providing a laugh punch. It certainly keeps moving. The funniest bit is when the bally bell-hop is requested to ride the skittish hunter and turns up minus his riding breeches. He dodges dogs, guests, and what not, in an attempt to register modesty, but to no avail. When his name is revealed as O'Reilly, the old man gladly takes him as a prospective son-in-law. The audience at the Capitol, New York, broke into explosive laughter time and again. So there is no question that the star has scored again. He still puts over a maximum amount of fun with a minimum of effort. Length 3 reels. —LAURENCE REID.

"The Reckless Sex"

(Christie Comedy-Educational—Two Reels)

EARL RODNEY and Dorothy Devore furnish the fun in this two reeler which has plenty of action and good light comedy situations.

In the opening reel the Christie comedy bathing girls are introduced and give a good account of themselves in a baseball scene which is worked up in the proper manner with plenty of pep and dash.

And it is because the hero is an honest umpire and gives a fair decision causing disappointment to the heroine that the story has its beginning, which swings into a rather trite tale when the hero, after squaring himself with his sweetheart, marries her, takes the young lady to his home and in the guise of a smart young fellow introduces her to his mother, who accepts everything for granted.

But the hero's mother is very anxious that he marry a wealthy young woman. In the scenes that follow he is seen in the company of this young woman while his wife in disguise is paling with his father.

There are many amusing situations laid in cabarets and dance halls and in the hero's home, where the young woman is forgiven for her recklessness, with the usual happy ending.

The interior sets are very pretty, especially the cabaret set which borders on the lavish and is well filled with extras and dancing girls.

On the whole, an amusing comedy well produced.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Our Navy in Action"

(Two Reel Picture—Photographed by the U. S. Navy—Not to Be Released Through Regular Channels)

"OUR Navy in Action" is an official government picture taken by Navy photographers on board the U. S. Mayflower and presented, whether or not the policy is the correct one or not, as unqualified propaganda for a U. S. Navy that will equal that of any nation.

As entertainment it carries a very healthy appeal to the emotions, with its "flag waving," shots of big and little battleships, planes, destroyers and submarines. Most of the real screen material scenes have been secured by various news weekly photographers previously. In addition to these there are a number of sequences having to do with the mechanism of navy war implements that fail to mean much. You see close-ups of highly polished steel contraptions with wheels, valves, etc. here and there, but what they are all for the laymen will never know. One thing is made perfectly plain, however. Modern warfare is a matter of science and complicated problems in mechanics. It makes it a little more plain why a warship costs many millions.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"Analysis of Motion"

(Produced by Novagraph—Released by Harry Levey Service Corp.)

THIS slow motion reel has been made with a camera nine times as fast as the average machine. It is intended as visual instruction and with this as its object it succeeds perfectly, for the details of dancing and jumping, lost entirely when filmed with an ordinary camera, are unusually interesting.

The first half of the reel is taken up with scenes of a toe dancer, who does a number of steps first for an ordinary camera and then before the slow motion machine. A gymnast turns somersaults and an athlete takes the high and low hurdles in a graceful manner. A dog wanders across the foreground in one slow motion scene and adds a touch of comedy to the reel.—LAURENCE REID.

Movie Chat No. 52

(Urban)

A GOOD old starting point, Luxembourg, showing some of the beauties that never grow old. And then we learn why, when the time comes, the Chinese will be in a position to defend themselves in conflict with any foe, building their defense upon the knowledge accrued by the thousands of men they have working in different countries, learning the languages, learning the methods of commerce and manufacture. In this particular instance, shiploads are returning to their native land, from Canada.

A few feet are then devoted to information regarding the heron, and the nests where they first peep through the shell in which they have developed from an egg to a bird.—LILLIAN GALE.

"THE OLD NEST"
(Eminent Authors-Goldwyn)

Undeniably Goldwyn's Greatest Picture

GOLDWYN should feel highly elated over its latest achievement, "The Old Nest," which may be characterized as a slice of life, so genuine and simple and human are its figures, incident and detail. Unstinted praise will be Rupert Hughes' reward for giving the screen something which is not only vital and expressive, truthful and entertaining, but which serves in teaching a lesson to heedless youth. It is a plea to write often or visit the folks back home—to give them a thought as we pass out of their lives to make our marks in the world. This lesson is brought forth in a story without a plot—a story of richly human episodes which invites us to look in on a typical American family and watch the divine mother love in its eternal song.

We peer in the windows or peek behind the door cautiously so as not to interrupt mother in her task of bringing up her children. It is an arduous task but one entered into with spirit and self-sacrifice. It is your home—my home—everyone's home. Certainly it will bring poignant memories. It will also bring a feeling of spiritual exaltation. Is the picture sentimental? It is, but never does it become mawkish. Mr. Hughes has seen to it that there is a place for everything and everything is in place. He might have been in a spirit world writing with an unseen hand so faithfully has he caught the thousand and one heart-throbs. Yet for every tug at the heart there is a balancing note of humor, for tears and laughter are closely related. It is this happy balance which emphasizes the humanities.

The children are first shown as little tots, unmindful of anything but the pursuit of childish whim and fancy. They are still unmindful of the duty they owe their parents when they leave the old nest. It is when they fail to write or visit the home that the poignant touches are realized. They invent little white lies which are easily punctured by mother, but she accepts it all philosophically. It is not her place to sit in judgment, but to condone and forgive, love and sacrifice. So Mr. Hughes has taken us back home again. It is an old story but which seems inspired through fresh treatment. No melodramatic incident is used to bring about physical action. In fact the episodes are as quiet as the rustic setting itself and as quaint. The two girls grow up and marry; the boys scatter over two continents. The children are really lesser figures since the framework of the plotless story revolves around mother's place in the home—her grief, her happiness, her work and play. There are admirable contrasts too. Father is a little stern, a trifle inclined to reprimand the children. And mother jumps to the rescue with the fury of a she-wolf. She turns to the window when they have grown up and departed and addressing a mother bird feeding its young, says: "Feed them now, shove the food down their throats, mother bird, they will soon leave you and fly away!" The title is eloquent.

Indeed the captioning of the picture is exceptional. What is said or described is real and human. These titles come from the very soul of the story. Mr. Hughes surely wrote them, just as he prepared everything else. The picture is mute evidence that the author has come into his own. It also offers mute testimony of supreme mother love. And here is where Mary Alden comes in for recognition. It is a portrayal seemingly inspired—one impressive, convincing, lovable. Surely her greatest expression. Dwight Crittenden is superb as the father, though his study is dominated, naturally, by Miss Alden's. She carries the mother burden without complaint. The other roles are finely played. Book this picture—it is worth a thousand sermons—it will make the home a little more snug and secure. —Length, 10 reels.—Laurence Reid.

"THE BIG TOWN ROUND-UP"
(Fox)

Mix at His Best: A Rapid-Fire Western Comedy

TOM MIX seems to be getting further and further away from that conventional Western which deals so tediously with cowboy, girl and gambler. Here the star, while starting in his typical cowboy role, comes to the city and appears in city clothes in a big city story. Mix refuses to take his Westerns seriously. He manages to make comedy and thrills run together through his pictures in such a way that there is never a dull moment. This is the case in "The Big Town Round-Up." It is a highly entertaining picture, and one equalled only once or twice by Mix in the past. We consider it as pleasing as "The Road Demon" and there isn't a Mix fan who will not be made supremely happy by it.

The star is once more the wild and rough-housing ranchman, virile, playful, and chivalrous. He rescues the girl from a rattlesnake and from a wild steer. Then he comes to the city, throwing a villain off the train en route. There is rough and tumble action when he is attacked at the dock by some dozen thugs. He gets some fun out of buying a non-shrinkable suit of clothes which does not live up to its reputation. Then he takes upon himself the job of protecting a very helpless little girl. This arouses the jealousy of his sweetheart. The climax is a fight framed by the villain which results in Mix taking the blame for the shooting. He finally gives himself up to the police. The picture opens with this scene and then works backwards to explain the action. This does not mystify things too much, and creates good interest.

After all, it is Mix and not the story, which makes this picture what it is. He wrestles with a steer, rides down sixty degree inclines, jumps from bridges to trolley cars, rescues a little boy from a runaway pony, joyously throws his cowboy playmates to right and left, climbs up the side of a building to surprise the villain, shakes up the storekeeper who cheated him on the suit of clothes, and then roughs things aplenty in the final fight. Mix gets in all this action and at the same time keeps the story from becoming heavy. He never loses sight of the fact that comedy drama, and not drama, is his aim. The picture never descends to farce, however. It runs along at an even, comfortable rate, with the Mix personality ever paramount. If this does not entertain them they will not like any vigorous action picture.

Ora Carewe is attractive as the leading lady, and Gilbert Holmes, as a diminutive cowboy, supplies some comedy. William Buckely and William Elmer are the villains.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Tom Mix, inimitable and unequalled screen cowboy and all-around he-man, plays the leading role in "The Big Town Round-Up," which will be the stellar attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. This picture has been acclaimed as one of the best that Mix has ever done. The story is different from the ordinary movie drama, and it takes the dare-devil cowboy into the city of San Francisco. It offers the highest class of comedy, combined with dramatic situations, and thrills of the most breath-taking sort.

Few of his admirers realize that Mix is able to make a most pleasing appearance when he chooses to dress in the latest modes. In "The Big Town Round-Up" the star lays aside his sombrero and flannel shirt, and although he is still the cowboy in his breezy action and straightforward talk, he is outwardly as debonair as the young city chap.

Mix is supported by a remarkable cast of experienced screen players among whom are Ora Carewe, an exceedingly pleasing leading lady, William Buckley, Harry Dunkinson and Laura La Plant. The scenario and direction are by Lynn F. Reynolds, and the picture is founded on a story by William McLeod Raine.

"The Big Town Round-Up" will have a ———— day run at the ———— theatre beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

On ———— we will have our old friend Tom Mix with us again. And, incidentally, we expect to have you with us as well, because Tom is here again with a rip-snorting, hair-raising, treat-'em-rough comedy-drama, which keeps you thrilled and at the same time laughing for a full solid hour.

The name of the picture is "A Big Town Round-Up." Of course you know Mix. You have probably seen "The Texan" or "The Road Demon." If you have not seen him, here is the best chance. Become acquainted with that daring, clean-cut Mix personality; see some of the most exquisite horsemanship that has ever been filmed; watch the hazardous stunts of a screen star who spurns a "double" and who acts with a dash and a realism, never as yet equalled on the screen. And at the same time, come to enjoy yourself by seeing a clever, original, thoroughly human story, of a rough and ready cowboy, who comes bewildered and amazed, among the teeming millions of San Francisco.

Mix has never made a more enjoyable picture. We have seldom had the opportunity to present a more entertaining feature for your entertainment. The star is daily becoming more popular. When you come to see "A Big Town Round-Up" you will understand why.

"BEHIND MASKS"
(Paramount)

Poor Entertainment and Dorothy Dalton Is Miscast

THE ancient and overworked "marriage of convenience" comes into expression again in Dorothy Dalton's latest picture "Behind Masks," adapted from E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "Jeanne of the Marshes." There is nothing about the offering which merits much praise unless it is the background, the settings being atmospheric and entirely appropriate. Certainly Miss Dalton seems miscast in a role which calls for interpreting innocent and suppressed girlhood. Here is an actress who has a compelling personality—who indicates through her bold expressions that she is perfectly capable of taking care of herself. And placing her as a girl in her teens is entirely out of order. The trusting, clinging-ivy type of ingenue should not have been selected.

The picture itself relies upon captions and seldom moves out of its well regulated orb. There is no physical action whatsoever—a quality which should be part and parcel of a Dalton photoplay. The first sequence gets started through a wordy subtitle and develops word, words and more words before the obvious conclusion is reached. What plot there is could easily have been compressed into two or three reels at the most. But in giving it feature length the director has brought out its shortcomings. With little incident and a good deal of hackneyed and overdrawn plot the spectator has nothing to do but wait for the conventional finish. The locale is an English manor, with a scheming guardian attempting to marry her ward off to the highest bidder, who happens to be an old roue. It is perfectly evident that the girl will work out her own destiny—that she will have clandestine engagements with the eccentric youth of a distant manor, who gives up the artificialities of society to shape his life in his own way. He is represented here as a fisherman dwelling alone in a nearby hut.

The stage is all set for some scheming at cards. The villain relies upon a cheating system to mulct a gullible Londoner of his wealth—the latter revealing himself in the end as a detective. There is also a weakling brother who is involved with the vicar's daughter. This counter love affair has no place in the story except to point a contrast and give it balance. It is quite probable that a sophisticated audience will chuckle over the scene which shows the schemers locking the detective in a secret vault—since it smacks of high-handed melodrama. The heroine goes to his rescue and finds herself imprisoned too. Yet she makes her exit and swims a goodly distance for help. In the end the weakling brother turns the tables on the conspirators and the guardian is forced to admit defeat. Miss Dalton needs stories with vital action and colorless heroines. William P. Carleton and Julia Swayne Gordon are lost in their anaemic roles.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "Jeanne of the Marshes," is the Paramount picture in which Dorothy Dalton will be seen at the ———— theatre next ———— under the screen title of "Behind Masks." This is a different type of story from Miss Dalton's recent releases and is said to be replete with big dramatic punches which one always associates with Mr. Oppenheim's work as novelist. The emotional star has the role of Jeanne Mesurier, a wealthy heiress who seeks someone who will love her for herself alone, and meets with the opposition of her guardian, an unscrupulous adventuress.

Miss Dalton is quite captivating in these scenes. Her artistry is well displayed in the scene wherein she is locked up in a cave with a supposed dead body and from which she makes her escape. The plot develops several surprising twists and turns and is said to be thrilling to a degree. The star is supported by a competent cast that includes William P. Carleton, Kempton Greene and Julia Swayne Gordon. Frank Reicher directed.

PROGRAM READER

A romance staged in the haunts of society and showing what goes on behind the scenes. With beautiful women, charming gowns, gorgeous sets and dramatic sensations galore—that is "Behind Masks," the Dorothy Dalton feature which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. The picture is an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's fascinating novel, "Jeanne of the Marshes," and offers the popular star a different type of role. It is a picture replete with vivid touches—touches that only Mr. Oppenheim can incorporate. Thrills are present in abundance and the offering is said to furnish a most interesting entertainment. Remember the date next ————.

"THE CONQUERING POWER"

Not Another "Four Horsemen" But Still Way Above the Average

"THE CONQUERING POWER" deserves extravagant praise and will receive same at the hands of better class audiences because it has been so well done and not because of any particular dramatic strength. The theme is that favorite of the novelist, poet, dramatist and scenario writer, "the beauty and strength of woman's devotion"—just the romance of two young people of France with the course of true love running not smoothly because the heroine's stepfather steals his daughter's letters and writes the boy that she is to marry another.

With this slender and time worn idea, based on Balzac's story, "Eugenie Grandet," Director Rex Ingram has built a picture, that for quality of acting, attention to detail, originality in characterization and in logic, is seldom equaled. The all star cast is composed of wonderful types and wonderful players. Rudolph Valentine, who leaped into instant fame as the hero of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," has a similar role, although not so strongly dramatic, in this and pretty, winsome, unaffected, Alice Terry is the heroine. All acting honors go to Ralph Lewis as the miserly and demented stepfather. He has the fat part and he plays it. Another clever characterization is that of Edward Connelly as the notary.

Mr. Ingram's atmosphere of rural France is perfect. His costuming is as good. His continuity or perhaps, to be exact, June Mathis is flawless. The titles are excellent, although there is an abundance of them. The lightings are artistic and the photography first class.

In fact the picture is all that anyone could have made from a story that depended on heart interest and incident, rather than dramatic climaxes, and way above the average feature release. Suitable for any house where they don't want too much melodrama and will stand for sentiment.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Rex Ingram's newest picture achievement since "The Four Horsemen," is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— under the title of "The Conquering Power." This is an adaptation by June Mathis, the clever scenarist, who also picturized Ibanez' great war novel, and in the cast are Alice Terry and Rudolph Valentino, two players who had principal roles in "The Four Horsemen." The praises sung in their favor in that memorable achievement may be heard again so remarkably do they fit their roles. Others in the large supporting cast are Eric Mayne, Ralph Lewis, Edward Connelly and Mark Fenton.

Mr. Ingram deserves great credit here for picturizing this story. He has so constructed the sequences that the action is always progressive. The offering is marked by wonderfully effective detail, picturesque backgrounds, exceptional acting, fine photography, and undeniably appealing dramatic elements. The story is one of the conflict of love when the course of true romance does not run smoothly until plot complications are swept aside. The picture is said to be way above the average in its entertainment values.

PROGRAM READER

A great author and a great director are responsible for the fine picture which is coming to the ———— theatre next ————. "The Conquering Power" is the work of Balzac, surely a master of fiction. The original work was known as "Eugenie Grandet," and it has been adapted with remarkable fidelity by June Mathis. Mr. Ingram will be remembered as the director of that memorable achievement in filmdom, "The Four Horsemen," and his ability is well proven here. Certainly he is one of the few genuine realists among directors. The picture is well fortified with dramatic strength, carries a definite appeal in its pathos and romance, and is splendidly acted by a cast that includes Rudolph Valentino, Alice Terry and Ralph Lewis.. Certainly no better feature of the season has appeared or will appear at this theatre. See it.

SUGGESTIONS

The name of Balzac—the name of Ingram, the director, and the names of the two principal players, Alice Terry and Rudolph Valentino, should be featured here to the exclusion of other angles in point of dominating your copy. Ingram has become famous as the director of "The Four Horsemen," and his work stamps him as an exceptional artist of his profession. The leading players achieved reputation in "The Four Horsemen." So in your copy treat it that these three still carry on with fine work. Play up "The Four Horsemen" as being the pictures which brought Ingram into the limelight. Play up Balzac's name too. Play up the picture as an appealing romance which carries surefire touches and which has a definite appeal. A musical number featuring a mixed quartette would be an effective prologue for the picture.

CATCH LINES

"See "The Conquering Power." directed by Rex Ingram, the artist responsible for the great film masterpiece, "The Four Horsemen." See the new creation and be royally entertained.

A great story by Balzac made into a clever picture by Rex Ingram of "Four Horsemen" fame. See "The Conquering Power."

"SHORT SKIRTS"
(Universal)

Gladys Walton Does Good Work in Mildly Interesting Story

"SHORT SKIRTS" might be called a pretty picture. It has "pretty" sets, a "pretty" star and a story which is mildly exciting, with enough interest to carry it through on any program.

The plot seems to be centered around the abilities of Gladys Walton, who has made a decided improvement in ingenue leads. During the run of the film she has a few rather difficult situations to play up and it must be said that she grasps and lands her points in a convincing manner.

The story falters as far as strong moments are concerned, the author or scenario writer sacrificing what might have been a rather dramatic tale to the abilities of the star. As a result the principal characters seem to be more concerned in pushing Miss Walton to the foreground than in the development of their roles.

However, the plot would have been a great deal stronger had the dramatic moments had their sway, which would have added to what seemed in the beginning to be an exceptional story. The opening scenes are interesting and amusing showing the "rise of the skirt," from the time of the revolution to the present day.

The story hedges around political and social life, has its scheming villains, its honest politicians and its hero who gives the usual good account of himself.

One thing must be said in its favor—it doesn't touch upon the gambling balls, saloons or dives, or the element which infests them.

She was only seventeen, but wanted to be known as a mature woman. Her mother worked in the campaign headquarters of a man who was running for mayor and was to marry him the day after election. PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The modern girl, half woman, half devil, all angel, is analyzed in "Short Skirts," Gladys Walton's newest Universal feature which is to be shown for the first time at the ———— theatre on ———— of next ————.

The story concerns a seventeen-year-old girl who hates the idea of being a little girl and gets herself and her family into an amazing series of difficulties from which she is extricated only after a big dramatic climax.

While "Short Skirts" is really a study of a modern young girl and her determination to follow the example set by her older sisters before she is out of her pinafores, one of its most important counterplots has to do with a mayoralty campaign.

"Short Skirts" is a picture with a message. It points to the tendency of the modern youngster to make the transition from childhood to maturity with a single bound.

In order to get the audience in the proper frame of mind for the story, the producer has opened his picture with a prologue which shows the evolution of the modern "flapper."

In the cast are Edna Gregory, Jack Mower, Jean Hathaway, Scotty McGregor, Edward Martindale, Harold Miller, William Welsh and Howard Ralston.

PROGRAM READER

She hated the idea of being called a little girl and so she got herself and her family into an amazing series of difficulties from which she extricated herself only after a big dramatic climax.

These few lines will give you only an outline of a story that is pleasing, amusing and strong in interest of the kind that will grip and hold you in your seats.

The story is really a study of a modern young girl and her determination to follow the example set by her older sisters before she is out of her pinafores, one of its most important counterplots having to do with a mayoralty campaign. In her determination to appear older than she is she is involved in a series of situations which nearly wreck a good man's chances to be elected mayor, blights her mother's happiness and makes a failure of her life until happiness and the hero step in and straighten out her affairs.

The picture has an attractive prologue in which the evolution of the skirt is shown from the time of the revolution to the present moment. Whistler's masterpiece "Mother" appears in the opening scenes.

The feature has many attractive interiors and exteriors, has a splendid cast and is well directed.

CATCH LINES

She was just seventeen but wanted to appear older. And so she attracted the attention of a much older man. Was she happy in so doing? See Gladys Walton in her latest feature, "Short Skirts."

How old is a woman before she is considered old? The heroine in "Short Skirts" was seventeen and wanted to appear as a mature woman. This led her into many difficulties. See Gladys Walton in her latest Universal feature, "Short Skirts." It will interest you.

She loved him so much that she was willing to steal for him. And then she found out the kind of a man he was. In what way did he repay her? See Gladys Walton in her latest Universal feature, "Short Skirts."

"DEVOTION"
(Associated Producers)

Conventional and Highly Complicated Domestic Drama

THIS is the sort of a picture that makes the reviewer reflect on the pleasant vocation of ditch digging, but which some audiences, and a good many of every audience, enjoy—a complicated double barrelled, "the villains still pursued them" story about a regular girl belonging to a gold digger family, married to a poor young man, with a rich chap, who everybody thinks she might have had, being framed by the plot development to look like he was a philanderer, when in reality he was buying the heroine silk dresses and fur wraps just because he was a friend and naturally philanthropically inclined. Also the philanthropist is found to be possessed of a wife himself: one who ran away from him when she discovered that husband number one wasn't dead but had been in prison.

There is a whole lot of scheming and conniving. A sister of the regular girl makes the husband think that his wife isn't faithful and the crooks and coincidence lead the wife into assuming that her man has a past. The course of true love is running very badly, but just before the bust up, the crook's wife explains everything and there is a double clutch, the jailbird having been killed while attempting to evade arrest.

There is nothing particularly wrong with the production except that it is deadly dull unless one can take the plot seriously. Each scene is part of a carefully prepared and closely dovetailed, but uninteresting continuity that stakes its all on the plot as it is developed with no incident of merit provided to hold attention as the story is built up. Nearly every scene has to be explained by titles. Some of these, apparently inserted by Eve Unsell, are good and one hands out a real laugh, the only one in the picture.

Technically the picture is well done and the acting is passable. Hazel Dawn is the heroine. She seems to have lost some of her good looks or else she was badly lighted. E. K. Lincoln plays the role of the husband, satisfactorily.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The chief attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— is "Devotion," a romance which features a cast of talented and popular players including among others Hazel Dawn, E. K. Lincoln, Violet Palmer and Wedgewood Nowell. Miss Dawn has a recognized place upon the stage and her screen appearances have been marked by a sincere effort to reveal her emotional capabilities. Mr. Lincoln has long been a star as well as leading man and his performance equals his previous portrayals in naturalness and restraint. The picture carries the popular elements which satisfy nine patrons out of ten—elements which furnish dramatic and melodramatic conflict, pathos, sentiment, intrigue and romance.

The plot concerns a girl who belongs to a wealthy family and who marries a man, forced to struggle for existence. She is happy with him until certain "busybodies" attempt to victimize her with intrigue. A rich admirer lavishes gifts upon her but his relations are above suspicion. The plotters in the story endeavor to make the young wife believe that her husband is an adventurer while her own sister, for mercenary reasons, tries to make the struggling breadwinner believe that his wife is unfaithful. But a twist of the plot develops which brings sunshine out of darkness. The result is the course of true love runs smoothly again. The picture is well directed.

spun touches, and romance is Rupert Hughes' "The Old Nest," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is as someone described it "like tearing down the wall of an American home and peering in on the family." The mother watches and tends her brood of children, fighting for them with the courage of a she-wolf, combating her more stubborn husband in sacrificing her welfare for the youngsters, and when they grow up they leave the old nest and, true to form, neglect to write or visit their parents. She watches and waits with supreme faith. She is the eternal mother. The picture is wonderfully real and human and finely acted and directed.

PROGRAM READER

A picture of the eternal mother who is ever watching over her children—a picture of the mother who has supreme faith in her offspring—a picture of home and mother as it is represented all over the universe—a picture of the great and undying mother love which keeps the old world revolving—which dries our tears and sacrifices itself for us—that is "The Old Nest," a picturization of Rupert Hughes' great story of the same name which comes to the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill this as the greatest mother love picture ever made. Go the limit. The picture will advertise itself by word of mouth. Play up that it is real—that it is human—that it is like taking a peek in the American home. It is your home—my home—everyone's home. Use simple music for your score. Play up the author. Play up the title. Stress the sentiment and pathos and go after every class of patron—from the old people, to the young married people and finally to the youngsters. Tell that it serves a lesson—not to forget the parents.

CATCH LINES

Do you write or visit your parents as much as you should? See "The Old Nest," the greatest HOME picture ever made.

Paramount Week

Is your town on the map?

IF your town was on the map last year—if you shared in the profits of Paramount Week—we're not talking to you. You know what the Week means to your house, and you know that this year, more than ever, you need that nation-wide shove to success.

If you haven't joined in yet, you're in a rapidly dwindling minority.

In 1918, 1,348 exhibitors were in on Paramount Week. In 1919, there were 3,662.

Last year there were 5,701. How many will there be this year? And—

How can you afford to stay out any longer?

An adaptation of this advertisement appears in the Saturday Evening Post, August 20th.

Great, Costly Theatres and Fewer Big Pictures

Last summer—in July—the writer of this advertisement published in all the trade papers of the country a carefully prepared table giving a forecast to exhibitors everywhere as to the number of big pictures that would be available from all sources. Out of an announced output of 700 feature-length pictures this writer's table, itemized by companies, estimated there would be not more than 90 really big pictures. The year is ended and actually there were only 51 really big pictures released in the United States. Seven of these played as road shows and exhibitors never got them at all.

This year Producer and Distributor announcements thus far made, including the better states rights Producers, forecast a total production of not more than 550 features from all sources. This writer again makes his annual forecast to exhibitors and, this year, being more than fair in crediting producers with more big pictures than they ever have made, it is our forecast that a maximum of 89 really big pictures are in sight from all the sources in the industry as follows:

Company No. 1	12
Company No. 2	12
Company No. 3	4
Company No. 4	1
Company No. 5	0
Company No. 6	0
Company No. 7	4
Company No. 8	2
Company No. 9	4
Company No. 10	10
Company No. 11	0
Company No. 12	6
Company No. 13	10
Company No. 14	12
Company No. 15	12
Total	89

In other words, out of the year's total output just about 20% of the pictures in sight will be big enough to sustain the costly theatre institutions in which exhibitors have made huge investments that must be safeguarded by booking big pictures.

A large number of the big productions for the coming year have been intrusted to the F. B. Warren Corporation for distribution.

"THE TARZAN OF TARZANS"

This is the fourth of a series of "Exhibitorials" by Charles Donald Fox. The series points a lesson for all exhibitors!

ARE YOU ON THE LINCOLN HIGHWAY?

OR—ARE YOU RAISING DUST ON A COUNTRY ROAD?

IN the game of driving your theatre to the head of the race are you gaining ground on your competitor by using the well laid, well lighted, modern "Lincoln Highway," or are you raising dust on a country road? Both roads lead to the same point. But how often do you encounter "breakdowns" on the dusty country road? "Breakdowns" are those stumbling blocks hundreds of well meaning exhibitors encounter in the race for patronage. See who's driving along the "Lincoln Highway"! You'll find the successful exhibitor on that road. It's a 100% perfect road and exhibitors making 100% perfect presentations in their houses are driving on it. They are never caught in a "rut"! There are no "ruts" on the perfect road. It's a drive to success when you hit the country's greatest "pike"! The "Lincoln Highway" leads to exhibitor success.

Are you guiding your house along it—or, are you, lacking foresight, raising dust on a country road? Are you, like so many other exhibitors, driving a beautiful house, forgetting to outfit it completely? Have you all your parts?

SYNCHRONIZED MUSIC SCORES

are one of the most important "parts" for your house! Just like the beautiful cars one sees gliding gracefully by on the "Lincoln Highway," so can one see the wonderful exhibitor successes on the "Lincoln Highway" of the exhibitors' world. The successful exhibitor is making a 100% presentation. He is offering a well balanced program of various units. His entire attention is not paid to the booking and screening of a single feature picture. That would be like driving a fine car and forgetting to buy the lamps for it. What good would the car be once night came? You could not see a foot ahead of you. Synchronized Music Scores are the lamps for your house. Have you any idea of the money you are losing because of the fact that you are not making a 100% presentation? Even if you are making some money, you are nevertheless losing money because you are not making all the money you could, out of your house. The only way to do that is to make a 100% presentation. All the units of your program must be on a par with your feature. MUSIC is one of the greatest features your program could boast of. That has been beautifully demonstrated along Broadway and the very men that have piloted those famous Broadway theatres to musical success are now preparing Synchronized Music Scores for you. Use them! Get on the "Lincoln Highway"! Quit raising dust on that country road! Twenty distributing offices are ready to serve you. These twenty distributing offices are the best "repair" shop you ever found.

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXIV JULY 23, 1921 No. V

Dull Day Thoughts

ALL signs in the independent sky would seem to point towards organization and cooperation both on the part of producer-distributors and state rights exchanges. To any movement tending towards a stabilizing of this important field MOTION PICTURE NEWS is pleased to extend a hope for success and a promise of whatever aid may lie within its power.

In aggregate strength the independent holds a large niche in film production and exhibition. Individually, however, the free lance has found himself at the mercy of conditions that hampered and balked him at every step.

Which is not as it should be. It is to the independent field that we must look for the inspiration and the opportunity that encourage individual production ambition. Initiative, ambition and genius can find the open door to a clear market and bigger achievement in an independent market that is healthy and growing.

Good health can be secured and maintained through honest, efficient organization.

Organization seems to be approaching us.

Despite the fact that your typical film man is a cynic who prefers to weigh every new development with the statement, "Oh, it has been tried before and they couldn't put it over."

Dull days give time for thought. The dull days of 1921 will have some slight measure of blessing for the independent market if they bring about cooperation on the part of both distributors and exchange men.

A World of Opportunities

STEPPING from the theory to practice, just think of what will happen to state rights atmosphere if the producer-distributors get together and compare notes on the men who have a habit of buying pictures and then failing to lift the C. O. D. on the shipments?

That's one angle.

Perhaps an exchange-men's organization would not make it any too pleasant for the producer who promises a full line of advertising aids and then offers them at a price that assures him an unfair profit on each item. (Those who know say that some of these reminders of General Film days appear now and then.)

Probably, also, an exchange-men's body would have something to say to the producer who promises an extensive trade paper advertising campaign to sell the picture to the exhibitor—and who then forgets the promise the day the territory is sold.

Perhaps—but why go on? What a world of opportunities!

What Has Happened To—

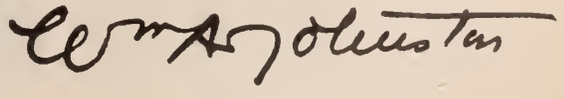
THE thought has just struck us that about every six months the film world offers opportunity for an editorial headed, "What Has Happened to ——?" So many good ideas offered, so many worthy movements inaugurated, organizations instituted—and then—a few months later, "What has happened to So-and-so?"

Well, for example, what has happened to the War Chest idea recently proposed to the National Association by Charles C. Pettijohn?

We hope it hasn't died.

In whatever form the War Chest idea is finally worked out it contains the makings of the real weapon for the motion picture. A defense fund on the one hand, a means of meeting the numerous charity appeals on the other, the War Chest combines elements too good to pass by.

Don't let it get in the "What happened to ——" class. Thresh it out, re-make it, change it here, improve it there—but before we face next Winter's censorship battles and meet next year's charity requests —let's have a War Chest.



Sig Samuels New House Is Dedicated

WITH the Governor of Georgia and the Mayor of Atlanta as godfathers, and the anniversary of national independence as its birthday, Sig Samuels' new Metropolitan theatre opened its doors at noon on Monday, July 4th, and took its place at once as the show place of the southeastern states.

The theatre was thrown open to the public for the first time at noon, but it was at the 9:15 performance that night that formal dedication took place. Governor Thomas W. Hardwick for the state and Mayor James L. Key for the city of Atlanta, stood beside Col. Walter Andrews the master of ceremonies, and Willard C. Patterson, the manager of Sig Samuels' enterprises, and congratulated the people of Atlanta upon the twentieth century palace of entertainment that had become theirs.

The Metropolitan, which is the Associated First National franchise house for Atlanta, only seats 1,700 people, but it is estimated that more than two thousand were packed into the theatre when Governor Hardwick arose to address them. The Governor stressed the value of amusement in the American scheme of living in his talk Monday night and Mayor Key told of the pride Atlanta had in such an establishment as the Metropolitan. Walter Andrews, while mastering the ceremonies very nicely, paid high tribute to Sig Samuels to the pluck and hard work which have made him a leader in Atlanta business and the practical donor to the city of the handsome new picture house. Willard Patterson and Colonel Andrews also spoke.

Kent Announces Changes in Branch Managers

S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has announced the following promotions in the Paramount sales organization:

M. W. Kempner, formerly salesman in the Albany territory, is appointed Branch Manager at Albany, succeeding Joseph E. Seidelman, resigned.

F. E. North, formerly salesman out of the Detroit office in the Toledo territory, is appointed Branch Manager at Detroit, succeeding C. W. Perry, who is now engaged in special work in the Chicago territory.

Only Three Film Companies Chartered in New York

Motion picture concerns incorporating in New York state reached the lowest mark during the week of July 4th, during which the records in the secretary of state's office show that but three companies received the necessary charters to engage in the motion picture business. These companies carry a total capitalization of $76,000, and include the 138 West 42nd Street Corporation, capitalized at $50,000 and having for its directors, Thomas F. Garrity, John G. Griffin, Gabrielle Brock, New York; Gloria Pictures, Incorporated, $1,000, A. C. Houghton Earl Barroy, A. A. Toochkoff, New York; Roosevelt Sporting Club, $25,000, Sidney R. and Augusta B. Anthony, Edward A. Geis, New York.

Urges Formation of Sales-Managers' Association

Formation of sales'-managers organization among motion picture distributors, corresponding in purpose and conception to the present Associated Motion Picture Advertisers Association, was the plea expressed by Henry Ginsberg, domestic sales' manager of Education Films in an address before the A. M. P. A. July 7. Such a sales' managers' organization, he contended would bring about greater co-operation and work to the mutual advantage of all the distributing companies.

He protested against double bills (bargain bills), declaring that they were unnecessary to bring patrons into the theatres.

Al Christie, producer of Christie comedies, on his first trip East in five years, said:

"The attempt today at the West Coast is not to make as many pictures as possible but to make them better than anything else" he said. They are cutting out the temperament and getting down to real work and the directors who harmonize with this requirement are getting steady employment and glad of it."

Wells Hawks presented the A. M. P. A. with photographs of U. S. S. New Mexico and Pennsylvania together with the letter of appreciation from the Navy department for the A. M. P. A.'s efforts in sponsoring the public presentation of the government film "Our Navy in Action."

The meeting was held at Brown's Chop House.

Censorship Receives Setback in Washington, D. C.

Motion picture censorship has again received a setback in Washington, D. C. recently Senator Myers, of Montana, introduced a bill in the Senate providing for a Board of Motion Picture Censors for the District of Columbia. It was referred to the Congressional District Committee, which in turn referred the matter to the District of Columbia Commissioners for report.

On Thursday, July 7, the District Commissioners reported unfavorably upon the proposed measure and advised the Congressional District Committee that the Washington public is not in favor of censorship and that any need for stricter regulation of motion pictures in the District had been amply met by the recent amendments to the police rules, prescribing what can be shown upon the screens of Washington.

This is the second time in a few months that film censorship has been defeated in Washington.

Final Blow Dealt Censorship in Missouri

A final blow, which sent proposed Missouri state censorship legislation staggering into the background, was dealt by Governor Hyde last week. A committee of fifty from St. Louis, which backed censorship at the last session of the legislature, recently presented resolutions to the Governor and the legislators, asking that a censorship bill be considered at the extra session now in progress. In his special message to the lawmakers, not even the slightest mention of state censorship was made by Governor Hyde. This means that no further consideration will be given proposed censorship laws in Missouri until the next regular session of the legislature, at the earliest. Two censorship bills were introduced in the regular session this year, but both died in committee.

Paramount Recognizes Its Mexican Distributing Unit

Announcement is made by E. E. Shauer, assistant treasurer and in charge of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., of the reorganization of the Paramount distributing organization in Mexico. The new organization is known as Famous Players-Lasky, S. A., and has already begun releasing. John L. Day, South American representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., was chosen president of the new organization and Miguel T. Gonzales, secretary-treasurer. The latter, who has been identified with the Continental Film Co., S. A., Paramount distributors prior to the reorganization, will serve as managing director of the new company.

Practically all the bookings are made on a percentage basis, all advertising being done by the distributor.

Owners of Parcel Post Shipments Are Sought

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is endeavoring to locate the owners of a large number of undelivered parcel post film shipments that are held awaiting claimants at the New York Post Office. Many of these packages are unaddressed and the only identifying mark is the title of the film. Others are C. O. D. shipments which were refused by the addressee and still others were unclaimed through some error in addressing.

The following are unclaimed shipments bearing no name of sender or addressee:

"The Fool's Goal," "One Million Dollars Reward," "The Best Bad Man," "Tech Beverage," "In Dutch," "The Great Handicap," "Topical Tips and Photo Plays Best," "Trouble Mender."

The following is a list of astray shipments which bear the name of both sender and addressee:

"A Mother's Appeal," (two reels) sent by A. F. Tortoul to Craitsman Film Co.; "Walking to Hearth," (one reel) sent by Famous Players Film Service to K. W. S. Dist. Co.; one reel, (no title) sent by Harry Lewy to Globe Film Co.. five reels (no title) sent by E. E. Barsock to H. Axelbank; four reels (no title) sent by Erbograph Co. to C. Moss; five reels (assorted titles) sent by General Film Co. to the Bijou theatre; one reel (assorted titles) sent by Fine Film Lab. Inc. to Met'pltn. Motion Picture Co.; one reel (no title) sent by the Pyramid Film Co. to L. D. Hughston; three reels (no titles) from the Topical Films Co. to Jas. E. McCue, Rec. Ship.

The following three packages do not bear the name of any sender but the addressees are as follows:

"Good Little Brownie," sent to the Fairmont Feature Film Exchange; "Shepherd of the Hills," sent to George Gordon; "Young Mother Hubbard," sent to General Film Co.

A. M. P. A. Will Hold Fifth Anniversary Dinner

The Fifth Anniversary Dinner of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., marking the fifth year of the organization's existence will be held at the Biltmore Hotel late in October and will mark the most representative gathering ever held of all branches of the motion picture industry, according to initial plans and reports for the dinner formulated last week.

Speeches by men prominent in public life will feature the evening's entertainment with a possibility that the function may assume an international aspect if the committee is successful in assuring the attendance of several prominent foreign representatives.

Secondary only to the formal speeches of the evening will be the installation of officers for the ensuing year, as the anniversary dinner will mark the commencement of a new year in the organization's life.

Screen Writers' Guild Has Official Organ

The Photodramatist has become the official organ of the Screen Writers' Guild of the Authors' League of America, effective with the July number, which is now on the news stands. In this number are articles by Harvey O'Higgins, Jeanie MacPherson, Olga Printzlau, J. Leo Meehan, Percy Heath and Bebe Daniels, and an interview with Elinor Glyn. The "Hints from the Studios" department is now being conducted jointly by Al Cohn and Kate Corbaley.

"B'way Run of Value"

HARRY RAVER takes issue with William A. Johnston, editor of Motion Picture News, on the question of the advertising value of the Broadway run for motion-pictures. Mr. Raver writes Mr. Johnston as follws:

"I fail to see your point in The Broadway Ballyhoo editorial of June 25th's issue. One is likely to forget that the motion picture is not a commodity, like clothing, shoes, flour, etc. Its appeal is to the emotions, and this applies also to advertising a motion picture. The public must use soap, clothing and other necessities every day but can get along without motion pictures and still thrive and remain healthy. I believe the Broadway Run to be a necessary stimulant, whether profitable or not. It reaches a certain audience, through advanced prices, which still frowns on the regular motion picture theatre and ultimately creates new fans. The mere fact that the loss taken on a recent Broadway run was seventy-five thousand dollars is no indication that all pictures suffer losses when presented outside regular picture theatres. Griffith's takings of over a half million on 'Way Down East,' on Broadway alone, is proof to the contrary. Would he have done this business at eighty-five-cents-top in a picture theatre? 'Cabria' took thirty-four thousand, net profit, at the Knickerbocker theatre, seven years ago, when it was mighty hard to get two dollars at the box office. Could I have gotten more than a week, or two at the most, at either of the two big picture houses—Strand and Rialto—at that time? In a pinch I might have gotten a thousand dollars for one week's rental and they would have insisted on cutting the film down to five or six reels.

"I don't believe you can mention motion pictures and soap in the same breath. They don't mix in our scheme of life. But I do agree that foolish and stupid pictures are sometimes presented in legitimate theatres, on Broadway, at a loss. All of which does not prove the Broadway Run unsound, when applied to worthy productions, sponsored by showmen of judgment and experience.

"When you say that Broadway runs will go into the discard when this business gets down to 'merchandizing,' you disregard the fact that motion pictures are not merchandise.

"Ever since the legitimate theatre began, the value of a Broadway run has been proven in dollars and cents. The same psychology holds good with the motion picture—imitator of the legitimate theatre and its methods."

Bert Adler in Theatricals; Retains Film Interests

Bert Adler, well known in film circles, has entered the legitimate theatrical field as personal director of Fanchon and Marco who lately closed the engagement of their musical show, "Sun-Kist" at the Globe theatre, New York.

The new activity will in no way interfere with Adler's representation and exploitation work in the film business, and he has engaged Ace Berry, formerly of Mayflower Photoplay Corp., to assist him in the latter department.

Rothstein Off for Coast

Nat Rothstein, advertising executive for Equity Pictures Corp. and the Joan Productions, left New York on Tuesday of this week for Los Angeles. Mr. Rothstein will visit the Harry Garson studios where work is now under way on the first of Clara Kimball Young's new series of productions, and following conferences there expects to return to New York by August 1.

Foreign Shipments by Parcel Post Permitted Now

Motion picture films in future can be shipped to foreign countries by International parcel post. This new ruling by the Postmaster-General has been made in response to a request of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. It is a result of the conference last week between Postmaster-General Hays and a delegation of National Association representatives comprised of Palmer H. Stilson, chairman of Transportation Committee; Paul H. Cromelin, chairman of the Exporters' Division; Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary and Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative.

The inclusion of motion picture film in the international parcel post service to foreign countries is of great importance to the industry. Previously incoming film shipments could be made by parcel post, but outgoing shipments were barred from that service.

Columbia to Have Course in Picture Making

Columbia University announces a course dealing with production of moving pictures. Several years ago courses dealing with the writing of photoplays were instituted at Columbia, and proved so popular that four different instruction periods are now devoted to this work.

By the inauguration of the new production course, students may not only learn the principles of visual appeal but how to apply them in actual practice.

The course will be under the direction of Dr. Rowland Rogers, vice-president of the Picture Service Corp., formerly editor of Paramount and Goldwyn Pictograps and later production manager of the Bray Studios.

Paramount Transfers Staff to West Coast

Among the members of the staff of the Paramount Long Island studio who will be transferred to the Lasky studio at Hollywood at the closing of the Eastern plant are Robert M. Haas, art director; Thomas Geraghty, supervising director; Waldemar Young, scenario writer, and Tom McNamara, title writer and cartoonist.

Arthur Levey Goes Abroad for Ass'd Producers

Arthur Levey, foreign sales-manager of Associated Producers, left for London on the Aquitania July 5th on his first leg of a tour around the world. His object will be to establish "A. P." distribution in the principal cities of Europe. Levey's departure is the first step in organized distribution of Associated Producers product in foreign territory, and was delayed to the present time pending the release of a sufficient number of productions to warrant the establishment of individual branches

Exhibitors Meet Under Paramount Auspices

Pittsburg Manager Conducts Conference with Theatre Owners of That Territory

CLOSE to a hundred moving picture theatre owners located in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia gathered in the Chatham Hotel, Pittsburgh, Tuesday, July 5th, 1921, at the invitation of Herbert W. Given, manager of the Pittsburgh Exchange of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The conference lasted from ten in the morning till four in the afternoon.

Mr. Given stated the idea originated entirely in the Pittsburgh Exchange, and, he assured the assembled exhibitors, was not "manufactured by the home office," as some of the exhibitor speakers said had been intimated to them by some exhibitors who did not attend. Mr. Given's statement of the purpose of the conference was as follows.

"This business conference is called for the purpose of exchanging our best ideas, for renewing and strengthening friendships and to create that enthusiasm and inspiration which comes with confidence and mutual trust."

The meeting was called to order by Wm. N. Robson, exploitation representative attached to the Pittsburgh Exchange, who acted as chairman of the conference and who worked out the details of the meeting.

There were three speakers outside the industry all of whom carried an important message. They were, in the order of their appearance; Mr. J. C. McQuiston, director of advertising and publicity, Westinghouse Elec. and Mfg. Co., who spoke on "The Possibilities of The Radio"; Mr. A. A. Alles, Jr., national executive secretary of the Industrial Cost Association, who spoke on "Costs"; and Mr. Alexander Dunbar, vice president and cashier of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., who spoke on "The Business Outlook."

Mr. McQuiston outlined the wonderful development of radio and called attention to the wonderful service used in many theatres the previous Saturday when the Dempsey-Carpentier contest had been reported in various theatres as much as eight minutes ahead of the other means of communication, due to the fact that the radio was instantaneous and was not delayed by relays and transcription. He outlined how the day will come when most theatres will have radio installed by means of which they will transmit to their audiences the latest news of the day, the exact time and various other things of interest.

Mr. Alles gave a technical discussion of costs. He also pointed out the importance of exhibitors knowing exactly what it does cost to do business. He outlined the elements which an exhibitor should consider in arriving at his costs and ended with an offer of assistance to any exhibitor who desired to avail himself of the help of his association in arriving at his costs.

Mr. Dunbar was the next speaker. He spoke of economic questions in general and brought a message of good cheer, stating that we were on the eve of the greatest period of prosperity the country had ever known but that it could be a period of sensible prosperity as contrasted to the excesses brought on by the prosperity which was enjoyed during the war.

After Mr. Dunbar's speech the whole assemblage went to the Chatham Roof Garden, one flight above the meeting room where a lunch was served. Here addresses were delivered by D. A. Harris, member of the national executive committee of the M. P. T. O. A.; and Mr. Jerome Casper of the Rowland and Clark interests and president of the Western Pennsylvania section of the M. P. T. O. A.

The home office was represented by Mr. Walter P. Lindlar, assistant manager of the division of exploitation who emphasized the importance of Exploitation.

Mr. B. Martin president of the Pittsburgh F. I. L. M. Club, told the exhibitors the purpose of the F. I. L. M. Club and its relation to the theatre-owners.

Mr. E. M. Stuve of the Pittsburgh office and president of the newly formed Motion Picture Salesman's Association explained the purpose of the new association.

Mr. Fred Herrington, secretary of the M. P. T. O. A., spoke about his organization and why all exhibitors should belong to it.

The meeting then resumed in the regular room downstairs and was turned over to Mr. "Dennie" Harris of the Harris Theatre Enterprises and Executive Committeeman of the M. P. T. O. A. A general discussion of exhibitor problems followed Mr. Harris's speech.

As the Ad Man Sees the Press Book Problem

THE following is a letter from Howard E. Jameyson, advertising manager of the Liberty and Doric theatres in Kansas City, owned by Samuel Harding, president of the Associated Exhibitors:

"Will you please tell me, Mr. Editor, are press books made by men or do they grow on trees?

"All the sheets coming from one company look as much alike as two peaches from one tree. I am wondering whether a good advertiser would use the same kind of display lettering in advertising perfume that he would in advertising men's work shoes. Somehow it seems to me that it would be appropriate to use heavy, rugged lettering in advertising a western or northern 'He-man's' picture.

"And why not ask Goldwyn why they use that extended Cheltenham in nearly all their copy. Why not put a combination etching and half tone in the books once in a while?

"There is much talk about exhibitors getting together, but right now the most serious problem is to get together with the 'ultimate consumer.' Do you suppose that Elsie Ferguson would ever work in a custard pie comedy? Or that Nazimova would ever park herself in a bathing girl ensemble? Could Nell Brinkley or Howard Chandler Christy draw a good ad for a farm tractor? Some companies use one artist. He is forced to turn out ads for comedies, dramas, tragedies, in fact, everything. Why not select an artist whose work is in keeping with the style of the picture. Most exhibitors depend upon press books for ideas.

"Why use borders that cannot be routed off, Mr. Producer? Your particular feature may not be the only feature on the bill. An exhibitor may desire to play up a comedy and your ad probably will knock the whole layout gally west. Pick scenes that can do some talking. The ideal ad wouldn't carry a line of copy. Let the picture tell the story, or as much of it as possible. Have your artists give the picture and original and sympathetic treatment. Don't try to give us pages and pages of 'canned' publicity. The public is fed up on Mary's pup that chewed the lace off her lingers while making 'The Muddles of Maud.' Give us two or three good, intelligently written stories and a synopsis. If possible, and you have something that really warrants it, give us a feature story with a snappy two column cut from the play.

"Nearly every press book contains twice as much press dope as is needed. If the energy spent in getting this out was used on about six stories the quality of press material would rise in the opinion of the editors in general.

"When a colored insert is made for the trade papers, why not have the printers 'pull' a few of them in black and white and have them sent to the exchanges? Many of my best ads have been reproduced from trade papers.

"The 'ultimate consumer' isn't functioning just right at the present time. He seems to be missing on about two cylinders. Whether its a weak mixture in the pocketbook or whether he needs a complete overhauling, is beyond my knowledge of 'mechanics,' but I'll say this: its the advertising men who are going to have to lead him back to the sawdust trail that hits for the box office."

What the M. P. T. O. A. Demands of Zukor

Sydney Cohen Issues Statement in Regard to Forthcoming Conference

THE following statement has been received from Sidney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in regard to the proposed conference between a committee of the exhibitor organization and Mr. Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Film Corporation.

"Acting under the authority conferred by the National Convention at Minneapolis, I have this day sent a letter to Mr. Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, informing him of the appointment of a Committee to meet him for the purpose of adjusting complaints and grievances of exhibitors against his organization.

"This matter concerns primarily unfair competition of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the exhibiting field. Mr. Zukor solicited an opportunity to appear before the Executive Committee of our Organization at Minneapolis. This opportunity was accorded to him. He fully and freely admitted the breaking of his former pledges and professed to have experienced a thorough change of heart. He promised to comply with any conditions which the Executive Committee might want to impose upon him, offering repeatedly to give carte blanche to the Committee and its officers.

"The Executive Committee had neither the desire nor the authority to take definite action in the premises; indeed, the Executive Committee wanted Mr. Zukor to go before the convention, but respected his wishes when he declared that a discussion on this subject with the thousand odd delegates would prove impracticable. His admission and offers might have been accepted, but the Committee thought it better to have all further proceedings entirely in the open.

"I want to say that every opportunity will be given by the Committee to Mr. Zukor to translate his promises and professions into deeds. The keynote of all these conferences must be reparation to the aggrieved exhibitor. It must be established, once for all, that men, whether individuals or groups, cannot use our own money to come into unfair competition with us.

"A complete reformation of the present contract and the system under which it has grown up, must form part of the program of reparation. Every exhibitor must of right be furnished with a copy of every contract he signs, and this must be done at the time of signing.

"One other inequitable but altogether too common practise will be brought to the attention of Mr. Zukor. Where an exhibitor has been using Famous Players pictures or any other brand of pictures for a considerable period of years, we believe that he has established a sound equitable value of which he should not be deprived arbitrarily. If such an exhibitor has built up a steady patronage for this type of picture, it seems contrary to all the rules of fair play to have the producer of these pictures establish himself in this exhibitor's community, as the exhibitor's competitor.

"Let me add that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, and I sincerely believe Mr. Adolph Zukor, as well, fully appreciate the importance of these conferences. We hope that the results, finally arrived at, will furnish new precedents and will usher in a new and better era in all dealings between producers and distributors on the one hand and theatre owners on the other. We hope that the entire industry will profit by these object lessons, and that other producers will respect the rights and equities of the exhibitor better than they have heretofore.

"I believe that the convention at Minneapolis has achieved great results in clearing the atmosphere and properly appraising the men and the interests in this Industry. No more solid foundation can be laid for a future better understanding. In these days of depression, with the continuous efforts of professional reforms and hired agitators to hamper our Industry and give the pictures a bad name, it seems to me that internal peace is absolutely indispensable as the first condition of progress. When we have found a permanent solution of the problems which have weighed heavily upon the exhibitor, through no fault of his own, we will have taken the first step towards the achievement of internal peace."

The Committee Appointed for Zukor Conference

A COMMITTEE of five has been appointed by President Cohen to confer with Adolph Zukor, as authorized at the recent Minneapolis convention of the M. P. T. O. of A.

The following is the committee: A. R. Pramer, of Omaha, Neb.; G. G. Schmidt, of Indianapolis, Ind.; J. C. Ritter, of Detroit, Mich.; W. A. True, of Hartford, Conn., and H. B. Varner, of Lexington, N. C.

Late News from the Coast

ROLAND RUSHTON has returned from New York with a number of stories for Reginald Barker, who is shortly to begin independent productions at the Brunton studios.

The Jackie Coogan films will be financed by the West Coast Theatres Company, or Gore Brothers, Lesser and Ramisch. They will be directed by Victor Schertzinger at the Brunton studios. George Stout is the business manager.

The Monroe Salisbury Players, having the continuity for a Spanish story written, will produce at the Brunton studios shortly.

Charles R. Seeling Productions have completed a five-reel Western, entitled "Big Boy Bronson," to be released by Aywon Film Corporation.

Morris R. Schlank has returned to the Coast with a contract for series of two-reel comedies, featuring Eddie Barry, to be released by Arrow Film Corporation, under the trade name of Broadway comedies. The title of the first is "The Bluffer."

Charles Chaplin is being sued for $25,000 by two attorneys of Salt Lake City for counsel fees regarding the storage of the negative of "The Kid" in Utah to prevent attachment by Mildred Harris or First National last year. Chaplin claims $500 a minute is too high.

Eddie Lyons is back from New York with a contract to produce a series of two-reel comedies, and is preparing to begin production.

Universal Manager Tells of Far East Conditions

Some interesting sidelights on the methods of presenting photoplays in the Far East were obtained from J. B. Morton, manager of the Universal branch at Manila, Philippine Islands, during the recent visit of Mr. Morton to Universal's home office in New York.

"American methods of picture presentation," said Mr. Morton "have not yet been accepted in the East. Exploitation, except in a small way, is practically unknown. The Philippine exhibitor uses a ballyhoo outside his theatre, and once in a while, a street ballyhoo of some kind. Serials and Westerns are very popular, the average native not being quite up to the deeper photoplays which are popular in the States."

Mr. Morton said that business in general in the Islands was good, and that the next few years would see a material increase, both in the quantity of the business, and in the appreciation of the inhabitants for the better class of photoplays. He will remain in New York for a few days, and then return to Manila by way of his home in Illinois.

Fight Films in Chicago 15 Hours After Knockout

Just fifteen hours and thirty-one minutes after Jack Dempsey administered the knockout wallop to Monsieur Carpentier, films taken of the big mill for one of the nationally famous news weeklies, reached the American Film Co.'s laboratories at 6227 Broadway, Chicago, by airplane. A big force of technicians were awaiting the negative and it was rushed through development, printing, tinting, toning and titling departments, and thirty American "Ten Point Prints" were delivered to the Chicago exchange which distributes the news weekly, a few minutes before 11 o'clock Sunday morning. At noon the exchange had the Chicago edition in the theatres and mobs of excited fans were able to get an eyeful.

Metro's Sixth Sales Convention Ends

HAVING sounded again the keynote of fairness to the exhibitor, the sixth annual convention of Metro's officers, district and exchange managers came to a close Thursday evening, July 7, at a banquet given at the Hotel Astor, New York.

After a report of the up-to-the-minute activity of the Hollywood studios by J. Robert Rubin, attorney for Metro, who acted as toastmaster of the banquet, Marcus Loew addressed the meeting.

Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, after emphasizing Mr. Loew's policy toward the exhibitor, spoke of the production policy of the company.

Other speakers were: David Bernstein, treasurer of Loew's, Inc., and C. E. Danforth, of Van Emburgh & Atterbury, who dealt with the present economic phases of the motion picture industry.

Among the Metro officials present at the convention were: Richard A. Rowland, president; W. E. Atkinson, general manager; E. M. M. Saunders, general sales manager; T. J. Connors, assistant sales manager, and Harry J. Cohen, foreign manager.

District managers who attended were: E. A. Golden, Boston; S. A. Shirley, Chicago; W. C. Bachmeyer, Cincinnati, and H. Lustig, Los Angeles; and the following exchange managers: S. MacIntyre, Atlanta, Ga.; H. W. Kahn, Buffalo, N. Y.; M. Hill, Boston, Mass.; L. A. Rozelle, Chicago, Ill.; W. W. Rowland, Cincinnati, O.; C. E. Almy, Cleveland, O.; L. Bickel, Dallas, Tex.; C. H. Townsend, Detroit, Mich.; F. P. Brown, Denver, Col.; S. L. Haldeman, Kansas City, Mo.; B. F. Rosenberg, Los Angeles, Cal.; A. H. Fisher, Minneapolis, Minn.; A. Abeles, New York City; William A. Scully, New Haven, Conn.; C. J. Briant, New Orleans, La.; C. R. Osborn, Omaha, Neb.; A. E. Atkinson, Pittsburg, Pa.; R. Lynch, Philadelphia, Pa.; L. P. Gorman, Portland, Me.; C. Stearn, Seattle, Wash.; F. W. Voight, San Francisco, Cal.; G. L. Cloward, Salt Lake City, Utah; Charles Werner, St. Louis, Mo.; G. W. Fuller, Washington, D. C.; S. Glazer, Toronto, Canada.

The Palm Theatre, Pueblo, Col., Reopens Doors

The Palm theatre of Pueblo, Col., has reopened its doors, following the completion of a thorough cleaning-up to remove all traces of the recent flood. In accordance with the plans of Joseph J. Goodstein, owner of the Palm, the first day's receipts were turned over to the Relief Committee for the Pueblo sufferers. The theatre closes its evening performance at 8:00 P. M., the military requiring all persons to be indoors by 8:30.

Stratford, in Chicago, to Have New Manager

Announcement was made last week that Max Slott, who has been house manager of the Woodlawn theatre for the past two years, has been appointed manager of the Stratford theatre at 63rd and Halsted Street, Chicago.

Mr. Slott will take entire charge of the theatre and will look after bookings.

Cannot Cancel Serial Contract, Court Decides

A CLEVELAND motion picture exhibitor cannot cancel a contract on a serial when it is half played, neither can he cancel a single reel contract, without notification according to contract. This was decided in Municipal Court last week, when a suit was decided in favor of the Standard Film Service of Cleveland against the Moonlight theatre, Broadway and East 55th Street. The Moonlight theatre tried to cancel a serial after the seventh episode. It also tried to cancel a series of short reel comedies without due notification to the exchange. The Standard Film Service took the matter into Court and had the case tried on its merits. The Court decided that neither a serial nor comedies could be cancelled except in accordance with contracts signed mutually by the exhibitor and the distributor.

N. Y. Censorship in August But No Preparations Made

According to information received by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, from the secretary of Governor Miller, of New York, no arrangements whatsoever have yet been made by the State authorities for handling the censorship of pictures as authorized by the Clayton-Lusk law which becomes effective August 1.

Governor Miller has not yet appointed the Motion Picture Commission; no provision has been made for supplying license applications to distributors either for pictures now in circulation or for those to be released after August 1; no headquarters for the Commission has been decided upon.

Many requests for information concerning the operation of censorship in New York have been received recently by the National Association from its producer and distributor members who wish to arrange for the licensing of their films that are already in circulation. It has not yet been decided whether or not the Commission will open an office in New York City or attempt to conduct the entire business of reviewing and licensing films in Albany.

"Garden of Resurrection" Not a Newell Production

Word has been received from Guy Newell, managing director of the George Clark Productions, of London, stating that "The Garden of Resurrection," released by the Stoll Film Co., was not directed by him. The American trade papers, in reviewing this feature, state that Mr. Newell was the director.

35 Graduate from Paramount Sales Class

The third class of Paramount's School of Salesmanship, under the supervision of Fred F. Creswell, closed its sessions last Thursday and thirty-five enthusiastic graduates departed on Friday and Saturday for their respective destinations.

Although the first and second classes of the school occupied four weeks for the course, the work of the class just closed was accomplished in three. This accomplishment was due in a great measure to the fact that a larger proportion of the men in the class had come from within the organization and their knowledge and experience as reflected in their recitations and written tests were such as to make greater speed possible.

Following are the graduates of the class and their assignments:

D. J. McKinley, Omaha; F. Hunt, Omaha; J. L. Roper, Minneapolis; S. Cooley, Kansas City; R. S. Hoser, Philadelphia; W. S. Ryan, Minneapolis; E. M. Kempner, New York; J. W. Thurlow, New York; H. F. Neil, Kansas City; A. A. Grimes, Pittsburgh; J. H. Grainger, Salt Lake; H. Antin, Denver; B. F. Durham, Cincinnati; J. B. Meloy, Cincinnati; F. E. Wagoner, Indianapolis; W. J. Clark, Chicago; L. E. Vogel, Des Moines; A. P. Longdon, Indianapolis; H. V. Larkin, Minneapolis; V. C. Jacob, Chicago; H. J. Mann, New York; T. Millette, Des Moines; J. D. Moran, Minneapolis; W. G. Carmichael, Chicago; L. F. Edelman, Washington; E. E. Geyer, Philadelphia; C. A. Roeder, San Francisco; V. R. Moore, Portland; W. C. Winship; Los Angeles; C. R. Christensen, Seattle; W. F. Agnew, Chicago; H. I. Horton, Charlotte; W. C. Johnston, Atlanta; L. H. Owens, Dallas; J. H. Elder, Atlanta.

N. Y. Official to Prohibit Obnoxious Film

COMMISSIONER JOHN F. GILCHRIST, of the New York City Department of Licenses, has barred from public exhibition in Greater New York a picture which is one of a group the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is endeavoring to suppress throughout the country. In a warning to every exhibitor in the New York territory, Commissioner Gilchrist threatens the summary revocation of the license of any theatre which shows "The Sex Peril," formerly known as "Open Your Eyes." This picture was recently examined by the Department of Licenses and officially deemed unfit for showing to mixed audiences.

Three other pictures of a similar character which were made under the auspices of the War Department exclusively for showing to soldiers in training camps during the war, are also in circulation in spite of vigorous protests that have been made by the National Association against their exhibition. These pictures are "Fit to Win," "The End of the Road," and "Some Wild Oats."

The National Association has repeatedly requested exhibitors to refrain from booking any of these sex pictures as their showing merely arouses indignation and a demand for censorship in states where they are shown.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

The Deposit Bill, introduced in the Illinois House by Representative Rew, and amended in the Senate, has been signed by Governor Small and is now part of the law of Illinois.

Among other things, it provides that where money is advanced or deposited as security for property rented, the money so advanced shall be deposited at interest with a bank or trust company authorized by law to do business, in trust for the use of the parties to such contract.

Also that when a contract has been completed or rescinded by mutual consent, the money advanced shall be returned to the party who advanced it with any interest which accrued while the money was on deposit.

The measure provides that in the event the contracting parties do not consent to return the money deposited, a bill in chancery may be filed in any court or jurisdiction in the country where the bank or trust company holding the money is located, and that the court shall try the issues and if it finds the party advancing the money is not liable for damages, for which the money was security under the contract, it shall enter an order returning the money to him.

The original Rew bill was modeled after the New York act and was considered much more favorable to the exhibitor, although the new act also is believed to be beneficial and protect the interests of those who rent film from exchanges.

W. K. Young & Brothers have confirmed a report that they are identified with the syndicate which has purchased a site for a two-thousand-seat theatre on the south side of Fifty-fifth street between Dorchester and Blackstone avenues, and that Architects Zimmerman, Saxe and Zimmerman, are drawing plans for the theatre. The theatre and site will cost approximately $400,000. The land taken over consists of a 175 x 200 - foot tract in Blackstone avenue, 75 feet south of Fifty-fifth street and it is the intention of the syndicate to cut a lobby through to Fifty - fifth street,, which will be 75 feet long and 50 feet wide, where an elaborate four - story front will be erected. Work is to be started as soon as possible and an announcement as to who will operate the new house will be made at an early date.

Manager Aschman, of Pathe, has inaugurated a scheme which enables his office force to get out their work despite the hot weather. The force has been divided into two shifts which work from 6 A. M. to 1 o'clock and from 7 A. M. to 2 o'clock respectively, getting their work over before the afternoon heat, which has been particularly oppressive during the recent torrid weather. Manager Aschman is among those who punch the time clock at 6 A. M. and states he is enjoying the early hours and that the office routine is being handled much more efficiently under the new system.

Schoenstadt & Sons expect to get work started on their magnificent thirty-two-hundred-seat south side house at an early date and state that the plans for the theatre have been completed by Architect Newhouse. The site for this big theatre, 150 feet on Hyde Park and 320 feet on Blackstone avenue, was acquired about a year ago. It is the intention of the Schoenstadt interests to erect a house which will be a credit to the city and a worthy rival to any motion picture house in Chicago.

The Randolph is setting aside its first run policy for one week only, and simply because of the phenomenal success of Jackie Coogan in "Peck5s Bad Boy," at McVickers. Thus, the Randolph will have Jackie Coogan in "Peck's Bad Boy," dividing honors with Buster Keaton in "The Goat," for the new week.

Bob Taylor, well known motion picture theatre man of Kewanee, Ill., has purchased the President theatre, Chicago, from Brunhild & Young for twelve thousand dollars, and will continue to operate this popular house as a motion picture theatre.

M. Mitchell, of the Quality Film Service, Atlanta, Georgia, was a Chicago visitor last week and while here made his headquarters at Pinnacle's Chicago office. Mr. Mitchell is distributor for Neal Hart series in his district.

J. A. Kruge, well known exhibitor who was operated upon for appendicitis recently, is making a rapid recovery and is receiving congratulations from his many friends on his successful operation.

Jim Cathro is again connected with Pathe after a sojourn on the Pacific Coast. He is well known in this territory and his friends are glad to see him located here once more.

George Landis is covering the Indiana territory for Interstate Exchange.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have another theatre. It is located at Flossmoor, Ill., and is out among the trees—a real open air theatre. Here's how it happened. Aaron Jones personally reviews all pictures booked in his theatres. Also, he has a summer home at Flossmoor with his partner, Adolph Linick. Projection rooms are so hot that Mr. Jones set up a screen and two Simplex machines, out in the open, where the balmy evening breeze permits thorough enjoyment. They saw "Dream Street," last night. Tonight the bill is "Deception." Understand they will show Charlie Chaplin, for the first time on earth, in his new feature at Flossmoor.

Bert Lubin, president of the Western Picture Corporation, stopped over in Chicago for a visit to the Rothacker Laboratory en route to New York. With him were Director R. H. Townley and Cameraman Holbrook. They had just completed the production at San Antonio of "Partners of the Sunset," the first of a series of six pictures of western atmosphere starring Allene Ray.

F. W. Kraemer, assistant Rothacker Film Company comptroller, was given a farewell dinner before his departure to the coast. He expects to be in Los Angeles several months. He will be of further assistance to Joseph Aller in installing a cost system for the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories.

W. W. Anderson, who, for the past three years has been assistant manager of Pathe's Chicago exchange, has been promoted and left for Atlanta to become manager of that office. Mr. Anderson is very popular with exhibitors and exchange men, who regret to see him leave the city, but predict big success for him. J. Gillick, who has been appointed to succeed Mr. Anderson as assistant manager in Chicago, has already assumed his new duties. Mr. Gillick has been connected with Pathe's local office for the past four years. During most of the time he has covered the south side as salesman.

J. Lamm, managing director of Brunhild & Young, announces that that company has purchased the Emmett Theatre Building and property located at 4338 Wentworth avenue from Rube Levine. Brunhild & Young have been operating the theatre under a lease for the past two and one-half years and have made it a very successful house. Twenty thousand dollars was the price paid for the property, according to Mr. Lamm, who states that the house will be closed on July 11 and completely remodeled, and that before it is opened a new ventilating system, new projectors and a complete new scheme of decorations will have been installed. H. Lieverthal, who has been manager of the President, will be in charge of the Emmett.

Walter S. Wessling, district manager of Pathe's west division, with headquarters on the Pacific Coast, stopped off in Chicago for a few days last week en route to Los Angeles, after a visit to New York.

Adolph Linick, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, is not afraid of the bogie man of bad business. In fact, business has been so good with this firm that Mr. Linick has bundled up his family, boarded the Aquitania and sailed for Cherbourgh. Before returning he will journey through France, England and parts of Germany. The same ship will carry Zig Faller, manager of the Bijou Dream, and his wife and daughter.

Walter L. Hill, Universal's live wire publicity director in this territory, recently returned from a trip through Northern Illinois, during which he visited theatres in the smaller cities, and brought back a big bunch of new contracts for Universal's service. Mr. Hill was demonstrating that pictures can be sold even in hot weather if you can show exhibitors that they will receive special exploitation and publicity aid in putting over their program.

U. S. Navy Will Screen "Sunset Jones"

A deal, just consummated between Lieutenant James O'Reilly, officer in charge of the motion picture bureau of the United States Navy, stationed at the Brooklyn Navy Yards, and the American Film Company, gives "Sunset Jones" to the Navy for showings in navy yards, aboard battle ships and in hospitals, American announces.

Standard Film Booking New Release

"Youth's Melting Pot," one of the series of the American Film Company's reconstructed features, which the Standard Film Company of Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Detroit, is distributing through the states of Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, is being booked by this concern in the territory they control, the company announces. This production is an adaptation of "Youth's Endearing Charm" and presents Mary Miles Minter in the leading role.

Music and The Picture

Regarding the "Musictionary"

A Practical Orchestra Leader Voices His Opinion On This Interesting Subject

My dear Mr. Isaacson:—

I appreciate very much your running my letter regarding the cue sheet. I thank you.

I read with much interest your article preceding my letter in the same issue. You have covered the subject even more fully and forcibly than I have. There is no question whatsoever as to the absolute necessity of a standardized cue sheet or guide to leader in scoring his pictures.

I take especial interest in the latter part of your article in regard to the Musictionary. I take the liberty of making a suggestion here regarding the publishing of same. First, I assume that this Musictionary will be published by one organization and will include up to the present time all music published, covering all modes, atmospheres and action that one encounters on the screen. Now then, have we gone far enough? Music is constantly being published. We find good music being written daily adapted to screen use, so how are we going to keep this book up to date?

This is my idea. There is published at the present time an encyclopedia of a loose leaf type. This encyclopedia is bought in its complete form and one may subscribe to all editions which are published, I think, monthly or thereabouts. I am not certain as to the frequency of the issues. It is obvious that the loose leaf system is superior to any bound edition, because with each supplement issued it is put in its respective place. There is no limit to its capacity.

The Musictionary, I would suggest, being published in a loose leaf form complete in its first issue and following the plan of this encyclopedia which I mentioned. I have no idea or could not suggest the frequency of new issues. That would depend entirely upon the number of compositions accepted by the company as fit for classification.

I might mention to you at this time that I completed about six months ago a loose leaf index of my library which may interest you. The index which I completed is first alphabetically arranged. I will try to give you an idea of its general construction.

To illustrate—These alphabetical pages take care of every conceivable need of mine in the selecting of music for my programs. If I want particularly an adagio 2/4, 3/4, etc., under A is a page marked Adagio with the respective rhythms and titles of compositions. Each tempo, such as adagio, has pages following it with a separate rhythm to each page, such as one page for adagio 2/4 and another for adagio 3/4, etc. I can also find an agitato under its respective heading with each number listed on that page showing its rhythm, such as 3/4, 12/8, etc. I may desire a ballet. In the B's is a page for ballets, each number showing its respective rhythm. I may desire a number purely characteristic of comedy. That would be found in the same manner under the C's. Should I need a national number, it would be found on a page to itself under its alphabetical heading.

I have a page "Rural Atmosphere." Now an illustration of the thoroughness with which I have cross-indexed all of the numbers found in my book is this: the number "Howdy" is to be found on this page under the head of "Rural Atmosphere." It is also a one step and therefore it is found under the one step heading.

On the page under the heading of plaintive (sentimental) is "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise." This number would be found under the following respective heads in addition to the above—vocal, with its key and Andantino, 4/4.

To further illustrate—under the head of descriptive music would be found such numbers as "The Mill of Colette," a sea storm (which is really MacDowell's Scotch Poem), a Dutch Wind Mill, etc. Each of the above mentioned numbers would be found under its respective title and also under a tempo-rhythm classification. as in the case of "The Crafty Spy," which would be found under Misterioso 4/4, also.

I do not know whether I have been as clear as I intended to be. If you are interested and desire any further explanation, I should be pleased to give you what information I can. I want to express my approval of the plan for the publishing of a Musictionary and it is my earnest desire to see the dream materialize, and could I be of any assistance whatsoever, I would be more than glad to co-operate.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Too Much Speed—

Wallace Reid usually draws well here, and this picture was no exception. It is only average, however, and is, basically, a repetition of one of his previous racing pictures. (Middle West.)

A very good picture; pleased immensely, and played to very good business despite the extreme heat. (Middle West.)

Wally Reid's best picture. Did fine business despite warm weather. (Middle West.)

Very good; receipts fair. (East.)

Sure did go over big. Large box office receipts. (West.)

Sham—

Not quite up to Ethel Clayton's other pictures, but did an average week's business. (Middle West.)

Good picture but business not so good due to torrid weather. (Middle West.)

Woman God Changed—

A high class picture which appealed to the thinking class. Did good business with it. (Middle West.)

The Gilded Lily—

A lavishly staged production which made a hit with the patrons and played to good houses all week. (Middle West.)

The Lost Romance—

A high class picture, very well done; very human and pleased a lot of people as well as us. Business picked up in hot weather on it. (Middle West.)

White and Unmarried—

The first three reels are very good; the rest is cheap melodrama. They seem to be making a mistake in putting this star in too many crook pictures. Business fell off because of the heat.

This is how "Sheltered Daughters" was advertised by the Loew houses in Cleveland, Ohio.

Too Wise Wives—

A rather tiresome thing which was only a fair box-office attraction. (Middle West.)

What Every Woman Knows—

Clean picture and pleasing. Box office receipts about as usual. (West.)

Beau Revel—

Pleasing picture which brought good business. (West.)

Idol of the North—

Good picture for warm weather. Did fair business. (Middle West.)

One a Minute—

Splendid picture. Receipts pleasing. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Peck's Bad Boy—

Second week and still going good. The picture received liberal press notices. A great field for exploitation. (Middle West.)

A repeat that did well, considering the weather. (East.)

Sowing the Wind—

Excellent drama with good business all week despite unprecedented hot weather. (Middle West.)

Scrap Iron—

Dandy film, with a cash-in on the Carpentier-Dempsey rage. Receipts fine. (East.)

The Old Swimmin' Hole—

Great picture. Sure did please my patrons and brought in the money. (West.)

Lessons in Love—

Pretty good business on this entertaining picture. (West.)

The Sky Pilot—

Fine picture and good business. (West.)

GOLDWYN

Boys Will Be Boys—

Fine picture. Business unusually good for this time of the year. (Middle West.)

What Happened to Rosa—

Flot too flimsy even for farce. Picture very mediocre. (Middle West.)

Wet Gold—

Very good picture and went over big at this house. (Middle West.)

Guile of Women—

The picture was fair; business was off. (East.)

Just Out of College—

A nice light little comedy but like all the others it didn't draw this week. (East.)

Tale of Two Worlds—

Poor receipts and equally poor picture. (West.)

METRO

The Greater Claim—

Alice Lake seems to be gaining in popularity here. The picture, a well balanced production, played to a good week's attendance. (Middle West.)

Home Stuff—

Played with Buster Keaton in "The Haunted House" and went over well for a week's run. Favorable comment was expressed by many patrons. (Middle West.)

The Little Fool—

A very entertaining little light comedy. Business bad. (East.)

Billions—

Pretty good picture. Good business. (West.)

FOX

Face at the Window—

Pleasing picture. Business good. (West.)

Foolish Wives—

Good business on second week of run. Good money-getter. (West.)

Big Town Round-Up—

Mix has made better pictures. Business fair. (Middle West.)

ASSOCIATED PROUDCERS

Ten Dollar Raise—

Fine picture which seemed to please. Business somewhat more than usual. (West.)

Foolish Matrons—

Very entertaining picture and one which brought big business. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Man Tamer—

Fairly good picture. Average business. (West.)

Reputation—

Another thriller. Business bad. (East.)

Girl in the Saddle—

Poor entertainment and poor business. (West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Thru the Back Door—

Large crowds at each performance. Box office value large. (West.)

Going big on second week. Great picture. (West.)

Carnival—

A wonderful picture which went over with us in big shape. (Middle West.)

REALART

A Kiss in Time—

Went over good and brought fine business. (West.)

Don't Call Me Little Girl—

Best receipts for several weeks. Good. (East.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

Cold Steel—

Fine business and picture seemed to entertain. (West.)

Black Roses—

A fair picture. Business poor. (East.)

HODKINSON

His Own Law—

Some very good acting by Bosworth, but a poor plot. Ran in conjunction with "What Happened to Rosa," the two drawing fairly well. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Worlds Apart—

Fair picture, average business. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Kazan—

Fine feature which went over well. (West.)

The Allen theatre in Cleveland advertised "A Tale of Two Worlds" as above.

Mitchell Sets Up "Bar" in Lobby

On this page is a lobby display for "The dol of the North," by W. Griffith Mithell, manager of the Majestic-Gardens heatre of Kalamazoo. The reader will ote the "bar" which Mr. Mitchell inorms us he succeeded in including a local everage company to supply gratis for the dvertising they would get for their Orange Squeeze."

The barmaid did a thriving business, aving her "suds" on ice, and the Maestic Gardens grabbed off many an extra ollar from people who were attracted by ie novel display, and had stopped to rest foot on the brass rail.

A corner of the Majestic Gardens theatre, Kalamazoo, showing the "bar" which Manager W. Griffith Mitchell installed as a part of the lobby display for the showing of "The Idol of the North"

Salvation Nell" Prologue Presented by Hyman

"Salvation Nell" was provided with n advance stage prologue at the Brooklyn Mark Strand that transplanted behind the otlights of the Brooklyn theatre just ich a group of Salvation Army workers at one finds on a corner in New York's ast Side on any summer evening under ie flickering light of a street lamp.

Managing Director Edward L. Hyman tired a group in Salvation Army garb, en and women. On opening the specta-rs saw a night scene in New York with hts glimmering everywhere. Off stage ie reverberating boom of the Salvation rmy bass drum preceded the appearance f the typical group of lassies with tamburines, cornets and folding organ.

The group marched to center of stage nd beneath a cut-out street lamp unolded their organ, formed in a circle and the dim light sang, "Oh, Come All Ye aithful." The singing was done by the Mark Strand Mixed Quartette.

As conceived by Mr. Hyman this prologue made an excellent tie-up for "Salation Nell," which as the title implies as a rich theme of Salvation Army activies running through it.

Canvas Submarine Attracts Romans Attention

A canvas submarine filled the long narrow lobby of the Regent theatre, Rome, N. Y., during the run of "Below the Surface." This is another of the displays arranged by Harry Swift, the Paramount exploiteer, for this lobby which is especially adaptable to spectacular dressing. The use of artificial palms and plants contributed to the atmosphere of the display.

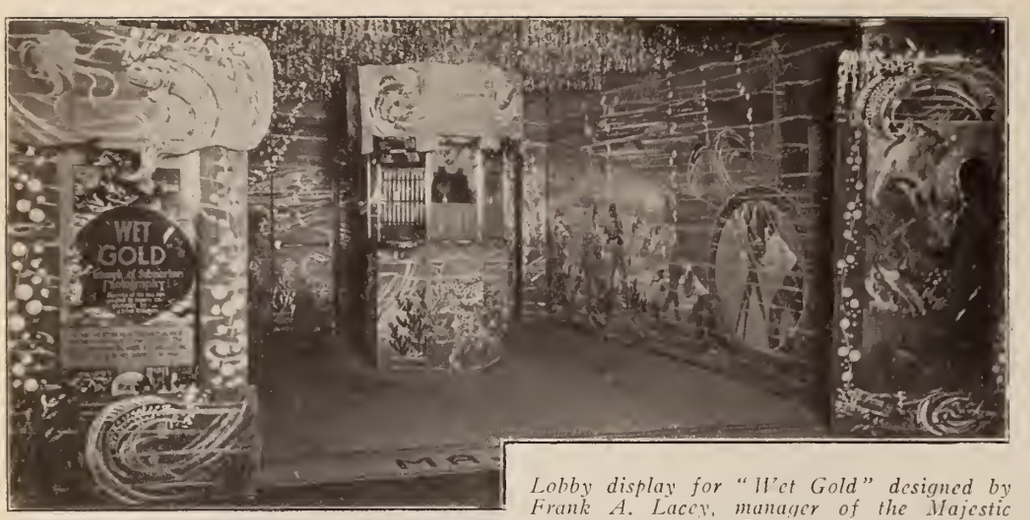
Philadelphia to Hold Movie Week

To stimulate interest in motion pictures in Philadelphia, the Stanley Co. of America has designated the week of July 18-23 as "Go to the Movie Week" in that city, and urges everyone to attend a motion picture theatre during that period. That these six days may be of special attractiveness to motion picture fans, the Stanley Co. has prepared programs for all its theatres of unusual merit.

Various suggestions were made as to when would be the proper time to create renewed interest in motion pictures during the warm weather and when people become lax in attendance at theatres, and after considering these it was decided by Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Co. that midsummer was the most practical time, hence it was that the week beginning Monday, July 18th was selected. These six days, under the title of "Go to the Movie Week" will afford everyone the opportunity of seeing some of the best films of the year, and at the same time it will enable them to renew their allegiance to the silver sheet.

The Stanley Co., through the medium of the public press, billboards, street cars and other advertising, are conducting a big campaign along the lines suggested by the title of the week and great interest is being aroused in the event, both in the city and throughout the many suburbs to Philadelphia.

Stage setting and characters taking part in the prologue which Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, originated for his showing of "Salvation Nell"



Lobby display for "Wet Gold" designed by Frank A. Lacey, manager of the Majestic theatre, Portland, Ore.

Chrysline Pulls New One for Mary's Latest

The Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., has one of the livest showmen in the territory, as its house manager—Mr. Chrysline—who is always in the lead with his stunts.

As a case in point, he recently played "Through the Back Door." The front of the Modjeska had been entirely transformed to represent the bricked back of a big old-fashioned house, with a tiny narrow "back door," through which one entered the theatre.

Two windows, the size of stock one-sheets were cut in the wall, one on either side of the little back door. Each of these windows held a one-sheet from the picture, and, lettered across the top of the bricked wall, was the name of the picture, and the star.

One entered the little back door—and, if one was inclined to embonpoint, one went in sideways!—into a lobby that was furnished as a kitchen. There was a stove, the woodbox, hanging shelves filled with groceries, pots and pans and the like.

The cashier wore a fetching little chef's cap, and a white all-over apron. The ticket taker wore the uniform of a butler while the ushers were dressed as pretty little French maids.

Newman Gives Special Mats for Coogan Picture

Following the methods employed by other exhibitors in exploiting "Peck's Bad Boy," as told in these columns, Frank L. Newman, owner of the Newman theatre, Kansas City, played to capacity houses last week. A feature of the daily program, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, was morning matinees, beginning at 10:45 and 12:30, especially for children.

Liberal press notice was given the picture, while 250 children, attending a daily vacation Bible school, gave further publicity to the production by parading from their camp grounds to the theatre, each carrying an American flag.

Quinlan Builds Big Marquee Display

Jack Quinlan, manager of Pantages theatre, Memphis, Tenn., woke 'em up again with a big marquee display on "Partners of the Tide." A big lighthouse was built of beaverboard, with revolving lights of red, blue and green, and canvas furnished an ocean with realistic waves created by electric fans. A small boat rigged up as a fishing schooner was rocked by a motor inside. Miniature lifebuoys around the edge of the marquee and in the lobby added the finishing touch to a fine display that got big crowds.

Meyer Gets Hamilton Merchants for Double Truck Tie-Up

F. S. Meyers, manager of the Palace Hamilton at Hamilton, O., whose initiative in the line of stunts ranks him among the most enterprising of exhibitors, last week effected a tie-up in connection with "Hard Luck" that brought him a double-page advertisement in The Hamilton Evening Journal.

Nearly all of the advertisers in the city were gathered together for the big display under a heading on one page that read, "Now or Never is the Time to Rout HARD LUCK completely out of Hamilton. Patronize these places and you'll never knew the meaning of Hard Luck." The heading on the next page ran: "Now or Never is the Time for You to Realize that HARD LUCK exists in the Dictionary Only—It is an unknown quantity at these establishments."

Mr. Meyer's own theatre advertisement was in the center of the double page surrounded by advertisements of the department stores, banks, furniture stores, life insurance companies, haberdasheries, electric companies, jewelry stores and the county fair, each one featuring HARD LUCK in big type and assuring the reader that the way to avoid it was to patronize the particular establishment.

Wendt's "Showman's Commandments" Idea

In a little book gotten out by Harold F. Wendt, publicity director for the Rivoli theatre, Toledo, O., for the employes of the house, is a page under the caption of "A Showman's Commandments."

Of such Solomon-like wisdom in the conduct of a theatre, whether original or not, is that which has been printed, that we are appending the sentences with the recommendation that every exhibitor, large or small, insist that his house staff commit them to memory:

Those who patronize the Rivoli are doing us a favor and they should command a just amount of respect. If they didn't buy tickets of us we would soon all be in search of work.

In the event of an argument, remember that the patron is always right.

A house attache's smile has "made" many a regular patron.

A smile from the box office has as great a drawing power as a high salaried star.

In speaking to an outsider—"our show is always good."

People naturally follow the crowds. Therefore, "business is always good."

A good showman never knows how a magician or mind reader works.

Stilt Walker Exploits "The Nut"

Fred H. Wilson, of Boston, who has a big reputation as a stilt walker and stuntster and whose exploitation capers for "Daddy Long Legs," have been told in the NEWS previously, has enlisted his services with the United Artists' Philadelphia office and is helping exhibitors put over "The Nut."

One of his recent engagements is at the Majestic Theatre, Williamsport, Pa., where he performed many tricks on his stilts, such as climbing ladders, dancing, shimmying and other stunts. His stilts are of such a height that he was compelled to put them on while seated in the second-story window of the theatre. An accompanying cut shows Wilson in action.

George Sharpe Makes Fresno Look to Its Reputation

George F. Sharpe, manager of the Liberty theatre, Fresno, Cal., has a REPUTATION for successful exploitation campaigns. His recent campaign for "Reputation," was the talk of Fresno.

He first interested local merchants in a "Reputation Week." The result of this was a double-page ad tie-up in Fresno's leading newspapers—a two-page spread of unusual distinction with the peculiar "Reputation" trade mark of the picture in each ad. The merchants also dressed their windows to carry out the "Reputation Week" idea, and made many "Reputation" sales, they reported.

Several days prior to the showing of the picture, the telephone operator of the Liberty theatre called the homes and offices of Fresno's leading citizens. When she got the number, she queried: "How's your Reputation?" and then hung up. This stunt caused no end of speculation and curiosity.

Finally, on the opening date of his four-day run, Sharpe engineered a parade of twelve new Willys-Knight automobiles, ten of which carried a huge letter each, from the word R-E-P-U-T-A-T-I-O-N. The jockeying around of these cars to confuse onlookers and then to spring the correctly spelled word on them was the source of much interest to the crowds that filled the Fresno business section at the noon hour.

Railroad Scene Used as Lobby Idea at Augusta

A complete railroad, with "spur tracks," a tiny "one-horse town," a railroad crossing, with wee little houses, and tiny dolls dressed as people in the story were some of the interesting parts of a special lobby recently erected by Manager Chrysline, of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta to advertise "The Traveling Salesman."

The railroad was built on a long table. There was a fine tunnel, and, as the train emerged from the tunnel, there was a little crossing labelled "Elliott's Crossing." An inch or two from the crossing was a wee doll's house, real glass window panes, and a glass door panel. One of the panels of the glass door had been broken.

Farther down the track lay "Grand River," and here there was a little station, a hotel, a straggling "Main Street" with drug store, barber shop, and all, just as it was in the picture, only many times smaller, of course.

The river of "Grand River" flowed down the little hill, and under a trestle over which the train plowed a dozen times an hour. At the top of the hill sat a tiny doll, in ragged trousers, torn sun-hat, and bare feet, fishing. There were two or three little groups of people up and down Main Street, and a little fat Kewpie doll represented Roscoe Arbuckle as "The Traveling Salesman."

The little train was driven by electricity and had a whistle that really blew, and a bell that really rang. The noise of the train never failed to attract people's attention.

This display for "Dangerous Business" is by the Virginian theatre, Charleston, W. Va.

This lobby display for "Kismet" was designed by A. J. Wood, manager of the Grand Opera House, Brunswick, Ga.

Musical Comedy Interlude an Innovation for "The Kid"

Jack Retlaw, manager of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., houses in Pomona, Cal., the American and Belvedere, staged a novel interlude for Chaplin's "The Kid" in that he disregarded the conventional usage of the Charles Chaplin imitations and centered his theme upon the little orphan kid. Added interest was given the prologue in that Retlaw did not precede the unrolling of the comedy with the staging but cut into the run of the film at an opportune moment with the interlude herewith illustrated.

He hired two Italian street musicians and dressed a youngster to resemble Jackie Coogan. The scene lasted five minutes, just long enough to carry home an idea of the kid's character, who interrupted the concert of the musicians with his mischievous pranks. The interlude proved a distinct novelty with Belvedere audiences. The team of musicians was also used as a stage number during the program so Retlaw killed two birds with one stone.

Baby Bear Advertises "The Little Clown"

L. V. Johnson Alcazar Theatre, Great Falls, Mont. used a month old bear cub to exploit "The Little Clown."

During the day the cub occupied a prominent position on a truck which also carried a deazon bell outfit. Schoolhouses were visited and cards on which was printed 'This ticket and $.10 will admit you to see Mary Miles Minter in "The Little Clown" were distributed. In the evening the cub patrolled the front of the theatre.

Wood Builds Lobby Display for "Kismet"

Once more "Kismet" gets a lobby display and unusual exploitation, as is explained by the accompanying cut.

This time the decorations are by A. J. Wood, manager of the Grand Opera House, Brunswick, Ga.

The lobby front was made of beaverboard, artistically decorated in blue and with the domes shown in the cut done in gilt.

Mr. Wood writes that he got his idea for the display from one built by the Alcazar theatre, Birmingham (reproduced in the News), and made up his mind that he would see what he could do in building such a front with "nothing to work with except a keyhole saw."

What Mr. Wood has accomplished with his keyhole saw and a few dollars exemplifies what handsome results may be obtained by exhibitors who have a will to do things even if they don't live in the largest towns.

The sheep which appears in the picture was paraded about the city with a cow-bell around its neck.

Dr. Nathan Prescribes for "Midsummer Madness"

The powder and capsule stunt worked in Stratford, Conn. for "Midsummer Madness" saved the Stratford theatre from closing its doors during the summer. Harry Feldman, manager, and Albert S. Nathan, Paramount exploiteer, exploited the picture.

Stratford has no newspaper which was another problem for Feldman. He posted fifty red and white cards as teasers which read, "Beware Midsummer Madness." Then he distributed two thousand envelopes which were labelled, "A Cure for Midsummer Madness. Follow Directions Carefully."

Inside the envelope was a gelatin capsule, which when opened showed a slip of paper which read, "See Midsummer Madness at the Stratford, etc." There was a powder medicine folder which, when opened, also had the same message. This stunt started the patrons on visits to the box office and the Stratford is still open. Feldman is impressed with the possibilities to work this stunt on "One a Minute," Douglas MacLean's patent medicine picture and like pictures.

Furniture Tieups for "A Wise Fool"

Jack A. Lacy, Paramount exploiteer out of the Cleveland exchange, has tied up the title "A Wise Fool" with merchandise. The tieups arranged in Toledo for the Temple Theatre was featured by furniture store tieups in which the catchline on the window card read: "'A Wise Fool' would buy this suite" and like applications.

A window tie-up for "A Wise Fool" secured for the recent showing at the Temple theatre, Toledo, O.

Ballantyne Presents Revue at Omaha

Eight Omaha girls scampered out over a runway, clad in snappy and colorful, even though somewhat abbreviated costumes, rendered original song numbers, did the latest dance steps and put over numerous other stunts usually found only in a Broadway musical show, all as a part of the prologue and epilogue which R. S. Ballantyne, manager of the Moon theatre, Omaha and his staff originated for the engagement of "So Long Letty."

A special stage setting as is shown by the accompanying cuts was provided for the "So Long Letty Girl Revue" which was the title bestowed on the number by Manager Ballantyne.

At the opening of the number Mr. Ballantyne used four girls and one man, all in evening clothes. On the second number the girls took positions along the sides of each picture box and drew curtains during a special song number introducing four other girls separately. This number was entitled "Girls from Everywhere" and represented a "girl from Boston, New Orleans, San Francisco and our Home Town Girl." Following this number came a dance by the Home Town Girl, with a feature of the ballet being the lighting from directly overhead.

During the ballet number, the four girls in evening gowns, stepped back of the street car set piece shown in the cut and changed their gowns, appearing in bathing suits. During the time the girls were taking off their evening gowns, silhouette effect on the side of the car was obtained by back lighting.

With the bathing girls back a number was given by the eight girls and then the closing number by the whole company came. This was on the special runway built over the seats of the theatre in true Winter Garden fashion.

All the songs and music for the revue were written by Wallace Wheeler, pianist at the Moon, while Miss Dorothy De Vere directed the dance numbers.

The special song numbers were entitled "You Won My Heart So Easily," "Girls From Everywhere," "Highbrow Blues," "Wouldn't You Like to Learn to Like a Girl Like Letty?"

Single Window Card Effective

A. Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer, broke into Rosenberg, Oregon, for the town's first window tieups, featuring them with conspicuous single cards.

The picture was "Heliotrope," playing at the Antler's theatres.

"Heliotrope" window display secured for the showing of this picture by A. Mike Vogel, at the Antlers theatre, Rosenburg, Ore.

Wendt Goes After Visiting Moosers

Harold F. Wendt made a special effort to corral the visiting Loyal Order of Moose during the recent convention of this order held at Toledo, O., where Wendt is publicity director of the Rivoli theatre.

Imitation personal picture cards with a cut of the interior of the Rivoli were prepared. The message on the cards was a greeting to the visiting Moose and the address side was so printed as to look as if they had come through the mail.

These cards were taken to the twenty-two leading hotels. A few passes encouraged the clerks to put one in each of the guests' mail and key boxes. When the delegates returned to their rooms they received the cards. It was advertising forced upon them in a pleasant way. They kept the cards, which took on all the appearances of having come through the mails, as souvenirs. In all, ten thousand cards were distributed through the hotels. Then a fleet of boys were sent out on the streets and each person wearing a badge or the regalia of the order were handed a card. For the entire week a trail was run in the theatre welcoming the visitors. The opening meeting of the convention saw one of the post cards distributed to each in attendance. All newspaper ads were headed "Howdy Pap." To top it all off, the Mooseheart Boys' Band was invited to be the guests of the theatre at a box party the first night they were in the city. The leader consented to have the band appear on the stage and renders a few selections. This special feature was announced on the streets with one-sheets. Then, too, the front of the theatre was decorated in the national and Moose colors and emblems, making it "the official amusement headquarters for the Moose." As to whether or not the campaign paid—it might be said that at many performances there were more people in the theatre wearing Moose badges and uniforms than there were those who were not affiliated with the order.

Local patrons were also attracted by the campaign and turned out in greater numbers than usual at every performance.

Decorations for "Black Roses" playing recently at the Butterfly theatre, Milwaukee

Ryan Has New Serial Exploitation Idea

Charles H. Ryan, manager of the Garfield theatre, Chicago, has adopted the use of a "Garfield Serial Club" card during the run of "Do or Die."

The card is not good for admission to the theatre and is not sold but any person who attends the show during the run of "Do or Die" for the eighteen episodes and has his ticket punched in spaces provided for the purpose will be admitted free for the first five episodes of the next serial production that is to follow the current attraction.

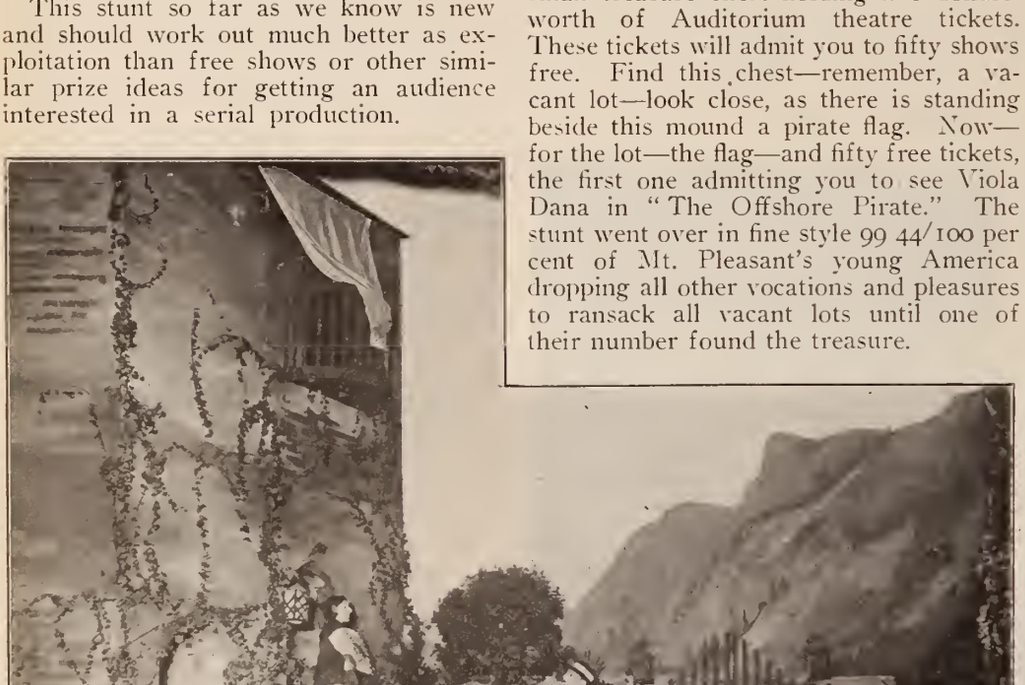
This stunt so far as we know is new and should work out much better as exploitation than free shows or other similar prize ideas for getting an audience interested in a serial production.

Treasure Hunt Goes On Big at Mt. Pleasant, Ia.

The good old reliable, sure fire business getting treasure hunt has been used with gratifying success for "The Offshore Pirate," by the Auditorium theatre, Mount Pleasant, Iowa.

The Auditorium announced the details of the treasure hunt with the following ad:

"Boys and Girls: The offshore Pirate has buried his treasure somewhere in Mt. Pleasant. In some vacant lot within the city limits of Mt. Pleasant is buried a small treasure chest holding five dollars' worth of Auditorium theatre tickets. These tickets will admit you to fifty shows free. Find this chest—remember, a vacant lot—look close, as there is standing beside this mound a pirate flag. Now—for the lot—the flag—and fifty free tickets, the first one admitting you to see Viola Dana in "The Offshore Pirate." The stunt went over in fine style 99 44/100 per cent of Mt. Pleasant's young America dropping all other vocations and pleasures to ransack all vacant lots until one of their number found the treasure.



Prologue characters and stage setting for "The Passion Flower" as presented at the Ambassador theatre, Los Angeles

Milwaukee Theatre Builds Fine Lobby Front

For the recent showing of "Black Roses" at the Butterfly theatre, Milwaukee, the management arranged a splendid presentation, with a lobby display that was unique and effective. One of the striking points about the lobby is that it was sodded with genuine growing sod, and was decorated beautifully with cherry blossoms. The Japanese note was carried throughout the house, and usherettes being dressed in Japanese costumes, with Japanese head dress and carrying ornamental fans.

"Passion Flower" Prologue Is Elaborate

A scenically effective and musically beautiful prologue for the recent engagement of "The Passion Flower" at the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles more than caught the fancy of Los Angeles picture fans.

The entire setting was newly constructed, massive and draped in accordance with the color demands of the locale—Spain.

Roy Smoot, a tenor, and Stella Hymson, a young lyric soprano, were the soloists. The action of the prologue began with Smoot's entry, serenading the girl who looked down from the little balcony. As his song increased in pathos the girl came downstairs and met him in the small garden. There she joined him in a duet, which ended in a lover's quarrel. A short vision of another man hidden behind shrubbery sufficed to give the singer cause for jealousy and the scene ended with the lovers parting in anger.

The staging was made successful by Wm. Newbury, business manager for the Kinema, and Jack MacPherson, stage director, who designed and constructed the setting. Harry Arthur, Jr., general manager of the Gore Bros.-Ramish & Sol Lesser houses on the West Coast staged the entire performance.

This lobby display for "The Gilded Lily" is the work of the Palace theatre, Muskogee, Okla.

Howell Has Artistic "Gilded Lily" Display

An artistic lobby display on the "Gilded Lily" was designed by Organist Howell, of the Palace theatre, Muskogee, Okla.

Artificial lilies were effectively placed on the beaverboard banners at the sides as shown in the accompanying picture. Subdued lobby lights concealed in green and blue draperies, which formed a background for the cut-out in the center, lent a luxurious effect to the display. The star's name was in gilt letters.

Elaborate Prologue for "White and Unmarried" Staged

For his prologue idea for "White and Unmarried," Sid Grauman, managing director of Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles, borrowed from the picture itself.

A scene in the production shows the "Blue Devil's Cafe," a Parisian underworld resort.

Mr. Grauman picked out the salient features of this scene and reproduced it on the stage. He had his stage carpenters build a huge cauldron, under which by the aid of artificial means, such as lights, paper streamers and colors, he produced the effect of flaming fire leaping up the sides of the huge kettle.

Into the big pot he placed a jazz orchestra, and men clad in the proverbial uniform of Satan paroled the place and waited on the customers.

The program was enlivened with the presentation of a number of acts, with the "Cafe Scene" as the locale, or comprising the scenic background. There were some dance numbers, the "Wild Man's Frolics" as seen in the picture, exhibitions by a gymnast and several dance acts. The number was received with tremendous applause and was acclaimed by Los Angeles critics as one of the most effective prologues ever staged by Mr. Grauman.

Pittsburgh Press Donates Advertising Space

A tieup between theatres and the Pittsburgh Press whereby the paper would run a 3-inch advertisement of the theatre free of charge was engineered by William N. Robson, Paramount exploiteer for the Pittsburgh exchange.

The Pittsburgh exchange placed a full page Paramount advertisement with the Press. P. H. Mansfield, the dramatic editor of the Press offered all theatres the opportunity of tying up with the Paramount ad. The theatres in turn agreed to run a slide for two weeks advertising "Buried Treasure," which was running as a news feature, or any other feature printed in the Press.

Nearly every theatre in town, many of which were not advertising, took advantage of the offer.

Strand Theatre Has Elaborate Prologue Number

The most elaborate exploitation ever attempted by a motion picture theatre in North Carolina, it is declared, was that just arranged by Joseph Duncan, manager of the Strand theatre, Asheville, N. C., in connection with "The Love Flower." A high wall of seemingly red brick, with beautiful flowers growing up and atop of the wall, was erected in front of the theatre. A large gate opened into the lobby and a "sweetheart swing" with a magazine carelessly reposing on the cushions gave the vicinity a sentimental touch that was strikingly appealing. The display secured deserved publicity in Asheville newspapers and was the subject of much favorable comment among the people of the city.

This is a view of the prologue which Sid Grauman presented in conjunction with the showing of "White and Unmarried" when this picture played Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles

Illustrating the accompanying story of the prologue number presented for "Passion" by the Bleich theatre, Owensboro, Ky.

Reproduces Scene from Picture as Prologue

One of the most novel prologues ever staged in Los Angeles was the number which Jack MacPherson, stage director for the Kinema theatre, originated for the recent showing of "Not Guilty."

An exact replica of the first scene was mounted on the Kinema stage, with a soloist made up to resemble the leading character. Three dancers from the Ruth St. Denis School of Dancing were given pantomime roles, expressing their desires for the lonely man, who sang as solo "Memories." While the dancing went on and the song ended in plaintive sobbing a novel stereopticon illusion threw a picture of the leading woman in the picture, "Sylvia Breamer," upon the backdrop, and the man turned with his hands stretched for the picture. It was thus carried home that the cause of the man's loneliness was a woman. The prologue aided the screening in no small measure. It was conceived by Harry Arthur, Jr., general manager of the West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Rogers Builds Another Fine Lobby Display

For consistency, quality of production and originality, in the matter of lobby displays the News is backing E. R. Rogers, manager of the Tennessee Enterprises, Inc. houses at Chattanooga, Tenn, against the world.

This time it is the Rialto front that has undergone a change with a lobby set for "Idols of the North."

The accompanying cut will illustrate Mr. Rogers' latest creation. The display is within the reach of every exhibitor in the United States. How many of them will copy Mr. Rogers' display and send in a photograph for reproduction in the Service Bureau? We promise every exhibitor who will do both, the space for a cut showing his handiwork.

Lobby for "Brewster's Millions"

Edwin Brant, manager of the Colonial theatre, Elyria, Ohio, and Fred E. Walters, the Paramount exploiteer, put over "Brewster's Millions" in such a fashion that the competing lakes and seashore resorts were knocked for a goal.

The Colonial has a highly effective air-cooling system so the two men sold it to the public with a big sign reading: "Why Go To the Lake? Duck In Here and Cool Off."

Walters and Brant also got good front page publicity by staging a fake get-away of a thief with a satchel filled with bogus "Brewster's Millions" money. The Elyria Chronicle-Telegram put the story in a box on the front page, giving the name of the picture, the theatre, and warning the people "to be on the watch for bills decorated with the cheerful countenance of 'Fatty' in place of the sedate George Washington."

Bamberger Neglects No Exploitation Bets on "Passion"

Snappy advertising, a good lobby display, and a well arranged "songalogue" are responsible in part for good business done in Owensboro, Ky., at the Bleich theatre by Manager A. E. Bamberger, on a two-day engagement of "Passion."

A week before the coming of the production, stakes with "Passion" pennants on either side were driven at the corners of the streets in the residence portion of the city. A large banner showing both coming and going, made V-shape also was hung in front of the theatre a week ahead of time. Effective poster advertising was used, and 50 inches extra space was used in each of the two daily papers Sunday and streamer space on the day's interviewing, with extra space the day of the showing.

Several days before the opening the doorman and the ushers passed out heralds. The days of the showing an attractive lobby display was arranged with the "Passion" pennants.

Susan Field, a local singer, sang the "Song of My Soul" in the "songalogue," arranged by Manager Bamberger.

The climax scene was reproduced—the guillotine was made of beaver board and painted black and the guillotine was placed on a raised platform. The singer was dressed in rags, white waist and brown skirt, hair streaming about her face, and her hands were chained. She wore no shoes.

An augmented orchestra played the score and accompanied the singer. At the last note she fell at the foot of the guillotine and as she fell the screen was lowered and the three yellow candles were flashed on in the beginning of the picture.

The full stage was dark. A red flood light was used to the left and lights streamed softly down over the singer from above, giving the appearance of night.

Here is the way the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., advertised "The Idol of the North" during its recent showing at this theatre. The interior of the lobby was shown last week

Another Bargain Sales Tieup for "Witching Hour"

The time element stressed in the title "The Witching Hour" interested a department store of Binghamton, N. Y., in one of the most successful bargain sales in the history of the store. The tieup gave the Strand Theatre four windows and columns of free publicity.

One of the large central windows was designed to represent a still of the picture: two women seated crying, a church clock in the distance striking two o'clock—the witching hour—and a man standing with his arm pointed to the clock.

The other windows were tied up with stills and merchandise. The bargain sale was announced for a Saturday between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The sale was also announced on the screen of the Strand. S. G. Sladdin, Paramount exploiteer from Buffalo, arranged the tieup.

"Deception" lobby display as used by the Palace theatre, Muskogee, Okla.

Borrows Real Money Bags and Safe for Lobby Display

Manager Coleman, Strand theatre, Memphis, Tenn., obtained real money bags and borrowed two big safes, which arranged as shown in the accompanying picture, made an effective lobby display for "Brewster's Millions."

A tie-up with the Safeguard Protective Co., which wrote a thousand of their checks for a million dollars on the "Estate of Brewster's Millions," payable to everybody, also aroused interest in the picture.

"Deception" Lobby Display Gets Results

Organist Howell, of Palace theatre, Muskogee, Okla., enjoyed selecting and playing 75 pieces of fine old music for "Deception," but he also found time to fix up a lobby display. He built a whole front of beaverboard at the edge of sidewalk, artistically panelled and decorated. Only cut-outs from the press book were pasted on in the center, with six-sheets on sides. The considerable labor in hand decoration was repaid by receipts.

This is the lobby display for "Brewster's Millions" which the Strand theatre, Memphis, Tenn., used recently

South Seas Lobby Show, with Music, Costs $1.20

Effectiveness of well arranged lobby exhibits to offset summer dullness, or apathy of patrons was demonstrated by Manager W.. H. Ostenberg, of the Orpheum theatre, Scottsbluff, Neb., recently, when he presented "The Idol Dancer."

Jas. H. Smith, who is in charge of exploitation work for the Orpheum theatre had gone to the trouble of going to the marsh stretches of the North Platte River which flows past Scottsbluff, and brought in some of the tallest grass he could find. This was placed in juxtaposition to eight particularly large palms, which surrounded the box office, the latter having been remodeled to represent a hut. Three life size cut-out figures were arranged in front of the box office, the center one a Hula Hula dancer in grass skirt. The three figures were out of six sheets, three sheets, etc. A skilfully directed green light gave color to the scene.

The effect of a Hawaiian orchestra was another clever scheme of Mr. Smith's who secured phonographs and concealed them in the foliage.

In producing the heavy foliage scene and keeping the large palms in position, Mr. Smith had made very good use of the wood wings from the stage of the Orpheum, and altogether the fact will readily be recognized by the average exhibitor that the maximum of appeal and interest was secured with a decided minimum of expense.

In fact it should be known that the Orpheum theatre was "out" or rather "in" just $1.20 in actual outlay as expense. The returns of the box office were particularly heavy and Manager Ostenberg proposes to prevent any summer dullness in Scottsbluff by using lobby scenes such as this one.

Stage setting and characters appearing in the prologue number for "Salvation Nell" as presented by the New York Mark Strand theatre

Plunkett's Prologue for "Salvation Nell"

Following is a complete description of the prologue number which Joseph L. Plunkett, managing director of the New York Mark Strand theatre, presented in connection with the showing of "Salvation Nell." A cut accompanying illustrates the text:

THE SCENE: Tenement House District.

THE SET: Blue black drop with translucent windows. House flat on each side.

PROPERTIES: Lamp post on left; box, barrel and crate in various corners.

LIGHTING: Four blue bunches overhead center; blue and red border front; blue foots, blue border illuminating back drop. One elevated blue bunch light in side front and next to that two blue spots and one green, arranged vertically; the same group directly opposite. Two elevated blue bunches on each side back; and one white bunch in back of drop to illuminate windows.

DISCOVERED: Trombonist and Strand Ladies' Quartet in Salvation Army uniforms. Three of quartet carrying tambourines while the fourth member carries the American flag and Bible.

ACTION: After the trombone solo, "Follow On," all march around the stage once, the quartet singing refrain and shaking tambourines to the accompaniment of the trombone and the orchestra. After completion of that the quartet sings "Brighten the Corners Where You Are."

Ramsey Presents Prologue for "Old Swimmin' Hole"

Elmer Ramsey, manager of the Central theatre, Fairbury, Ill., is the latest small city exhibitor to take advantage of the exploitation possibilities of "The Old Swimmin' Hole."

For a prologue he staged a schoolroom scene, with eight children sitting at desks. After they had sung several school songs, one of them gave a reading of the James Whitcomb Riley poem on which the picture is based. The use of home talent brought hundreds to the theatre, and proved a highly attractive feature.

Twenty-four sheets were posted at all the entrances to the town, and the downtown corners were liberally plastered with small posters. In addition he used 60 inches of newspaper space and took pains in dressing his lobby.

Children's Drawings Arouse Interest at Muncie

Manager A. E. Bennett, of Strand theatre, Muncie, Ind., used a drawing test for children to stimulate interest on "Last of the Mohicans." Prizes aroused the kids to all sorts of efforts to draw Indians. About 200 pictures were received which were pasted on boards and placed in the lobby during the run. Good interest was created, and much extra business resulted.

Uses Real Fruit in Lobby Decorations

A lobby display of real fruit was used by Manager T. G. Coleman during the showing of "Forbidden Fruit" at the Strand theatre, Memphis, Tenn.

Bananas, apples, oranges and grapefruit with live green branches interspersed, were distributed about the lobby as shown in the accompanying picture.

A big tree was secured and the various varieties of fruit hung on it in Christmas tree fashion. The familiar barrel with mirror and apple at the bottom which has been used a number of times in exploiting "Forbidden Fruit" was placed on the sidewalk.

This novel and attractive display was the means of bringing many people to the theatre.

This lobby display for "Forbidden Fruit" is the work of the Strand theatre, Memphis, Tenn.

Brilant Puts Over Publicity Stunt at Minneapolis

Exploitation that served a double purpose in getting the attention of visiting exhibitors who might book the pictures and possible patrons for the Blue Mouse theatre where the film was playing was put over for "Mother O' Mine" at Minneapolis last week during the M. P. T. O. A. convention, by Arthur M. Brilant, director of publicity and exploitation for Associated Producers, in co-operation with the Minneapolis Daily News.

Brilant went to W. A. Frisbie, editor of the Daily News, and Mr. Robertson, city editor, and interested them in sponsoring a special private showing of "Mother O' Mine" exclusively for the newspaper carriers of the Daily News. Arrangements were made with Jacob Sebelman, manager of the Blue Mouse theatre, for the showing. The day before the stunt the Daily News ran a half column story on it. The afternoon of the showing the Daily News ran a story and picture almost a column in length.

At nine o'clock the morning of the special show more than three hundred boys ranging in age from twelve to sixteen years, gathered at the Daily News office. Headed by the Working Boys' Band of Minneapolis, the boys, carrying large banners, paraded on the leading thoroughfares of the city. Thousands of people lined the sidewalks and filled the windows of the adjacent buildings. The parade halted in front of the West Hotel where the convention was held and played two lively selections that stopped the convention and drew the exhibitors outside to see what was going on.

Then the parade reformed and with the band playing marched to the Blue Mouse theatre where the boys were shown "Mother O' Mine."

Telephones Used as Medium to Exploit Dean Picture

The telephone was used by Manager W. E. Sturgis, of the Hippodrome theatre, Joplin, Mo., as an exploitation medium for "Outside the Law."

Both Sturgis and his wife put in several hours for two days phoning hundreds of regular fans asking if they knew that they were "outside the law" varying that with "what would you do if you were 'outside the law'" then ringing off without explanation.

Adams Originates Novelty Lobby Display

Manager J. H. Adams, Strand theatre, Nashville, Tenn., used a number of stunts in exploiting "Seven Years' Bad Luck."

A lobby display consisting of several big broken mirrors and a large supply of black cats, some of beaverboard and others of cardboard on which was printed, "Are you superstitious," emphasized the idea of the picture as did an old "crystal maze" mirror suspended in the center with a card attached reading, "If you think this is funny, see Max Linder."

After the first day an open basket full of buttons of all sizes with a card reading, "This is what happened to those who laughed yesterday, so loosen your clothes," was added to the display.

McWilliams Shows Local Babies in Movies

Movies of local babies were used by F. J. McWilliams, manager of the Grand theatre, Madison, Wis., to attract fond parents and counteract warm weather during a recent showing of "Scrambled Wives."

The motion pictures were secured without cost to the theatre by co-operation with a portrait photographer who used the offer of ten feet of movies free with a dozen baby pictures to boost his business.

The well known pride of doting parents caused over fifty of them to bring the baby to his studio to watch the birdie and become screen stars.

When the Grand theatre advertised a showing of "Goff's Movies of Madison Babies," the photographer was happy, the parents' friends all heard about it, and the Grand got the business.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Inter-Ocean and Arrow in Big Foreign Deal

HORACE G. HARPER, Managing Director of the Inter-Ocean Photoplays, Ltd., returned to London on the S. S. Olympic last week after having successfully negotiated with D. J. Mountain, foreign manager of the Arrow Film Corporation, one of the largest individual contracts for the distribution of American films in foreign markets ever made in this country.

Under the terms of an agreement made just prior to his sailing, Inter-Ocean Film Corporation acquired the exclusive rights for the United Kingdom for all productions now controlled or heretofore acquired for a term of years by the Arrow Film Corporation.

The contract which was executed on June 24, was signed by Paul H. Cromelin, president of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation and Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation.

"Her Sturdy Oak" Wanda Hawley's New Film

Wanda Hawley's next subject for Realart, following "A Kiss in Time," will be "Her Sturdy Oak." It is described to be a "very amusing story" and was written by Elmer Harris. Walter Hiers plays the title role. Besides Miss Hawley and Mr. Hiers, who are declared to make "a wonderful mirth-provoking combination" in this new picture, the cast includes Sylvia Ashton, Mayme Kelso, Leo White and Frederick Stanton. A swarm of bees and a set of twins also help to keep the comedy going. Thomas N. Heffron is the director, and William E. Collins the photographer.

Lottie Pickford as Lead in "They Shall Pay"

Lottie Pickford, the sister of Mary Pickford, has returned to the screen and is playing the leading part in "They Shall Pay," a Playgoers Pictures Production which is scheduled for release on August 7, according to an announcement just received from Associated Exhibitors.

This is the third release of the Playgoers Pictures Corporation during this season. "They Shall Pay" was preceded by "Women Who Wait," and "The Butterfly Girl," both productions which have found a very friendly reception from exhibitors as well as from the audiences.

Famous Opens Laboratory

London Plant, Costing £50,000, Is Built on Modern American Lines

WITH the completion and opening of the Olympic Kinematograph Laboratories, Ltd., at Acton, London, the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., is now in a position to take over the developing and printing of its own films, which hitherto had to be entrusted to one of the general concerns that undertake such work for the various British film companies.

The new laboratories were erected by Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., at a cost of £50,000 and are constructed on the most modern American lines.

The first floor is set apart for the chemical, printing and perforating rooms. In the latter are six Bell & Howell perforators with the usual vacuum accommodation for waste. The printing room is supplied with six Duplex printers and one Bell & Howell. The plant, in fact, under the present working conditions, is capable of turning out no less than 150,000 feet of printed film each day, and arrangements have been made in advance for enlarging these departments as time goes on.

The second floor is chiefly devoted to all departments handling the studio negative. Five thousand feet of film can be disposed of by this department per day, and though the accommodation is sufficient for present requirements, provision has been made for a possible extension of the department's activities. There are the usual framing, developing, fixing and drying rooms on this floor, together with the administration offices.

Two special rooms in the laboratory have been set apart for the titling department and equipped with the latest title outfit. The titles used in the Famous Players Lasky British Productions are prepared by a special staff of artists working under the supervision of A. J. Hitchcock, studio title designer. Sixteen film vaults are located about twenty yards from the main building.

Novelty Is Pathe Objective

"Something Different" Is the Aim of Serial Companies Now at Work

IN a statement issued during the week from the headquarters of Pathe, the declaration is made that "the house of serials" has adopted a production policy which seeks the development of chapter plays "that have entirely different angles from anything ever before attempted." This is being done, says the Pathe statement, in response to "the unending demand of exhibitors for novelty in serials." The statement continues as follows:

"Ruth Roland's 'White Eagle' will be 'something different' from anything she has ever appeared in. It is virtually an entirely Indian serial. All of the action is laid in the Redskins' country, and aside from the few principals, the supporting cast is completely made up of real Indians.

"Charles Hutchison's 'Hurricane Hatch,' which will come out of the Seitz studios in early autumn, will be a thriller from start to finish. The episodes already completed clearly indicate this. Mr. Hutchison, the serial stunt champion, is attempting feats for this offering, that would defy duplication by a professional daredevil.

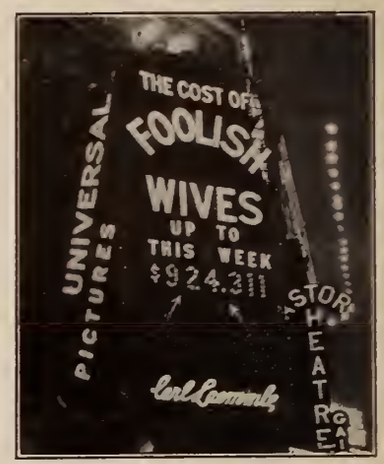
"The reports received thus far on 'The Sky Ranger' and 'The Yellow Arm' give great encouragement to Pathe officials. In ordering the production of these serials, Paul Brunet fully appreciated the tastes of serial fans and exhibitors, too. More money was spent on the production of 'The Yellow Arm' than ever was invested in a Pathe serial produced in the East. The expenditures on 'The Sky Ranger' were very heavy, but not equal to the costs of 'The Yellow Arm.' Consideration of the cast in the latter picture is sufficient to warrant this statement. Juanita Hansen is starred in it, with Warner Oland, Marguerite Courtot, and William Bailey, giving the principal support."

June Caprice made her debut as a serial star in "The Sky Ranger," in which she was co-starred with George B. Seitz, producer of this thrilling chapter-play.

The Jules Verne setting of "The Sky Ranger" gives it a vigor, of action and mystery that creates a highly sustained interest.

Agnes Ayres and Valentine in "The Sheik"

Jesse L. Lasky announced during the week that Agnes Ayres, pending the completion of the preparations for her first Paramount starring picture, would be featured opposite Rudolph Valentine in George Melford's special production, "The Sheik."



Showing a huge sign advertising "Foolish Wives" located on the Astor theatre building, New York, and overlooking Times Square

How These Movie Costs Do Soar, Says B'way

A huge sign covering three floors of the Astor theatre building at the corner of Forty-fifth Street and Broadway, New York, has been erected by Universal to advertise Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives," which is scheduled for release in the fall. In addition to the galaxy of bright lights, a unique feature of the sign is the display of the cost of the million-dollar production. Each week Universal will change the figures representing the cost, increasing the amount at each change until the final total is reached. The changing figures each week have added a "teaser" element to the other attractive features of the huge display.

Mary Murillo Added to R-C Scenario Staff

Mary Murillo has joined the scenario and continuity department of R-C Pictures Corporation and will work on original stories and continuity at the New York headquarters of that corporation.

Miss Murillo has had a wide and profitable experience in the writing and preparation of motion picture scripts, covering a number of years.

New Louise Glaum Film Released July 17th

J. Parker Read, Jr.'s, "Greater Than Love" is announced by Associated Producers for release July 17th. The production stars Louise Glaum. The story comes from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan. Fred Niblo directed it.

In the supporting cast are Mahlon Hamilton, Gertrude Claire, Patricia Palmer, Betty Froncisco and Edward Martindel.

Three scenes from "The Lost Romance," a William de Mille production released by Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

Eve Unsell Heads R.C's Scenario Department

EVE UNSELL has been named by the R-C Pictures Corporation as head of their scenario department on the West Coast. Miss Unsell will leave New York for Los Angeles on July 15th.

She will take with her the following staff of assistants: Zara Mendel, formerly associated with Emil Chautard of Famous Players; Garrett Eldson Fort, assistant editor and continuity writer, formerly publicity writer, reader and originator of titles for Famous Players-Lasky productions. Mr. George Blaisdell who was assisting Miss Unsell in re-building synopses and titles and who was formerly associated with the Moving Picture World will now be associated with Paul Price, title writer.

Miss Unsell has just recently returned from London where she had charge of the scenario department of the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

George Blaisdell, in addition to his title work, will continue to conduct the Miss Unsell book and play department.

Rothacker "Shoots" Big Gymnastic Meet

Three reels of beauty and brawn were filmed by the Rothacker Company during the athletic meet in Chicago of the American Gymnastic Association. Verne Blakely was the cameraman. The screen of the swimming scenes at the Rothacker laboratory revealed that Mack Sennett overlooked a bet in not having a recruiting agent present at the meet. Contestants came from all over the county, and the picture will be exhibited in their respective cities.

"King Fisher's Roost" New Neal Hart Film

The negative of "King Fisher's Roost," Pinnacle's next Neal Hart feature release, has arrived at Burton-Holmes Laboratories in Chicago, where work has been started on prints.

Neal Hart and his entire company went to Mexico to shoot this interesting and exciting picture in natural surroundings commanded by the story and some excellent scenic effects were filmed.

The picture will be released within a few days.

Six Paramount Releases for July

PARAMOUNT is releasing six features in July, the list including a William de Mille superspecial, a Cosmopolitan production, a Paul Powell production made at the London studios, a William A. Brady production and pictures starring Wallace Reid and Dorothy Dalton respectively.

First on the list scheduled for July 3, is the Cosmopolitan production, "The Woman God Changed," which was directed by Robert G. Vignola. This is an adaptation by Doty Hobart of Donn Byrne's story, "Redemption Cove." Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln are seen in the leading roles, with Lillian Walker, Henry Sedley, H. Cooper Cliffe, Paul Nicholson and Joseph Smiley in supporting parts. Much of the picture was filmed in the Bahamas, where South Sea Island scenes were taken.

Wallace Reid in "Too Much Speed" is released for July 10. This is another Byron Morgan automobile race story, Mr. Morgan himself having written the scenario. Frank Urson was the director, Mr. Reid's leading woman is Agnes Ayres, lately promoted to Paramount stardom, and others in the cast are Theodore Roberts, Jack Richardson, Lucien Littlefield, Guy Oliver, Henry Johnson and Jack Herbert.

Also released the 10th is "The Mystery Road," the first Paul Powell production for Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd. This is an E. Phillips Oppenheim story, adapted by Margaret Turnbull, and features David Powell, well-known Paramount leading man who has been seen in leading roles opposite Elsie Ferguson, Billie Burke, Marguerite Clark and others. The cast is a large one and includes Nadja Ostrovska, Mary Glynne, Ruby Miller, Pardoe Woodman, Percy Standing, Louis Guilbert, Irene Tripod, Lionel d'Aragon and Arthur Cullin. There is an elaborate cabaret scene in which Phyllis Bedells, England's foremost premiere danseuse, and the Tiller troupe of London Palace girls appear.

The release for the 17th is William A. Brady's special production, "Life," based upon the spectacular play of the same name by Thompson Buchanan which had such a long run at the Manhattan Opera House, New York. Traverse Vale directed and the cast includes such well-known players as Herbert Bruce, Nita Naldi, Jack Mower, J. H. Gilmore, Arline Pretty, Leeward Meeker, Rod La Rocque, Edwin Stanley, Curtis Cooksey, Geoffrey Stein and Effinham Pinto.

On the 24th comes Dorothy Dalton in "Behind Masks," adapted by Kathryne Stuart from E. Phillips Oppenheim's popular novel, "Jeanne of the Marshes." Frank Reicher directed. Miss Dalton's leading man is Frederick Vogeding and the cast includes Julia Swayne Gordon, William P. Carleton, Kempton Greene, Lewis Broughton, Gladys Valerie and Alex Kaufman.

The final release of the month, scheduled for the 31st is the William de Mille production, "The Lost Romance," by Edward Knoblock, with scenario by Olga Printzlau. Conrad Nagel, Lois Wilson and Jack Holt are featured, with Fontaine La Rue, Mickey Moore, Maym Kelso, Robert Brower, Barbara Gurney, Clarence Geldart, Clarence Burton and Lillian Leighton in the supporting cast.

"Woman God Changed" Set for July 3, Heads List

Present-Day Screen Music

M. J. Mintz Believes Music Scores Will Aid in Educating Musicians

"MUSICIANS should welcome the coming of Synchronized Music Scores," states M. J. Mintz, vice-president and general manager of Synchronized Scenario Music Co. "It seems a pity that there are thousands of musicians in motion picture theatres to-day who are making little advancement over their style of playing, or are offering mighty few new selections in their accompaniments. This fact is all the more to be lamented considering the fact that motion picture music has advanced so much in the past year.

"In the use of our scores the musician is permitted the opportunity of playing the very pieces that please thousands of patrons of the big Broadway houses in New York. The world's greatest authorities on motion picture musical adaptations personally prepare each Synchronized score. Their choice of music aside from the original music they use in making up a score is assurance that the small town musician who plays these scores will please his audience by right of the fact that these men, heading our scoring staff, have made a life study of motion picture musical adaptations. That variety also is a factor in the making up of a Synchronized Score is certain when one remembers that our staff have entre to the largest library of music in the world.

"The future of music in motion picture theatres is assured, it is not alone sufficient to install a good orchestra in the music pit. For that orchestra to function properly it is necessary to make certain that its director fully understands the accompaniment of music to the screen action. Synchronized Music Scores have come to fill the greatest gap, and to relieve the greatest source of worry the exhibitor has known in the past. Where once it was a problem to obtain music fitted to the pictures booked by exhibitors, modern day methods have made possible the inauguration of a music score serivce, which for a small rental fee, assures the exhibitor and his musical director that their worries as to the synchronization of their music with the screen action is over."

Century Comedy Will Be Released July 27th

"The Thinker," the Century Comedy that was scheduled to be released on July 27th with an all-star comedy cast, has been changed to "The Whizbang." This is the first Century, since "Custard's Last Stand" that has featured no one star in particular. Florence Lee, Bud Jamison, and Lige Conley, all well known Century comedians, will be seen in "The Whizbang."

Universal's Specials for Fall

Nine Special Attractions Named for Sept. and Oct.

PRODUCTION has progressed so fast at Universal City since the return of Irving Thalberg, production manager, to the Coast following his conference with Mr. Laemmle, that it is now possible to announce definitely the first nine Universal Special Attractions of the fall season. These nine are the September and October releases and comprise releases of all the six Special Attraction stars, Frank Mayo, Gladys Walton, Hoot Gibson, Marie Prevost, Miss DePont, and Herbert Rawlinson.

To Frank Mayo, who has made a record the past year as a Universal Special Attraction star, falls the honor of opening the season on September 4th. His offering will be "The Shark Master," written and directed by Fred LeRoy Granville. Two leading women, May Collins and Doris Deane, support him. The scenes were mostly made at Catalina.

Gladys Walton's first picture on the new schedule will be "High Heels," formerly called "Christine of the Young Heart," by Louise B. Clancy. This picture was directed by Lee Kohlmar. In the cast will be found William Worthington, who resigned the megaphone for the time being, Frederick Vogeding, George Hackathorn, and the DeBriac twins.

Hoot Gibson, who is making his first appearance in five-reelers, will be seen in "Action," adapted from "The Mascotte of the Three Stars," by J. Allen Dunn. The direction is placed in charge of Jack Ford, who has a cast including Clara Horton, Francis Ford, J. Farrell McDonald, William Robert Daly, Jim Corey and Dorothea Wolbert.

The fourth picture introduces another of the new Universal attraction stars—Marie Prevost, in "Touch Me Not." This is a story written especially for her by Percival Wilde. The last includes Clyde Fillmore, Lionel Belmore, George Fisher, and Marie Crisp. King Baggot directed.

"The Rage of Paris" is the title of the fifth production, which will introduce the new star, Miss DuPont. DuVernet Rabell wrote the story under the title of "The White Peacock Feather." Miss DuPont is being supported by Jack Perrin, Eleanor Hickock, Ramsey Wallace, Leo White and J. J. Lance, and is being directed by Jack Conway.

Frank Mayo comes into the limelight for the second time in the fall schedule with William Harper Dean's story. "The Reverend Meddler," in which he will be directed by William Worthington. Mayo appears as a two-fisted circuit rider in the southern mountains. He is supported by Lillian Rich. The story appeared originally in The Country Gentleman.

Gladys Walton's second fall picture will be "The Ark Angel," by Hamilton Thompson, a vigorous drama of the West Coast fishing industry. Major David Kirkland, one of the screen's original directors, held the megaphone, and prominent in the cast are Jack Mower, William Welsh, Rex Rosselli, Anna Hernandez, Frances Hatton, C. B. Murphy, Alda B. Jones, and the Countess Decella.

Hoot Gibson is the star of the eighth fall production, a Peter B. Kyne story called "The Sheriff of Cinnebar." In addition to the leading women Molly Malone and Mary Philbin, Gibson is supported by Arthur Hoyt, Joe Girard, Charles Newton, Jim Corey, Mack Wright, Joe Harris, Joel Day, Richard Cummings, and William Merril McCormick. Reaves Eason directed.

The ninth production of the fall will star Herbert Rawlinson. The story chosen is "The Black Bag," a famous novel by Louis Joseph Vance. This production will start next week.

Pathe Announces Release Schedule for July 24

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC., announces a representative schedule of short subject features and the current episodes of two serials for release during the week of July 24.

"The American Badger" is the next of the series of "Adventures of Bill and Bob." "The Flirt" is the second of the series of re-issued one-reel comedies starring Harold Lloyd. Bebe Daniels, now a promising star in her own right, is featured with the comedian, and "Snub" Pollard, now featured in Hal Roach comedies, is Lloyd's running mate in the cast.

"The Lioness and the Bugs" is the title of the new animated cartoon of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables," created by Cartoonist Paul Terry and produced by Fables Pictures, Inc. "No Stop-Over" is the latest Hal Roach comedy scheduled for release, featuring "Snub" Pollard." The chief elements of comedy are the tribulations of "Snub" and his wife trying to catch the elusive train for Long Beach.

The current episode of "The Yellow Arm," the Pathe serial starring Juanita Hansen, with Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot prominently featured, is "A Nest of Knaves." The thirteenth episode of "The Sky Ranger" is titled "At the Last Minute." June Caprice is co-starred with George B. Seitz in the chapter play. Thrilling feats with the remarkable aeroplane make the current episode the most exciting yet presented.

Pathe Review No. 113 presents "The Newest Light on Earth," which gives an insight into illumination by radium. "Art and Animals" gives a few humorous impressionistic Zoo sketches by Cartoonist Hy Mayer in his Capitol Travelaugh. "The Manly Art" is the second and last round of a boxing demonstration caught by the Pathe Slow-Motion Camera. "His Majesty, Mont Blanc" shows the tremendous vistas of the Alps and their surrounding country in Pathecolor.

"Man of the Forest" Scores

Hodkinson Receives Fine Reports on Ben Hampton-Zane Grey Picture

"THE Man of the Forest," which was released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation as their contribution toward the recent Zane Grey Week, has pleased in every theatre where it has been exhibited, declares a statement just received from the Hodkinson headquarters.

In the statement, the Hodkinson home office submits some of the congratulatory telegrams that have been received from theatre owners and managers concerning the business done by "The Man of the Forest." A telegram from Charles Goddard, manager of the Goddard Theatre, Sacramento, Cal., is quoted as follows:

"'The Man of the Forest' a knockout. Congratulations to Ben Hampton on his masterly handling of this stirring Zane Grey story. Business great with me. Put some more over like this."

A wire from Howard Smith of the Palace Theatre, Buffalo, is quoted as follows:

"Congratulations on 'Man of the Forest.' Wonderful picture. Did larger gross business than any previous picture for the past six weeks. Give us more like it. Sure-fire summer attraction."

The Hodkinson statement continues as follows:

"Benj. B. Hampton's productions of Zane Grey novels have been building steadily in popularity for a very long period of time until the present day. The U. P. Trail was declared to be the greatest western picture every brought to the screen and demonstrated itself conclusively as a strong money-maker. 'The Man of the Forest' followed in its tracks, showing itself to be an even greater success than its predecessor. It is only natural, therefore, that exhibitors everywhere are anxiously awaiting the next Hampton-Grey-Hodkinson release which will be 'The Mysterious Rider,' conceded to be the greatest of all Zane Grey's novels."

New Selling Method for "Adventures of Tarzan"

THE marketing of "Adventures of Tarzan," the latest fifteen episode Tarzan serial starring Elmo Lincoln, to the various state right exchanges throughout the country, will be handled in a unique manner. Instead of following the usual custom of producing four or five episodes and signing contracts on the strength of these initial chapters, Louis Weiss, of Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation, has announced that the entire fifteen episodes of this serial will be available for screening within the next month, at which time the actual marketing of "Adventures of Tarzan" will begin.

This procedure is followed for the purpose of giving all territorial purchasers an opportunity of viewing the serial in complete form before entering into contracts for the distribution of same in their respective exchange centers.

Pearl Shepard Added to Aladdin Comedy Cast

Supplementing its announcement of last week with respect to the new series of Aladdin Comedies which Shiller Productions will make for early Reelcraft release, R. C. Cropper, president of the Reelcraft organization, announces this week that work on the first of the series of comedies has already been begun at the Mittenthal Studios in Yonkers. Simultaneously, the announcement is made that Miss Pearl Shepard has been engaged as leading woman for the new series of comedies.

Miss Shepard is well-known for her work both in comedy and dramatic productions. Her most recent endeavor was in Ivan Abramson's "Mother Eternal," which played for several weeks on Broadway.

Ora Carew Will Head Grover Jones Cast

Ora Carew will again dip into the western "thriller" waters when the first of the new Grover Jones Productions is published. Such is the gist of the first publicity offering coming from the Hollywood studios of Grover Jones, a former comedy director who has entered the feature field at the head of his own unit.

Al. Gilbert Co. Starting First Production

The Al Gilbert Film Productions, Inc., announce that they are starting their first production on July 11th. It is entitled "Out of the Shadow" and included in the cast are Walter Miller, Norma Shearer, Paul W. Panzer, Jane Allyn and Jules Cowles. The story and continuity are the work of Thomas F. Fallon. Roy Sheldon is directing and Anthony Trigili is behind the camera.

Perret's Latest Pathe Release Due July 15

Another international romance, with a tale of intrigue and daring exploits in the United States and Europe, will be found in Leonce Perret's latest cinema creation, "The Money Maniac." Pathe will release this production, which has been scheduled for issue on July 31. The cast includes Lucy Fox, Robert Elliott, Ivo Dawson, Marcya Capri, recently voted the most beautiful woman in all Spain; Eugene Brion, a leading actor of France, and Henry G. Sell.

The action runs the gamut from the oil fields of Texas, to the mountains of the Spanish border, which affords a most picturesque background for some of the swiftest action of the play.

Paramount Week to Be Named for Lasky

Paramount Week this year, September 4th-10th, will be known among the members of the Paramount sales organization as "Lasky Week," in honor of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's production chief. This decision was made known last week to the district and branch managers by General Manager of Distribution S. R. Kent in a letter published in the "Paramount Week Flier." The letter in part follows:

"In naming the week of September 4th this year 'Lasky Week,' the Department of Distribution is proud to do honor to our First Vice-President and head of our Production forces.

"We unitedly promise Mr. Lasky that in his honor we will deliver the greatest week's business by far in our history."

Remarkable 'Sea Fight' Views in Pathe News

No issue of the Pathe News has ever contained a more remarkable picture than that showing an attack by destroyers on four superdreadnaughts of the Pacific Fleet, off San Pedro, Cal., easily the leading feature in Pathe News, No. 52. Views from sea and air give the most comprehensive idea of what an actual battle between the "devils of war" would look like. Every detail is clearly delineated, and it is probable that not even the sailors who were fortunate to participate in the battles during the great war received a bigger thrill than will any audience watching this feature of the Pathe News.

"Moonshine Menace" is Popular in West

The J. P. MacGowan action dramas are great favorites in the West, according to an announcement by the American Film Company. The company state that reports received from the Elliott Film Company of Minneapolis, which is distributing America's reconstructed features throughout Minnesota, North Dakota, Wisconsin and South Dakota, "Moonshine Menace," an adaptation of "Judith of the Cumberlands" with Helen Holmes, is netting some fine bookings.

Fox Releases Rouse Interest

Announcement That Fox Specials Are to Be Issued Brings Response

THE announcement made last week by William Fox that "Over the Hill," "A Connecticut Yankee," and other specials of the Fox brand, will be released direct to exhibitors, has brought a flood of inquiries to the Fox headquarters as well as expressions of commendation for the decision just adopted by the Fox organization.

The final selection of titles for the first eight pictures to be released through the Special Feature Department now makes possible, for the first time, the announcement of this entire group. The pictures are, without reference to the order in which they will be released, as follows: "Over the Hill," "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," "A Virgin Paradise," "Shame,' "Perjury," "Thunderclap," "Footfalls" and Zane Gray's "The Last Trail." Two of these pictures had not been named in any previous announcement. "Thunderclap," which is a great melodrama of metropolitan life, was directed by Richard Stanton, whose special pictures "Checkers" won popular approval last season. "A Virgin Paradise" is an ambitious production directed by J. Searle Dawley. The picture contains a number of unusual elements, which will not be described prior to its release—a large part of the filming having been done on a tropical island in which wild animals are to be found in great quantities. This photoplay partakes of the nature of both spectacle and drama.

The announcement of these special productions in a group has led to confusion in the minds of some exhibitors, according to Ralph Proctor, who is in charge of the special feature department. The grouping of the Fox specials is only for purpose of announcement and for convenience in treating of them. The pictures will not be sold in a group under any circumstances. They will be marketed individually.

"Remorseless Love" Listed

Set for Release Aug. 10 by Select; Elaine Hammerstein Is the Star

WITH a number of productions completed from which to make a selection, Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production, has chosen "Remorseless Love" as the next Selznick-Elaine Hammerstein release. It is scheduled for August 10th. Work on the negative has been about completed and prints will go forward to the various Select exchanges throughout the country within the next few days.

"Remorseless Love" is from a story by Mary Lanier Magruder which appeared recently in one of the popular magazines. The screen version was written by Edward J. Montagne, staff writer for the Selznick organization who has a number of notable successes to his credit.

In that the subject matter has to do with the mountain districts of the South where feuds thrive and write drama into the lives of the most commonplace, "Remorseless Love" represents a departure from the kind of work with which Miss Hammerstein has been identified heretofore. Niles Welch has the principal male role in support of the star and Effingham Pinto is another player whose work adds much to the value of the picture.

The direction is by Ralph Ince. This is the first Selznick picture starring Miss Hammerstein which Mr. Ince has directed in many months.

Director Thos. N. Heffron, Sylvia Ashton and Wanda Hawley of the "Her Sturdy Oak" cast, a forthcoming Realart picture in which Miss Hawley is to be starred

F.I.L.M. CLUB OUTING

Interest is being aroused to a marked degree over the baseball game between teams of Motion Picture Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and F. I. L. M. Club.

F. I. L. M Club team is at practice nearly every evening under the management of Harry Buxbaum.

Mr. Wm. Brandt, president of the Chamber of Commerce, also baseball captain, is rounding his aggregation into shape for the big event. In accepting challenge sent him by Mr. Raynor of the Entertainment Committee, he writes as follows:

"Mr. Wm. Raynor,
"1600 Broadway,
"Pathe Film Exchange,
"New York City.

"My dear Mr. Raynor:

"I have your letter of June 27th with reference to the outing of the F. I. L. M. Club on July 27th at Glenwood-on-the-Sound, and also note your challenge to the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce to contest in a game of baseball.

"It may interest you to know that we have been secretly training a team for the entire winter and while I have not seen this team in action recently and therefore cannot challenge at the present writing yet, when you see the below line up, you will realize how much of a chance your F. I. L. M. Club will have. The line-up consists of the following:

"Pitcher, S. Schwartz, Oxford theatre; catcher, S. Peyser, Staten Island; first base, O. Miller, Oxford theatre; second base, R. Sanders, Marathon theatre; third base, Pop Wolf, Adelphi theatre; short stop, L. Bolognino, 623 Eighth avenue; right field, L. Gordon, Venice theatre; left field, L. Geller, Winter Garden theatre; center field, B. Grobe, Valentine theatre; coacher; Al Harstin, Regun theatre; umpire, Morris Goodman, Broadway Lyceum.

"In addition we have several other gentlemen in reserve whom we decline at the present time to name, for fear that because of this strenuous competition, you may ring in some professionals. We are very sorry for you.

"Cordially yours,
"(Signed) WM BRANDT."

On previous occasions so many children attended that the Entertainment Committee has seen fit to engage a trained kindergartner from the School of Ethical Culture to care for the kiddies. This will insure an opportunity for every mother to take part in the numerous ladies' contests.

The affair will be held at Karatsonyi's Inn on the Sound. Steamer Nassau will leave foot of East Thirty-sixth street, on Wednesday, July 27, at 12 o'clock noon.

Hodkinson Releases Are Being Heavily Booked

H. H. Hurn, Hodkinson representative in the Cincinnati territory, reports a heavy demand for Hodkinson pictures in his territory. Ike Libson of the Palace Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio, has booked "The Man of the Forest," "Lavender and Old Lace," and "Keeping Up with Lizzie" for early play dates, while J. A. Maddox of the Southern Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, has also booked "Lavender and Old Lace."

Hope Hampton in Person

Hope Hampton is appearing in person this current week at the Broadway Theatre in connection with the presentation of "Love's Penalty," her latest production, booking through First National exchanges. Miss Hampton's daily appearances are said to be meeting with favor.

Viola Dana Voted Queen of Round Up at Reno

Viola Dana, chosen Queen of the Reno, Nevada, Round-up by a popularity vote has been presented with the freedom of the city.

Sunday night, July 3, was Viola Dana Night, with the city's five first-class theatres all showing the same Viola Dana picture at the same time. The picture selected was "Home Stuff." Miss Dana's program for the day called for her appearance in person at each of the five theatres. She also presented awards to the winners of the Tourists' Sociability Run, and was the guest of honor at the autoists' banquet.

Miss Dana arrived in Reno on Thursday, June 30, and was greeted at the station by the Round-up reception committee, who arrived in airplanes. The Round-Up Queen was taken by the air route to the field of activities.

BarmitzvahPartyShown in "Shams of Society"

Jewish home life is depicted with unerring realism in "Shams of Society," the first Walsh-Fielding production directed by Thomas B. Walsh and scheduled for early release by R-C Pictures Corporation.

Not the least engrossing of the numerous interesting episodes is the barmitzvah party held in accordance with the age-old Jewish custom of feting a lad of thirteen when he is confirmed and enters the church.

Metro Film Goes from Rivoli to Rialto

Rex Ingram's production for Metro, "The Conquering Power," which drew capacity audiences to the Rivoli theatre, New York, the week beginning July 3, has been held over on Broadway by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres, for exhibition at the Rialto, 42d Street and Broadway, the week beginning July 10.

Beach Chooses Director for New Production

Rex Beach has selected R. William Neill as his director for "The Iron Trail," which will be the first Beach production for release by United Artists. The leading role in the picture will be played by Wyndham Standing. Thurston Hall has been chosen for the heavy.

Kinograms Photographer Sails for Far East

When the American steamship Acropolis sailed from Pier 5, Army piers, Hoboken, on June 30th, she had on board E. Ross White, a Kinograms staff photographer, bound on one of the most extensive news gathering trips ever made by a news reel cameraman.

White is going to make pictures that will allow Kinograms to tell its patrons through the Educational Film Corporation and the exchanges of the First National, just what is happening in many of the countries of the Near East and Asia Minor—and he will visit some countries that have not been visited since before the outbreak of the world war, including several of the new Soviet Republics.

Goldwyn to Issue "The Old Nest" Sept. 11th

No matter how big the success of "The Old Nest" is, the photoplay will be released to exhibitors on September 11, announces Goldwyn. It will not be "roadshowed."

"Those who have booked Goldwyn pictures in the past will have first call upon this master production while it is fresh in the public mind," declares the Goldwyn announcement.

The same procedure will be followed with the other big Rupert Hughes picture, "Dangerous Curve Ahead," which will be released to the exhibitor on October 2. Both pictures will receive first runs in 150 key cities in the first week of their release.

Director Walsh Credits His Cameraman

Technical men of the highest calibre helped Director Thomas B. Walsh to make his first independent production "Shams of Society." It is scheduled for early release by R-C Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Walsh has no hesitancy in giving full credit to his chief cameraman Jack Stumar, and his manager of production, Bernard Siebel. "Co-operation," said he, "is the keynote of success in everything where the work of more than a single individual is involved."

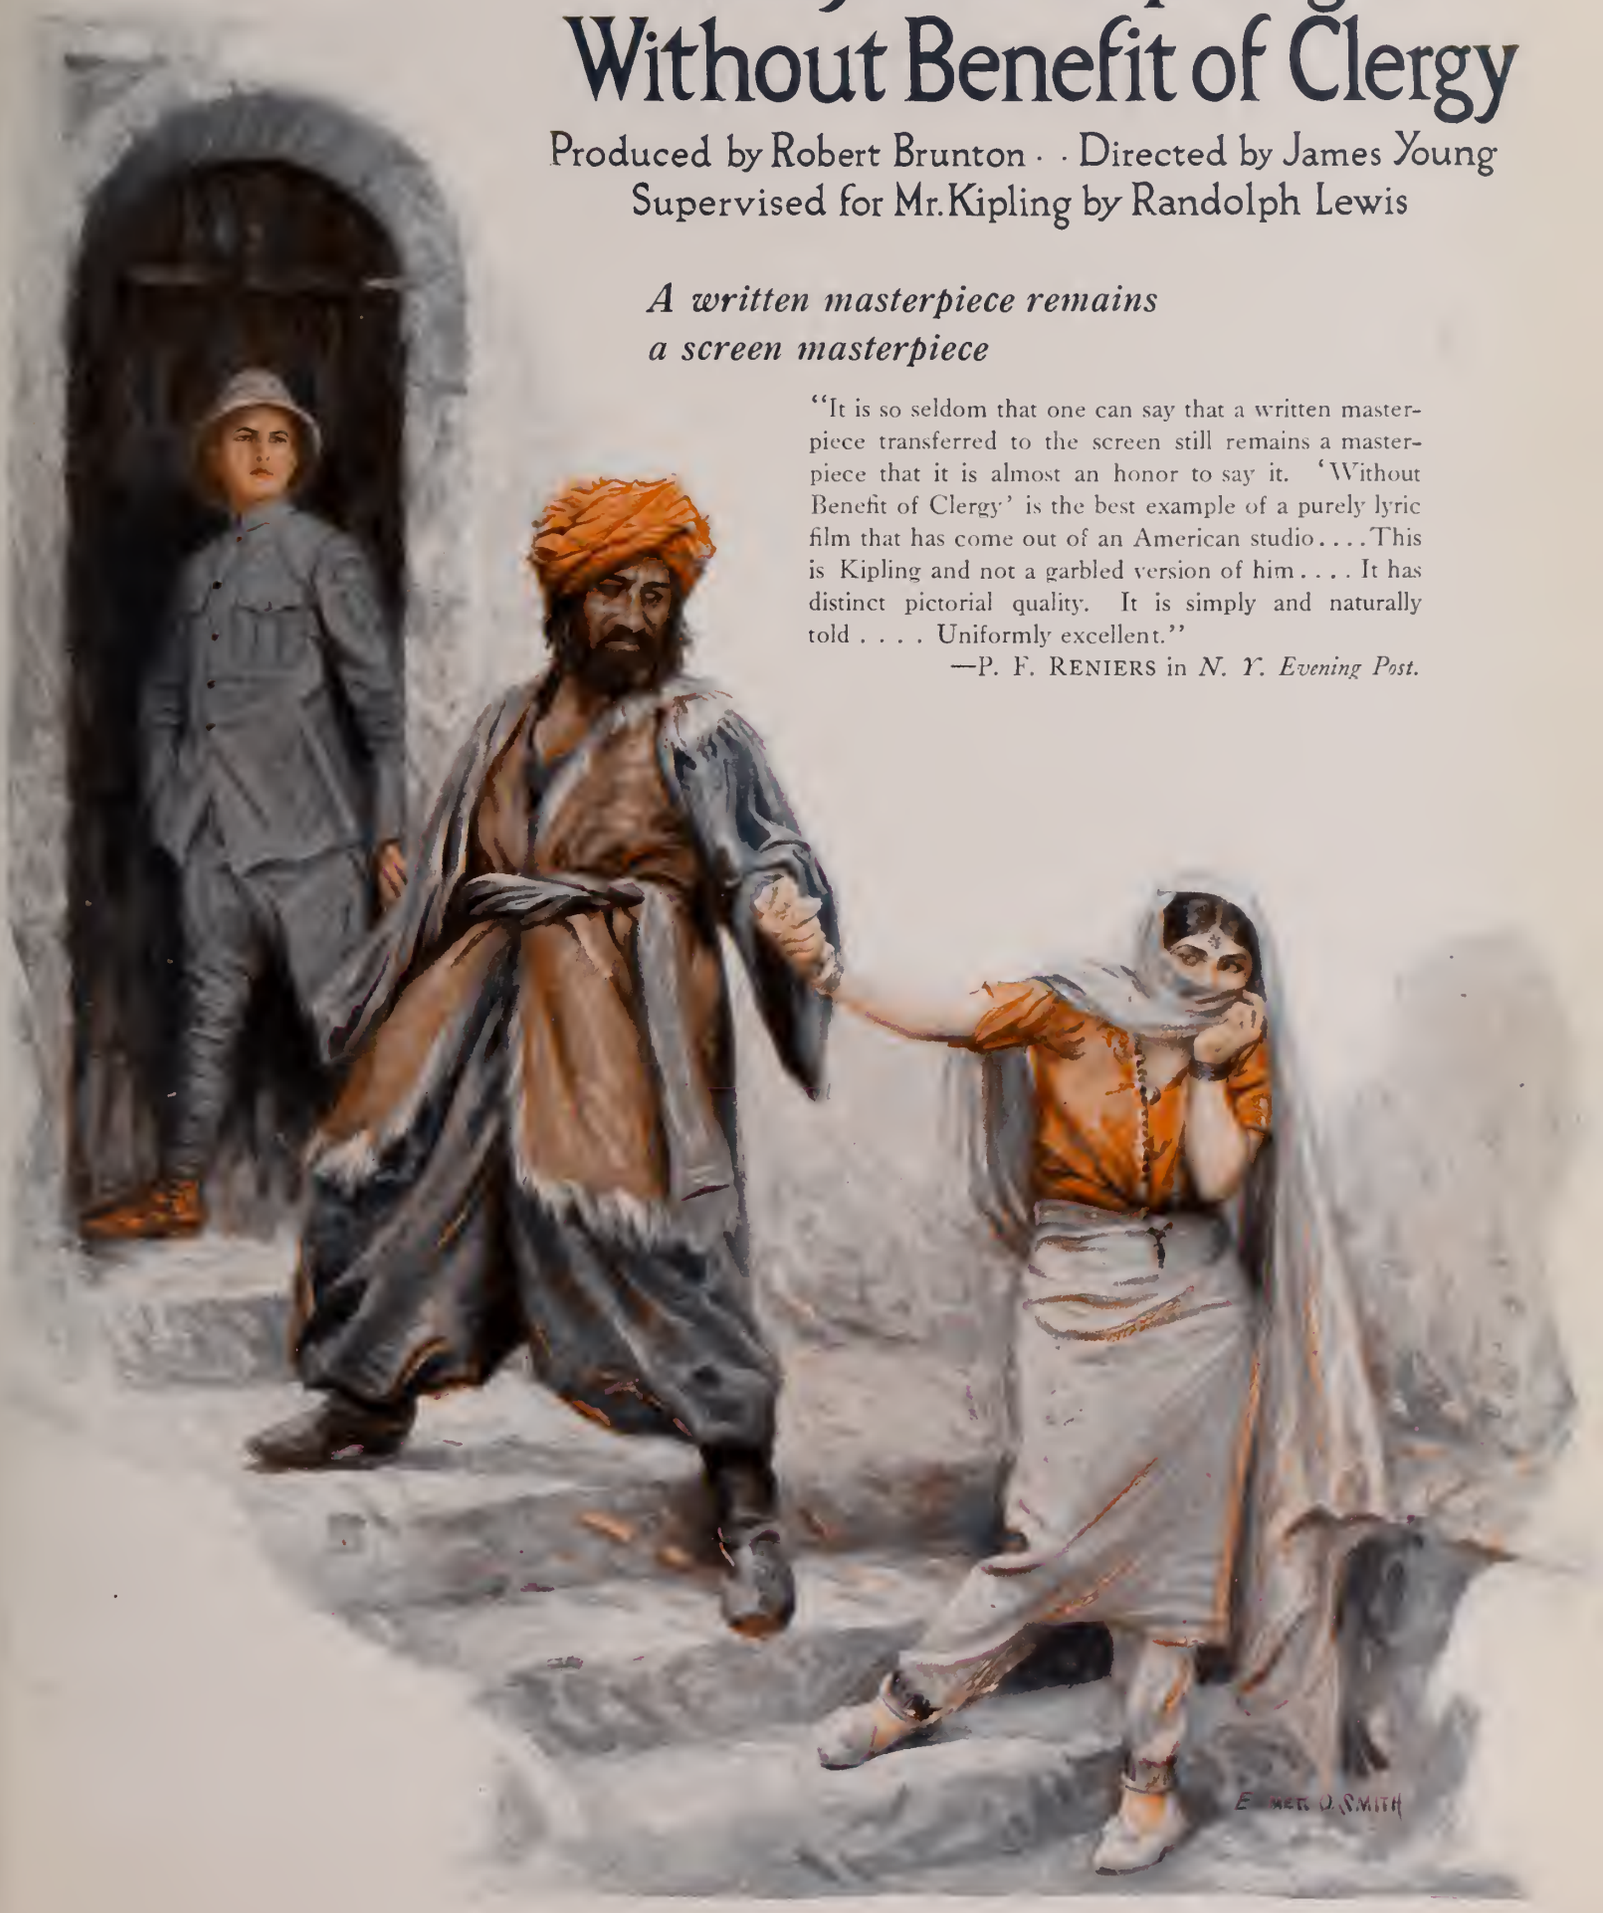
Rudyard Kipling's Without Benefit of Clergy

Produced by Robert Brunton · · Directed by James Young

Supervised for Mr. Kipling by Randolph Lewis



A written masterpiece remains a screen masterpiece

"It is so seldom that one can say that a written masterpiece transferred to the screen still remains a masterpiece that it is almost an honor to say it. 'Without Benefit of Clergy' is the best example of a purely lyric film that has come out of an American studio . . . . This is Kipling and not a garbled version of him . . . . It has distinct pictorial quality. It is simply and naturally told . . . . Uniformly excellent."

Fairbanks Spending Million

That Will Be Cost of "The Three Musketeers" When It Is Completed

A STATEMENT from the headquarters of the United Artists Corporation announces that "The Three Musketeers," which Douglas Fairbanks is now making for release by United Artists, will cost the star one million dollars. The story has been adapted from Alexander Dumas' famous novel by Edward Knoblock. Fred Niblo is directing. The statement from the United Artists' home-office follows:

"Very few times in the history of the motion picture industry has a photoplay been produced on as lavish a scale as the forthcoming Fairbanks offering. Nearly a hundred thousand dollars have been spent on costumes, and more than half that amount on exterior sets, not counting the ship and pier yet to be built."

"The payroll is more than three times as heavy for this picture as it has been on any previous Fairbanks film," says John Fairbanks, Doug's brother and business manager. "Our aim has been to get the best talent available, regardless of cost.

"More women are appearing with Doug in important roles in "The Three Musketeers" than have ever before been seen with him in a photoplay. Marguerite DeLa Motte, Mary MacLaren and Barbara La Marr, all stars in their own right, are among the highest paid photoplayers on the screen.

"All told, there are one hundred and sixteen persons in the cast, not counting the extras, and the weekly payroll for 'The Three Musketeers' reaches the staggering figure of $50,000 a week.

"It is believed by Director Niblo and Doug that this picture will be completed about the middle of July, following which place will be immediately laid by Fairbanks for the production of 'The Virginian,' most of which will be filmed in Wyoming, where the story is laid."

"Determination" Finished

To Get B'way Showing in the Fall; "The Threshold" Due in Fall Also

WITH the announcement by James W. Martin, president and general manager of the United States Moving Picture Corporation, that "Determination," the elaborately staged super-attraction, which has been in process of production at their Grantwood, N. J., studios for nearly a year past, has at last been completed, comes the further news that the company has also finished work on its second feature-offering.

"The Threshold," which is the title of the new picture, is five reels in length, and is said to possess many novelties of setting and theme. It was made under the direction of Joseph Levering in co-operation with the author of the story, Garfield Thompson, the well-known writer, and Herbert L. Messmore, the technical expert of the United States Moving Picture Corporation. No expense has been spared to make the production in entertainment and box-office attraction value the equal of any program feature now being offered, it is declared.

According to present plans, "The Threshold" will either be sold outright or released through one of the larger distributing organizations, while "Determination," the company's multiple-reel super-feature will first be presented as a special attraction at one of the Broadway houses this fall, before being released generally throughout the country.

The United States Moving Picture Corporation is the organization which four months ago took over the tangled affairs of the United States Photoplay Corporation, after the latter had gone into the hands of the receiver. In addition to taking over the task of liquidating outstanding accounts, reported to be some $80,000, due creditors of the United States Photoplay Corporation. Mr. Martin, head of the new company, and James K. Polk, an attorney of Washington, D. C., undertook the completion of "Determination," which was then only about two-thirds finished. They not only completed "Determination," but also began filming of "The Threshold," which is scheduled for release in the fall.

Edw. Atkinson to Make Series for Hodkinson

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces that they have just signed a contract with Edward J. Atkinson for a series of productions which Mr. Atkinson will make for Hodkinson release. Mr. Atkinson is well known in the motion picture industry, having been associated with such organizations as Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Benj. B. Hampton Productions and others.

The productions, which are to be supervised in every detail by representatives of the Hodkinson Corporation, will be directed by Joseph DeGrasse, whose career has been a long and eminently successful one.

"It is confidently expected that these new Joseph DeGrasse Productions (as they will be called) will be eminently worth-while in every respect and altogether typical of the pictures which in the past have been released beneath the Hodkinson Banner," declares the announcement from the Hodkinson headquarters.

Numerous "A.P." First Runs

Associated Producers Product in Biggest Houses During Hot Spell

AN unusual number of first run showings is reported for Associated Producers pictures by that company. The fact that these will be shown at the peak of the summer season, is pointed out as a proof of the popularity of "A. P." pictures. A goodly number of the houses will run nothing but Associated Producers pictures.

To begin with, the Strand theatre, New York, will play "Mother O' Mine," the latest Thomas H. Ince production, for the week beginning July 31st. Following this, the picture will play the entire Loew Circuit. "Home Talent," the five-reel scream of the screen, by Mack Sennett, is scheduled to play a week at Shea's Hippodrome, the leading theatre of Upper New York State. "Mother O' Mine" is slated to go into the new Tivoli in Chicago.

Other first runs are "Love's Outcast," at the California theatre, and Miller's theatre in Los Angeles; "Foolish Matrons," at the Symphony theatre in Los Angeles, and at the California theatre in San Francisco; "Mother O' Mine," at the Gift's theatre, Cincinnati, Kunsky's Madison of Detroit will show "Foolish Matrons"; The Blue Mouse at Seattle "Mother O' Mine"; The Strand in San Francisco "Home Talent"; The Blue Mouse in Minneapolis "A Small Town Idol," and the New Allen in Cleveland "Foolish Matrons."

"I Am Guilty" has just completed a tour of the entire Loew circuit, where it will be followed by the Frothingham production which ran at the Capitol, "The Ten Dollar Raise."

Ray to Film Hoyt Play

"Midnight Bell," Famous in 1889 Will Be First National Release

THROUGHOUT the United States where, from twenty to thirty years ago the Hoyt plays were the talk of the theatre-goers, "Hoyt pictures" may soon become almost as familiar a line. Announcement that in his next presentation by Arthur S. Kane, Charles Ray is to star in "A Midnight Bell," the production which First National has set for release August 22nd, has aroused a flood of memories in the minds of comedy-lovers, who hail the pictured revival of this classic as the return of a long-absent friend.

Students of stage history regard as a happy coincidence that Mr. Ray should film the Hoyt play in which, on its first New York appearance, March 5th, 1889, Maude Adams had the ingenue role. That premier took place in the old Bijou theatre, on the west side of Broadway, between 30th and 31st streets. Miss Adams, then in her early professional career, was playing in "Lord Chumleh," under Daniel Frohman, for $35 a week when "A Midnight Bell" was produced, but was released that she might act in the Hoyt play with her mother.

Maude Adams has long been regarded as one of the most conscientious artists on the stage. Charles Ray enjoys the same distinction among film stars. Both are devoted to their beloved work and they are akin also in their love of home and study and their genuine dislike for unnecessary notoriety and public appearances. For years many persons believed her fidelity to her work was a studied affectation with Maude Adams and there are still those who regard Mr. Ray's consistent refusals to show himself before audiences as a pose. Whoever has come in touch with them knows, though, that both are in deadly earnest in their opinions.

A scene from Ambrosio's "Theodora," to be distributed by Goldwyn

"Theodora" Released in Fall

Goldwyn's Italian Spectacle Will Be Shown at Legitimate Theatre

THE Ambrosio production of "Theodora," a spectacular film version of the Victorien Sardou drama in which Bernhardt won great renown, will be the first of Goldwyn's Italian photoplays to be released in the fall, it is stated.

The spectacle probably will receive a New York pre-release showing in a legitimate theatre at the regular theatrical scale of prices, as in the case of "The Old Nest." In keeping with Goldwyn's policy to give the exhibitors who have rented and shown Goldwyn productions a chance to make first money on "Theodora," the film will not be roadshowed, according to present plans, declared a statement from the Goldwyn headquarters.

"Theodora" was two years in the making, declares Goldwyn, and a total of 30,000 persons were employed in picturizing the famous story. The sets are reported to have been prepared by the Vatican architect and to have required six months to build them.

Rita Jolivet, the actress who was brought to this country from France, to play the lead with Otis Skinner in "Kismet," acts the role of Theodora.

This spectacle, made by the men who produced "Cabiria," is declared by Goldwyn to be a bigger and more spectacular production than that famous photoplay, which is now being revived as a big theatre attraction. Its story is based on the attempt of Empress Theodora of Byzantium (Constantinople) to revive the old paganism which the Emperor Constantine had suppressed in favor of Christianity.

"Journey's End" At Capitol

Hugo Ballin's Titleless Masterpiece to Have Big N. Y. Premiere

"THE Journey's End" is to play the big Capitol Theatre, New York City, the week beginning July 17th. Officials of the Capitol Theatre, — chief among them Samuel Rothaphel,—are highly enthusiastic about the picture and expect to achieve great results with it, announces the Hodkinson organization.

"The Journey's End" is the first serious drama ever created without a single sub-title. The cast is a splendid one. Mabel Ballin in the leading feminine role, leaves nothing to be desired. It is said that her work in "The Journey's End" far surpasses any of her triumphs in the past. Another prominent member of the cast is Wyndham Standing, who has been seen in support of practically every female star of any importance. Numbered among his greatest successes are "The Isle of Conquest" in which he played opposite Norma Talmadge and "Rose of the World," which he made with Elsie Ferguson. Mr. Standing will also be remembered for his remarkable work in "Earthbound."

Another featured member of the cast is George Bankcroft, a "find" of Hugo aBllin's. In "The Journey's End" Mr. Bancroft makes his first bow to the picture-going public but so excellent a performance does he give that all those who have witnessed it confidently assert for him a brilliant screen career.

Hodkinson Picture Is Booked by Loew

Herbert Ochs, Hodkinson representative in Cleveland, has closed a contract with Fred Desburg of the Loew's circuit for a full week's simultaneous showing of "Keeping Up With Lizzie," at Loew's Euclid and Liberty Theatres in Cleveland, Ohio. These showings will begin on the release date of the production, May 29th, 1921.

Work Begun on "Flower of the North"

With the completion of the cast for "Flower of the North," production has already begun on this Vitagraph special based on the popular novel of the same name by James Oliver Curwood.

Henry B. Walthal will have the leading male role of Philip, and Pauline Starke will appear opposite Mr. Walthal as Jeanne. Emmett King has the powerful role of D'Arcambal and others include Harry Northrup as Thorpe, Joe Rickson as Pierre, Jack Curtis as Blake, Walter Rogers as McDougall, William McCall as Cassidy and Vincinte Howard as Sachigo. In addition there will be hundreds of extra players for the lumber camp scenes and an entire tribe of Indians.

David Smith is in charge of the production.

Cullen Landis the Lead in New Goldwyn

Goldwyn has selected Cullen Landis to play the leading role in the first original scenario prepared for that corporation by Alice Duer Miller. This comes as a reward of merit for the long line of parts that Mr. Landis has played so effectively as a member of the Goldwyn Repertory company during the past two years.

His first big hit as a Goldwyn player was in the Rex Beach photoplay, "The Girl from Outside," followed by the leading role in "It's a Great Life," from Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "The Empire Builders," J. Wallingford Speed in Rex Beach's "Going Some," "Rab in "Bunty Pulls the Strings," the younger brother in "Snowblind," and one of the sons in Rupert Hughes' big success, "The Old Nest."

"The Soul of Man" for Producers Security

Lee Francis Lybarger, the well known lecturer and author, has given the screen a powerful story of love and hate in his big production, "The Soul of Man," which is now being titled and cut by the Producers Security Corporation relative to its general distribution.

The Producers Security exploitation bureau has a handsome press book on the presses, the cover being a specially designed drawing of an allegorical scene. The book will be in three colors, with some new ideas inserted by the publicity heads.

"Conquering Power" a Hit

New York Critics Shower Liberal Praise on New Rex Ingram Picture

"THE Conquering Power," the Rex Ingram production for Metro shown this week at the Rivoli Theatre, has been greeted by reviewers with a unanimity of praise. Some critics expressed the opinion that "The Conquering Power," surpasses the "Four Horsemen."

The Evening Mail said: "In many respects 'The Conquering Power' was a test of Ingram's real ability as a director. When 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse,' his first great effort, scored its sensational success, the wonder was expressed if he could ever equal that work. His answer is found in 'The Conquering Power,' for in the latter film he has actually surpassed 'The Four Horsemen.' Artistically the film is magnificent, a masterpiece, a superb background for a powerful story, impressively told."

P. F. Reniers, writing in the New York Evening Post, says:

"It has an ease of continuity that is soothing in effect; the tonal shadings of its photography seem equivalent to the elusive quality of sensuous music; and Mr. Ingram's groups fall, dissolve and fall again into pictures so well composed that one regrets the necessity for continuous movement."

Hariette Underhill in the New York Tribune: "'What do you want now?' they say, and we answer, now once and for all, another 'Conquering Power.' We sat spellbound while the story was unfolded on the sereen, charmed by the youthful appeal, vivacity and cleverness of Rudolph Valentino, by the restful and perfect continuity of the story, by the gorgeous photography, by the most excellent and beautifully brief titles, and by the splendid direction of this man, Rex Ingram."

Alan Dale in the American: "It is a relief from the slop of the average pieture story, with its tiresome everydayness and its stupid characters. In fact, it sidesteps away from the beaten track and please admit that is an important thing to do. . . . It is an interesting and faithful picturization of a famous story. . . . A more charming heroine than Miss Terry it would be difficult to find. She was not only extraordinarily pretty to look at but she was girlish, ingenuous and perfectly irresistible."

Stern Back from Coast in Optimistic Mood

Abe Stern, treasurer of Universal Film, has arrived in New York from the West Coast. He is especially optimistic over the results obtained in the filming of Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives," and believes the pieture "will make a fortune." He declares the hard times experienced during the spring have had their beneficent side in emphasizing the value of strictest economy. The fall releases of Universal, he predicts, "are going to set the pace in the production field." Mr. Stern plans to leave for Europe on July 5.

Well Balanced Cast in "Garments of Truth"

George D. Baker has assembled a notable cast for "Garments of Truth," his second production to be made by S-L Pictures for Metro. Heading the list of players is Gareth Hughes, star in this Freeman Tilden story. Mr. Hughes also was starred in "The Huneh," Mr. Baker's first production of the series.

Ethel Grandin will play opposite Mr. Hughes. John Steppling seen also in an important role in "The Hunch" will enact the part of a small town mayor in the picture.

Graham Pettie, Margaret McWade, Walter Perry, Frank Norcross, Harry Lorraine and Frances Raymond also have been selected for parts in "Garments of Truth."

A. P. Closes Deal for So. America Distribution

COVERING the entire feature output of Associated Producers for a period of two years, Al Lichtman, general manager of Associated Producers, represented by Arthur Levey, his foreign sales manager, consummated a deal last week with the Argentine-American Film Company of Buenos Aires, whereby the latter company will act as distributors of all "A. P." feature productions released during the years of 1921 and 1922 in seven South American countries.

The seven countries concerned in this big deal are Argentine, Paraguay, Uruguay, Brazil, Chile, Peru, and Bolivia. The arrangement begins with the first Associated Producers picture released, which was Thomas H. Ince's famous box-office attraction, "Homespun Folks," and includes all feature productions so far released or to be released.

Pathe Serials Up to the Standard, Says Pearson

Commenting on Sydney Cohen's speech before the New Jersey Exhibitors' convention, during which Mr. Cohen declared that the coming year "will have to see pictures with more action, more story, and more human interest," Elmer Pearson, director of exchanges, declares that the Pathe serial companies have been endeavoring to turn out just the sort of screen material endorsed by the M. P. T. O. of A. president. Mr. Pearson says the productions now under way are being given unusual attention and considerably more time.

"Charles Hutchison and Ruth Roland have been working for months on their newest episode plays, which will not be released until the Fall. In fact, Miss Roland's next serial will not be issued until mid-winter, if present plans hold true," declares Mr. Pearson.

"The stories for these productions were chosen for their action, their color, and the intensity of their drama. They are certain to fill the bill, as pronounced by Mr. Cohen, neeessary for the building up of box-office receipts during the coming season."

Betty Compson in New Role; Chaney in Cast

A statement from the Goldwyn home-offiee declares that Betty Compson's role in "For Those We Love," which is scheduled for release by Goldwyn, is entirely different from any in which the star has previously appeared. She takes the part of an unsophistieated young lady of the country village type, who makes herself the target of the local gossipers by befriending a gambler who has saved her from drowning. Lon Chaney plays the part of the gambler. In the cast are Frank Campeau, Dick Rosson, Walter Moroseo, Bert Woodruff and Camille Astor. Arthur Rosson directed.

Century Comedies Plant Is Being Enlarged

TO make room for the new producing companies that are being installed to make Century Comedies for Universal, ground has been broken to enlarge the Century studio. Carpenters have been at work for the past week making additional dressing rooms, property rooms, and several new stages. Since Alf Goulding's new company started making Harry Sweet Comedies, with Tom Buckingham alternating, and Fred Fishback's company, consisting of Brownie and Baby Peggy Montgomery, have been working at topnotch speed, the studio has become very much congested.

Great strides are being made to enlarge Century's studio to such a point that each director will have his own stage, with three stages ready for emergency. At present Alf Goulding is finishing "Stealin' Home," Fred Fishback is finishing Brownie's latest with Baby Peggy, "Brownie's Little Venus," and Buckingham may handle Dorety's next picture, the tentative title being "Way Down West."

Walsh Seeking Lumber Camp Locations

R. A. Walsh, who is soon to begin production of "Kindred of the Dust," the Peter B. Kyne story, has been swamped recently with invitations from Chambers of Commerce and lumber companies in the northwest.

Mr. Walsh eventually may yield to the pleading of Peter B. Kyne, who wishes to point out to the producer of "Kindred of the Dust" the exact locations which Mr. Kyne had in mind when he wrote his famous story.

Veiller to Direct Bert Lytell's New Subject

Bayard Veiller will direct Bert Lytell in "Lady Fingers," that star's next Metro production after "Junk," the Maxwell Karger production in which Mr. Lytell at present is working at the Hollywood studios of the company. The story was written by Jackson Gregory and prepared for the screen by Lenore Coffey of the Metro West Coast scenario department.

For Short-Subject Program

Elmer Pearson Endorses Rothafel's Lead and Thinks More Will Follow

BACK of Samuel L. Rothafel's success in the presentation of an all-short-subject program at the Capitol Theatre in New York, is a significance that clearly indicates the trend of the times in motion picture presentation, according to Elmer Pearson, director of Exchanges of Pathe.

"Exhibitors who regard the feature (assuming it to be five reels or more in length) as an absolutely essential unit of their program, are laboring under an erroneous impression of public taste," asserts Mr. Pearson.

"To get the real inside viewpoint of the public on the question of short subjects as a form of entertainment, I visited the Capitol Theatre twice during the week of July third. I was particularly impressed, to begin with, by the very large crowd that attended both performances. despite the holiday time, and the weather which drove the thermometer up around ninety.

"It is possible to sense the feeling of an audience, by giving it careful attention, and I feel that on each of my visits to the Capitol, I caught the 'crowd psychology.'

"There were persons in each audience who could not possibly have sat through a so-called feature of five reels or more. In their state of mind, brought about by the weather, they had to have their entertainment in short jolts, as it were. It had to be brief and snappy. That is what Mr. Rothafel gave them. The Harold Lloyd comedy, 'Among Those Present' which was featured on the Capitol program, seemed to act as a tonic—a bracer, perhaps—for an audience that was ill at ease with itself when it entered the theatre.

"The other units of the program, fitted in very nicely around the Lloyd comedy, and the musical presentations were of such a nature as to add more laurels to Mr. Rothafel's credit.

Mr. Rothafel has set a precedent. Broadway has found a bill of short subjects to its liking. Other leading showmen no doubt will follow."

Pioneer Has New Picture

"Out of the Dust" Already Booked on Loew Circuit, States Lefcourt

"OUT OF THE DUST," John P. McCarthy's dramatic American screen epic which has been acquired by the Pioneer Film Corporation, will be shown in all the Marcus Loew theatres early in August.

In making this announcement, President A. E. Lefcourt of the Pioneer Film Corporation points out with particular pride that this feature, "Out of the Dust," is the first release of a series of specials to be released under the Pioneer banner during the season 1921-22, and represents one of the biggest feature photo-plays the Pioneer Film Corporation has ever offered exhibitors.

Mr. Lefcourt expressed his gratification on the booking of "Out of the Dust" on Mr. Loew's entire circuit of theatres, and called particular attention to the fact that this newest photo-play represents the work of a master producer and director who gained his inspiration for the making of the picture from the famous paintings of Frederic Remington. Incidentally, the release of the picture marks the first introduction of Remington reproductions through special arrangements made with Collier's.

The cast in "Out of the Dust" is a distinguished one and includes Russell Simpson, Dorcas Matthews, Robert McKim, little Pat Moore, "Mickey" Moore, Jane Talent, Francis Fowers, Bert Sprotte and Edward Jobson.

"I am particularly pleased that Pioneer has acquired this splendid production," said Mr. Lefcourt yesterday. "It is just such a picture as 'Out of the Dust' that reflects credit to the independent field and encourages the independent producer."

New Selznick Pictures to Start Next Week

Selznick Corporation next week will put two new pictures in work at Fort Lee. One will be "The Way of a Maid," starring Elaine Hammerstein under the direction of William P. S. Earle. The other will be "The Man of Stone," starring Conway Tearle under the difection of George Archainbaud.

The Hammerstein picture is from a story by Rex Taylor, Lewis Allen Browne, of the Selznick staff, wrote the continuity. "The Man of Stone" was written by John Lynch and Edmund Goulding; Mr. Browne also wrote the scenario for the production.

"Runaway Train" Meets with Big Success

Lyman H. Howe's "A Runaway Train," recently released by Educational Film Exchanges, is meeting with exceptional success in first run bookings all over the country, declares a statement from Educational Film Corporation.

This single-reel feature was the only short subject ever brought back to the Capitol theatre in New York for a second showing.

"I think it is the best short subject I have ever seen," wrote S. L. Rothafel, of the Capitol.

Managers of other big theatres throughout the United States agree with Mr. Rothafel, according to information from the branch exchanges of Educational received at Educational's headquarters.

Realart's Ass't-Treasurer Back from Coast

Returning from an extended tour of the Realart branch offices, Mr. Dario L. Faralla, assistant treasurer of Realart Pictures Corporation, spoke of the completion of the increased production facilities at the company's West Coast studios.

"The third stage and the new dressing rooms have already been completed," said Mr. Faralla, "and still further improvements are expected to start shortly. The plant as it now stands is adequate for present needs, but owing to the steady increase in the demand for Realart pictures, we are going right ahead planning for the needs of the future."

New Educational-Christie Deal

Comedy Producer Will Supply 24 Two-Reel Comics a Year

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has contracted for twenty-four two-reel Christie pictures a year for a term of several years, according to a statement just issued from the headquarters of the Educational Films Corporation.

During the last year Christie made, besides the short pictures for Educational, three longer feature pictures. The success of the two-reelers, however, has been so exceptionally good that Mr. Christie has decided to put every effort of the Christie staff into the production of the shorter pictures exclusively and in the coming year he will make none of the longer type.

"Al Christie occupies a unique position in the motion picture field today," says the statement from Educational's headquarters. "In spite of the undisputed appeal in many quarters of the slapstick type of comedy, Mr. Christie has held firmly to the policy of making only the very highest class of dressed up comedy, each picture being built primarily on a humorous story rather than on individual rough-and-tumble situations.

"Due to the public's desire for something new in the comedy line continually, many brands of comedies have flourished and died since the Christie Company was organized five years ago. There has been only one other comedy company in the United States that has been able to exist as long. Yet Christie Comedies have been of such consistent quality and have shown such a steady growth in direction, casting, photographic quality, story selection and general interest that instead of facing a smaller market, the Christie Comedies are now selling more generally than ever before in their history.

"When Educational took over distribution of the Christies with the completion of the Educational branch organizations about eight months ago, arrangements were made whereby virtually twice the amount that had previously been spent on each comedy was expended. Exhibitors have realized that with Educational's cooperation much more expensive and much better pictures were being made, and the result has been that the gross receipts on the pictures have jumped 100 per cent.

"Before work was begun on the new year's series of two reel comedies, Mr. Hammons visited the Christie studios in Los Angeles and spent considerable time discussing with directors, actors and photographers just what the exhibitors were seeking in the way of the Christie type of picture. The first three pictures made under the new contract have not only shown the customary advance, but have gone a great stride further, setting a distinctly new mark in short comedy.

"'Nothing Like It,' which will be the first Christie Comedy released in the new year, and 'Oh Buddy,' also to be released in August, are without doubt features in themselves. 'Nothing Like It,' featuring Dorothy Devore with Eddie Barrym, Earl Rodney and an all-star cast, brings to film comedy something new in the way of costuming and is an elaborate production. An entire theatre had to be built to make this picture, which represents the efforts of a small town theatrical club to give a play that would live forever in the memory of the villagers. Dorothy Devore, playing Cleopatra, is seen in costumes that would make even the Queen of the Nile envious. Helen Darling and other members of the cast are costumed accordingly.

"'Oh Buddy,' featuring Neal Burns with Vera Steadman, is one of the fastest comedies ever produced. Burns does as fine work in this picture as he has ever shown.

"'In For Life,' the third of the series, has just been completed. For it a handsome Gothic church was built where the Nile had stood a short time before. It was used for the most handsome wedding scene that Christie has ever made. In the midst of the wedding Laddie, the beautiful collie that made such an auspicious screen debut in 'Sneakers,' is seen coming down the aisle dragging the kennel to which he had been tied to keep him from being a witness to his master's wedding ceremony."

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

Five Kineto Subjects Well Received

ALL of New York's daily newspaper motion picture critics extolled Mr. Rothafel's idea of a short subject program when they reviewed this week's offering at the Capitol theatre, and several of them went out of their way to pay an especial compliment to the Urban Popular Classics, of which there are several on the program.

The Times said: "After a ballet . . . there comes what many persons will probably consider the most interesting number on the program—a set of Charles Urban's Kineto subjects, 'Ancient Customs of Egypt,' 'The Science of a Soap Bubble,' 'From Egg to Chick,' 'Rare Animals,' and 'The Hare and the Tortoise,' all as entertaining as informative, which is what the so-called educational pictures should be."

Other papers to comment favorably on the subjects were The Tribune, The Herald, and The New York Commercial.

Canadian Demand for Sonora Subject

The Sonora Films Corporation is receiving many requests from Canadian exhibitors for "The Twice Born Woman," which is now playing its successful fourth week at the New York Hippodrome. The Sonora company are busily answering letters of inquiry in regards to the picture, and they believe earnestly that it will be one of the greatest picture triumphs that Canada ever witnessed. One can gather from the theme that the picture has the qualities for such a triumph.

Drawn from legend, tradition and scripture, this symbolic drama depicts the worldly triumphs, the penitence and the atonement of Mary of Magdala.

Roy Steward in Series of Westerns

George Edwardes-Hall is directing the first of the six Northwestern and Western dramas, starring Roy Steward, which are now being made by the Harmony Film Company of Los Angeles, for release through the Sunnywest Film Co., of New York. It is promised that the supporting cast will comprise many well known favorites.

This series of six does not include "Judge Her Not," nor "Wolves of the Range," already completed by Harmony Film Co.

Johnny Hines in Feature

C. C. Burr Describes "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" Ready for Independents

IN announcing the completion this week of the filming of Johnny Hines' newest offering, "Burn 'em Up Barnes," an automobile racing story in which the star makes his debut to stellar honors in feature length productions, Charles C. Burr, the producer and the managing executive of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., submits a summary of the outstanding features of the production which are thought to have an appeal quite as potent to the amusement seeker as to the showman.

"In my judgment," states Mr. Burr, "'Burn 'em Up Barnes,' featuring Johnny Hines and the initial release of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., our premier offering, embodies all of the factors which go into the making of real box-office value.

"Consider the potentiality of these factors: First, there is Ray Schrock's screen story which, without being custom tailored, revamped or distorted one iota from the author's original idea, provides an ideal vehicle for Johnny Hines. The prototypes of its characters are to be found in every city and hamlet—they are convincingly real.

"Assisting Mr. Hines in his successful characterization of a rich young man whom Fate compels to become poor that he may appreciate wealth and strive to regain its possession, is Edmund Breese, who as 'King' Cole, the Good Samaritan tramp, provides a delightful character study. Assisting are such sterling players as George Fawcett, J. Barney Sherry, Betty Carpenter, Julia Swayne Gordon, Dorothy Leeds, Matthew Betz and a host of other stage and screen favorites.

"The photography was done by Hal Young, formerly and for years wtih Famous Players and other producers, and by Ned Van Buren. Neil Sullivan assisted as second camera man. This is a guarantee of the utmost in cinematography. George A. Beranger, formerly with the Griffith forces and more recently with Fox and other producers, directed and Ralph Spence is doing the titles. It is confidentially expected that the titles of 'Burn 'em Up Barnes' will rival in sprightly humor and timeliness those which Mr. Spence provided for 'A Connecticut Yankee.'

"It is the appreciation of what the utilization of these factors mean to all concerned that prompts the conclusion that 'Burn 'em Up Barnes' will obtain from the independent showman and his patrons a most enthusiastic welcome."

"Shool Days" in September

Warner Brothers Picture, With Wesley Barry, is Now Completed

WORK on "School Days," under the direction of William Nigh and Harry Rapf, was finished last week and the picture is now in the cutting room. Over seventy-five thousand feet of negative has been "shot" in the production. The fact that over twenty-five children in addition to Wesley Barry appear in "School Days" made studio work unusually laborious and much footage was consumed getting the proper effects with the youngsters. For the first time in his career Wesley Barry plays the part of a wealthy boy in "School Days."

In a statement issued this week Harry Rapf who is in charge of production said, "We have come to realize that exploitation is the most important item in the distribution of motion pictures and 'School Days' will receive the benefit of one of the most unusual advertising campaigns that we have ever attempted. As the first aid announced for the exploitation of 'School Days' we will offer a revival of Gus Edwards' famous vaudeville act of the same name in which a dozen of his talented kiddies will personally appear.

"They will offer their singing and dancing specialties singly and in groups during the course of the act which, as everyone knows, was one of the greatest successes Mr. Edwards ever presented to the public. Rehearsals are now being conducted by Mr. Edwards and he reports that his production will be ready by September for the first-run theatres of the country.

"The advance publicity, advertising and exploitation on 'School Days' will be taken care of by a special exploitation expert who will be on the ground in all of the big cities far enough in advance to get a good showing with the newspapers in the community."

"Why Girls Leave Home," starring Anna Q. Nillson, directed by William Nigh and produced by Harry Rapf, will also be released by Warner Brothers in the fall.

Louise Lorraine, who is supporting Elmo Lincoln in "The Adventures of Tarzan," to be released by the Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corp., on the independent market

Louise Lorraine Fearless Serial Heroine

The work of Louise Lorraine, the heroine of "Adventures of Tarzan," the new serial starring Elmo Lincoln, has attracted wide-spread attention and favorable comment on the part of many state right buyers who have witnessed the first five episodes of this production, announces the releasing corporation. Miss Lorraine is said to be by far the most daring serial player the screen has yet produced. In many of the scenes of the first episodes of "Adventures of Tarzan" she worked fearlessly with Numa, the lion, Tantor, the elephant and Regent, the leopard, receiving minor injuries from the claws of the animals at various times.

Hoxie Coming East on Lengthy Tour

Jack Hoxie, according to Dr. W. E. Shallenberger of Arrow Film Corporation, is gradually making his way eastward on his country-wide tour of the independent exchange key cities.

After the big four days spent at the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Convention at Minneapolis where he was presented to hundreds of exhibitors and thousands of film fans in the Twin Cities, Hoxie, Dr. W. E. Shallenberger and his personal representative, Thomas A. Curran, left for Des Moines and Davenport, Ia., where they were the guests of C. C. Bridwell of the Reelcraft Film Exchanges.

On July 5th and 6th Hoxie visited Detroit with the Strand Features as his host and on July 7th returned to Chicago where he will be until the 11th.

"Adventures of Tarzan" to Be Finished Soon

Reports from the studios of the Great Western Producing Company in California indicate that the latest Tarzan serial, "Adventures of Tarzan" is fast nearing completion. Starring Elmo Lincoln and produced under a special arrangement with Numa Pictures Corporation for the Weiss Brothers, Adolph, Louis and Max, this serial is being directed by Robert F. Hill from the concluding chapters of "The Return of Tarzan," by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The titles of the first six episodes are announced as follows: "Jungle Romance." "The City of Gold," "The Sun Death," "Stalking Death," "Flames of Hate" and "The Ivory Tomb."

Exchanges to Form Association

Convention of Independent Exchangemen Planned for Aug.

ANOTHER development in the growing activities on the part of the Independent Exchangemen is noticed in the recent movement started by Samuel Zierler, president of the Commonwealth Film Corporation.

Mr. Zierler's plan is to link all the prominent Independent Exchangemen of the country into a close-knit organization in order that they may be in a position to work in harmony with the already well-organized body of exhibitors.

The preliminary steps were taken very unobtrusively, but the idea fostered by Mr. Zierler has been so quickly taken hold of that news of it has spread all over the country.

A few days before the big convention of the M. P. T. O. at Minneapolis, Mr. Zierler wrote to some of the leading exchangemen in the various exchange centers asking them to meet John Hammell, Assistant to the President of Commonwealth, at Minneapolis and there talk over the idea of forming an organization of Independent Exchangemen that would be nation-wide in scope.

The meeting was held as planned and from that first meeting there is developing a most important body in the film industry. Late this month or early in August exchangemen from every territory in the United States will meet in New York to take definite steps toward forming a permanent body.

Mr. Zierler was asked to outline the purpose of the organization. He did so in the following manner:

"We are taking our cue from the counsel of the exhibitors themselves—Senator James Walker. His advice was that Independents organize themselves to the uttermost and that is exactly what we are going to do.

"There is no use in expecting exhibitors to depend on the Independents for real, honest-to-God service, unless the Independents are in a position to guarantee them such service. Unorganized we cannot guarantee anything. Organized, we can. We are going to make an organization that will leave the exhibitor free to do business with Independents entirely if he wishes to; or in other words, if he wishes to follow the advice of his counsel. Senator Walker's advice is just as good for us as it is for the exhibitors and we mean to profit by it.

"Incidentally, I may say that we want to make the conditions of membership so stringent, so difficult, that none but the finest of the Independent Exchanges will be in a position to join. We do not want to adopt a 'high and mighty' attitude, but neither do we wish to allow any one who styles himself as an 'Independent' to get in. That designation 'Independent' is going to mean something of value.

"For one thing we are going to have a good stiff fee as a condition of initial membership. Off hand, let us say $500. It may be more. Of course, these details will have to come before the first meeting for settlement, but I do not believe there will be any protests. Only, I believe I am talking for all of the men and organizations who will be members when I say these things. The largest and the finest, the most representative Independent Exchanges will be in the organization; we will be strong enough to bear comparison with any organization and the important point above all is that our interests and the interests of the exhibitors will be identical.

"No, I have not yet considered a name. That is something for our Convention to decide. We hold the Convention here in New York within a few weeks and then we will put it all down in black and white. The main point is that very shortly there is going to be in existence a body of Independent Exchangemen that the exhibitors can count upon."

Important Exchangemen from outside of New York have either written or spoken personally to Mr. Zierler to say that they were back of him to the limit and only waited the word to come to the Convention. Among these are Sidney Lust of Washington; H. Weinberg, of Illinois; Herman Rifkin and Samuel Grant, of Boston; P. B. Dana, of Denver; Robert Lynch, of Philadelphia; H. D. Till, of New Orleans, and many others.

Another Aladdin Series for Reelcraft

A new and bigger series of Aladdin Comedies to follow the series of fourteen in which "Bud" Duncan, well-remembered for his work in the "Ham And Bud" Comedies, is starred, is promised for early release through Reelcraft Pictures Corporation's thirty branch offices, according to a joint announcement made this week by R. C. Cropper, President of the Reelcraft organization and Morris Shiller, President and General Manager of Shiller Productions, Inc., who are making the new series.

Each offering in the new series of Aladdin Comedies, it is announced will be one thousand feet in length, and will be released each week on the basis of fifty-two per year. At present a vast producing programme embracing among its manifold details the formation of a special scenario department, the selection of a company of competent comedians and the procuring of a high-class comedy director is taxing the efforts of the company. Just as soon as negotiations with director, stars, scenario writers and others involved in the production of the new series of Aladdin Comedies are completed, announcement will be made of the personnel of Reelcraft's new producing unit.

Victor Nurnberg Writes Screen Prologue

Victor Nurnberg, formerly director of publicity and advertising for the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, now associated with the publicity staff of the Sonora Films Corporation, has written the prologue for the European film attraction, "Tradition," which is playing at the largest theatre in the world, the New York Hippodrome. This picture is playing in conjunction with "The Twice Born Woman," to be released by the Sonora organization in the state-rights field.

Shoninger Promoted by Inter-Ocean

Frederick E. Shoninger, for the past two years a member of the sales staff of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, has been appointed to the post of Manager Foreign Film Sales of the company to succeed Gus S. Schlesinger who has resigned, according to an announcement made public this week from the New York offices of the company.

F. E. Backer Will Produce

Horizon Pictures to Enter Production Field to Fill Demand

IN extending their program for Fall activities in the independent field, Franklyn E. Backer, president of Horizon Pictures, Inc., announces that his company is now making preparations to enter the producing end of the business with a view to furnishing the independent market a series of big specials during the coming season.

In a statement issued by Mr. Backer, he said, "It is the purpose of Horizon Pictures, Inc., to eventually become the greatest source of outlet for independent productions and to this end we are extending every effort to have ready by Fall a sufficient number of pictures to take care of both the independent exchanges and the exhibitors.

"Only recently we announced to the trade at large that we were in the market with cash to buy outright any big specials that were available. Although we received some very favorable responses some of which eventuated in securing some remarkable pictures, it was surprising to note how extremely curtailed production is today, as indicated by the very limited response.

"To meet the exigencies of the situation and to be thoroughly fortified to supply the enormous demand for independent pictures during the months to come, which I have predicted will be the biggest in the history of the business, I find it not only necessary to buy what worthy productions we can, but to enter actively into the making of pictures.

"We have now under consideration final arrangements with several of the best directors and biggest stars in the industry, each to make a series of high class pictures from well-known novels and plays. Until all arrangements are completed I cannot announce the names of either the directors or stars, suffice it to state, that the directors we have in mind have all been in the industry for a number of years and have to their credit some of the best pictures of the screen, and the stars we are negotiating with are not near-stars by virtue of having been featured players, but are stars strictly from the box-office standpoint."

Public Interest in Fables

Urban's "The Hare and the Tortoise" Described by Newspapers

AN indication of the public interest in the series of "Modern Truths from Old Fables," which will shortly be released by the Kineto Company of America, is obtained from the attention paid to them in last Sunday's New York World which devoted considerable space to them in its Gravure Section.

As a basis for illustration the pictorial editor of the World selected scenes from "The Frog and the Rat," "The Grasshopper and the Ant," and "The Sun and the Frogs." Accompanying each was printed a portion of the original Fable as La Fontaine wrote it hundreds of years ago.

These Fables are being translated to the screen by Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, and are being edited by Charles Urban. Both men are experts on animals and the actual photographic work is being done out at the Bronx Zoo, where Dr. Ditmars is the curator.

"The Hare and the Tortoise," the first in the series of "Modern Truths from Old Fables," was shown last week at the Capitol Theatre and established a high marking.

Dramus Productions to Make Film Symphony

Dramus Productions, Inc., of New York, announce that they will start production of "The Soul of the Violin" on October 15th. The exteriors will be taken in Europe, especially in Italy, Hungary, and Poland and the entire production will be under the personal supervision of Philip Van Doan.

"The Soul of the Violin" will be, it is said, the first film symphony to be made. The story is based on the history of a Stradivarius violin, which has been in the possession of several world famous virtuosi. Each of these artists composed a certain famous symphony on this violin, and the story brings out the dramatic circumstances under which they received their inspiration.

Bert Lubin Due in N. Y. on July 15th

Contrary to expectations, Bert Lubin, president of the Western Pictures Corporation, has again been delayed and will not arrive in New York with the first of the new series of Allene Ray semi-western society features until July 15th.

Arrow-Curwood Film in West Coast Houses

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, has announced that he has been advised by W. O. Edmunds and E. H. Emmick, of Progress Features, San Francisco, that they have placed the first picture of the Arrow-Curwood series, "God's Country and the Law," with the West Coast Theatres, Inc., for the Los Angeles territory.

Big Southern Theatre Books Kineto Subject!

A message from R. M. Savini, of Savini Films, Inc., to the Kineto Company of America, bears the information that the Kineto Review, "Was Darwin Right?" occupied a prominent position on the opening program of the Metropolitan theatre in Atlanta. The Metropolitan has been just completed and is one of the finest theatres in the South.

Bill Desmond's Latest Released Shortly

Bill Desmond will shortly announce the releasing plans for his most recent starring vehicle, "Fightin' Mad," which he is now cutting and editing. The story is by H. H. Van Loan, and is described as a modernization, in Western setting, of "The Three Musketeers." He asserts that the action is the fastest and snappiest of any picture he has ever appeared in.

Clara Kimball Young's Amazing Tour

A "Personal Appearance Trip" That Set New Records

By Milt D. Crandall

WHEN the chimes in the belfry of the Congregational church played "Auld Lang Syne" as part of an elaborate program in honor of the visit of Clara Kimball Young, to Portland, they also tolled the finish of a ten weeks' tour of the principal cities of the United States that from a standpoint of interest in the Equity star and her pictures, doubtless will never be equaled.

An analysis of the trip from a publicity angle shows that Miss Young received over fifteen hundred columns of publicity and pictures, front page positions in eighteen big dailies, including among the list, The Kansas City Star, The St. Louis Star, Des Moines Capitol, Omaha World-Herald, Omaha Bee, St. Paul Pioneer Press, Minneapolis Tribune, Chicago Herald-Examiner, Seattle Post Intelligencer, Portland Telegram, Atlanta Georgian, Pittsburg Press, Detroit Journal, Cleveland Press, Cleveland Plain Dealer and Cleveland News. Not only did the above newspapers assign special writers to cover her stay in their respective cities but arranged many novel publicity-news features.

The Desmoines Capitol, for the first time in the history of that powerful Iowa publication, bordered their front page with a reproduction of motion pictures of C. K. Y. taken in their building. The film strip showed her starting the huge presses, setting up her story in the make-up room, putting the forms in place, etc. Not to be outdone the Cleveland News featured Clara with Tris Speaker, manager of the World's Champion Cleveland Baseball Club and gave her a seat in the press box to cover the game for their paper. The stunt was played heavily on the sport pages with stories and photographs of captivating Clara and Speaker.

Even the K. C. Star

FOR the first time in many years the Kansas City Star, considered by many "old time" newspapermen as the hardest daily in the United States to get "over" a story "broke" their front page for the Equity star despite the fact that many prominent movie stars had visited Kansas City just prior to her visit and were not so fortunate.

For three consecutive days the Cleveland Press, with the largest afternoon circulation in Cleveland, ran front page stories telling of the coming of Clara. That this publicity was effective in Cleveland is attested by the fact that a record-breaking week at the Allen where she appeared was the result.

At Detroit the newspapers followed the lead of the Cleveland News and Ty Cobb played the role of Speaker. In every city that she visited instead of the old time methods of trying to "put something over" on the press, Milt Crandall, her publicity man, created news which the papers were all glad to use.

By the Authority of The People of the State of Oregon expressed through the Legislature in Joint Assembly
I have the honor to invite
MISS CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG to take part in the International Exposition to be held under the auspices of Atlantic Pacific Highways and Electrical Exposition in the city of Portland, State of Oregon in the year 1925 for the purpose of celebrating the completion of the transcontinental system of highways
the return of World Peace, discovery of the Electro-Magnet in 1825 symbolizing the possibilities of Hydro-Electric Power in industry, and to express the earnest hope that you will be represented in a suitable and proper manner on that great occasion.

What the Governor of Oregon said to Clara on her visit to Portland

The trip started at Birmingham, Ala., where the star remained two days. On the morning of the second day Birmingham honored her by appointing Clara associate Judge of the Municipal Court and together with Judge Abernathy the movie artist listened to the cases and recommended sentence. Many humorous incidents were recorded in the course of the various trials. The Birmingham newspapers gave considerable space to the fact that a movie star was "On the bench."

On the night of her departure for Montgomery, Ala., her next stop, Clara Kimball Young met the Hon. Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the Navy, and as the latter was enroute to Montgomery, the chamber of commerce of Montgomery thought it a good idea to give both a rousing welcome to their midst. Arriving in Montgomery the team of Young and Daniels "cleaned-up the bill." The governor and his wife were hosts to the visitors and throngs lined the streets to extend a real southern welcome. A public reception was held in the lobby of the Exchange Hotel.

The feature of her stay in Montgomery was an address delivered before the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs, who were holding a convention. The Equity satelite ridiculed the censorship imposed upon producers and told the women just how they could co-operate to have "better and cleaner pictures." She cited the case of a picture she had made, "The Soul of Raphael" which she explained did not meet with the favor that it deserved because it was "too clean."

On to Atlanta

TWO daring aviators hovered over her train upon her departure for Atlanta and followed her to Atlanta. Here a monster crowd awaited her arrival. Fred Hauser, in behalf of the city of Atlanta, presented her with a beautiful floral horseshoe made of American beauty roses, as she alighted from the train. A reception committee composed of the Film Managers Association of Atlanta, headed by a band and many gayly bedecked automobiles escorted the Young entourage to the Georgian Terrace hotel.

Despite the fact that it was Grand Opera Week, considered by Georgians the "one big event of the year," the newspapers opened their columns to accounts of the arrival and history of the star. Many people who had purchased opera tickets for the matinees, failed to use them and took up their places in the long line that extended for a block in front of the box office of the Howard theatre. Ralph De Bruler, manager of the theatre, arranged a very beautiful stage setting for the production, "Straight From Paris" and a special musical program of operatic hits was a part of the program. Crowds followed her every move and to facilitate her arrival and departure to and from the hotel the police department assigned policemen to act as her personal escort during her sojourn in the Gate City.

From Atlanta the party went direct to Pittsburg where the Equity star was the guest of the Rowland and Clark theatres. Her appearance in East Liberty was a near riot and so popular was the star that the management of the theatre was forced to ask Miss Young to make three additional appearances throughout the day.

A new theatre in New Kensington was formally "opened" by Miss Young, who was forced to go without her dinner and travel over rough roads in order not to disappoint the largest crowd that ever congregated in the downtown section of New Kensington.

Gertrude Gordon, noted writer on the Pittsburg Press, was so favorably impressed with Clara, and wrote such a laudatory story concerning her visit to the smoky city that her article was "played up" on the front page.

Breaking Kunsky Records

FOLLOWING her appearances in ten different Pittsburg theatres the party left for Detroit. Long before the box office of the Madison theatre was open, long lines of humanity stretched around the circle and extended for a block down Woodward Avenue. It was here that Clara Kimball Young hung up a new record for attendance. John Kunsky, owner of the Madison, in commenting upon her visit said: "She is a tremendous drawing card, and has made for herself thousands of new admirers added to her many old ones."

Several new and novel publicity "stunts" were arranged here. Repeating her success as a jurist, Miss Young presided on the bench with Judge Wm. B. Heston, in Muncipal Court.

On the afternoon of the second day in Detroit Clara paid a visit to Navin field and met Ty. Cobb, at the home plate, during the game between Detroit and Chicago. The game was held up for ten minutes while members of the Detriot, White Sox and the umpires grasped her hand.

Next on the itinerary was Milwaukee. A monster crowd awaited the arrival of the train bringing to Milwaukee, "The world's most beautiful Woman." Social and business organizations vied with one another in entertaining the Young party.

One of the most interesting incidents in connection with her visit to Milwaukee was a visit to the United States "Rest Hospital" at Resthaven, near the city. Here Miss Young passed out smokes to over two hundred boys, victims of shell shock, from effects of the late war. It was with difficulty that her escort was able to get Clara to leave, in time for her appearance at the theatre. Miss Young is a great favorite among the enlisted men; she is a Sergeant in the Marines, having enlisted and received her warrant in Minneapolis and is also a member of the San Francisco Post No 1, American Legion.

New Theatres a Habit

WHILE in Milwaukee, an invitation was received to "dedicate" another theatre, this time at Green Bay, Wisconsin. Here literally, the "whole town turned out." Miss Carolyn Sachs, Miss Young's traveling companion, who is a "double" for the movie star, was almost swept off her feet by the crowd that mistook her for Clara.

Leaving Green Bay on Saturday evening the party arrived in St. Paul on Sunday morning. Although advertised to appear in but one theatre, the crowds were so great that she was forced to make appearances in the State and Garrick as well.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press, "broke" their front page on Monday morning to tell the people of St. Paul, their impressions of captivating C. K. Y. It was the first time that this staid publication had "broke over." Duluth, Minn., next on the trip, extended a most hearty welcome and her stay of but a day, was far too short to accommodate the fans eager to get a glimpse of the actress.

Minneapolis turned out en masse. It was almost a "Home coming"

Here's Complete Program for Noted Movie Star, Clara Kimball Young in City Coming Week

Visual evidence tells the story of Clara K. Young's triumphal tour as no words can. Newspaper men will best appreciate the showing given the Equity star, for the veterans know that the papers shown above are far from the "easy marks" of the Fourth Estate. Indeed, they are fairly representative of the "hard-boiled eggs." For once it can be said without fear of doubt that a star's "personal appearance" tour has added immeasurably to her following and popularity.

Clara Kimball Young's Tour

in the Flour City, as the Equity star had been there upon several occasions and the fans remembered her great war work while she was enlisting boys for service. In Minneapolis, Miss Young advocated immediate action by Congress, to speedily give the "boys" a soldier bonus. As a result of her declaration in behalf of the soldiers and sailors Miss Young received many letters from ex-service men thanking her for her efforts in their behalf.

Des Moines a High Spot

ARRIVING the next morning in Des Moines, Iowa, the actress was greeted by over five thousand people, who braved the rain and the early hour of her arrival to get a "look" at the film beauty. The reception arranged in this city by her publicity man, ably assisted by A. G. Stolte, of the A. H. Blank interests, and manager of the Garden theatre, was undoubtedly the greatest ovation ever extended to any one in Iowa, not excluding Presidential visits, statesmen or other celebrities.

The Fourteenth Cavalry Band, on horses, together with the Mayor of the city, Senator Lafayette Young, members of city council and a committee of ladies in charge of Mrs. A. H. Blank, formerly welcomed Clara to the city. A steady downpour of rain fell throughout the morning but despite this fact thousands of people lined the streets and waved a greeting as Miss Young passed en route to her hotel.

At four o'clock C. K. Y stepped through the front door of the Desmoines Capitol, Iowa's leading newspaper, and was introduced to the crowd by Senator Young, publisher of the paper.

Taking advantage of the great local popularity of Clara, her publicity man, put over one of the biggest newspaper motion picture publicity stunts ever undertaken by a press agent. "I'll have her get out the paper," he confided to the publisher. Quick to see the effect of the novel undertaking the publisher assented. Securing a camera man and accompanied by C. K. Y. the publicity man entered the newspaper office.

As the Equity star posed at the typewriter, the camera man took motion pictures, then working in the composing room, setting up her story in the forms, at the linotype machines and finally starting the big presses; all this was recorded on film to be developed and used as a border around the entire front page of the newspaper.

Everything worked fine and that afternoon the inhabitants of Des Moines were startled to find that Clara Kimball Young "Got out the Capitol," and A. H. Blank and Equity were pleased to see motion pictures of Clara around the whole front page. Reluctantly Clara departed for Omaha, tired but smilingly she "started all over again."

Here the Equity publicity hustler arranged with the police department for seventy-five policemen to escort her from the station to her hotel. Mayor-elect James Dahlman heartily greeted her and her stay in Omaha was climaxed by a big public reception staged in the Brandeis store at which time thousands grasped her hand.

The center of all eyes wherever she went, Clara's smile did its share to win favor

A brief stop was made in Kansas City. With very little advance advertising, Clara "dusted off" a few seats in two big theatres controlled by Frank Newman. The Kansas City Star gave her front page position.

At St. Louis, the Skourous "boys", real live hustlers, had paved the way in great style and when the publicity men arrived they arranged a novel news stunt with Mayor Kiel, Clara and the Salvation Army.

At noon Miss Young addressed the workers of the Salvation Army at the Statler Hotel and told them of her great interest in their work.

The New Grand Central, one of the finest motion picture theatres in America, where her picture was being shown in conjunction with her appearance, was jammed at all performances.

Having conquered the South and Southwest, the slogan was "On to Cleveland." The beautiful Allen theatre, under the management of S. Barrett McCormack, was selected to present her production "Straight From Paris" with her personal appearance. Mr. McCormack had already advertised another production for the week but gladly cancelled for an opportunity to play the Equity star.

Front Pages Easy

FOR three consecutive days Clara Kimball Young broke the front page of the Cleveland papers. Upon her arrival an aviator flew over the Allen theatre and the downtown section and bombarded the city with roses, the compliments of C. K. Y. and the Allen theatre management.

The Cleveland News gave over to her a half page of their sporting sheet, to cover the baseball game as their guest and photographs of Clara and Tris Speaker were abundantly used.

The Plaindealer had her write a series of articles under her "sig" dealing with "Beautiful women I have met." In one of the articles the following lines were written, which later were syndicated and under the caption "Remarkable Remarks" was used in hundreds of newspapers throughout the United States: "To my mind an intelligent face is the best asset to beauty."

Never in the history of the theatre had the house played to such crowds. Despite hot weather long lines of people tried to gain admittance. "It was a great week," smilingly said McCormack. Philip Spitalany, one of America's greatest musical conductors, leader of the Allen orchestra, dedicated a most beautiful piece of music entitled "Young Love," the strains of which will doubtless become popular all over the United States. The ushers presented her with a beautiful floral tribute. At the conclusion of her week's stay in Cleveland, the members of the Allen orchestra arose and played "Auld Lang Syne." Cleveland will long remember the visit of Clara Kimball Young and the latter will never forget her wonderful reception in Cleveland.

From Cleveland, almost exhausted from the effects of the long trip, Clara hied herself to Lake Louis, Canada, to rest while the publicity man again played the role of advance courier and speeded westward to Seattle, Washington, the next stop on the trip.

He had the merchants decorate their buildings. Flags, banners, etc., all read "Welcome to Seattle, Clara K. Young." A kodak contest was arranged with the Post Intelligencer and the paper offered a prize of fifty dollars in gold for the best snapshot taken of Clara during her stay in Seattle.

When the actress arrived in Seattle a big crowd awaited her at the depot, preceded by a band, a French seventy-five gun, drawn by six horses, a detachment of Marines, sailors and American Legion men, a parade escorted her to her headquarters.

S. R. O. was the order at the theatre and after a strenuous week in Seattle C. K. Y. departed for Portland, Oregon, the last stop.

Here as a fitting climax to her transcontinental trip the Equity exploitation man "put over" the biggest publicity of the whole tour. He arranged with the Governor of Oregon, the Hon. Ben. Olcott, to arrange with the members of the legislature to invite Clara to participate in the 1925 Exposition to be held in Portland.

Thus to Clara Kimball Young fell the honor of being the first woman in the world to receive at the hand of the State of Oregon an engraved invitation to be present. A rose was declared, the "Clara Kimball Young rose," and to make the occasion of her visit and interest in the fair a memorable one two companies of regular troops, from Vancouver, Washington, entrained for Port; and to take part in the Clara K Young festivities. The Telephone company built the largest voice amplifier in the world, for Clara to speak upon, and her voice was heard by thousands many blocks away by means of this wonderful invention. So wonderful was the publicity that columns were written about the humble publicity man that had made it possible.

Too much credit cannot be given to Miss Allen, publicity purveyor for the Jensen Von Herberg interests, as well as to Paul Noble, managing director of the Liberty theatre, for their untiring efforts and assistance. The newspapers broke their front pages with pictures and stories.

In conclusion a word must be said for Mr. Joseph I. Schmitzer, president of Equity Pictures Corp., for his able handling of all arrangements as well as for his sending of a publicity man to see that his star received the proper exploitation.

To Clara Kimball Young must, however, go the lion's share of the glory. Without so wonderful a personality, void of temperment, these things would not have been possible. She is a fourteen karat woman, and a tireless, sincere worker. A credit to her chosen profession and a slave to the public, the name of the "real" Clara Kimball Young will linger long in the memory of the public, that have learned to know her as well as those of us that have chosen the motion picture field as a means of endeavor.

Her every appearance, every word that she utters reflects glory upon our industry; long may she follow her calling with profound success.

Carter DeHaven Finishes "My Lady Friends"

Carter De Haven has completed "My Lady Friends," his third production for Associated First National release. Just ten weeks to a day were required to complete "My Lady Friends." The cast consists of Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, Helen Raymond, Thomas G. Lingham, Helen Lynch, Lincoln Stedman, May Wallace, Hazel Howell, Ruth Ashby and Clara Morris. It was directed by Lloyd Ingraham and prepared for the screen by Frank Mandel and Emile Nyitray.

Negative Long-Shots Made Into Close-Ups

Ernest Stern, specialist in art titles, has recently produced some ingenious screen effects for foreign pictures which were re-edited in this country. Mr. Stern in some cases, created close-ups from semi-close-ups and long shots where they were needed. He is also able, it is claimed, to produce the soft focus effect from an ordinary sharp focus negative.

Clarence Schottenfels is acting as his general representative and sales manager.

ABOUT PLAYERS

Child players are fast commanding due recognition for their work in motion pictures. One, Joseph DeFew, with a career any adult might point to with pride, will keep right on adding to his list while engaged in the production of "Hero." This is a play for the legitimate stage, management of Sam Harris and staged by Sam Forest, where the juvenile player will appear in an important role. Joseph recently completed work in "Clay Dollars." with Eugene O'Brien, and would have it understood, his was the "next important role."

In Griffith's "Dream Street," it was Joseph DePew who played "little brother" early in the story. He really considers it remarkable that he looks enough like Charles Mack to be the younger version—both having a dimple in the same cheek, and the same shy air of reticence. Director John Emerson complimented Joseph, when he finished his work in the Constance Talmadge picture "Good For Nothing." He assured the little boy that he was entirely too clever for the title role and that he was good for a picture with him, whenever he needed an actor three feet high.

Thalia Zanou, the dancer who has attracted city-wide attention at the Capitol theatre in her versatile dancing numbers for several months past, was rudely awakened from her slumbers a morning not long ago and asked if she could come immediately to a motion picture studio and do a "Hindu" dance. Thalia has studied every kind of dancing. There is no particular style which she cannot do, yet she did not know exactly what was required in this instance. Hurriedly, she dashed to the studio in Yonkers which happened to be near her home. On the way she was thinking about a make-up. Speedily improvised, and bronzing exposed skin, she appeared on the set and announced "Ready." There was scarcely any rehearsal and as this was Thalia's initial experience, she describes dancing to the music of Hindu tom-toms, without knowing exactly whether she was giving satisfaction or not, her first and only stage fright. She has danced in public since the age of five. However, when the director thanked her for a most artistic interpretation, "just what he wanted," and she was told to go home without the much talked of "re-take." she declared she expected to consider the many offers she has previously had, to enter motion pictures.

Mabel Julienne Scott, starred in "Fanny Herself," a Universal-Jewel production

Betty Blythe, the motion picture star, was among those who saw Goldwyn's production of the Rupert Hughes' picture, "The Old Nest." Miss Blythe and Mary Alden, who portrays the role of Mrs. Anthon, the real, honest-to-life mother, in "The Old Nest," are friends of long standing.

When the photoplay is no more than half over, at the intermission (to be exact) postcards are distributed among the spectators with a printed suggestion that the recipient write his opinion of the photoplay to any friend that he may desire and hand the card to the usher to be stamped and mailed by the management. Miss Blythe wrote on her card to Miss Alden the following:

"This is intermission, my dear, and we are thrilled to death. I've wept every weep you've wept! You are wonderful, wonderful, Mary. Will write again tomorrow. Clothes perfect. Characterization the best we've ever had. Love and devotion. Betty."

Miss Blythe's husband, who was with her, wrote the following card to Miss Joan Scardon, daughter of Paul Scardon who had directed Mary Alden in Goldwyn's picturization of "Milestones" a year ago:

"Betty and I are seeing Mary's picture. It's just wonderful, so be sure to see it when it is shown there."

William N. Bailey, long identified with the screen as an Essanay player, and at present being seen in Pathe serials, as leading man opposite Juanita Hansen, has parted company with the cinema, temporarily. He has taken the motion picture "atmosphere" with him, however, in the part of a motion picture director in Joseph M. Gaite's production of "Up in the Clouds." This show recently closed a run in Boston, Mass., and journeyed therefrom to Chicago. "Bill" admits that he could put much "reel realism" into the role if the censors would permit—or the management! As it is, he wears goggles, chews a cigar, acts feverish and generally "Ritzes" things up while he is on the stage. For "Bill" is now in musical comedy!

Joseph Striker, who for the past two years has been on tour playing the lead in "Turn to the Right," has returned to motion pictures. He was formerly in support of Madge Kennedy and other stars on the screen, and is now playing opposite Alice Calhoun in her next feature for Vitagraph.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

Speaking of being "fitted for a role," it will interest friends of Edward Dillon to know that he is directing "The Beauty Shop," for International. Mr. Dillon's most recent Paramount-Artcraft release, "Unsheltered Daughters," starring Justine Johnstone, awarded him unanimous praise among those who pass upon pictures, following their first showing.

States Elmer Clifton, one of the directors who will be responsible for the success of his own productions, in the near future: "The big coming American photoplays will deal with our national industrial life. Our industries are the back bone of our nation, and, if our screen drama is to catch the keynote of our life, it must reflect this note of commerce and business.

"It seems to me radicaly wrong for our directors to attempt the historical spectacle, except where it deals with our country's past. We are essentially of today and today in America represents industrial life and interests. We are the clearing house of the world. It is easy to see that our forte in motion pictures, is here.

"Let Europe and Continental film makers be concerned with dead things—with reproducing the glamor of other days when their nations ruled supreme. We, of America have our own interests, and if our photoplay is to be reflection of ourselves, it must deal with these vital things of our every day."

And Mr. Clifton, though a thinking man, is still a "young feller."

Al K. Hall, responsible for the "Nick Carter" series of two reelers, has entered upon the direction of some more short subjects, a new kind of two reel westerns.

Tweedie Dan, directing and playing the leading roles in his own comedy productions, is one of the three units at the Shiller Yonkers Studio for which Bernard S. Schubert is now writing scenarios and continuities. Previous to joining the Shiller Company, Mr. Schubert was connected with the Scenario Department of the Selznick Corporation, at Fort Lee. The Shiller productions are released via Reelcraft.

VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams has completed a Canadian Northwest story, entitled "Bring Him In."

The first Jimmy Aubrey two-reel comedy under the comedian's new contract has been completed but not titled.

William Duncan is shipping his feature, "The Superman."

Bradly J. Smollen, former Vitagraph publicity director, is now writing continuity. He has been succeeded by E. L. Moriarty, a Los Angeles newspaper man.

HAL ROACH

Harold Lloyd is beginning his fourteenth two-reel comedy under the direction of Fred Newmeyer. Mildred Davis is opposite the star. The story is by Jean Havez.

The Lloyd comedy made under the title of "The Sky is the Limit" has been given the release title of "Look Before You Leap."

METRO

Production was resumed this week by the entire staff after a vacation of one week. The close-down was participated in by all members of the producing staff.

Five companies are being cast. These include "The Fourteenth Lover," starring Viola Dana, under the direction of Harry Beaumont; "Turn to the Right," with an all-star cast including Alice Terry, under the direction of Rex Ingram, who arrived from New York on Saturday; "Lady Fingers," starring Bert Lytell, under the direction of Bayard Veiller; "Little Eva Ascends," a George D. Baker production, starring Gareth Hughes, with May Collins as the female lead.

The title for the next Alice Lake story to be directed by Maxwell Karger has not been selected.

BRUNTON

B. B. Hampton will next film "Hearts' Haven," written by Clara Louise Burnham. Richard Schayer is the author of the continuity.

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

Lambert Hillyer will direct "Lucky Damage." The principal roles will be played by Milton Sills, Tully Marshall and Charles Clarey. Mr. Hillyer wrote the continuity.

John Griffith Wray is making the last scenes for "Hail the Woman." The cast includes Florence Vidor, Lloyd Hughes, Madge Bellamy, Tully Marshall, Charles Meredith, Theodore Roberts and Edward Martindale. The original and continuity is by Gardner Sullivan.

HERE AND THERE

Marshall Neilan's First National release, "Bob Hampton of Placer,"

Ethel Grandin, who will be starred in a series of George D. Baker productions for Metro release in which "Custer's Last Stand" serves as a climax, will be shown at the Anniversary of the Custer battle to be held at Hardin, Montana.

Relatives of the members of the historic Custer regiment and various tribes of Indians will take part. In the afternoon the famous battle will be reproduced by thousands of soldiers and Indians. The showing of a print of the Neilan film will be one of the features of the evening's entertainment to be staged outdoors. Interested persons from all parts of the country will be on hand to participate in the celebration including many prominent men in the Government service.

Thomas F. Fallon Fully Recovered

Following an illness that has confined Thomas F. Fallon, the well-known writer of screen material, to his room for many months, the author of many of our most famous screen plays, is fully recovered.

Late in 1920, when Mr. Fallon was stationed at the William Fox studio, a serious complication, the result of a fall, impaired not only his ability to walk, but threatened his life. His many friends were pleased to see him again, when he made an appearance on Broadway recently. Aside from having a number of assignments for screen-lore, Mr. Fallon has also placed a play for the legitimate stage, in which Mary Forest will appear in the leading role. Another, negotiations for which are practically closed, will give Mr. Fallon two Broadway productions in early fall, simultaneously.

Valentino in Title Role of "The Sheik"

July 5 is the date set for the start of George Melford's new Paramount production, "The Sheik." Jesse Lasky stated this week that he had engaged Rudolph Valentino for the title role. The book was written by S. M. Hull, and Monte Katterjohn has made the screen version.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to March 12, 1921.

"Fairly interesting, though would be more convincing if developed humorously."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wonderful picture which sure did go 'over the top.' Brought large box office receipts and much satisfaction from the audiences." "Fairly good picture with average business." "A splendid picture, well made, well acted, beautifully staged, but for some reason or other it didn't pull them in and business was only average." "Clever story with many new angles which makes a very high class and interesting photoplay. Drew splendidly and we played to big business for the week." "Great story. Story good; closely knit—but Lewis Stone and Florence Vidor gripped the attention from start to finish. Stone's work immense." "Good picture, but not much drawing power." "A first class picture, but only an average attraction during the extremely hot weather here. Lewis Stone's acting deserves special mention." "Poor picture. Business dull."

BEAUTIFUL GAMBLER, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST....JUNE 11
"Time-worn picture obvious all the way."—M. P. News.

BEHIND MASKS (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY DALTON.....JULY 16
"Poor entertainment and Dorothy Dalton is miscast."—M. P. News.

BELOW THE DEADLINE (ASCHER PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) WARNER-BIRON .....APR. 30
"A well made melodrama, full of action."—M. P. News.

BEYOND PRICE (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....MAY 21
"An inconsequential story not suited to Pearl White."—M. P. News.

BIG ADVENTURE, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 23
"Simple heart interest picture carries some appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Poor picture which did not have much pulling power. Played to poor business." "Did more than well for us and pleased."

BIG TOWN IDEAS (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAY 28
"Rural comedy-drama is fairly amusing."—M. P. News.

BIG TOWN ROUND-UP, THE (FOX) TOM MIX.....JULY 16
"Mix at his best; a rapid-fire Western comedy."—M. P. News.

BLACK PANTHER'S CUB, THE (W. K. ZIEGFELD) FLORENCE REED .....JUNE 11
"Cost much and achieves little worthy of praise."—M. P. News.

BLACK ROSES (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA.....APR. 30
"Hayakawa has entertaining mystery picture here."—M. P. News
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair business, but business not commensurate with value of picture. Too hot for any picture to do itself justice."

BLAZING TRAIL, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....MAY 7
"Some moments of interest in Mayo's latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fair picture, but box office reports were unsatisfying."

BLUSHING BRIDE, THE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAR. 19
"Exceedingly weak; might have made a good Sunshine."—M. P. News.

BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER (NEILAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 14
"Wesley Barry saves the show."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to a capacity house all week, aided by some unique exploitation. Eight Blackfeet Indians, first time off the reservation, a cowboy." "Disappointing. Not as clever as quartet, and the name Wesley Barry all served to attract much interest." "This picture is in no wise out of the ordinary. Business was only fair, though the fact that it was circus week was partly responsible." "One of the best pictures of the year in our estimation. Plenty of action and sustained interest. Custer's last stand brings a real thrill. Excellent box office attraction." "Best western picture we have shown this year. A treat for those who like this sort of entertainment. High class all through. No rough stuff. Business better than average for summer." "Pleasing picture, fair receipts." "A real big feature which appealed strongly to men and children but seemed to fail to interest the women. Business just about average for week." "Originally booked for week, was pulled in middle of engagement because it did not appeal to women. Production, however, is good one."

BOYS WILL BE BOYS (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....MAY 28
Quaintly humorous, simple story with Will Rogers."—M. P. News.
Exhibitors Comment.—"Will Rogers in one of his best. Plenty of room for effective exploitation with this picture. The best week that I have had in two months."

BROKEN DOLL, A (DWAN-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST .....JUNE 25
"As it stands, very doubtful entertainment."—M. P. News.

BRONZE BELL, THE (THOMAS H. INCE-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....JULY 9
"Big production, but lacks audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just a fair picture, and we did only average business." "Pleasing, receipts average."

BUTTERFLY GIRL, THE (PLAYGOERS-PATHE) MARJORIE DAW .....JUNE 4
"Little entertainment in this weak and sugary story."—M. P. News.

CABINET OF DR. CALIGARI, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST..APR. 16
"A radical departure; highly artistic and imaginative."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This powerful picture is very unusual and a distinct novelty to our patrons. Went over big during the week."

CARNIVAL (UNITED ARTISTS) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 9
"Genuine Venitian backgrounds compensate for talky picture."—M. P. News.

CHARMING DECEIVER, THE (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Mild interest because of its conventional treatment."—M. P. News.

CHARGE IT (GARSON-EQUITY-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG .....JUNE 11
"Interesting picture of the eternal triangle."—M. P. News.

CHEATED LOVE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....MAY 28
"Carmel Myers has a gem in lifelike picture."—M. P. News.

CHICKENS (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....MAR. 26
"Forced comedy and hokum never ring the bell."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Brought average business. Fair picture." "Played this on the program with the Universal feature 'If Only Jim,' starring Harry Carey to two days of extra big business." "Not as good as previous McLean-May productions and the 'feminine half' of this combination was sadly missed. Still this picture was good and drew well." "Too weak even for the chickens. Wouldn't even stand on a double program as a comedy." "About the usual Douglas MacLean feature; good farce, but not up to '23½ Hours' Leave.'"

CHILDREN OF NIGHT (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....JULY 9
"Dream formula furnishes hectic melodrama for Russell."—M. P. News.

CITY OF SILENT MEN, THE (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN .....APR. 16
"Interesting crook story with rich details and heart interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid picture, but rather heavy for this time of year. People left theatre feeling oppressed. Big opening, however." "An out of the ordinary picture; had to keep it over a second week." "Splendid picture which gave Thomas Meighan, who is a favorite of our patrons, excellent opportunities to show his ability as an emotional actor. Played to big business." "They seemed to like this one and it brought good patronage." "Record-breaking crowds. Equaled our biggest specials in drawing power." "One of Thomas Meighan's best pictures; entertaining, attractive and is a good subject for exploitation. A good house all week." "Went big with us, both from audience standpoint and the way it drew." "A good picture, well acted and having a strong, well-developed plot. Good box office attraction." "Very good entertainment and has good box office value." "Really a good story. One of Meighan's best. A good money-getter." "Declared by patrons to be Thomas Meighan's best picture. Excellent business recorded." "A feature with a powerful appeal which was well liked by our patrons and made many new friends for Meighan. Played to good business despite the heat." "Best Meighan picture so far. Business good."

CLOSED DOORS (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN.....MAY 28
"Easily obvious picture carries mild interest."—M. P. News.

COINCIDENCE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Light, but breezy enough to get over."—M. P. News.

COLD STEEL (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 4
"Good acting in this ordinary western."—M. P. News.

COLORADO PLUCK (WILLIAM RUSSELL).....MAY 28
"Has not the action they expect of this star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Did average business."

CONQUERING POWER, THE (REX INGRAM-METRO) SPECIAL CAST .....JULY 16
"Not another 'Four Horsemen,' but still way above the average."—M. P. News.

DANGEROUS MOMENT, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS...APR. 16
"A light and pleasing romance of Greenwich Village."—M. P. News.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

DECEPTION (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 30
"Historical drama is colorful and impressive."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Went very big. Tremendous production." "Held up fairly good for second week. Picture well liked by audiences." "Found this one to be a fair picture with average box office receipts." "Appeals to educated classes and lovers of history with peculiar force. General public not interested." "Went over very big." "Very elaborate production well received in spite of German agitation. Many favorable comments. Splendid direction." "Largely entertaining. Shot the box office receipts up high." "Did not hold up well at all. Unusually warm weather affected attendance. Did not please all patrons. Patrons did not think it compared with 'Passion' or 'Gypsy Blood.'" "Big picture. Pulled with the better trade but did not satisfy the average fan." "Fell off considerably."

DESPERATE YOUTH (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....APR. 30
"Goes back to the early days of pictures, but is entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Gladys Walton becomes a better drawing card with every picture. This was good and business was fair."

DESPERATE TRAILS (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....JULY 9
"Good story, well worked out, gives Harry Carey many opportunities."—M. P. News.

DEVOTION (ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 16
"Conventional and highly complicated domestic drama."—M. P. News.

DIANE OF STAR HOLLOW (PRODUCERS SECURITY CORP.—STATE RIGHTS) BERNARD DURING.....APR. 23
"A complex story, well acted and entertaining because of action."—M. P. News.

DOLLAR A YEAR MAN, THE (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE APR. 9
"Weak humor and hokum make this a poor effort."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A sure-fire attraction, which brought extra large box office receipts." "Fatty Arbuckle always a sure bet and this picture proves to be no exception. Capacity house all week." "Unfortunately, Fatty Arbuckle does not live up to his fan's expectations of him. This is no worse than previous feature-Arbuckles I've played—but it was no better, and business was poor." "Went over great. Fine audience picture." "Arbuckle good drawing card, but vehicle is very poor. Public greatly disappointed." "Good picture to good business for week run." "Roscoe Arbuckle in 'The Dollar a Year Man' and Larry Semon in 'The Rent Collector.' Good combination and one that pleased, although attendance dropped. Arbuckle picture not as well liked as previous releases." "Fair picture, fair business." "A rather tiresome affair which does not hold interest. Just a fair box office attraction."

DON'T CALL ME LITTLE GIRL (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....JULY 2
"Pleasing little picture furnishes ideal role for star."—M. P. News.

DUCKS AND DRAKES (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....APR. 9
"Bebe Daniels has a lively offering here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Best Bebe Daniels has to her credit up to date. Business was better than it has been for several weeks." "Bebe Daniels goes her former productions one better in this picture. A snappy production that brings results at the box office." "A good picture. They liked this one and went away and told their friends about it. Business was good." "Not as good as some of Bebe Daniels' other pictures, but fair. Drew well, as she is very popular here."

EAST LYNNE (BALLIN-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 26
"Modernized version of play and book should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Stormy weather held down attendance on this picture, but those who saw it were pleased and we are holding this excellent picturization of the famous stage play over for a second week." "We were disappointed. Less than usual matinee and night crowds."

FIGHTING LOVER, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....JUNE 18
"Frank Mayo stars in fair mystery picture."—M. P. News.

FINE FEATHERS (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 25
"Fairly interesting melodrama on an old theme."—M. P. News

FOOLISH MATRONS (TOURNEUR-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS)..JULY 2
"Three character studios compose interesting picture."—M. P. News.

FORBIDDEN LOVE (WISTARIA PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Rather morbid, but has interesting moments."—M. P. News.

FREEZE OUT, THE (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....APR. 9
"Carey's personality its chief asset."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This got big business for us and they seemed to like it." "Just fair box office bet for us and pleased fairly well."

GARDEN OF RESURRECTION, THE (STOLL) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 2
"Poor direction makes this one mediocre."—M. P. News.

GET YOUR MAN (FOX) BUCK JONES.....JUNE 4
"Buck Jones feature consistent in action and suspense."—M. P. News.

GHOST IN THE GARRET, THE (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY GISH..APR. 16
"A rollicking farce comedy with Dorothy Gish."—M. P. News.

GILDED LILY, THE (PARAMOUNT) MAE MURRAY.....MAR. 19
"Mae Murray's latest is a winner."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only Mae Murray's tricky costumes, and dancing held this up. Business just fair, despite heavy advertising." "Superb production. Well directed, extravagantly conceived and a good audience picture." "Held up well for a two-week run. As a whole big picture from every angle." "Star is popular and in consequence picture went over all right." "Went over big. Everybody liked it and said so." "This one was mediocre. Business was only fair." "Big every day and they all liked it." "Exceptional fine settings and surprise features of story appealed strongly to our audiences, and we did good business with this picture." "Went over big for full week." "Going fine in its third week."

GOLEM, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 2
"A distinct credit to the screen."—M. P. News.

GOOD WOMEN (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Talky picture, not pure entertainment."—M. P. News.

GREAT DAY, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Good production given mediocre story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Fair picture to fair business."

GREATER PROFIT, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) EDITH STORY..JULY 2
"No outstanding quality to redeem out-of-date theme."—M. P. News.

GYPSY BLOOD (FIRST NATIONAL) POLA NEGRI.....MAY 21
"Pola Negri flashes a fine talent in German version of 'Carmen.'"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture which went over well and brought good business." "Probably the best of the three versions of 'Carmen' seen here. Not so much on scenery, but excellent acting." "'Passion' grossed the biggest business of the season for me, but I lost money heavily on this second Pola Negri feature, which personally I think was much ahead of the first. Business bad throughout week." "A mediocre picture and business was bad." "Disappointing. Lacking in originality. Played to good receipts."

HANDS OFF (FOX) TOM MIX.....APR. 16
"Humorous touches make Western entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Tom Mix seems to be a good box office star at this house. Business good. Picture full of pep."

HEART LINE, THE (PATHE) LEAH BAIRD.....JUNE 4
"Entertaining chiefly because of fake medium scenes."—M. P. News.

HEART OF MARYLAND, THE (VITAGRAPH) CATHERINE CALVERT.....APR. 16
"Excellent picture from a sure-fire success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Business not as good as we expected. War dramas seem to be thoroughly taboo."

HEARTS AND MASKS (FEDERATED FILM EXCHANGES) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 14
"Should fill demand for clean entertaining light stuff."—M. P. News.

HER LORD AND MASTER (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....APR. 16
"Hardly heavy enough for Alice Joyce."—M. P. News.

HER HUSBAND'S FRIEND (INCE-PARAMOUNT) ENID BENNETT.JAN. 29
"Rather hectic in spots, but keeps the interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played it on the bill with 'The Iron Rider,' the Fox production starring William Russell, to extra big business for two days."

HIGHEST BIDDER, THE (GOLDWYN) MADGE KENNEDY.....APR. 30
"Often told story holds little interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Star well liked by my patrons, and picture was good, but business was only fair."

HIS GREATEST SACRIFICE (FOX) WILLIAM FARNUM.....MAY 14
"Heavy drama may satisfy star's admirers."—M. P. News

HOME STRETCH, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....MAY 14
Human interest story carries thrills and humor."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A pleasing little picture. Business about average." "Good picture to our usual capacity business." "Clever, clean and distinctly funny. Made quite a hit with my patrons and business was excellent." "Just an average picture and a fair box office attraction."

HOME STUFF (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....JUNE 18
"Even hokum cannot make this a good one."—M. P. News.

HOME TALENT (SENNETT-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 25
"Good slapstick on both ends; sags in the middle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture with average business."

HOUSE THAT JAZZ BUILT, THE (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY..MAY 21
"Wanda Hawley's best bet; a cleverly directed picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Went over well. Business very good, and Wanda Hawley is building up quite a gallery of fans." "Wanda Hawley is Not a box office attraction, but picture pleased." "Nice little show. Pleasing, but not striking in any particular." "A bright, clever picture which appealed to the many admirers of Wanda Hawley and brought in excellent business despite the torrid weather." "Good business and an unusually good domestic drama."

I AM GUILTY (ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS—J. PARKER READ, JR.) LOUISE GLAUM.....MAY. 7
"Mystery story carries a trick finish and much melodrama."—M. P. News.
"Timely title these days, and attracted a curious crowd. Picture sufficiently strong to stand on its own merits after getting the people in." "This is an excellent Louise Glaum picture and our patrons liked it. Owing to the extreme heat, however, business was only average."

IDOLS OF THE NORTH, THE (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY DALTON.....MAY 28
"Elemental and rugged picture packs a healthy punch."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid northern picture, well acted and good settings, fair settings, fair photography, good direction. Splendid audience and box office picture." "Fans seem to like it, but no extraordinary enthusiasm." "A mediocre production which recorded fair business, because of star's popularity." "Fair picture that did pretty well considering the picture business slump."

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST..JUNE 4
"A picture well worth witnessing—let them see it."—M. P. News.

IT CAN BE DONE (VITAGRAPH) EARLE WILLIAMS.....MAY 14

"Grimly realistic but artistic picture from famous stage play."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very artistic, but too gloomy. People didn't enjoy it." "Lionel Barrymore is through so far as we are concerned. Splendid actor, but plays are too heavy. Terrible receipts." "Good picture which played to excellent business for week."

JOURNEY'S END, THE (BALLIN-HODKINSON) MABEL BALLIN.JULY 9
"Remarkable picture, especially since it is titleless."—M. P. News.

KEEPING UP WITH LIZZIE (ROCKETT-HODKINSON) ENID BENNETT.....MAY 21
"Comedy blends with serious theme admirable."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Clever satire on society life. One continnons laugh. Our audiences all seemed to be having a fine time. Good business in spite of heat."

KING-QUEEN-JOKER (SYDNEY CHAPLIN-PARAMOUNT) SYDNEY CHAPLIN.....JUNE 11
"Fails to come up to expectation."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Full week but not to a full house. Great sets, photography and scenes. Material for a great comedy but not with Sidney, who did nothing but overact and kill any possibility he might have had of being accepted." "Picture and business both bad."

Some Exhibitors Are a Penny Wise and a Pound Foolish

At Least So It Would Seem from the Handling of Their Screen Problems

Each and every one of us will surely agree that projection, good projection is the most important item in the problem of running a modern moving picture theatre. Without a good, clear picture no one can "put over" a creditable show.

With this idea in mind we note that the exhibitor spends a great deal of time in selecting his projection apparatus. He buys a projector because he believes this or that particular machine will give him the best picture on the screen. He buys other accessories to make sure that picture will be good and equips his projection room in A No. 1 style.

And then he nearly always stops.

Why?

Can it be that there are some few exhibitors in these United States of ours who still believes that all he needs is a good projection room equipment, and then he can throw his picture on a whitewashed wall? Looks mighty like there were some at that.

About a week ago the writer visited a certain, so-called up-to-date motion picture house. Outside and inside appearance was excellent. The decorations and furnishings reflected the good taste of those who designed the house.

And the picture was rotten!

Why?

That is just what the writer wanted to know.

A visit was paid to the projection room. It certainly was in keeping with the appointments of the house. Two well known projectors were operating to perfection and the other equipment gave the projectionist no room for complaint on the score that he did not have the proper utensils to work with.

The next day I met this chief projectionist on the street and, still wondering what was the matter with the pictures of the night before, I broached the subject of his equipment.

"Pretty nice projection room I got there?" he queried.

"You certainly have," was my reply.

"But did you notice how rotten the picture was?"

"I certainly did. Haven't been able to forget it. What is the trouble. You have everything the latest and the best?"

"Yes. I have everything the latest and best. So has the house, with one exception. They got a screen that was used in the old house. Might as well be beaverboards with whitewash," explained the projectionist.

"The boss seems to think I can make the picture good as long as he gives me good projection room equipment, but he forgets that the projection room doesn't end at its front wall, but goes right on up to the spot where the light hits the screen. He has never had anyone explain to him that the screen is just as important as the equipment inside my four walls."

There you are. Now I am not trying to say that every or even half the exhibitors are this way, but there is a goodly number of them who get off on the wrong track when it comes to their screen.

I also know of exhibitors who ordered a screen installed and when it is up they hold a test. They will sit in some far distant corner of their house and state that the screen does not show the picture perfectly. They may find a half dozen or dozen seats in some corner that do not command a good picture. Yet they may have fifteen hundred other seats that are nearly perfect. Sometimes, in order to get perfect projection in the front of the orchestra, it may result in obtaining poor pictures in some other quarter. You can't get a perfect picture from every corner of your house. But a good screen man can give you a GOOD picture from nearly every corner. Don't insist on spoiling the picture in one part of the house for the benefit of another.

Get your best results for the higher-priced seats and then take care of the others, but seeing that all have a presentable picture.

The modern exhibitor orders the art folks to get busy and decorate the house. Then he talks to the screen man and kicks about the price.

For the sake of fifty or a hundred dollars more the beauty of the whole house may be destroyed because the screen is not up to standard and a poor picture results.

Also, it is always best to contract for the screen installed.

Not long ago a certain well known screen man was telling me how he sold a screen to an exhibitor who insisted he could save by hiring his own carpenters to install the screen.

He bought the screen and hired the carpenters.

They installed the screen.

Looked like a pretty good job. It was. But——

One of the carpenters fell off a ladder and went through the center of the screen. This exhibitor, so the screen manufacturer told me, then tried to blame the accident on the manufacturer.

The exhibitor did not save any money on this deal.

Carpenters hammer nails and carpenters don't understand screens. Nail holes are not considered beneficial for a good screen. Yet that is what happens nine times out of ten when mechanics who do not understand their job, hang a screen.

It's up to the exhibitors to get wise. Be sure you have experts handle all ends of your projection problems. Do not buy what you consider the best screen on the market and then invite ordinary carpenters to butcher it up. Have the screen men supply the experts and then you are safe. They pay for their mistakes and you don't.

It is up to the screen manufacturers to educate those exhibitors who are making their pictures poor for lack of a proper screen.

Publicity will do it. Let's all help. The News will do its share.

Buys Flivvers

Manager Beddo, of the First National Circuit Exchange at Oklahoma City, Okla., has purchased a coupe flivver for each of his traveling salesmen, which will help make First National business increases, also avoid having to wait for late trains. Manager Beddo says that he believes that this is a good investment.—NOBLE.

Renovating Big Baltimore Theatre

The New theatre, one of the standbys of Baltimore filmdom, has been closed to permit improvements. Several thousand dollars will be spent by the Whitehurst interests, owners of the house, to insure its being in first-class condition to cater to its clientele in the fall, when business is expected to boom.

William E. Stumpf, Jr., house manager, anticipates a promising fall season for the theatre. He is of the firm opinion that the end of the summer will be marked by large attendance and a successful closing of 1921.

Seats will be furnished by the Andrews Seat Manufacturing Company, of Philadelphia. The Baltimore firm of H. Chambers & Company, decorators, will carry out the refrescoing. New carpets and draperies will be procured in New York. —COOPER.

Remodels Offices

L. E. Patterson has completely remodelled the premises formerly occupied by Pathe Exchange at Oklahoma City, Okla. One apartment has been leased to the Mid-West Film Exchange, and the two other apartments will soon be occupied by concerns now shipping out of Dallas, Texas. —NOBLE.

Big Business Coming!

We are so confident that a big revival of business will come early this Fall that our factory is running full time on new projection equipment which we are preparing to announce late this summer.

Fire Proof Theatre Construction with Hollow Tile

An Article Giving Some Facts of Interest to Prospective Builders

Fireproofing experts generally agree that there are four things to be expected of a so-called fireproof building:

First—That it shall fully protect the human inmates and provide ample safe means of egress and protection against panic in case of fire.

Second—That it shall preserve its contents from any ordinary fire originating within or outside the building.

Third—That the building, particularly the structural parts thereof, shall withstand any fire successfully.

Fourth—That every fireoof building shall be a carrier to conflagration or the spread of fire.

In the past, the serious fireproof building losses except in conflagration were invariably due not to faulty construction or fireproofing, but to large undivided areas of unprotected vertical openings, improperly enclosed shafts and lack of window protection.

Any good-sized fire will produce a temperature up to 1,800 and 2,000 F., and a fire which has a particularly large amount of combustible material to feed on, even in a fireproof building, with good draft conditions, may develop temperatures several hundred degrees higher. Some fires are authentically known to have gone higher than 2,200 degrees F., a temperature that will melt some surface clay bricks and destroy nearly every other so-called fireproof material. High-grade fire clays and shales are the only known materials that will withstand such temperatures, and these not without some damage.

Glass will melt at 1,600 to 1,700 degrees F.; concrete begins to dehydrate at 500 degrees F., and structural steel rapidly loses its strength at 1,000 to 1,200 degrees F. and is incapable of sustaining its own weight at 1,700 degrees. Therefore it will be seen that the temperature of around 2,000 degrees F. that may occur in any large fire can do tremendous damage to any fireproof building, particularly if improperly designed or built, and the whole theory of fireproof building construction must rest upon so designing and building the structures that such temperatures can never occur; also that the spread of any fire will be so retarded that it may easily be extinguished before any extensive material damage occurs.

Hollow tile, properly manufactured and applied, will provide the greatest measure of protection and safety that can be afforded by any building material. Where failures have occurred it is because, in the efforts to hold down the cost, the proper structural features and fireproofing methods have not been followed.

The principal forms of fireproof building construction may be stated as follows:

For the tall office building, hotel or apartment, steel frame with tile arches, fireproofing and partitions—steel frame with concrete arches, tile fireproofing and partitions.

For the fireproof structure of moderate height, steel frame, tile or concrete floors, tile fireproofing and partitions- long span floors of tile and concrete, either on steel or reinforced concrete frame with tile fireproofing and partitions. All reinforced concrete structures with tile partitions.

For low buildings, factories, reinforced concrete frame with long span floors of tile and concrete, tile partitions; steel frame with similar long span floor and tile partitions. Steel frames with tile arches and fireproofing.

Hollow tile, as will be noted from the above, is therefore a most important factor in fireproof building construction.

The term fireproofing is objected to by many, but is here used to qualify materials that are proof against damage from any ordinarily severe fire.

Architects and engineers in the past have been inclined to be lax in requiring good workmanship in the setting of fireproofing tile. Contractors have permitted the improper and unnecessary cutting into same by other trades, and the most excellent showing that this product has shown under severe test by fire when abused in this manner is an unfailing testimony of the excellence of this product as a structural fireproofing material.

It is largely with a view to avoiding such practices and guiding the building profession in the best and proper methods that this handbook has been prepared.

Hollow building tile has already merited a very extensive usage and can be depended on to fulfill every claim that is made for it as the most economical, universal and satisfactory fireproofing material, if the details and practices as outlined herein are followed.

For the tall building, hotel, theatre, apartment building or department store, and in fact for all highly specialized commercial structures within the built-up business sections of the cities, where rapidity of erection, probable change of occupancy and other factors must be considered, a structural steel frame must invariably be used, in connection with which the flat arch of hollow tile cannot be excelled.

Hollow tile arches, both flat and segmental, are fireproof, light in weight, can be erected or removed in a minimum of time, and can be erected at any time of the year regardless of temperature and weather, before, after, or at the same time the walls are built.

With all ordinary depths of floor beams, hollow tile arches can be of such depth as will give a level ceiling without increasing the weight of floors by excessive filling

The false work or centering may be removed within 24 hours after the arches are set, and they may be plastered the day after being set when it is necessary to rush the work. Also, the cement mortar joints in tile arches dry out rapidly, permitting of the immediate laying of finish flooring and wood trim without damage from moisture. Cinder concrete floor filling may be eliminated by the use of hollow tile floor fill, further reducing the amount of moisture introduced in the building.

Hollow tile arches facilitate the economical design of structural steel, as they weigh less per square foot than any other form of fireproof floor construction of equal strength, and consequently in tall buildings greatly reduce the dead load on structural steel and foundations; they further assist in the wind bracing by rigidly filling the full depth of beams, and act as a horizontal brace for the entire structure at each story level.

Hollow tile arches are excellent non conductors of sound, which is an extremely important consideration in hotels, hospitals, bank, office and other commercial buildings.

Tile arches give the best ceiling on which to apply plaster.

One of the modern developments in building construction is the so-called "long-span," which eliminates the intermediate floor beams by spanning the distance between supporting girders located on the lines of columns. There have been numerous long-span floor schemes developed, quite a few of which are patented, but of all these the simplest and most universally adaptable is the combination of "T" section reinforced concrete joist beams with hollow tile fillers between. This system is not covered by any basic patent, can be used by anyone, and is composed of elements readily obtained in any market, also any type or style of reinforcing rod may be used. One of its greatest advantages is the solid plastering surface for ceiling on under side. The economy in form work is another.

Electric conduit may be bedded in the construction the same as in solid concrete slabs, only architects should give some consideration to the layouts of conduits or other piping and avoid diagonal or cross runs through the compression area and provide a greater thickness of concrete by using thinner tile filler where a concentration of conduits occur around wire shafts

Automatic Curtain Machine Valuable Aid to Every Exhibitor

The Cost of Operation Amounts to Nothing

By E. J. Vallen, Akron, Ohio

In perhaps no other business is so much attention given to seemingly small details, things about which the average person knows little, and surely no other business than the motion picture industry gives one as much for their money, whether the admission price to be 10 cents or $2.00. In the past few years, since exhibitors have been paying special attention to "presentation," which nearly always means prologues, vaudeville acts, and other attractions which the wide-awake exhibitor deems necessary to "put over" his show. Much money has been spent in building magnificent theatres, interior decorating, electrical effects, gorgeous chandeliers, tea rooms, rest rooms, etc., but ask any showman what constitutes the real success of a prologue, or better still, ask him how he likes to have some little thing, however small, happen that will spoil the entire effect of his elaborately arranged presentation.

The purpose of this article is to discuss the automatic curtain machine, a machine which raises or opens your curtain, and which assures stopping the curtain in exactly the same position, or any desired position each and every time. A curtain operated by means of a mechanical machine assures an even movement which cannot be obtained by hand operation. Practically all picture theatres today use a curtain. The reasons for this are so obvious and numerous that it is useless to take up space mentioning them. By throwing the picture upon the curtain and then starting the machine to either raise or draw the curtain, it will appear to dissolve into the flood of light rather than to be drawn out of sight. The projectionist in many theatres is the one person who usually knows the exact time to operate the curtain to accomplish the desired artistic effect. In theatres where it is operated by hand it is necessary for him to signal someone at the stage. If the signal is not caught the effect is lost. Even though the signal is caught by the person working the curtain, they cannot help but raise or draw or close the curtain a fraction of time too soon or too late, and the effect is sure to be unsatisfactory, but when it is operated by the projectionist in the booth it is sure to be right. With an automatic curtain machine which will operate your curtain just exactly as you want it, all the annoyances of having the curtain operate at the wrong time or open too wide or not wide enough are eliminated. It is not necessary that the machine be installed in the booth, it can be placed in any desired location in the theatre. It is very light in weight and noiseless which is very essential in the modern theatre of today.

The time required to operate the curtain is from 8 to 10 seconds, the current consumed is very slight, in fact the cost for operating and maintaining a machine for a period of one year allowing one-half hour per month for oiling and inspecting at the rate of $1.00 per hour, for labor, plus the cost of electricity, shall not exceed $8.00. The purchase price of these machines is very reasonable, and the installation but a simple matter. The control of the machine is absolutely automatic and positive. A switch is thrown and the curtain opens or closes, and is stopped automatically. This is made possible by controls on a threaded shaft geared to the motor which are so set that when the curtain travels the distance required to open or close, the current is automatically cut off. This control can be adjusted for any size curtain, it is not necessary to provide special power because the machine is so constructed that it will operate on any lighting circuit. Standard equipment for all machines is 115 volts, 60 cycles, single phase alternating current, or 115 volt direct current motor. Where standard equipped machines do not meet requirements other motors can be furnished.

The Bijou theatre, Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, which has just installed an automatic curtain machine in a communication to the manufacturer, has this to say: "We have been using this machine daily for the last three months. It is noiseless and opens and closes exactly at the same spot each time it is operated. Our projectionist now has full control of the curtain from the booth and doesn't have to depend upon someone 'back stage' to get his cue to do this work."

DEPEND UPON POWER'S

POWER'S-G. E. HIGH INTENSITY ARC LAMP

A GREAT SUCCESS WHEREVER INSTALLED

OF INTEREST TO EXHIBITORS

Power's-G.E. High Intensity Arc Lamp produces upon the screen over 100% more light per ampere than the ordinary arc lamp.
This is made possible by two features. First, the 75 ampere current at which the lamp normally operates, is carried thru a special cored carbon approximately 7/16" in diameter, and second, this comparatively small diameter carbon is revolved on the optical axis, thus presenting a very small, but exceedingly brilliant crater, head on to the condensing lenses. This permits a maximum amount of light to be gathered by the condensers.

LOWER COST

POWER'S-G. E. HIGH INTENSITY ARC LAMP

ECONOMICAL—EFFICIENT—SIMPLE—DEPENDABLE

SOME DETAILS FOR PROJECTIONISTS

Once properly set in the lamphouse the only adjustment required on the Power's-G.E. Lamp is the forward and backward movement of the entire lamp by means of which the size of the spot is controlled.

Power's-G.E. High Intensity Arc Lamp is absolutely automatic in action, once the arc is struck, which means that the lamp embodies its own arc control. This is a radical advance in arc lamp construction. When inserting carbons in Power's-G.E. Lamp, there are no nuts or bolts or screws of any kind to be tightened, therefore replacing carbons is a very simple operation.

Fire Proof Theatre Construction

or cut-out closets. Ordinary hard burned light partition tile are used in this type of floor construction.

The cells of tile at ends of rows should be closed, and this is very easily accomplished on the job by setting up on end, on the forms or on a plank platform, the required number of tile, and pouring a half inch of fine concrete or mortar into bottom of cells. This should be done about one or two days ahead of the pouring of concrete.

The joints between tile in adjacent rows should be staggered, and to accomplish this half length tile are used for starters or closers in alternate rows.

This type of floor construction is equally well adapted to either reinforced concrete or steel beam construction, and when carried on steel beams the fireproofing of beams and support for long-span floor may be either of concrete or hollow tile. Where the supporting steel member is small, concrete covering may be found the most suitable, but where the support member is a large or wide flange beam or built-up girder, the weight of concrete to encase same would be considerable, and hollow tile fireproofing is generally better.

In addition to these, in order to meet the demand for deeper floors of greater span, some manufacturers are now making special filler tile up to 20 inches in width, and, for ordinary loads, spans up to and even over 25 feet can be very economically constructed.—From the Handbook of Hollow Building Tile Construction.

New College Theatre Opens in Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Manitoba, saw the opening of still another moving picture theatre a few days ago when the new College theatre opened its doors with Mack Sennett's comedy, "A Small Town Idol," as the feature attraction. The College is the first large suburban moving picture theatre to be built in Winnipeg and was built by A. R. McNichol with Kenneth M. Leach as the lessee. Ralph Miller, for many years in charge of the Starland theatre, Winnipeg, has been appointed manager of the brand new house.

The College theatre has 1,000 seats, all on the one floor, with three rows of boxes at the rear. All seats are richly upholstered in real leather while heavy tapestries adorn the wall panels, exits and entrance. The lobby is finished in marble while the color scheme of the handsome interior is a combination of old rose, ivory, blue and gold. The stage setting represents a vista of Italy with Vesuvius in the background. A twenty-foot stage is a feature of the structure as it is proposed to present appropriate prologues starting in the fall. The equipment includes a $10,000 pipe organ which has been built by Warren & Son, Woodstock, Ontario.

The contractors were the Sutherland Construction Co. while the architect was George Macpherson, of Winnipeg. Prices range from 10 cents to 27 cents, amusement tax included, with 35 cents for box seats.

The theatre has a handsome marquee and large electric sign. There are stores on each side of the entrance while office suites are found on the second floor.—GLADISH

Gentlemen:

The U.T.E. - Proctor Automatic Motion Picture Projector, Type F, has been examined and reported under Laboratory Report No. 665.

This machine complies with the rules and regulations of this department and is approved for use in motion picture theatres in this city.

Yours very truly,

Commissioner.

Do YOU realize the value of this letter?
It proves that the U-T-E-Proctor Automatic Projector was so perfect in its original design and construction that it passed the most critical inspection without modification; and in this it is the pioneer.

What a Live Wire Can Do in a Small Town

Most small town managers will tell you that it does not pay to try and pull stunts in their town, that the people are not there, and they don't fall for the bally as they do in the cities.

Billy Randall came to Florida a few months ago. He liked the climate and looked about for a location where he could settle down and grow up with the town, or in other words, make the town grow up to him.

He selected Auburndale, Fla., situated upon a beautiful lake, in the heart of the citrus industry, and without a show shop. Billy decided that Auburndale needed him as much as he needed a location.

He rents a building, remodels it, equipped it in first-class shape, buys his programs, and opens up without even a name over the door. Of course, he advertised his opening and had a good crowd. Then Billy talked to them, and in between shows he talked to them with slides. He offered a prize for the best name for the theatre. He told them what he was going to do for Auburndale, and that his slogan was "Come on Auburndale," and that he would pay good money if they could select a better one.

The prize for the theatre name was awarded and the theatre is now called "Princess Ariana," named after the Lake, but everybody said that "Come on Auburndale" was good enough for them and it has been adopted as the town slogan.

Billy next organized the ball club and gave benefit shows to pay for nifty uniforms. He took his club to other cities, showed them the speed of his club and made them all shout, "Come on Auburndale."

He is editor of the local page in the paper, and has made it the live wire page of the sheet. He put out a letter head that did not say much about the theatre, except the name, but did a whole lot of boosting for the town.

Billy is the popular guy in his town and it looks like a safe bet that he will be the mayor some of these days. Just shows what a man can do in a small town if he is willing to hustle.—Leslie.

A Chinese Theatre

Another Chinese moving picture theatre will be opened in Vancouver, B. C., shortly, the Mar Noey Co. having purchased the old Imperial theatre on Main street. The structure is being redecorated for the early opening under the new auspices.—Gladish

NEW TARIFF!!!

WILL INCREASE COST OF CARBONS

The new rate proposed in the coming tariff bill on Carbons is 35% ad valorem against the present rate of $4.00 per 1000 12" Carbons.

At the new rate the duty will be increased depending on diameter, up to 1000 per cent.

Ask Yourself! Does this mean lower carbon prices for the theatre owner.

We have a fair sized stock of assorted sizes, imported at the old rate of duty, and as always, will give the benefit to the theatre owner, and do not intend to advance prices until actually compelled to, on new importations at the higher rate.

Be on the safe side—buy NOW, and save money.

CARBONS

have been the standard for many years.

"ELECTRA" Negative Copper Coated Carbons with the "ELECTRA" Pink Label Cored uppers cannot be equalled for Direct Current.

For intensity and quiet burning on alternating current projection we recommend "ELECTRA" Pink Label Cored uppers with "ELECTRA" Brilliant White Flame lowers.

Progressive Methods Forcing This Supply House to Front

Salesmanager Carries Sample Projector to Prospect's Door

As evidence of the continued spirit of progressiveness that marks the activities of the Howells Cine Equipment Co., of 729 7th Avenue, New York City, General Manager Joseph C. Hornstein, one of the most well-liked men in the supply business, has sent us a copy of a card which has to do with the activities of his organization, in their newly acquired Simplex territory, in Albany, N. Y.

The Howells Co. have for several years been associated with the Simplex distributing organization and at present hold the Simplex franchises for all the Orient, Chili, Mexico, Columbia, Central America, save Panama, Porto Rico, Haiti and other surrounding islands. Also they recently took over the Albany, N. Y. territory, formerly controlled by the Albany Theatre Supply Co.

Olan L. Hawk, of the Howells organization, has been selected to take charge of and develop the Albany territory. He is now there, as the illustration indicates and is speeding around to the many exhibitors in that district.

Mr. Hawk, will be continually on the road and will visit all the exhibitors at their respective theatres, and his car will be most completely equipped with representative forms of theatre supplies, such as Simplex parts, carbons, film cement, posters, film cleaners, waxers, disinfectants, theatre perfumes, exit lights, signs, tickets, etc.

In this way, theatre supplies will be actually brought to the door of the exhibitors in the Albany territory and the necessity for sending to New York will be eliminated.

Joseph C. Hornstein

Larger forms of equipment that cannot be easily carried about in the car, Mr. Hawk will take orders for and personally supervise the installation of same on their arrival.

This "theatre to theatre" delivery service is truly an innovation and has been inaugurated by the Howells organization in order to render "Quality Service" in the Albany territory, that will truly be in keeping with activities in their other territories.

Judging from the reports received at the New York office of the Howells Cine Equipment Co., the Simplex projector is making splendid progress in the Albany district and conditions tend to indicate that this newly acquired territory will prove most productive.

This is the "advance card" sent out before District Sales Manager Hawk calls on the prospective customer

Turn Seats Around in Canadian House

A Canadian theatre which is dropping the constructional plan of having the screen at the front of the house instead of in the rear, is the Furby theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba. The Furby has been closed so that the seating arrangement can be reversed and it is planned to re-open the house on August 1. Other features are being remodelled and the number of seats is being increased.

The Furby was one of two prominent Canadian moving picture theatres for which had been adopted the plan of having the audience face the front of the house, as is the custom in England. The one other large theatre in Canada which has this arrangement is the Holman, of Montreal. With the Holman, it has sometimes been felt that patrons hesitate in entering the theatre because of the necessity of facing the audience in order to take their seats.—GLADISH.

Two New Houses

A second run community theatre, to be named the Isis, 25 by 100 feet and seating 300, will be built by Weaver, Smith and Gamble, at 125 West Reno Street, Oklahoma City, Okla., in the near future. It will be fireproof and built according to modern theatrical architecture. Another community theatre will also be built at Packingtown, Oklahoma City, soon, to accommodate residents of that district. Excavation was started June 28 at Clinton Okla., for a new $75,000 moving picture theatre, which is being built by E. G Welch.—NOBLE.

New Arizona House Opened July 2

The new Rialto theatre at Phoenix Arizona, built by Richards & Nace, opened Saturday, July 2. This new theatre has a seating capacity of 1,500 and is referred to as the finest in Arizona. The opening performance will be attended by a number of managers of Los Angeles film exchanges and stars from Los Angeles studios. The opening bill will have as its feature, "The City of Silent Men."

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

KISS, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....JULY 9
"A well balanced story of old California."—M. P. News.

KISS IN TIME, A (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY.....JUNE 25
"Is diverting enough for hot weather business."—M. P. News.

KNOW YOUR MEN (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....APR. 2
"Heavily emotional, but should please star's admirers."—M. P. News.

LAND OF HOPE, THE (REALART) ALICE BRADY.....JULY 9
"Entertaining comedy drama built around new and appealing theme."—M. P. News.

LAST CARD, THE (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....JUNE 4
"Interesting murder mystery carries clever touches."—M. P. News.

LAMPLIGHTER, THE (SHIRLEY MASON).....APR. 30
"Shirley Mason attractive, but story holds it back."—M. P. News.

LAVENDER AND OLD LACE (RENCO FILM-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 7
"Beauty of this delicate romance is kept intact."—M. P. News.

LESSONS IN LOVE (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE .....JUNE 18
"Only a vehicle for the star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture which drew fine business all week on account of popularity of the star." "About the usual Constance Talmadge picture, drawing the usual crowds. Not as good as 'Mamma's Affair.'" "A typical Constance Talmadge picture which went over great in connection with a second anniversary frolic at my house. Good business all week."

LIVE AND LET LIVE (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 4
"Well below the average with its hackneyed story and direction."—M. P. News.

LIVE WIRES (FOX) EDNA MURPHY-JOHNNIE WALKER.....JULY 9
"New stars appear in orthodox story."—M. P. News.

LITTLE CLOWN, THE (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....APR. 16
"Heart interest circus story should get over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—Very good little picture that did well for me." "Had picture indorsed by local 'Better Films' movement, and gave special matinee for school children. Business excellent." "Fair production that brought fair returns." "A gem of a picture. Played to exceptionally big matinees." "Mary Miles Minter lives up to her reputation in this one and makes many new friends. A good week's attendance."

LITTLE FOOL, THE (C. E. SHURTLEFF-METRO) SPECIAL CAST.MAR. 26
"Should prove interesting entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good. The picture follows the story well and it holds an audience as only a Jack London story can." "Our patrons called this a good picture and business was good." "Fairly entertaining with usual business."

LOST ROMANCE, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 28
"Very artistic, but short on drama and action."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Interesting. Splendid story well acted and well directed. Under normal conditions this picture would have filled the house, as it is, it just pulled a fair crowd."

LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE (FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST .....MAR. 26
"Excellent slapstick feature with good action and incident."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A splendid drawing card. Played to a packed house all week. The picture is an excellent diversion from the more serious presentations."

LOVE SPECIAL, THE (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID.....APR. 2
"Acceptable entertainment provided by good humor and a quota of thrills."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Wally Reid is a great favorite of our patrons and we did a splendid business with this feature, which seemed to please our patrons." "Great picture that played to big business." "Fair picture; fair receipts." "Splendid cast, good scenic effects and pleasing story." "Consensus of opinion seems to be that this is Reid's best picture. Pleased everyone." "Some way this went only fair. Business was average for a Reid picture." "Picture well liked and drew good attendance." "Drew well, but did not satisfy the fans." "Extra big business first part of the week and held up well enough to be labeled a great attraction."

LOVE'S PENALTY (HOPE HAMPTON PRODS.-FIRST NATIONAL) HOPE HAMPTON .....JUNE 4
"Just another movie with bad story much in evidence."—M. P. News.

LURE OF EGYPT, THE (FEDERAL-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Picture is draggy and carries very little story interest."—M. P. News.

MADE IN HEAVEN (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE.....APR. 30
"Fire scene best part of unreal story that fails to impress."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture. Well suited to the season. Did fairly well considering poor picture conditions in this locality."

MAGIC CUP, THE (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY.....MAY 7
"Pleasant little picture starring Constance Binney."—M. P. News.

MAGNIFICENT BRUTE, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....MAR. 26
"A good Western with plenty of action."—M. P. News.

MAN OF THE FOREST, THE (HAMPTON-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 28
"Will be ranked high by the melodrama fans."—M. P. News.

MAN TAMER, THE (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....JUNE 4
"Gladys Walton has another winner here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Great picture for those who like that kind of show. Plenty of thrills. Something doing all the time. Did as well as the average picture this time of the year."

MASK, THE (GEO. H. HAMILTON-EXPORT & IMPORT-STATE RIGHTS) JACK HOLT.....JUNE 25
"Tedious melodrama filled with all the old stock tricks."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played with Charlie Chaplin in 'The Cure' and did a good business, the credit going to the latter production."

MESSAGE FROM MARS, A (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....JUNE 18
"Lytell acts splendidly in dull morality picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine theme, poor acting and directing. Receipts good." "A fair picture. Business was bad."

MISTRESS OF SHENSTONE, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) PAULINE FREDERICK .....MAR. 19
"Quiet in action, yet charms with its romance and background."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A pleasant picture which seemed to please my audiences. Fine business." "Very good picture and one that was well liked by my patrons. More than average business."

MOTHER ETERNAL (IVAN ABRAMSON-STATE RIGHTS) VIVIAN MARTIN .....APR. 30
"Effective drama offered in appealing story of mother love."—M. P. News.

MOTHER HEART, THE (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON.....JUNE 18
"Little originality in mechanical Shirley Mason picture."—M. P. News.

MOTHER O' MINE (INCE-ASS'D PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST JUNE 18
"Sure-fire audience appeal in spite of formula plot."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Strong picture. Lots of human appeal. Only fair business however."

MY LADY'S LATCHKEY (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD .....MAR. 26
"Mostly good clothes and subtitles, with little action or incident."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture, but poor business." "Katherine MacDonald is well liked by women patrons, so business was fair, due to patronage of feminine contingent." "Made a nice hit and fine attendances reported throughout. Was combined here with Sennett's 'Love, Honor, and Behave,' which went good."

NUMBER 17 (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....MAR. 19
"Convenient melodrama carries some excitement."—M. P. News.

NUT, THE (UNITED ARTISTS) DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS.....MAR. 19
"Entertaining in spots, but needs editing."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture which brought good business." "Brought big business. Pleased my patrons and was a drawing-card." "Find this an average picture with the usual business." "This picture went over big. It has very good entertaining values." "Fine business with this picture. My patrons like Doug and of course turned out strong to see his picture." "The picture is not up to Douglas Fairbanks' standard, but has an appealing title and offers a good field for exploitation. A good house the entire week." "Running this a second week to big business." "This picture was in no way extraordinary, but it played to big business because of the anniversary that surrounded it and the extra advertising."

OATH, THE (MAYFLOWER-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST..APR. 23
"Rather disappointing in spite of faultless production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture, but only drew our regular patrons." "Held up consistently all week. Audiences liked it. A good box office attraction." "Very fine picture, but rather heavy for summer entertainment." "Great picture. Went over big. Packed houses at most every performance."

OLD DAD (MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL) MILDRED HARRIS.....MAY 28
"Mild entertainment in this conventional picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"No matter how hard I try, I can't put Mildred Harris over here. They just won't have her. Double this with a screaming comedy, and business just barely stayed away from the losing side of the ledger."

OLD NEST, THE (EMINENT AUTHORS-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST .....JULY 16
"Undeniably Goldwyn's greatest picture."—M. P. News.

ONE A MINUTE (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....JUNE 18
"Amusing hokum puts this one over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Doug MacLean made a personal appearance in connection with this and we played to capacity business." "Douglas MacLean went over big in this picture and pulled big crowds despite the extreme warm weather." "Poor business, with a dull and draggy picture whose climax and denouement was anticipated from the opening scenes. Nothing exciting, and business about equal." "Fair picture which brought good business." "Breezy, light summer entertainment. Somewhat better than Douglas MacLean has done before. Business not so good. Too hot."

ONE MAN TRAIL, THE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....APR. 9
"A well made, entertaining Buck Jones feature."—M. P. News.

OTHER WOMAN, THE (FROTHINGHAM-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....APR. 9
"Story of dual personality offers interesting moments."—M. P. News.

OUT OF THE CHORUS (REALART) ALICE BRADY.....APR. 2
"Well below the average in entertainment values."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew a pleasing attendance with average results." "Used in conjunction with 'You Can Never Tell.' Average business, but it increased at end of week." "Nothing extraordinary about the picture, but Alice Brady is always a sure bet here. Showed in conjunction with Buster Keaton in "Neighbors." A good house all week."

OVER THE WIRE (METRO) ALICE LAKE.....JULY 9
"Picture starts well and loses its punch."—M. P. News.

PARTNERS OF THE TIDE (WILLAT-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....APR. 2
"Entertaining sea picture here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"Old stuff. Little human appeal and dangerously close to being 'mushy' in spots. Took it off after three days, though it was booked for whole week."

PASSION FLOWER, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) NORMA TALMADGE .....APR. 16
"Wonderfully acted and artistically produced adaptation of stage success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A great many people were disappointed in the story, but they came to see the star. Business was up to standard." "A splendid feature film which lived up to Norma Talmadge's high standard. Played to much better than average business during the week of its run." "A second run, helped considerably by the fact that the play of the same name was in town, too. The tragic ending spoiled it for many fans, but business was brisk all week." "Went over fair, but drew big business on account of the star." "Capacity business, which is usually the rule with a Norma Talmadge production." "Many comments both for and against from patrons, but picture did good business." "Like all Norma Talmadge pictures, this went over good and drew satisfactory business." "Good picture to the usual good business that Norma Talmadge always brings."

PAYING THE PIPER (FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORP.) DOROTHY DICKSON.....JAN. 29
"Well produced domestic drama that will please."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Ran well for the entire week. Big houses set the stamp of their approval on this picture." "Held over for second week because of tremendous business. Generally pleased." "Business held up very well for second week. Pleased our patrons." "A good picture that played to good business." "A slender story produced to bring Dorothy Dickson into pictures. Not a strong box office attraction." "Found this to be a fair picture. Business about average." "A great attraction. This one brought large box office receipts." "Second week to fair husiness." "Good picture played to better than average business for week." "Lavish but not satisfying. Drew well but did not build. "Very good. Two days to extra big and big business." "Exceptionally well liked by everybody. One of the best opening Sundays in weeks. Kept up satisfactorily."

PEDDLER OF LIES, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO (MAR. 1) ..... JAN. 8

"Good production of mechanical and unreal plot."—M. P. News.

PENNY OF TOP HILL TRAIL (FEDERATED FILM EXCHANGES) BESSIE LOVE ..... MAY 7

"Bessie Love returns in worth-while romantic comedy drama."—M. P. News.

PLAYTHING OF B'WAY, THE (REALART) JUSTINE JOHNSTONE ..... MAR. 26

"Justine Johnstone scores in satisfactory offering."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Pretty poor stuff. Justine doesn't live up to expectations, after all the press-agent flub-dub about her." "A fairly entertaining production that drew average business." "Nothing great about the picture, but it is a creator of public interest and filled my house all week. Offers a good field for exploitation." "Good picture, well cast and directed. Public well pleased." "Extra big business for the week. Public seemed pleased with story, star and her ability as an actress."

PRICE OF POSSESSION, THE (PARAMOUNT) ETHEL CLAYTON. MAR. 26

"Ethel Clayton gives clever performance in mild entertainment."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Does not come up to Ethel Clayton's standard. A fair house all week, but an unsatisfactory picture." "One of the poorest things Ethel Clayton has ever done." "A fair picture and fair puller."

PRINCESS JONES (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN ..... MAR. 12

"Light offering affords fair entertainment."—M. P. News.

PRIVATE SCANDAL, A (REALART) MAY McAVOY ..... JUNE 25

"May McAvoy saves this very ordinary photoplay."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Fair amount of business, but those who saw 'Sentimental Tommy' were disappointed in the star's role iu this production."

PROXIES (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST ..... APR. 23

"Interesting picture of crooks and redemption."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Positively the worst business in several years. Nothing about it to arouse interest." "Just an average program picture. Nothing to get excited over." "This feature proved one of the best business getters of the year and was generally liked by our patrons." "Didn't draw any too well for me, but pleased fairly well those who saw it." "Just fair, especially from box office standpoint." "Audieuces commented favorably on this production. Business fair. Acting of cast good."

PUPPETS OF FATE (METRO) VIOLA DANA ..... APR. 30

"Heart interest story with Viola Dana in a character role."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Viola Dana always a sure bet here. She lives up to her reputation in this picture. Good house all week." "A bad picture that brought very little business."

REPUTATION (UNIVERSAL-JEWEL) PRISCILLA DEAN ..... MAY 14

"Interesting picture might have been more dramatic."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Shows here on its first release and went over big. An alluring title which attracts interest. A full house all week." "Great box office attraction. Splendid picture, although incredulous in spots. Fair business." "This certainly went over big, making it necessary to hold over for second week. Patrons seemed pleased and box office receipts were satisfying." "Tremendous business. Picture has universal appeal." "Splendid picture with plenty of suspense and thrilling incidents. Made many new Priscilla Dean fans. Played to better than average business for week." "Holds interest, but viewed as not a first-class picture. Receipts below average." "Sorry we did not keep it back until September—as it is, it made good." "Priscilla Dean an unusual drawing card. Picture good. Business same."

ROAD TO LONDON, THE (ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS-PATHE) BRYANT WASHBURN ..... JUNE 11

"Bryant Washburn exploits London in this feature."—M. P. News.

ROADS OF DESTINY (GOLDWYN) PAULINE FREDERICK ..... APR 9

"Hopeless story enhanced somewhat by star's splendid acting."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Pauline Frederick is not up to her usual standard in this production and it can't even begin to compare with 'Madame X.'" "Artistically and dramatically, very fine, but did not get the business. Miss Frederick's admirers did not like her in this. Sorry, for thought it was great, myself."

SALVAGE (ROBERTSON-COLE) PAULINE FREDERICK ..... MAY 28

"Pauline Frederick scores in heavy and morbid picture."—M. P. News.

"SALVATION NELL" (WHITMAN BENNETT-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... JULY 9

"Good incident and fine acting gives this exceptional audience appeal."—M. P. News.

SCARAB RING, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE ..... JUNE 4

"Alice Joyce has fair mystery melodrama here."—M. P. News.

SCOFFER, THE (DWAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST) ..... MAR. 19

"Theatrical and far-fetched in incident but interesting." M. P. News.

SCRAMBLED WIVES (MARGUERITE CLARK PRODS.-FIRST NATIONAL) MARGUERITE CLARK ..... JUNE 4

"Slender story makes just average starring vehicle."—M. P. News.

SCRAP IRON (FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY ..... JUNE 11

"Greatest prize fight picture ever made."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Probably the best picture Charles Ray has made, and played to such good business we are holding it over for second week." "Good picture, well received. In spite of Shrine Convention, no unusual business." "Knock-out of a picture, psychological time for good attendance on account of the 'fight' talk throughout the country. Did good business."

SEE MY LAWYER (ROBERTSON-COLE) T. ROY BARNES ..... MAY 14

"Too lengthy and complicated to be amusing."—M. P. News.

PICTURE	BRAND	STAR	RELEASED	PLAN BOOK

SENTIMENTAL TOMMY (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST) ..... APR. 9

"Exceptionally artistic and undeniably human."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Reflects great credit on the producers and any theatre that shows this picture. We gained by exploiting May McAvoy as new star. Not a big box office attraction but pleases." "Great—can't say enough in its favor. Did tremendous business all week." "An excellent production in every way. Box office figures very satisfactory." "A delightful picture that many liked. Business good." "Splendid picture. Great drawing card, receipts fine." "Classiest picture of the year, but fails to draw the crowds." "Great picture. Went over fine. Everybody enjoyed it, consequently big business." "No picture ever had better treatment from the local press, but business did not hold up apparently because local business has been generally poor for the past few weeks and because the very people who say they fight for this sort of clean film did not support it." "The picture should be a different one, as it carries a genuine dramatic appeal instead of dealing with comedy. A sure business getter for a week." "Had a wonderful reception from the few who saw it."

SEVEN YEARS BAD LUCK (ROBERTSON-COLE) MAX LINDER ..MAY 7

"Unquestionably Linder's best picture to date."—M. P. News.

"Good picture from entertainment standpoint and brought good returns."

SHAM (FAMOUS PLAYERS) ETHEL CLAYTON ..... MAY 28

"Good clean entertainment with star in likeable role."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best things Ethel Clayton has done, and she played to capacity business throughout. A thoroughly satisfying picture." "Nice little picture, but not strong enough to compete with the heat."

SHE COULDN'T HELP IT (REALART) BEBE DANIELS ..... MAR. 5

"Lacks action, but will interest after a fashion."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Rather slow as a picture but star is charming enough and popular enough around here to carry the show. Average business."

SHELTERED DAUGHTERS (REALART) JUSTINE JOHNSTONE ...MAY 28

"The best little bet in many a month."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment.—"The best thing Justine Johnson has yet done, and it shows promise. Her other pictures were so bad that business on this was just 'fair to middlin'' but believe that her next will draw and so on. This one was a fairly entertaining picture on a moss-grown theme." "Fair business at box office with this average production."

SHERIFF OF ETERNAL HOPE, THE (FEDERATED EXCHANGES) JACK HOXIE ..... JULY 9

"Conventional western, but will get over in right houses."—M. P. News.

SHOCKING NIGHT, A (UNIVERSAL) LYONS-MORAN ..... JAN. 15

"Not substantial enough for five reels"—M. P. News.

SHORT SKIRTS (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON ..... JULY 16

"Gladys Walton does good work in mildly interesting story."—M. P. News.

SILVER CAR, THE (VITAGRAPH) EARLE WILLIAMS ..... JUNE 4

"This picture falters after a couple of reels."—M. P. News.

SKY PILOT, THE (CATHERINE CURTIS-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... APR. 30

"Fine western has collection of thrilling punches."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Good average picture. Did as much business as we expected with it." "Not an extraordinary attraction. Used a Semon comedy to help out." "Good picture which brought good business ou account of popularity of the book. Business took slight slump on account of bad weather." "Great outdoor picture. Went over big."

SMART SET, THE (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK ..... APR. 2

"Rather frail but pleases in a mild fashion."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Our audiences called this poor. Business was not up to average either."

SNOWBLIND (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST ..... JUNE 4

"Snow picture that impresses because of splendid acting and scenic values."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best of the snow pictures. Has interesting plot and beautiful scenic backgrounds. Good box office attraction."

SOMETHING DIFFERENT (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY ....JAN 29

"Rather frail but backgrounds save it."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture to fair bnsiness. Better crowds than usual." "A good picture. This star always draws well at this house Fine business during run." "A very draggy piece; nothing worth while in it but star registers in some mighty pleasing scenes. Can see no excuse for making picture as poor as this one with product as good and as fine a cast as the director had." "Splendid picture. Had much favorable comment. Good direction and good back grounds."

SOWING OF THE WIND (LOUIS B. MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL) ..JULY 2

"Moments of interest in theatric story."—M. P. News.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER (FOX) BUCK JONES ..... JULY 2

"Average Western with Jones in a character study."—M. P. News.

SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY ....JULY 9

"Hardly substantial enough for the grown-ups."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"My patrons were well pleased with the production. A good business for the week."

TALE OF TWO WORLDS, A (EMINENT AUTHORS-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST ..... MAR. 26

"Melodrama is obvious, but carries punch and color."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture with which I had average business." "The attendance did not justify the merit of this production. A fair week's business."

TEN-DOLLAR RAISE, THE (FROTHINGHAM-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST ..... MAY 21

"Wonderfully human and genuinely entertaining."—M. P. News.

TESTIMONY (STOLL FILM CORPORATION) SPECIAL CAST) ...MAR. 19

"Good combination makes interesting story."—M. P. News.

THREE SEVENS (VITAGRAPH) ANTONIO MORENO ..... APR. 2

"Unusual plot carries quite a punch."—M. P. News.

THROUGH THE BACK DOOR (UNITED ARTISTS) MARY PICKFORD ..... MAY 28

"Mary Pickford's talent and personality will put this over."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Going big on second week's run. Very entertaining story." "A typical Pickford production. Tied up with old time Pickford show and the two together went over fairly well, although Pickford seems to be losing her hold on the public." "Fine box office attraction. Miss Pickford gets over in her customary style."

THUNDER ISLAND (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS ..... JUNE 25

"Dull artificial story very badly titled."—M. P. News.

TIDAL WAVE, THE (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST ..... MAR. 12

"Has interest, but is rather long drawn out."—M. P. News.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

TOMBOY, THE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....APR. 30
"Better small town pictures have been seen."—M. P. News.

TOO MUCH SPEED (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID.....JUNE 18
"Wallace Reid has another entertaining auto story here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The picture was selected as the feature in conjunction with the second anniversary musical revue at my house and went over big." "Best Wallace Reid picture. Extraordinary business. Held over for second week." "Went big with Wally Reid fans and we are holding it over for second week's run." "Weather considered, this went over very well. A good picture."

TRAVELING SALESMAN, THE (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE .....MAY 7
"Fatty Arbuckle has an interesting picture here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A mediocre picture. Business didn't amount to much." "My people liked Fatty in two-reelers, but they just won't see him in feature length stuff. Business very poor." "Fatty's poorest—and not doing business, either."

TWO WEEKS WITH PAY (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....JUNE 4
"Light in substance, but thoroughly pleasing."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment.—"This one went over great. Bebe Daniels is always a big favorite here. A full house all week." "Drew nicely. Bebe is building up a big following." "Very clever picture, immensely pleasing but not a big drawing card." "Bebe draws like a house afire, and Walter Hiers made a personal appearance, so it was great stuff. Business fine."

TWO WISE WIVES (LOIS WEBER-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....JUNE 4
"Interesting especially to women because of character contrasts."—M. P. News.

UNCHARTERED SEAS (METRO) ALICE LAKE.....APR. 30
"Mechanical plot and stilted characters in this one."—M. P. News.

UNKNOWN WIFE, THE (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....MAR. 19
"Interesting picture on favorite theme."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good clean little picture but no drawing card."

VOICE IN THE DARK, A (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 18
"This is not good screen material."—M. P. News.

WALLOP, THE (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....MAY 14
"Good incident and detail spell interesting western for Carey."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An ordinary western picture. Business fair." "This is a fair offering. Usual business." "Fairly entertaining. Business fair." "Great picture. Patrons well satisfied. Box office receipts satisfying."

WAKEFIELD CASE, THE (WEBER-WORLD-STATE RIGHTS) HERBERT RAWLINSON .....APR. 16
"Crook story carries lively action and suspense."—M. P. News.

WEALTH (PARAMOUNT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....JULY 9
"Ethel Clayton has emotional opportunities here and expresses them."—M. P. News.

WESTERN HEARTS (ASS'D PHOTO-PLAYS) SPECIAL CAST....JUNE 18
"Some good incident in ordinary western."—M. P. News.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS (WILLIAM DE MILLE-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 12
"Fine production, but subject matter is talky."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Went over fair to fair attendance." "A fair picture. It disappointed many, however, who came, attracted by the combined names of Barrie and DeMille and went away disappointed at the lack of action and general slowness. On the other hand it charmed an equal number. Business was brisk." "Nice picture, but quiet to interest many. Hardly a normal business." "As entertainment a good picture, but failed to draw for me." "Public opinion divided. Well directed and fairly good picture, but there is no special punch to create more than a passing comment." "One of the best pictures of the season. William DeMille has adhered carefully to the main points of the original story and has maintanled all of Barrie"s charm. Lois Wilson and Conrad Nagel are excellent in the star roles." "Picture appealed strongly to our audiences and business was good during its run." "Strong feature which appeals to both men and women. Played to splendid business."

WHAT HAPPENED TO ROSA (GOLDWYN) MABEL NORMAND..APR. 25
"Mabel has a mediocre one here."—M. P. News.

WHAT'S A WIFE WORTH (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST..APR. 23
"Sob-sister story is stressed with false sentiment."—M. P. News.

WHAT'S WORTH WHILE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Single track and rather slow."—M. P. News.
"Good picture that does justice to a snappy title. Played in conjunction with 'You'll Be Surprised,' a Chester comedy, and did a week's capacity business at my house." "Too long drawn out and tiresome. Did nothing that had not been done before, and was considered far below usual standard for Lois Weber picture. Took it off after three days to very poor business."

WHAT'S YOUR REPUTATION WORTH (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH .....APR. 16
"Interesting feature gives star emotional opportunities."—M. P. News.

WHERE LIGHTS ARE LOW (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA .....JULY 9
"Good vehicle for Hayakawa."—M. P. News.

WHILE THE DEVIL LAUGHS (FOX) LOUISE LOVELY..... MAR 12
"An unconvincing underworld story with Louise Lovely."—M. P. News

WHISTLE, THE (HART-PARAMOUNT) WM. S. HART.....APR. 9
"Bill Hart puts on the capital vs. labor formula with fair success." M. P. News.

WHITE AND UNMARRIED (PARAMOUNT) THOMAS MEIGHAN..JUNE 11
"Fair entertainment in Meighan's latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An excellent picture, which, coupled with the popularity of Thomas Meighan, brought good houses during its run." "Well received, receipts pleasing." "Excellent business, as is usual when I play a Thomas Meighan picture. Do not consider picture up to standard set by 'City of Silent Men' nor was business as good. But nothing to complain of." "This picture did a satisfactory business for a week's run and pleased patrons." "Had great business with this picture. And it sure deserved it." "Pleased patrons although not type of picture usually shown at this theatre. Meighan admirably suited to part." "A good box office attraction." "Brought good attendance." "Fairly entertaining feature with average business." "Fine picture. Every one liked it. Business was very good considering the extreme heat."

WILD GOOSE, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 21
"Conventional picture of the eternal triangle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fairly entertaining, but it brought more than usual business." "This is an exceptionally fine picture with well sustained interest but it failed to draw good business owing to the very warm weather." "An excellent picture. Something unusual. Drew fair-sized crowds." "Just an ordinary picture which did an average week's business."

WISE FOOL, A (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 11
"Good direction makes this picture very human."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture. Not much business because of hot weather."

WITCHING HOUR, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 12
"Weak adaptation of rich melodrama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Draggy, disconnected—somebody always going somewhere after something. Shame to waste the talents of a star of Elliot Dexter's calibre in such stuff as this. Cast only fair—Mary Alden superb—as usual!" "Elliott Dexter's best yet. The title is slightly lacking as a creator of public interest, but the picture itself is a business getter. A good house throughout the week." "A combination of hot weather and a well known play, but one not particularly well produced. Result—our crowds dwindled." "This was only a fair picture and fair puller." "A very fine version of a very fine play. Splendid acting throughout. Good business in a week of general poor business."

WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY (ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS-PATHE) .....JULY 2
"Famous Kipling story presented in fine atmospheric."—M. P. News.

WOLVES OF THE NORTH (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK.....MAY 21
"Conventional Alaskan story carries wonderful backgrounds."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Mediocre picture, but it drew the crowds." "Fair business. Star not so well known."

WOMAN GOD CHANGED, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....JUNE 4
"Regeneration picture certainly holds the interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Strong story with decided moral that is pretty heavy food for summer consumption. High order of photoplay and will appeal to thinking classes." "A fairly entertaining subject that attracted only fair business." "Very fine picture. Business better than was expected with hot weather." "Quite a good picture which brought good business." "Pleased very much. Really a good picture. But unequaled hot weather ruined business." "Only pleasing, receipts fair."

YOU AND I (SWEDISH BIOGRAPH-RADIOSOUL) VICTOR SEASTROM .....MAR. 12
"Wonderfully impressive drama; well produced and acted."—M. P. News.

"Flashbacks" on Earlier Releases

"So Long Letty" (Robertson-Cole)—"Not a great picture but good entertainment and snappy advertising helped."

"Li Ting Long" (Robertson-Cole)—"Fairly entertaining with business about average."

"A Child for Sale" (Aywon)—"Smashes all records for a five days showing."

"Immortality" (State Rights)—"Picture with some very wonderful scenes but lacks any sustained interest and did not draw well. Played to poor business for a week. Too much of a Bible story to please the average audience."

"The Sin That Was His" (Selznick)—"Entertaining story to good business."

"The Prince-Chap" (Paramount)—"While this seemed to be a very interesting and entertaining picture, business was only average."

"Earthbound" (Goldwyn)—"Personally I consider this a fine picture and worth seeing though it did not take very well at my house, having only average business."

"While New York Sleeps" (Fox)—"This is an excellent picture but it might be improved by having some connection bteween the three episodes with which it deals."

"The Love Flower" (Paramount)—"Played to well-filled houses here all week, although the opinions of many who saw the picture lead to the belief that D. W. Griffith's name was the attraction and not the photoplay. Most cities seemed to feel there was not enough action in the film."

"Madam X" (Goldwyn)—"A remarkably acted picture. Broke records, jamming house to capacity. Properly exploited should go big anywhere."

"Madam Peacock" (Metro)—"Bad. Nothing to it at all. Poor business one day."

"Last of Mohicans" (Associated Prods.)—"A wonderful picture of its kind. Pleased everyone who saw it. Exploitation and co-operation with schools put it over extra big."

"The Furnace" (Realart)—"Another record-breaker. Jammed house for three-day run and patrons pronounced it a wonder. Played against 'Humoresque.'"

"Drag Harlan" (Fox)—"A typical Farnum picture. A lot of killing but they liked it. Played to big business three days."

"Frisky Mrs. Johnson" (Paramount)—"Two days to big business."

"Always Audacious" (Paramount)—"Audiences liked it. Two days to big business."

"Misleading Lady" (Metro)—"Fine comedy, the kind that everyone enjoyed. Big business two days."

"Mollycoddle" (United Artists)—"Big business two days."

"Her Honor the Mayor" (Fox)—"Entertaining picture with good moral. Average business one day."

"Eyes of the Heart" (Realart)—"Good average program picture. Minter's acting very good. Average business two days."
